(i) A is charged with shooting at B with intent to kill him. In order to show A's intent the fact of A's having previously shot at B may be proved.

(j) A is charged with sending threatening letters to B. Threatening letters previously sent by A to B may be proved, as showing the intention of the letters.

(k) The question is, whether A has been guilty of cruelty towards B, his wife.

Expressions of their feeling towards each other shortly before or after the alleged cruelty are relevant facts.

(l) The question is, whether A's death was caused by poison.

Statements made by A during his illness as to his symptoms are relevant facts.

(m) The question is, what was the state of A's health at the time when an assurance on his life was effected.

Statements made by A as to the state of his health at or near the time in question are relevant facts.

(n) A sues B for negligence in providing him with a carriage for hire not reasonably fit for use, whereby A was injured.

The fact that B's attention was drawn on other occasions to the defect of that particular carriage is relevant.

The fact that B was habitually negligent about the carriages which he let to hire is irrelevant.

(o) A is tried for the murder of B by intentionally shooting him dead.

The fact that A on other occasions shot at B is relevant as showing his intention to shoot B.

The fact that A was in the habit of shooting at people with intent to murder them is irrelevant.

(p) A is tried for a crime.

The fact that he said something indicating an intention to commit that particular crime is relevant.

The fact that he said something indicating a general disposition to commit crimes of that class is irrelevant.

Principle.—This section declares that facts which show the existence of any state of (1) mind, viz., intention, knowledge, good faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will, good-will or (2) body or (3) bodily feeling are relevant when such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant.

Intention, knowledge, and similar other states of mind, are matters of cogent inquiry in criminal cases; in some civil cases they are very material, e.g., in cases of malicious prosecution, fraud, negligence etc.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 216
2. State of Mind or Bodily feeling ... 216
   Proof of intention ... 218
3. Evidence of previous and subsequent events to show intention ... 218
4. Knowledge ... 219
   (a) Registration as notice ... 220
   (b) Constructive notice ... 220
   (c) Notice through agent ... 220
   (d) Good faith ... 221
   (e) Negligence ... 221
   (f) Criminal Rashness ... 221
5. Relevance of bad character ... 221
6. Similar Facts ... 221
7. Indian law is same as english law ... 225
8. Application to civil cases ... 226
9. Fact relevant to show existence of relevant state of mind [Explanation-I] ... 227
   Illustration [(n), (o) and (p)] ... 227
10. Previous commission of offence and conviction a relevant fact [Explanation-II] ... 228
11. Findings of Criminal Court not binding on Civil Courts ... 229
12. Previous Judgment ... 229

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section declares that facts which show the existence of any state of (1) mind, viz., intention, knowledge, good-faith, negligence, rashness, ill-will, good-will or (2) body or (3) bodily feeling are relevant when such state of mind or body or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant.

Intention, knowledge and similar other states of mind, are matters of cogent inquiry in criminal cases; in some civil cases they are very material, e.g., in cases of malicious prosecution, fraud, negligence, etc.

Where the question is as to knowledge, intent, motive, or any bodily or mental state, evidence of other acts alone, showing the existence of such knowledge, intent, motive, or bodily or mental state, are admissible, even though it involves the proof of other crimes. Evidence admitted for such purpose must be confined within the limits for which it is admitted.

When the existence of a mental or bodily state or bodily feeling is in issue or relevant, then the facts from which the existence of such mental or bodily state or bodily feeling may be inferred are relevant. See the illustrations. Illustrations (e), (i) and (j) deal with intention; (a), (b), (c) and (d) with knowledge; (f), (g) and (h) with good faith; (n) with negligence and knowledge; (k), (l) and (m), with mental and bodily feeling. To explain states of mind evidence is admissible though it does not otherwise bear upon the issue to be tried.

"Whenever the physical condition, emotions, or state of mind of a person are in issue, or are directly relevant to an issue, his statements indicative thereof made at or about the time in question may be given in evidence. Only the description of the physical condition, emotion or state of mind is admissible under this exception, however, and it cannot be relied on to admit a statement providing an explanation of the cause of the condition or state of mind.[1] Equally, it seems that the exception will not apply where the state of mind is only relevant in order to persuade the judge or jury to draw an inference as to how it was caused."[2]

2. STATE OF MIND OR BODILY FEELING

In considering the question as to the meaning of "state of mind" in Section 14, distinction has to be made between simple mental phenomena like knowledge, intention, etc., and complex mental phenomena like fear, apprehension, etc., An inference which is arrived at by a process of ratiocination does not stand on the same footing as a mental condition which is included in the definition of "Fact" in Section 3 of the Evidence Act.[3]

This section applies to cases "where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable, according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it; as, for instance, in actions of slander or false imprisonment, or malicious prosecution, where malice is one of the main ingredients in the wrong which is charged, evidence is admissible to show that the defendant was actuated by a spirit of enmity against the plaintiff; or again, on a charge of uttering counterfeit coin, evidence is admissible to show that the prisoner knew the coin to be counterfeit, because he had other similar coins in his possession, or had passed such coins before or after the particular occasion which formed the subject of the charge. The illustrations, show with sufficient clearness the sort of cases in which this evidence is receivable. But, I think we must be very careful not to extend the operation of the section to other cases, where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts and not upon the state of a man's mind or feeling. We have no right to prove that a man committed theft or any other crime on one occasion, by showing that he committed similar crimes on other occassions."[4]

---

1. Gardner Peerage, Le March, 169-179; R v. Gloster, (1888) 16 Cox CC 471; Gilbey v. G.W. Ry., 102 LT 202 CA; Amys v. Barton, (1912) 1 KB 40 CA.
2. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), p. 334 (para15-03).
3. Anant Baburao v. State, AIR 1967 Bom 109 at (para 21).
4. Per GARTH CJ in Empress v. M.J. Myapoory Moodeliar, ILR (1881) 6 Cal 655, 659, 660.

Section 14 applies to cases where a particular act is more or less criminal or culpable according to the state of mind or feeling of the person who does it. It does not apply to cases where the question is the guilt or innocence of the accused, which depends on actual facts and not upon the state of the man's mind or feeling.[5]

Both preparation for commission of an offence and the previous attempt in that direction manifestly rest on the presumption that an intention to commit the offence was in the mind of the accused, which persisted until power and opportunity were found to carry it into execution. Such evidence is admissible.[6]

The Privy Council observed : "At the trial of the appellants for the murder of Karnail Singh the approver gave evidence that he and the appellants had murdered Bhan Singh a few days before the murder of Karnail Singh, and that they proposed to conceal the murder of Bhan Singh by causing injuries to Karnail Singh and getting themselves arrested for so doing. That is today, the evidence of the approver was that the motive, or, at any rate, one of the motives, for the injuries caused to Karnail Singh was a desire to conceal the murder of Bhan Singh. The suggested motive is no doubt a singular one, but however improbable an alleged motive may be the prosecution is entitled to call evidence in support of it, and nonetheless so because such evidence may suggest that the accused has committed some crime other than that with which he is charged (see illustration (a) to Section 8 of the Evidence Act). If evidence that the appellants had murdered Bhan Singh had been given with a view to showing that they were persons likely to have committed the murder of Karnail Singh, the evidence would have been inadmissible; but it was admissible to establish motive for the murder with which they were charged."[7]

Common intention has to come into being prior to the commission of the act, in point of time, but this point of time has not to be after a long gap. A common intention may develop on the spot and suddenly.[8]

Evidence of acts and documents of a period prior to the period mentioned in the charge is generally not admissible.[9]

In a case where the plea of insanity was taken, it was held that mere proof of insanity in general is not sufficient, and the conduct of the person's, antecedent and subsequent to the commission of the crime, is relevant in view of explanation (1) of this section.[10]

In matrimonial cases, the court has jurisdiction to appoint a commission/doctor for examining the parties to know the bodily feelings, whether he or she was impotent or not, and whether he or she was able to consummate the marriage. It was held that examination, of mental or bodily state of a person, is no deprivation of personal liberty or breach of Art. 21 of the Constitution.[11]

Where the accused claimed to have found the dead body of his wife, after coming home on the night of the occurrence, and he was found calm and composed, it was held that his conduct was inconsistent with the conduct of an innocent person, and hence such evidence is admissible showing the conduct.[12] Where the father accused of murdering his two daughters jumped from the terrace of his house and was seen trying to smash his head with a brick and was thus trying to end his life, such conduct of the accused showed his dull mind that he was so much overcome by remorse and repentance for the deed done by him that he wanted to end his life. If he had not confessed to his crime by speaking any words, his conduct was more eloquent and telling.[13]

Allegations of mala fides against the petitioners for winding up a company can generally be substantiated by circumstantial evidence only.[14]

---

5. Emperor v. Abdul Wahid Khan, ILR 34 All 93; A.H. Gandhi v. The King, AIR 1941 Rang 324.
6. Appu v. State of Madras, AIR 1971 Mad 194; Ghurey Lal v. State through Ram Narain, AIR 1965 All 206.
7. Natha Singh v. Emperor, 73 Indian Appeals 196 : AIR 1946 PC 187.
8. Shariff Ahmad v. State, AIR 1957 All 50; Kanailal Mitra v. Pannasashi Mitra, AIR 1954 Cal 589.
9. (1978)2 Cal LJ 214.
10. State v. Kartik Chandra Dey, AIR 1951 Assam 79.
11. G. Venkatanarayana v. Laxmi Devi, AIR 1985 AP 1.
12. Tulsiram v. State of Maharashtra, 1984 CrLJ 209.
13. Phundi v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1881 (para 7) (MP).
14. The Aluminium Corp. of India v. Laxmi Ratan Cotton Mills, AIR 1970 All 452.

Proof of Intention.—"Man must be taken to intend the natural consequence of what he had done".[15]

In Emperor v. Lakshman,[16] after referring to the judgement in Queen-Empress v. Rayapadayachi,[17] and the principle laid down in Regina v. Lovett,[18] and also the remarks in Queen v. Martin,[19] it was observed: "It cannot be disputed that mere knowledge of the possibility of annoyance, resulting from an act of trespass, is not sufficient to bring the case within the definition, but, at the same time, it must be remembered that the word 'intent' cannot be read as if it were identical with 'wish' or 'desire'. There may be no wish to annoy, but if annoyance is the natural consequence of the act and if it is known to the persons who does that act that such is the natural consequence, then there is an intent to annoy..... When it is uncertain whether a particular result will follow (as in the Madras case in which he hoped to keep his conduct secret) there may be no intent to cause that result even though it may be known that the result is likely...." Finally it was observed "Although there is a presumption that a person intends what is merely a possible result of his action or a result, which, though reasonably certain, is not known to him to be so, still it must be presumed that when a man voluntarily does an act, knowing at the time that in the natural course of events a certain result will follow, he intends to bring about that result."[20]

Whether a man has got a particular intention or not, is to be inferred from the acts of the concerned person and the surrounding circumstances.[21]

Where it becomes necessary to find out the intention of a corporate body, it is not the intention of the individual members who constituted the corporate body, but the intention of the body as a whole that has to be looked at. Thus, the Court will have to look into the resolutions passed or the acts done by the corporate body as a whole. It is only the facts mentioned in the resolution that are relevant.[22]

The conduct of each individual co-conspirator including his acts, writings and statements, irrespective of the time to which it relates, can be relied on by the prosecution to show the criminality of the intention of the individual accused, with reference to his proved participation in the alleged conspiracy, to rebut a probable defence that the participation, though proved, was innocent. Such evidence is admissible under this section.[23] Where some persons were convicted under Section 402, I.P.C. for having assembled to commit dacoity, evidence of conduct of the accused and circumstances under which they were arrested were held to be relevant, as they probabilised the existence, of an intent to commit dacoity.[24]

But in a case of conspiracy to commit dacoity, facts showing that the object of the illegal association during a period of several months prior to the dacoity in question had been the commission of thefts and other discreditable acts, were held inadmissible under this section, to throw any light on the existence of an intention to commit, or to engage in a conspiracy to commit, the dacoity charged.[25]

Common intention has to come into being prior to the commission of the act, in point of time, but this point of time has not to be after a long gap. A common intention may develop on the spot and suddenly.[26]

3. EVIDENCE OF PREVIOUS AND SUBSEQUENT EVENTS TO SHOW INTENTION

Illustration (e) of this section shows that the previous event, namely, the fact of previous publications is relevant in a libel case; similarly illus. (j) shows that the previous event, namely threatening letters which are previously sent, are relevant.

---

15. Regina v. Lovett, 9 CP 462.
16. 26 Bom 558.
17. 19 Mad 240.
18. 9 CP 462.
19. 8 QB 54.
20. See also Sellamuthu Sevvagaran v. Pallamuthi Kerappan, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 186
21. Ramzan v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Sind 203.
22. Guru Murthappa v. Corporation of Bangalore, AIR 1962 Mys 92. See also Arcot Citizens Bank Ltd v. State of Madras, 1975 Mad 675
23. Sardul Singh v. State of Bombay, 1958 SCR 161 : AIR 1957 SC 747.
24. Queen v. Bholu, ILR 23 All 124.
25. Emperor v. Wahiduddin (1929) 32 Bom LR 324 : ILR 54 Bom 524 : AIR 1930 Bom 159
26. Sharif Ahmad v. State, AIR 1957 All 50. Kanailal Mitra v. Pannasashi Mitra, AIR 1954 Cal 588

A medical practitioner was charged for causing death of a patient by administering a certain quantity of extract of stramonium (Dhatura) and also a full leaf of the same plant. The defence was that there was report of medical experience regarding the cases in which that particular drug was successfully administered for curing Ginea Worm. The prosecution placed evidence showing similar facts of the accused doctor administering the same Dhatura which proved fatal. It was held that even if the accused had been ignorant of the effect of Dhatura on the human system or the fatal consequences of administering it in those doses, he had no excuse to continue to be ignorant or to be optimistic after the death of the previous patient, on administering the drops of tincture of stramonium and one leaf of Dhatura.[27]

Where there is a series of speeches, and lectures on one topic within a short period of time, they can be considered as they would throw light on the real meaning and intent and the state of mind of the speaker with reference to the subject-matter of the other speeches.[28] (Illus. (e)). In R. v. Papa Sani[29], a dancing girl was charged under Section 373, I.P.C., for procuring a girl with an intent to use her for prostitution and giving money to that girl; it was stated that it was a practice among dancing girls to acquire girls and such girls could not get married. On those facts it was held that those facts were relevant to support the intention, under this section, and they were sufficient for a conviction.[30] The conduct of parties showing prolonged cordial cohabitation as husband and wife, and the acknowledgement, by the husband of the paternity of the children and of the woman as his wife, are relevant to presume marriage between them, though the validity of such marriage is a different issue.[31] In Chidambaram Pillai v. Emperor,[32] the accused stated before the Magistrate that he did not want to make any statement, but the next day he made a statement to the District Jail Superintendent, with a request that it might be placed on record, which was sent later to the Magistrate. The question was whether such a statement, which was a subsequent fact was relevant to show the intention. It was held that even a statement which the accused had made after he had been produced before the Committing Magistrate was admissible evidence of intention under this section. Where the prosecution tendered in evidence a copy of a letter written by the accused to the editor of a newspaper, sending for publication a pamphlet charged as seditious, and the latter indicated the writer's motive, it was held that the copy was admissible under Section 9 and this section, as evidence of the accused's intention.[33] Similarly a writing made subsequent to the writing regarding which the writer was charged with sedition and which was found in his possession, was held admissible under this section as evidence of intention.[34]

4. KNOWLEDGE

In WIGMORE,[35] it is observed: "Knowledge signifies being aware. Even where the doing of the act involved, is not disputed, a knowledge existing at the time of the act may be in dispute. Thus, proof of knowledge becomes a usual necessity for certain offences, such as the uttering of forged or counterfeit paper and the possession of stolen goods; while it is rarely an element to be proved in other offences, such as robbery, rape and homicide."

The notions about knowledge, belief and consciousness are not exactly identical, but they have one common feature as to the mode of evidencing those mental states. Knowledge may be established by admissions of the persons or by evidence of other circumstances. It can be inferred from the conduct of the person.

Where a person was charged for forging one promissory note in the first court, another forged document was found in the pocket of the accused. It was held that the one which was found in the pocket

---

27. Juggaw Khan Jamshankhan v. State, AIR 1963 MP 102.
28. Chidambaram Pillai v. Empror, ILR 1908 32 Mad 3; Queen Empress v. Jogendra Chunder Bose, ILR 1891 19 Cal 35; Emperor v. Phanendranath Mitter, ILR (1908) 35 Cal 945; Queen Empress v. Balgangadhar Tilak, ILR (1897) 22 Bom 112; Omprakash v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 867; Chamupati v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 99; Naravan Kashinath Vaidya v. Emperor, AIR 1918 Nag 248 (In all the above cases previous speeches were held admissible under this section 14).
29. 23 Mad 159.
30. See also Empress v. Amba Prasad, ILR (1897) 20 All 52 (FB).
31. Razia Begum v. Shahebzadi Anwar Begum, AIR 1958 AP 195.
32. ILR (1908) 32 Mad 3.
33. Emperor v. Spratt No. 2, (1927) 30 Bom LR 314.
34. Emperor v. Spratt No. 3, (1927) 30 Bom LR 315 : AIR 1928 Bom 77.
35. Vol. II. Section 300, P. 192.

was not admissible to show that the one in question was a forged one, as it was not relevant to show his knowledge.[36] The fact that a person attested a deed is no evidence in itself that he consented to it or had knowledge of its contents.[37] Where an intoxicated person killed another by repeated stab wounds, requisite knowledge that it is likely to cause death and also intention can be presumed and the offence cannot be reduced to one under rash and negligent act under Section 304, I.P.C.[38]

4A. Registration as Notice.—Registration of a compulsorily registrable document under the Registration Act is notice.[39]

There was a conflict of decisions as to whether, in the case of documents, which are not compulsorily registrable, registration amounts to notice. The conflict between the High Courts as to the question whether mere registering a document is notice by itself or not was set at rest by the Judicial Committee in Tilak Dhari Lal v. Khedan Lal,[40] approving the decision in Bunwarijhan v. Ranjee Thakur[41] wherein it was held: "Whether registration is or is not notice in itself depends, we think, upon the facts and circumstances of each case, upon the degree of care and caution which an ordinary prudent man would necessarily take for the protection of his own interest, by search into the registers kept under the Registration Act."

4B. Constructive Notice.—The doctrine of constructive notice means knowledge which is equivalent to knowledge of a thing.[42] Section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act states the circumstances from which presumption of constructive notice would arise:

(a) Wilful abstention from enquiry or search;

(b) Gross negligence;

(c) Registration as contained in Explanation to the definition of notice in Section 3, Transfer of Property Act;

(d) Actual possession as in Explanation II, T.P.A.; and

(e) Notice to an agent as in Explanation III, T.P.A..

It was held that this doctrine would not be applicable where a person was guilty of secrecy or fraud, for instance, where the vendor fails to discharge his obligation to disclose encumbrances over the property to a purchaser.[43] Similarly a decree holder will not be allowed to plead registration of a mortgage in his favour as constructive notice to an auction purchaser.[44]

The expression "wilful abstention from enquiry or search" was construed to imply want of bona fides as distinguished from an omission to make enquiries, which is not sufficient to constitute constructive notice.[45]

It may, however, be presumed that abstention from enquiry is wilful.[46]

In a case where a person borrowed money by giving security of a sale deed which recited the vendor's lien, it was held that the lender of the money would be deemed to have notice of the lien.[47]

4C. Notice Through Agent.—The Maxim "Qui Facit Per Alium Facit Per Se" means that he who acts through another is deemed to act in person.

Explanation III, to Section 3 of the Transfer of Property Act and its proviso place some conditions for the application of this rule: they are (1) Notice must have been acquired as an agent; (2) It must be when he is acting as an agent; (3) That notice must be in the course of his business on behalf on his

---

36. Queen Empress v. Prabhudas Ambaram, 11 BH CR 91.
37. Rajlakki Devi v. Gokul Chandra Chowdhuri, (1869) 3 BLR 57 (PC).
38. In re : Macherla Balaswamy, AIR 1953 Mad 827.
39. Kenchegowda v. Channaiya, AIR 1953 Mys 22; Hirachand v. Kashinath, AIR 1942 Bom 339.
40. AIR 1921 PC 112.
41. 7 Cal WN 11, 18.
42. Balakrishna Pramanik v. Bhawanipur Banking Corp., AIR 1932 Cal 521.
43. Harmasoji v. Mankuvarbai, 12 Bom HC 262; Morgan v. Govt. of Hyderabad, ILR 11 Mad 419.
44. Ramchandra v. Jayaram, ILR 22 Bom 686; Boondo v. Roji, 26 Bom 290.
45. Kausalai Ammal v. Sankara Muthiah, AIR 1941 Mad 707.
46. Rangappa v. Marappa, AIR 1958 Mad 515.
47. Alwarchetty v. Jagannatha Iyer, (1928) 54 MLJ 109.

principal; (4) Such notice must relate to the business; (5) The agent should not have fraudulently concealed the fact from the principal.

4D. Good faith.—Section 52 of the Indian Penal Code states that nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention.

4E. Negligence.—"Negligence in a legal sense is a negative rather than a positive term and, in any given circumstances, is the failure to exercise that care which the circumstances demand. What amounts to negligence depends on the facts of each particular case, and the term 'negligence' is, therefore, not susceptible of any precise definition which will be of universal applicantion.... Where there is no duty to exercise care at all, negligence in the popular sense has no legal consequence. Where there is duty to take care, reasonable care must be taken, to avoid acts or omissions which, it can reasonably be foreseen, are likely to injure persons who are reasonably likely to be affected."[48]

Negligence presupposes want of proper care, whereas rashness conveys the idea of recklessness or doing of an act without due caution, or consideration.[49]

Where a person is under a duty, by reason of certain facts which came to his knowledge, to make further enquiries, an omission to enquire amounts to gross negligence.[50]

4F. Criminal rashness.—The criminality of rashness lies in running the risk of doing such an act with recklessness or indifference as to the consequences.[51]

Criminal rashness is different from criminal negligence. Criminal rashness is hazarding a dangerous or wanton act with the knowledge that it is so and that it may cause injury, but without intention to cause injury, or knowledge that it will probably cause. Such an act would be with recklessness or indifference as to the consequences, whereas criminal negligence is the gross and culpable neglect, or failure, to exercise that reasonable and proper care and precaution, to guard against injury either to the public generally, or to an individual in particular, which having regard to all the circumstances out of which the charge has arisen, it was the imperative duty of the person to have adopted. JUSTICE HOLLOWAY stated "Culpable reashness is acting with the consciousness that the mischievous and illegal consequences may follow but with the hope that they will not, and often with the belief that the actor has taken sufficient precautions to prevent their happening. The imputability arises from acting despite the consciousness. Culpable negligence is acting without the consciousness that the illegal and mischievous effect will follow, but in circumstances which show that the actor has not exercised the caution incumbent upon him and that, if he had, he would have had the consciousness. The imputability arises from the negligence of the civic duty of circumspection."[52]

5. RELEVANCE OF BAD CHARACTER

Such of those facts as would show the state of mind with reference to a particular matter, is relevant. The general tendency of an accused cannot be proved to show his intention, as that would amount to proving his bad character.[53]

6. SIMILAR FACTS

In England evidence of facts or transactions similar to the fact or transaction directly in issue is admissible if it is logically probative subject to two exceptions; evidence is not admissible:

---

48. HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND.
49. Emperor v. Abdul Latif, AIR 1944 Lah 163; Re. J.C. May, AIR 1960 Mad 50.
50. Renukabai v. Bheosan, AIR 1939 Nag 132.
51. In re : Nidamprti Nagabhushanam, 7 Mad HCR 119; Chhote Lal v. Emperor, AIR 1945 All 16; State of Bihar v. Mangal Singh, AIR 1953 Pat 56; Chammanlal v. State, AIR 1954 All 186; Emperor v. Abdul Latif, AIR 1944 Lah 163; Verghese Chereyan v. Sarkar, AIR 1959 Tri Cochin 14.
52. Lazarus v. State, AIR 1953 All 72; Empress of India v. Idubeg, 3 All 776; In re : Nidampti Nagabhushanam, 7 Mad HCR 119; Smith v. Emperor, AIR 1953 Cal 333; State Govt. M.P. v. Rangaswami, AIR 1952 Nag 268; Bharosi v. State, AIR 1957 MP 236; State. v. Banshi Singh, AIR 1960 MP 105; State of Bihar v. Mangal Singh, AIR 1953 Pat 56.
53. Lakshmandas Chagalal Bhatia v. State of Bombay, AIR 1968 Bom 400.

(1) of similar acts done by himself, if they do no more than show a general disposition, habit or propensity to commit such acts and a consequent probability of his having committed the act, or possessed the state of mind in question, and

(2) of similar acts done by others, similarly circumstanced to himself, to show that he would be likely to act as they did.

(PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, Ch. 12, page 184, 13th Edn.) These two exceptions apply to civil as well as criminal proceedings.

LORD HERSCHELL L.C. laid down two principles. The first was "It is undoubtedly not competent for the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment, for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that he is a person likely, from his criminal conduct or character, to have committed the offence for which he is being tried."[54] PHIPSON states 'This rule must be regarded as fundamental in the law of evidence and is probably one of the most deeply rooted principles of the Criminal law.[55]

LORD SUMNER added, in a well-known passage from his judgment in Thompson v. R.[56]: 'No one doubts that it does not tend to prove a man guilty of a particular crime to show that he is the kind of man who would commit a crime or that he is generally disposed to crime and even to a particular crime'.

LORD HERSCHELL L.C. went on to formulate the second principle, saying: "On the other hand, the mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it be relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be so relevant if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental, or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused."[57]

Regarding the first principle in R v. Thompson,[58] it was observed that it was one of the most deeply rooted and jealously guarded principles of our criminal law and fundamental in the law of evidence.

Regarding the second principle of Lord Herschell, LORD SUMNER observed in Thompson v. R.[59]: "Before an issue can be said to be raised, which would permit the introduction of such evidence so obviously prejudicial to the accused, it must have been raised in substance if not in so many words, and the issue so raised must be one to which the prejudicial evidence is relevant. The mere theory that a plea of not guilty puts everything material in issue is not enough for this purpose. The prosecution cannot credit the accused with fancy defence in order to rebut them at the outset with some damning piece of evidence."

In Noormoahamed v. R.[60] LORD DUPARCQ re-affirmed the two principles of LORD HERSCHELL and agreed with the dictum of Lord SUMNER. This was followed in Hariss v. D.P.P.[61]; Kuruma v. R[62]; R v. Cook[63]; R. v. Flynn[64] and Selvey v. D.P.P.[65]

These principles were considered by the House of Lords in Boardman v. D.P.P.[66]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE[67], after referring to the above decision, summarises the principles as classified in the above case, as follows:

---

54. Makin v. A.G. for New South Wales, (1894) AC 57.
55. See the remarks of LORD SANKEY L.C. in Maxwell v. D.P.P., (1935) AC 309, 317, 320. The Judicial Committee recently re-affirmed the principle in Cottle and Laidlow v. The Queen, (1976) Crim LR 440.
56. 1918 AC 232.
57. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn., p. 189.
58. 1918 AC 221 at 232.
59. 1918 AC 221.
60. 1949 AC 182.
61. 1952 AC 694, 707 : (1952) 1 All ER 1044.
62. 1955 AC 197, 203.
63. (1959) 2 All ER 97.
64. (1961) 3 All ER 58.
65. (1968) 2 All ER 497 (HL). see also Amritalal Hazara v. Emperor, ILR 42 Cal 957 : AIR 1916 Cal 188; Emperor v. Panchu Das, 47 Cal 671 (FB) : AIR 1920 Cal 500.
66. 1975 AC 421.
67. 13th Ed., Section 12, 09, page 190.

"1. The admission of similar fact evidence is exceptional and requires a strong degree of probative force.

2. It is for the judge to decide, firstly as a matter of law, and then as a matter of discretion, whether the evidence should be admitted. Two questions have to be answered: (i) is the evidence of similar fact admissible i.e., relevant, apart from merely showing a disposition to commit the offence charged; (ii) if so, should the judge refuse to admit it as a matter of discretion, i.e., does the prejudicial effect of the evidence outweigh its probative force? In practice, the two questions tend to merge into one. As has been noted, the reason for not admitting the evidence of similar facts is that such evidence may weigh too heavily with a jury. Hence the question can be put in this way: is there sufficient probative force in the similar fact evidence to get over the first hurdle of relevance and then over the much more difficult hurdle of outweighing the prejudicial effect?

3. To be admissible and gain the necessary probative force, the evidence as to the "Similar facts", and as to the main fact in issue, must display such a close or striking similarity or such an underlying unity that, if accepted, it would in common sense be inexplicable on grounds of coincidence.

4. In making his decision, the judge should apply common sense and experience. "In matters of experience he should keep close to current mores."

5. The admissibility of similar fact evidence does not depend upon any particular defence other than the general denial. It is all a question of relevance. However, it is submitted that the nature of the defence or possible defence is one of the facts which the judge should take into account in considering whether the probative force of the similar fact evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect. The categories referred to in Makin cannot therefore be regarded as closed and are better regarded by way of example than as an exhaustive list.

6. The same rule as to admissibility applies to all cases. There is no special rule for cases involving homosexual misconduct, which should now be added.

7. Where there is a real chance of collusion between witnesses, the evidence should not be admitted."

PHIPSON goes on to say in Sections 12-10, p. 191: "Formulating a test is an almost impossible task. Each case will depend on its own circumstances and in reaching a decision the judge will be guided by experience and common sense. However, as a broad guide it is submitted that, to be admissible, the similar facts must bear a striking similarity to the evidence in relation to the offence charged."

The Court of Appeal in R v. Rance[68]; and R v. Scarrott[69], considered the test of "striking similarity" propounded in Boardman's case and said that too much importance should not be attached to the phrase "uniquely or strikingly similar" and said that evidence was admissible if it was "positively probative" of the crime actually charged. PHIPSON is of the view that the term "positively probative" is not helpful and on the authorities the test of "striking similarity", in the absence of any more cogent test, will clearly continue in use.[70]

On the question of whether similar facts must be immediately connected with the commission of an offence, there is difference of opinion.[71]

After considering these cases it is stated in PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE[72] that similar facts falling short of offences similar to those the defendant is charged, are admissible in evidence, if (a) it was evidence of circumstances similar to those surrounding the offence; (b) a similarity was striking.[73] Evidence of similar facts not only prior to, but subsequent to, that in question may be given as well as the defendant's conduct, demeanour in connection with them and of any surrounding facts showing his motive or intention. However, the similar facts must have occurred within a reasonable time.[74]

---

68. (1975) 62 Cri App R 118.
69. 1978 QB 1016.
70. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE secs. 12-14, p. 195.
71. See R. v. Johansen, (1976) 65 Cri App R 101; R. v. Novac, (1977) 65 Cri App R 107; R. v. Carrott, 1978 QB 1016.
72. 13th Edn., sections 12-18, page 199.
73. R. v. Barrington, (1981) 1 All ER 1132
74. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, sections 12-30, p. 205.

At page 210 (Sections 12-35) PHIPSON gives a number of examples of similar fact evidence. A few of them may be mentioned: Abortion[75]; Murder[76]; Nuisance[77]; Prostitution[78]; Sexual Offences[79].

In all these cases evidence was held admissible.

Instances of Inadmissible Evidence are then given e.g. Murder[80]; Nuisance[81].

PHIPSON[82] sumsup the present position : It may now confidently be stated that the general rule of English law is that the prosecution may not adduce, as part of its case, evidence of the accused's bad character outside the present charge unless the probative value of that evidence is such as to outweigh its prejudicial effect. The House of Lords reached this conclusion in DPP v. P,[83] after an extensive review of the leading authorities. This change in the law had been anticipated in the speeches of Lords CROSS and WILBERFORCE in DPP v. Boardman,[84] but the rest of their Lordships in that case were content, more or less, to rely upon Lord HERSCHELL L.C.'s famous formulation in Makin.[85]

Before DPP v. P, it had seemed that, at least in those cases where similarity between the matters at hand and the accused's previous misconduct was relied upon, the similarity had to be striking in its nature. For example, in Inder,[86] a case involving separate allegations of sexual assault made by six young boys, the similarities between the various alleged offences were commonplace. In Lord WIDGERY C.J.'s words, they were[87] :

> "the stock in trade of the seducer of small boys and were not unique but appear in the vast majority of cases that come before the Courts."

It followed that the various allegations were not admissible, the one upon the other.

In DPP v. P, the complainants were P's two daughters. Their allegations of rape and incest against their father had a number of similarities, but the Court of Appeal had found them not to be striking. For the House of Lords, it did not follow that the two sets of allegations were inadmissible, the one in relation to the other. In such a case, where the issue was not one of identity but of whether or not the events had taken place as alleged, there was no requirement that the necessary enhanced probative value be established by striking similarity. It sufficed that the probative value which the evidence did have outweighed its potential for prejudice. Nevertheless, the House did go on to refer to several similarities between the accounts given by the daughters, concluding that, taken together, they gave "strong probative force to the evidence of each of the girls in relation to the incidents involving the other".[88] It is unclear whether some similarity in relation to the circumstances is required or whether sufficient probative value may be found in other ways.

In DPP v. P, itself, the "similar fact" evidence of each daughter was being used to corroborate or make more credible the evidence of the other. However, nowhere in the case is it indicated that the rejection of the need for striking similarity is limited to cases of that kind. In other cases, there is no witness whose evidence calls for support in that way. Rather, the evidence of similar facts or bad character is sought to be used as circumstantial evidence going directly to the issue of guilt. There is no better example of this kind of use than Straffen.[89] The accused had been committed to Broadmoor in 1951, having been found unfit to plead to charges of the murder of two young girls. Though he had

---

75. King v. Lovegrove, (1920) 3 KB 643.
76. (1911) 17 Cri App R 71.
77. (1857) 8 EKB 486.
78. King v. Hill, (1914) 2 KB 386.
79. King v. *William, (*1911) AC 47.
80. (1899) 13 How St Tr 1166.
81. R. v. Fairie, (1857) 8 E&B 486.
82. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 373-375 (paras 17-24, 17-25).
83. (1991) 2 AC 447.
84. (1975) AC 421 HL.
85. Makin v. Attorney-general for new South Wales, 1894 AC 57, 65 PC. See also Hoffmann, (1975) 91 LQR 193
86. (1977) 67 Cr App R 143 CA. See also R v. Clarke, (1977) 67 Cr App R 398 CA; R v. Brooks, (1990) 92 Cr App R 36, 42 CA.
87. (1977) 67 Cr App R 143, 149.
88. (1991) 2 AC 447, 461.
89. (1952) 2 QB 911 CCA.

never been convicted, it was not denied that he had been the perpetrator. On a particular day in 1952, he managed to escape from Broadmoor and was at large for about four hours. At or about the time when he was free, a young girl was murdered. There was evidence at his trial for her murder that he had admitted that he had been in the neighbourhood and, indeed, that he had seen the girl, but he had denied killing her. The prosecution was permitted to adduce evidence of the details of the earlier killings. In all three cases, the girl had been strangled, had not been sexually interefered with, had apparently not struggled and, once dead, had been left out in the open where discovery was easy. The presence of these various similarities persuaded the Court of Criminal Appeal that the trial judge had been right to allow the evidence to be given."

For full discussion on "similar facts" in criminal cases see PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Edn. (2000), pages 372 to 377; vide also HALSBURY Vol. 11.[90]

7. INDIAN LAW IS SAME AS ENGLISH LAW

MELVILLE, J., in R. v. Parbhudas,[91] held that the Indian Evidence Act does not go beyond the English Law of Evidence regarding the principle of this section.

In Sardul Singh v. State of Bombay,[92] it was held where the charges specified the conspiracy to commit criminal breach of trust, evidence relating to acts outside the period of the conspiracy is not admissible in evidence.[93]

In general, whenever it is necessary to rebut by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake or other innocent condition of mind, evidence that the defendant has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific type as that in question may be given; to admit evidence under this head, however, the other facts tendered must be of the same specific kind as that in question, and not of a different character, and the acts tendered must also have been proximate in point of time to that in question.[94]

In Reg. v. Prabhudas[95]; WEST J., said: "The possession by an accused of several articles deposed to have been stolen would, no doubt, have some probative force on the issue of whether he had received the particular articles which he was charged with having dishonestly received, and the receipt of possession, of which he denied altogether; yet, in the first illustration to Section 14, it is set forth as a preliminary to the admission of testimony as to the other articles that 'it is proved that he was in possession of the particular stolen article'. The receipt and possession are not allowed to be proved by other apparently similar instances, only the guilty knowledge which can be inferred satisfactorily through a conscious or unconscious application of the law of probabilities from a multiplication of the fractions representing in each case the ratio of probable ignorance to probable knowledge of how the goods had been come by. Illus. (o) to the same section makes previous attempts by the accused to shoot the person murdered, evidence of the accused's intention, but not of the fact that caused the death; yet, it is certain that, on the issue of whether A actually shot B or not, the fact that he had previously shot at him, would have some probative force; so too, would proof of a general malignity of disposition by evidence 'that A was in the habit of shooting at people, with intent to murder them'; yet this evidence is excluded even as proof of A's intention, either as too remotely connected with the particular intention in issue or as raising collateral questions, which could not properly be resolved in the case." In this case the accused was charged with having forged a promissory note and it was held that evidence that a number of documents apparently forged or held in readiness for the purpose of forgery, were found in the prisoner's possession was not admissible.[96]

Evidence of the possession and attempted disposal of coins of an unusual kind was considered relevant on a charge of uttering such coins soon afterwards when the factum of uttering was denied.[97] WEST, J., observed, distinguishing the case in R v. Prabudas: "The possession of documents of unknown

---

90. 4th Edn. pp. 297, 208; CROSS ON EVIDENCE, 6th Edn. Ch. X pp. 310-347.
91. 11 BHCR 91
92. AIR 1957 SC 747.
93. See also Rameshwar Dage v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1965 Cal 38 : (1965) 1 CrLJ 26.
94. Amrit Lal Hazara v. Emperor, ILR 42 Cal 957 : AIR 1916 Cal 188; this was followed in Emperor v. Panchudas, ILR 47 Cal 671 (FB).
95. (1874) 11 BHCR 90, 91, 92.
96. R. v. Prabhudas, (1874) 11 BHC 90.
97. Queen-Empress v. Nur Mahomed, (1883) 8 Bom 223.

character is a common occurrence and they could not be pronounced forgeries without a trial of the fact..... Now Halle Sikka rupees are not in common circulation in Poona and therefore the possession of a large number of them is unsual and may suggest the coins of that description possessed by the accused formed part of the quantity of surplus coinage disposed of by Mohammad Islam."

Similarly, where the accused was charged under Section 206 of the Indian Penal Code, with fraudulently transferring three properties to three different persons on a certain day, in order to prevent their being seized in execution of a decree, and the prosecution tendered evidence of five other fraudulent transfers of property effected by the accused on the same day, and apparently with the same object, this evidence was held admissible under Sections 14 and 15 of the Evidence Act, to prove either that all those transfers were parts of one entire transaction, or that the particular transfers which were specified in the charge were made with a fraudulent intent.[1]

Where a man is prosecuted for making speeches promoting hatred and enmity between communities[2], previous speeches made by him are admissible in evidence against him to show his intention in making the speeches which are the subject-matter of the proceedings.[3] Where the printer at Bareilly claiming a copyright on printing a certain book, complained of the infringement thereof by the printers at Hathras, and the offence was tried at Bareilly, it was held that the court was justified under this section in considering the infringing copies seized at Hathras.[4]

In Amritalal v. Emperor,[5] MOOKERJI, J., held that evidence of similar facts may be received to prove a party's knowledge of the nature of the main fact or transaction or his intent with respect thereto.[6]

The first explanation to Section 14 deals with the facts showing the existence of any state of mind, and they are relevant only if they show that state of mind in reference to the particular matter in issue. Section 15 of the Evidence Act is an application of the general rule laid down in this section; and the words of the section as well as the illus. (a) would show that it is not necessary that all the acts should form part of one transaction, but that such acts should form part of a series of similar occurrence.[7]

In a case where a doctor was charged with criminal negligence, in order to show that a particular injection given by the doctor was too strong, and to rebut the presumption that the death of a particular boy was due to an exceptional reaction to that injection in his case, the prosecution tendered evidence of symptoms, illness and death of nine other children. It was held that the evidence was admissible, not as evidence of a course of conduct of the carelessness, or negligent conduct of the doctor, but as evidence of the reaction to children who were similarly injected at the same time and place, to prove that too strong a preparation was used for the injection.[8]

If several and distinct offences are so intermixed with each other, the party's whole conduct can be looked into and proof of one can be arrived at through evidence which is given to prove the others, and the evidence is not on that account be excluded.[9]

Confession of the accused must relate to offence charged and not to a collateral offence. Where a charge of criminal misappropriation between and during certain period was made, it was held that the confession admitting the offence relating to a different period cannot be considered.[10]

8. APPLICATION TO CIVIL CASES

The principle laid down by LORD HERSHELL in Makin v. Attorney General of New South Wales;[11] was applied in a civil case in Hales v. Kerrs.[12] The facts are: A barber was sued for using dirty material whereby the plaintiff suffered barber's itch. Two other customers of the defendant who suffered with the

---

1. Queen-Empress v. Nur Mahomed, (1883) 8 Bom 223.
2. Section 153A, IPC.
3. Jagannath Prasad v. R, AIR 1942 Nag 62.
4. Ghureylal v. State, AIR 1965 All 206.
5. 42 Cal 957 : AIR 1916 Cal 188.
6. 42 Cal 957
7. R v. Debendra, ILR (1909) 36 Cal 573.
8. John Oni Akerale v. King, AIR 1943 PC 72.
9. Queen v. Prabhudas Ambaram, (1874) 11 BHCR 90; Queen v. Tajuram, ILR (1892) 16 Bom 414, 430
10. Radha Kishen v. State, AIR 1951 Ajmer 15.
11. 1894 AC 57.
12. (1908) 2 KB 601.

same were examined to show the defendant's negligence in using dirty material. It was held that the principle of admissibility of similar acts can be applied.[13]

In Cummings or Mc Williams v. Sir William Arrol & Co.,[14] LORD REID expressed a doubt as to whether the same considerations which justified the exclusivinary rule in criminal cases applied to civil cases. In Mood Music Publishing Co. Ltd. v. Wolfe,[15] LORD DENNING observed at p. 127 "In civil cases the courts will admit evidence of similar facts if it is logically probative; that is if it is logically relevant in determining the matter which is in issue; provided that it is not oppressive or unfair to the other side and also that the other side has fair notice of it and is able to deal with it."

In Australia it has been held that in civil cases there is no comparable exclusionary discretion in respect of similar acts evidence on the basis of an excess of prejudice over probative force.[16]

The principle on which evidence of similar acts is admissible, is not to show that, because the accused has committed already some crimes, he would therefore be likely to commit another, but to establish the animus of the act for which he is charged, and to rebut, by anticipation, the defence of ignorance, accident, mistake, or innocent state of mind. Under Section 15 of this Act, when the acts in question form part of series of similar occurrences, evidence of similar acts is admissible to prove the intention or knowledge of the person and to rebut the defence of accident or mistake, or the same having been done without the required knowledge or intention. Where the accused is charged with embezzling certain amounts from the government treasury and falsifying the accounts to cover up those defalcations during a particular period, it was held that evidence relating to similar entries of falsification of accounts made previous to the charge period are clearly admissible under Section 15; that under Section 477A, Indian Penal Code, it is not sufficient for the prosecution to prove that the entries which are the subject-matter of the charge are wrong entries. It should go further to prove that those entries are false entries and they are made by the accused, wilfully and with intent to defraud the State; that those instances can also be proved to rebut the accused's plea that he innocently made these entries at the behest of his superiors; but that evidence cannot be used to show that the accused was guilty of temporary misappropriation in the past or to probabilise the charge levelled against him by proving his past bad conduct if any.[17]

9. FACT RELEVANT TO SHOW EXISTENCE OF RELEVANT STATE OF MIND [EXPLANATION 1]

Illustrations [(n), (o) and (p)].—Refer to Explanation 1 which says a fact would be relevant to show the existence of relevant state of mind, in regard to a particular matter in question. In particular, illus. (o) and (p) give out the principle that evidence of general deposition, habit and tendencies of an individual is not relevant;[18] and the fact must show the state of mind in reference to a particular matter in question.[19] Anything having a distinct and immediate reference to the particular matter in question is admissible.[20]

The possession of a number of infringing copies of the publication, by the accused, would tend to show that they were printed with that intention.[21]

Under this Explanation evidence of general reputation is excluded. The evidence relating to the state of mind of a person must show that the state of mind exists not generally but in reference to the particular matter in question. Evidence of general disposition, habit or tendencies is inadmissible.[22]

Where the accused were charged with belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity, evidence of previous conviction of theft or of an order for giving security as the accused habitually committed thefts, was held inadmissible on the ground that such evidence did

---

13. See discussion in PHIPSON 13th Edn., pages 223 to 232; HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, pp. 35 to 37.
14. (1962) 1 All ER 623 at 630.
15. 1976 Ch 119.
16. Manenti v. Melbourne Tramway, (1954) VLR 115 at 118, See CROSS ON EVIDENCE, 6th Edn., Ch X pp. 346, 347.
17. Krishna Murthy v. Abdul Sobban, AIR 1965 Mys 128; relying on Ranjas v. Bryo Mohan, AIR 1915 Cal 188.
18. Emperor v. Panchu Das, ILR 47 Cal 671 (FB).
19. Lakshmandas v. State, AIR 1968 Bom 400.
20. Emperor v. Debendra Prasad, ILR (1909) 36 Cal 573; See illustrations (a) and (b).
21. Ghurey Lal v. State, AIR 1965 All 206.
22. Emperor v. Haji Sher Mohammed, (1921) 25 Bom LR 214 : AIR 1923 Bom 65 : ILR 46 Bom 961.

not indicate an intention to commit the particular crime with which the accused were charged.[23] The accused conspired together, murdered a person and implicated their enemies into the offence. The persons so implicated absconded, but the truth came to light and the accused were tried for the offence. At the trial evidence was led to show that on two previous occasions the accused had committed murders but had falsely charged and got convicted some other enemies of the accused. It was held that such evidence was not admissible as it amounted to evidence of similar acts and therefore of habit on the part of the accused and was therefore inadmissible under illus. (o) and (p).[24]

If an accused is found in possession of a number of stolen articles, that fact would show the knowledge and the intention as to the articles of which he is found in possession. With one instance one cannot be shown as dishonest, but when he is found in possession of several articles which are shown to have been stolen from different people, it can be inferred that he possessed the articles in a dishonest manner.[25]

Where there was an allegation of adultery in a divorce case, the letters written by the wife to her paramour would be good evidence of her feelings towards her paramour at the time when the letters were written.[26]

Where a person who does not know English was made to enter into a contract in respect of his property which was written in English, it was held that his mental capacity cannot be said to be irrelevant, and it is on the other party to show that the contract was signed with an understanding mind.[27]

10. PREVIOUS COMMISSION OF OFFENCE AND CONVICTION A RELEVANT FACT [EXPLANATION 2]

This explanation was substituted by the Indian Evidence Amendment Act, 1891. The amendment was necessitated by reason of the decision in Queen Empress v. Kartick Chunder Das[28]; wherein it was stated that all previous convictions of an accused were admissible in every case.

This Explanation distinctly states that, where the previous commission of an offence is relevant, the previous conviction of such person should also be a relevant fact. The Explanation is a particular application of the general rule contained in the section itself. Previous convictions become relevant when the existence of any state of mind, or body, or bodily feeling, is in issue or is relevant.[29]

The fact of previous conviction must show the state of mind of the accused in reference to a particular matter in issue, according to Explanation (2) of this section.[30]

Previous conviction for the offence of theft, or an order to give security for good behaviour on the ground of being a habitual offender, is admissible in a charge under Section 401 against the accused.[31]

A warrant was issued for the arrest of the accused under the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act. In execution of this warrant, when the police entered his room, no actual play was seen, but playing cards were found on the ground, and ten persons including the accused were found sitting in a circle. Upon these facts, the Magistrate convicted the accused of keeping a common gambling house. Amongst other facts he took into consideration the previous convictions of the accused under the Gambling Act. On appeal, it was held that the evidence that the accused had been previously convicted of the same offence was admissible to show guilty knowledge or intention.[32]

This case is of doubtful authority because the previous conviction is nothing more than evidence of bad character which is excluded by Section 54. The section does not extend to cases where the question of guilt or innocence depends upon actual facts and not upon the state of a man's mind of feeling.

---

23. Emperor v. Haji Mohomed, (1921) 25 Bom LR 214 : 46 Bom 958 : AIR 1923 Bom 65.
24. Emperor v. Gangaram, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1274.
25. Gunwant v. Emperor, 38 IC 723 : AIR 1916 Nag 73.
26. Niranjan Das Mohan v. Ena Mohan, AIR 1941 Cal 146, 151.
27. Harendralal v. Haridasi, AIR 1914 PC 71.
28. ILR 14 Cal 721 (FB).
29. Emperor v. Allooniya, ILR (1903) 28 Bom 129, 135; Wazir v. Queen Empress, (1895) PR No. 7 of 1895 (Cr); (see illustrations (e) and (f) to Section 43).
30. Lakshmandas v. State, AIR 1968 Bom 400; Sharaf Shah v. State, AIR 1963 AP 314.
31. R v. Thukaram, 14 Bom LR 373; Bonai v. R, 15 Cal WN 461; Ladmalla v. R, 52 Cal 595.
32. Emperor v. Allomiya Husan, (1903) 28 Bom 129.

In R v. Sher Mohammad[33]; the Bombay High Court held that when several persons are charged as belonging to a gang of dacoits habitually committing offences of dacoity, evidence of commission of offences other than dacoity e g., evidence of previous conviction of theft or that they had been ordered to give security for good behaviour, being evidence of bad character, is not admissible under this section.[34]

In the case of dacoity which is an offence under Section 400, I.P.C., the word 'belongs' was given a meaning as intimate connection with a body of persons, extending for sufficient period to warrant an inference of identification with a band committing dacoities. It was held that previous convictions for similar offences are relevant under Explanation (2) of Section 14 to prove the sharing in common, the purpose of the gang.[35] Similarly in the case of theft under Section 379 of Indian Penal Code, a previous judgment convicting the accused for the same offence is relevant to prove dishonest intention of the same accused who was tried for the same offence in respect of the same land.[36]

In a case where an order was placed for printing of prize competitions after the Prize Competition Act, 1955 came into force, and it was denied by the accused, similar orders placed and distributed in the past inviting entries were filed by the prosecution. On those facts it was held that the intention to run a competition after the Act came into force can be inferred from the previous conduct.[37]

11. FINDINGS IN CRIMINAL COURT NOT BINDING ON CIVIL COURTS

In a suit for malicious prosecution, the judgment of a criminal court and the findings therein are not binding on the civil court, as the plaintiff must prove independently in the Civil Court mala fides and want of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution.[38]

12. PREVIOUS JUDGMENT

It was held that a previous judgment convicting the accused for the same offence is relevant and admissible to show dishonest intention of the accused.[39]

Facts bearing on question whether act was accidental or intentional.

S. 15. When there is a question whether an act was accidental or intentional, or done with a particular knowledge or intention, the fact that such act formed part of a series of similar occurrences, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, is relevant.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A is accused of burning down his house in order to obtain money for which it is insured.

The facts that A lived in several houses successively, each of which he insured, in each of which a fire occurred, and after each of which fires A received payment from a different insurance office, are relevant, as tending to show that the fires were not accidental.

(b) A is employed to receive money from the debtors of B. It is A's duty to make entries in a book showing the amounts received by him. He makes an entry showing that on a particular occasion he received less than he really did receive.

The question is, whether this false entry was accidental or intentional.

The facts that other entries made by A in the same book are false, and that the false entry is in each case in favour of A, are relevant.

(c) A is accused of fraudulently delivering to B a counterfeit rupee.

The question is, whether the delivery of the rupee was accidental.

The facts that, soon before or soon after the delivery to B, A delivered counterfeit rupees to C, D and E are relevant, as showing that the delivery to B was not accidental.

---

33. AIR 1925 Bom 195 : ILR 46 Bom 958.
34. See also Public Prosecutor v. Bonigiry, 32 Mad 179.
35. Sharaf Shah v. State of A.P., AIR 1963 AP 314.
36. Y.M. Singh v. Golap Singh, AIR 1961 Mani 43.
37. Mahesh Chandra v. State, AIR 1964 All 572.
38. Manipur Co-op. Bank Ltd. v. N.E. Railway, AIR 1951 Mani 32.
39. Y. Mohan Singh v. Golap Singh, AIR 1961 Mani 675.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section deals with a particular application of the general principle laid down in Section 14. It refers to the facts bearing on the question whether a particular act was accidental or intentional, and whether it was done with a particular knowledge or intention. The fact that an act, forms part of a series of similar occurences in each of which the particular person was concerned, is relevant if the question is whether the act is accidental or intentional.

Where it is uncertain whether an act was done with a guilty knowledge or intention, or whether it was innocent or accidental, proof that it formed one of a series of similar acts raises the presumption that the act in question and the others, together forming a series, were done upon system, and were therefore not innocent or accidental.

Section 14 provides that the facts showing the existence of any state of mind, such as intention or knowledge, are relevant, when the existence of any such state of mind is in issue or is relevant; and this section provides specifically for allowing evidence of similar occurrence, in each of which the person doing the act was concerned, whenever there is a question whether an act is done with a particular knowledge or intention.[40]

In this section, as in Section 14, the intention of the party is taken into account. But, if there is no common link between the fact to be proved and the evidentiary fact, they cannot form a series. A regular system worked by the common intention should be proved.

Evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts, other than those covered by the indictment, is not admissible unless upon the issue whether the acts charged against the accused, were designed or accidental, or unless to rebut a defence is otherwise open to him.

Whenever, it is necessary to rebut, even by anticipation, the defence of accident, mistake or other innocent condition of mind, evidence may be given to prove that the accused has been concerned in a systematic course of conduct of the same specific kind and proximate in time to the conduct in question.[41] Where the intention which is common to other offences becomes relevant, such common intention of the accused has to come into being prior to the commission of the act in point of time. There should not be any long gap between the time when he entertains the intention and the doing of the act.[42]

P introduced himself as a Raja's son to a prostitute who passed into his keeping. He then introduced G as his door-keeper and both visited her house till the night of December 9, 1914, when she was found next morning to have been murdered and robbed. P and G were tried on charges of murder, conspiracy to rob, theft, and abetment of each other in commission of the theft and murder. It was held that evidence that P had similarly introduced himself as a wealthy man in 1915 and 1918 to three other prostitutes who each became his mistress, that he then introduced G as his door-keeper, that both visited the women, and suddenly disappeared, and that their disappearance was followed by discovery, by the women, in each case, of the loss of their money or ornaments, was not admissible under Sections 9, 14 or 15. Section 9 did not apply for the purpose of proving identity as the murder and theft took place in December, 1914, and the subsequent incidents in 1915 and 1918. Section 14 was not applicable, as the evidence of the subsequent occurence did not show the state of mind of the accused towards the murdered woman. The first Explanation and ills. (i), (j) and (o) to that section excluded such evidence. Section 15 was not applicable as there was no question of the acts of murder and theft being accidental or intentional or done with a particular knowledge or intent, but that they were plainly intentional. Evidence of the subsequent incidents was also not admissible under Section 11.[43]

In order to be relevant under this section, the act has to form part of a series of similar occurrences. A solitary act or instance is the very antithesis of the expression "part of the series of similar

---

40. Emperor v. Harjivan Valji, AIR 1926 Bom 231 : ILR (1925) 50 Bom 174, 182.
41. Amrita Lal Hazara v. Emperor, ILR (1915) 42 Cal 957, Emperor v. Harjivan Valji, 28 Bom LR 115 : (1925) 50 Bom 174 : AIR 1926 Bom 231.
42. Sharifi Ahmad v. State, AIR 1957 All 50, Kanailal Mitra v. Pannasashi Mitra, AIR 1954 Cal 589.
43. Emperor v. Panchu Das, ILR (1920) 47 Cal 671 (FB).

occurrence."[44] The words of the section as well as of illustration (a) show that it is not necessary that all the acts should form part of one transaction, but that they should be parts of a series of similar occurrence.[45] For example under ill. (a) the fact that the shops of the same person insured against fire were successively burnt down on different occasions was relevant to prove that the incidents were not accidental but part of a design.[46] Likewise evidence of similar facts in other occurrences is relevant to show mala fides or bad faith.[47]

2. SIMILAR OCCURRENCES

Upon a trial for arson with intent to defraud an insurance company, evidence that the accused had made claims on two other insurance companies in respect of fires which had occurred in two other houses which he had occupied previously and in succession, was admitted for the purpose of showing that the fire which formed the subject of the trial was the result of design and not of accident.[48]

"As a general rule, a single similar act or transaction is admissible. The doubts expressed by LORD REID in D P P. v. Kilbourne,[49] do not appear to have been shared by the House of Lords in Boardman v. D P P.[50] A fortiori, a series of such acts will be more likely to show system or a systematic course of conduct."[51]

Where shops of the same person insured against fire were burnt down in three successive years, it was held that the successive incidents of fire indicated that they were not accidental but were designed, and the evidence of previous fires was admissible.[52]

On the trial on an indictment for endeavouring to obtain an advance from a pawn-broker upon a ring by the false pretence that it was a diamond ring, evidence was admitted that two days before the transaction in question the accused had obtained an advance from a pawn-broker upon a chain which he represented to be a gold chain, but which was not so, and that he endeavoured to obtain from other pawn-brokers advances upon a ring which he represented to be a diamond ring but which, in the opinion of the witnesses, was not so. This ring was not produced. It was held that the evidence was properly admitted.[53] On a charge against the accused of cheating by falsely representing that he was the agent of an estate and could procure for the complainant appointment to the vacant post of manager to the estate, and thereby obtaining a sum of money as a pretended security deposit, evidence of instances of similar but unconnected transactions with other persons, before and after the date of the offence charged, was held admissible under this section, not to establish the factum of the offence but to prove that the transaction in issue was one of a systematic series of frauds, and that the intention of the accused on the particular occasion in question was dishonest and fraudulent.[54] Where accused had been convicted of the wilful murder of an infant child which they had received from its mother on certain representations as to their willingness to adopt it, and upon payment of a sum inadequate for its support for more than a very limited period, and whose body the evidence showed had been found buried in the garden of a house occupied by them, the court admitted evidence that several other infants had been received by the accused from their mothers on like representations and on like terms and that bodies of infants had been found buried in a similar manner in the gardens of several houses occupied by the accused.[55]

Similarly, where the court had to decide whether a person was maliciously shot or whether the shooting was accidental, proof that the accused had at another time shot at the same person was

---

44. Babulal Choukhani v. Western India Theatre Ltd., AIR 1957 Cal 709; see contra A.H. Gandhi v. King, AIR 1941 Rang 324.
45. Emperor v. Debendra Prasad, (1909) 36 Cal 573; see also Emperor v. Panchu Das, (1920) 47 Cal 671 (FB); A H. Gandhi v. King, AIR 1941 Rang 324.
46. Nural Amin v. Emperor, AIR 1939 Cal 335 : ILR (1939) 1 Cal 511.
47. Babulal Choukhani v. Western India Theatres Ltd., AIR 1957 Cal 709.
48. Regina v. Gray, (1866) 4 F&F 1102 approved in Makin's case (1894) AC 57.
49. 1973 (1) All ER 440; Ante, pp. 12-10.
50. (1975) AC 421.
51. See PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 13th Edn., P. 206, Ch. 12 (para. 31).
52. Nurul Amin v. R, AIR 1939 Cal 335 : ILR (1939) 1 Cal 51.
53. Queen v. Francis, 1874 LR 2 CCR 128. For other cases relating to false pretences, see PHIPSON 13th Edn p. 214 (paras 12-44).
54. Emperor v. Debendra Prasad, (1909) 36 Cal 573; Emperor v. Yakub Ali, (1916) 39 All 273 : AIR 1917 All 251.
55. Makin v. Attorney-General for New South Wales, 1894 AC 57.

considered relevant.[56] Where a woman was charged with the murder of her child by poison, and the defence was that its death resulted from an accidental taking of such poison, evidence to prove that two other children of hers and lodger in her house had died previous to the present charge from the same poison, was held to be admissible.[57] Where the accused was charged for an offence of murder of a boy, held that previous attempts by the accused to kill a boy would be admissible to rebut an anticipated defence of accidental drowning.[58]

In a case where the accused was charged for murder of a woman by poisoning her, evidence was admitted by the trial court showing that the accused had previously murdered another woman under similar circumstances. Their Lordships of the Privy Council held that the admission of evidence in the previous case was not justified, as there was no direct evidence showing that the accused administered the poison. It was further observed: "If the appellant (the accused) were proved to have administered poison to Ayesha in circumstances consistent with accident, then proof that he had previously administered poison to Gooniah in similar circumstances might well have been admissible."[59] Where the accused in an offence under Section 409, Indian Penal Code for (mis-appropriation of funds) pleaded that he made payments bona fide to wrong persons under a mis-apprehension, the prosecution wanted to place evidence of other transactions in which the accused mis-appropriated the funds. It was held that such evidence cannot be relevant under this section as it would show general dishonesty of the accused; and it is also inadmissible for rebutting the defence of the accused.[60]

In an action for libel, instances of acts of the plaintiff more or less closely resembling the particular act of misconduct imputed to the plaintiff in the libellous statements are not admissible in evidence. The defendant must justify the libel as true in substance and in fact by proving its truth, not the truth of other acts and occasions having nothing to do with the one in question.[61] It was held by the Patna High Court that the evidence showing that the accused was connected with similar cases of forged challans is admissible to prove the knowledge and intention in regard to the cases for which specific charges have been framed against the accused; that, similar facts which were subject-matter of prior indictments can be taken into consideration as relevant under this section. This would also apply to separate indictments still to be tried; there is no warrant for the view that the other instances cannot be used in regard to the knowledge of the accused, of the nature of the main fact for which specific charges have been framed, simply because those other instances form the subject-matter of separate indictments which are tried simultaneously.[62]

Where a person was charged for an offence under Section 477A, Indian Penal Code for falsification of accounts during a particular period, it was held that, though evidence of similar unconnected acts of the accused may not be admissible to probabilise the offence in question, still such evidence is admissible under Sections 14 and 15 as evidence of intention or knowledge on the part of the accused, and where it is necessary to rebut even an anticipated defence of accident, mistake, or other innocent condition of mind. And so, similar false entries made previously are admissible.[63]

Under this section the prosecution may place evidence of criminal acts other than those charged, without waiting for the accused to set up a specific defence calling for rebuttal evidence. When the Act in question forms part of a series of similar occurrences, evidence of similar facts is admissible, to prove intention or knowledge of the person and to rebut the defence of accident, mistake, etc. The principle on which evidence of similar acts is admissible is not to show that, because the accused has committed one crime, he would, therefore, be likely to commit another, but to establish animus, and rebut by anticipation, the defences of ignorance, accident, mistake, or other innocent state of mind.[64] In a suit for

---

56. Voke's Case, 1823 Russl. Ry. 531. See HALSBURY, 4th Edn., Vol. 11, p. 209, F.N. 1.
57. Reg v. Cotton, (1873) 12 Cox 400; Reg v. Roden, (1874) 12 Cox 630.
58. R v. Shnakaraya, AIR 1940 Bom 365.
59. Noor Mahammad v. King, AIR 1949 PC 161.
60. Lloyd v. R, AIR 1933 Cal 136.
61. Nadirshaw H. Sukhia v. Pirojshaw R. Ratnagar, (1913) 15 Bom LR 130.
62. State of Bihar v. Kailash Prasad Sinha, AIR 1961 Pat 451; Shamsher Bahadur v. State of Bihar, AIR 1956 Pat 404 (a case of abducting girls for illegal purpose); K Malaiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1956 Mys 9; Lalchand Khatri v. State, AIR 1961 Pat 260, (previous three specific dacoities).
63. Krishnamurthy v. Abdul, AIR 1965 Mys 128.
64. Kalipada v. Union of India, (1963) 1 CrLJ 88 (Ker) relying on Srinivas Mal Bairoliya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 135; Makin v. Attorney General, 1894 AC 57; Krishnamurthy v. Abdul Subban, AIR 1965 Mys 128; Amritlal Hazra v. Emperor, AIR 1915 Cal 188.

recovery of rent from the defendant, though the defendant filed certain rent receipts into Court, he did not prove them by evidence; but plaintiff wanted to place evidence of similar suits wherein defendant filed forged receipts and did not prove them. It was held that such evidence is admissible under this section.[65]

See also commentary under the head 'Similar Acts Evidence' in Section 14.

Existence of course of business when relevant.

S. 16. When there is a question whether a particular act was done, the existence of any course of business, according to which it naturally would have been done, is a relevant fact.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question is, whether a particular letter was despatched.

The facts that it was the ordinary course of business for all letters put in a certain place to be carried to the post, and that that particular letter was put in that place, are relevant.

(b) The question is, whether a particular letter reached A. The facts that it was posted in due course, and was not returned through the Dead Letter Office, are relevant.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 233
2. Course of business ... 233
3. Presumption under other acts ... 234
4. Post ... 234
5. Postal Stamp ... 235
6. Illustration (b)—Non-return of posted letter, relevant ... 235
7. Endorsement of refusal ... 235
8. Whether examination of postman necessary ... 236
9. Acknowledgement Receipt ... 236
10. Certificate of posting ... 236
11. Computer hearsay ... 236

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section when the ordinary course of a particular business is proved, the court is asked to presume that, on the particular occasion in question, there was no departure from the ordinary and general rule. For instance, if letters, properly directed to a gentleman, are left with his servant, it is only reasonable to presume prima facie that they reached his hands. Section 114, illus. (f), lays down that the court may presume that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases. This presumption is an application of the general maxim omnia proesumuntur rite esse acta (all acts are presumed to be rightly done), and based on the fact the conduct of men in official and commercial matters is, to a great extent, uniform. In such cases, there is a strong presumption that the general regularity will not, in any particular instance, be departed from. This, however, is a rebuttable presumption.

2. COURSE OF BUSINESS

This must mean the ordinary course of a professional avocation or mercantile transaction or trade or business. The section covers both private and public offices.[66]

Illustration (a) relates to the former; illus. (b) to the latter, viz., the post office. Illus. (b) only means that each one of the facts mentioned therein is relevant; it cannot be read as indicating that, without a combination of these facts, no presumption can arise.[67]

The usage in a private house, however methodical, cannot convey the same weight as the ordinary routine of an office.

---

65. Kedar v. R, AIR 1935 All 521.
66. Ningawa v. Bharmappa, ILR (1897) 23 Bom 63, 65.
67. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 : 1958 SCR 328.

3. PRESUMPTION UNDER OTHER ACTS

In view of the illus. (a) and (b) given in the Act, it would be appropriate to note certain other acts whereunder a presumption can be drawn. Under Section 3 of the Commercial Documents Evidence Act (30 of 1939), a receipt granted by the Post and Telegraphs Department may be presumed to contain accurate statements. Section 94 of the Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881), states that, if a notice is duly addressed and sent by post and for some reason or another it is miscarried, such miscarriage does not render the notice invalid. See also Sections 51 and 52 of Indian Companies Act (1 of 1956). Section 114 Illus. (f) of this Act states the courts may presume that the common course of business has been followed in particular cases. See also Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, 1897. It was held by the Calcutta High Court, in a case where a letter of demand was sent under the Companies Act by registered post, and it was returned as 'refused' on the ground that the word 'private' in the name of the Company 'Private Ltd.', was not there on the address, that there was delivery within the meaning of Section 434(1)(a), read with Section 51 of the Companies Act and the addressee was not prejudiced.[68]

4. POST

It was held by the Gauhati High Court, that the presumption of service of a notice sent under registered post is available under Sections 16 and 114(e) of the Evidence Act as well as under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, only when the plaintiff proves that the letter was properly addressed and was put into the post office. The mere fact that the full address was given in the body of the notice, does not raise any presumption that the envelope containing the notice was also correctly addressed. At any rate, presumption under Sections 16 and 114(e) of the Evidence Act, as well as under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, is a rebuttable one. When the person on whom the notice is said to have been served appears before the court and denies on oath that the notice was served on him, the presumption is rebutted and in such a case the evidence of the postman becomes necessary.[69]

If a letter is shown to have been handed over or left with a person, whose duty in the ordinary course of business is to carry it to the Post Office, it would be presumed that it was sent to the Post Office.[70] Where the duty of a clerk was, in the ordinary course of business, to carry it to the Post Office and when he declared that he took all the letters to the Post Office, though he did not recollect about a particular letter, in that bundle, it was held the fact was presumptively proved.[71] Where the records of the proceedings show that the requisite letter for the appearance of the petitioner was sent, it was held that under the provisions of this section and Section 114(f) of the Act there must be a presumption that the letter was duly received by the petitioner.[72] Where the general practice of a Bank was to deposit the cash box in a sealed condition in a police station after entering details in the account and in the cash book, showing the amount on hand from day to day, when the amount was found missing from the sealed box, it was held that as the entries were made in the course of usual business, the cash and account book were admissible to prove the contents of the box.[73]

But in another case, it was held that it was extremely doubtful, if the act of placing a bundle of circulars in the custody of an office peon is equivalent to putting it in a certain place within the meaning of illus. (a) under this section; but assuming it to be so, the presumption under the illustration cannot arise in a case where the particular peon who was said to be entrusted with the duty of posting one bundle of circulars could not be named.[74] However, it was held that the evidence of a general clerk, whose duty was to make over the covers containing the drafts to a peon of the office for posting, that a particular letter which was brought to him in the envelope had been sealed in his presence and he gave it to the peon, was not sufficient to prove posting of that letter in the absence of the evidence of the peon.[75]

---

68. Sarkar Estates Ltd. v. Kusumika & Co., AIR 1961 Cal 439.
69. Mahmuda v. Ajit, AIR 1978 NOC 112 (Gau).
70. Chunilal Dwarknath v. H.F. Insurance Co., AIR 1958 Punj 440.
71. Chunilal v. H.F. Insurance Co., AIR 1958 Pep 440.
72. W.B. Board of Secondary Education v. Basana Rani, AIR 1982 Cal 467; referring to Jitendranath Ghose v. Manmohan Ghose, AIR 1930 PC 193; Md Akbar v. Mian Musharaf Shaf, AIR 1934 PC 217; Sailabala Dassee Smt v. H.A. Tappassier, AIR 1952 Cal 455 (entry in the office peon's book); Fazal Ahmad v. K.N. Jain, 2001 AIHC 464 (para 11) (All).
73. Bilaspur Central Co-operative Bank Ltd v. State of M.P., AIR 1959 MP 77.
74. Hulas v. Allahabad Bank, AIR 1958 Cal 644.
75. Bank of Bihar v. Tata Scob Deals, AIR 1960 Cal 475.

Where a reply notice, though typed and unsigned, was received by the plaintiff through post in the common course of business, it was held that it would be presumed that the reply notice was on behalf of the defendant.[76]

Invitation cards, bearing postal stamps of the place of posting and also the place of destination are admissible in evidence under this section.[77]

5. POSTAL STAMP

Where the question was whether a letter was sent on a given date, the postal mark upon the letter would be a relevant fact.[78]

The evidence relating to a post mark involves three facts:—

(1) The mark was genuinely affixed by the officer of the Post Office concerned.

(2) It is in evidence that the postal mark was placed on the cover on the date the impression bears.

(3) It is in evidence that the place or office mentioned therein was actually the place where it was affixed.

The fact that a notice bears a certain date is not proof that it must have been posted on the same day. It is the postal mark that becomes relevant to show when it was posted.[79]

6. ILLUSTRATION (b)—NON-RETURN OF POSTED LETTER, RELEVANT

If a letter is put into a post office, that is prima facie evidence till rebutted, that the addressee received it in due course. The post marks on letters are considered as evidence of the dates and places mentioned therein. Where a notice to quit was sent by a registered letter, the posting of which was proved, and which was produced in court in the cover in which it had been despatched and on the cover there was an endorsement purporting to be by an officer of the post office stating the refusal of the addressee to receive the letter, it was held that this was sufficient service of notice.[80]

When a notice was sent by registered post by the Income Tax Department, it was held that there was a presumption of proper service and it was for the party to rebut the presumption.[81]

Each case depends upon the circumstance of that case. Statement on oath by the addressee that such letter was not tendered to him was held to be sufficient to rebut the presumption.[82]

7. ENDORSEMENT OF REFUSAL

When a letter or article was sent by registered post and returned with an endorsement 'refused' it is prima facie evidence that the addressee had an opportunity to accept it and the service thus effected, is therefore, a good and valid service.[83] Where service of notice on a tenant under Section 106, T.P. Act was sought to be effected by post, and there was an endorsement 'refused' by the postman, it was held that presumption of service arose and bare denial of refusal by the tenant was not sufficient if it was inherently unreliable.[84] A person refusing a registered letter sent by post cannot afterwards plead ignorance of its contents.[85]

---

76. Nathu Ram v. Firm Bhohraylal Hiralal, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 472.

77. Vandavasi Karthikeya v. S. Kamalamma, AIR 1994 AP 102 (para 25).

78. Gobinda Chandra Saha v. Dwarka Nath Patma, 26 IC 962 : 15 CWN 489.

79. Gobinda v. Dwaraka, 19 CWN 489 : AIR 1915 Cal 313.

80. Jogendro Chunder Ghose v. Dwarka Nath Karmokar, (1888) 15 Cal 68.

81. Commer. of I.T v. Malchand, AIR 1956 Cal 537; Balbhadar Mul Kuthiala v. Commer., of I.T., AIR 1957 Punj 284.

82. Appabhai v. Lakmichand, AIR 1954 Bom 159; Meghji v. Kundanmal, AIR 1968 Bom 387; Ram Devi v. Sethi, 1963 All WR 472 (case of money order) Sailabala v. Atul, AIR 1948 Cal 63.

83. Haripada v. Joygopal, 39 Cal WN 234; Jogendra v. Dwaraka, ILR 15 Cal 681; Rajani v. Baikuntha, 39 CWN 1041; Louis Dreyfus and Co. v. Himandas, 50 IC 194; Lal Jugalkishore Jodhalal v. Bom. Revenue Tribunal, AIR 1959 Bom 81; Balbhadas Mulkuthialu v. Commissioner of I.T., AIR 1957 Punj 284; Ram Autar v. Savitri Devi, AIR 1976 All 515; Pudi Lazarus v. Rev. Johnson Edward, AIR 1976 AP 243.

84. Anil Kumar v. Nanakchandra Verma, AIR 1990 SC 1215 overruling AIR 1980 All 280 and AIR 1976 Del 111.

85. Loolf Ali Meah v. Pearce Mohun Roy, (1871) 16 WR (Civil) 223; Budha v. Bedariya, AIR 1981 MP 76.

Section 114 of this Act in general deals with presumptions which can be drawn. It is not obligatory on the part of the Court to draw the presumption. As the section itself says "The court may presume", it is not obligatory or mandatory to draw a presumption as to the correctness of the postal endorsement of 'refusal', where the court entertains any doubt.[86]

8. WHETHER EXAMINATION OF POSTMAN NECESSARY

In a case where a notice was sent by the landlord by registered post, terminating the tenancy of the tenant (who was in jail), giving the jail address, and when it was returned with a postal endorsement of refusal, it was held that the presumption is that the endorsement as well as the initials are that of the postman, and that it is not necessary to examine the postman to prove the same. It was further held that the acknowledgment made by the Jail Superintendent gives rise to the presumption that the notice sent to the tenant had been received by the tenant.[87] The Supreme Court held that, where a notice was sent by a registered post and it was returned with an endorsement as 'refused', it is not always necessary to examine the postmen who tried to effect the service on the addressee. A denial of service can be given by a party.[88]

The Bombay High Court had, however, in an earlier case, held that where a postman who took the letter for service and brought it back was not examined, the postal endorsement of refusal was not proved.[89]

But, this case was explained in Sushil v. Ganesh,[90] stating that if the addressee denies the service on oath, the presumption of due service stands rebutted.

9. ACKNOWLEDGEMENT RECEIPT

A detenu under National Security Act contended to have sent his representation by registered post and produced the copy of the served postal acknowledgement receipt but it did not contain the signature on behalf of the addressee, service on the Central Government could not be presumed.[91]

10. CERTIFICATE OF POSTING

A detenu under COFEPOSA contended that he posted a letter under certificate of posting withdrawing his statement. He filed a photo copy of the certificate of posting but not of the letter itself. The letter was also not traceable in the Department. No presumption of posting was raised.[92]

11. COMPUTER HEARSAY

"Where a program is run on a computer, the results produced by the computer depend on underlying statements as to the nature of the interaction of the machine with the program and of the program with the data. We think that it is these buried statements which emanate the whiff of hearsay; but we nonetheless do not think that the documents output by computers are of themselves hearsay. The reason is that the underlying statements are not statements of fact the truth of which is to be assumed or held by the Court before the Court can rely on them. A computer program is not a series of statements but a set of instructions : and the implied statement as to the effect of the program is a prediction, and therefore not a statement of fact. The operator of a computer is for these purposes an expert who is in a position where he is able to predict the workings of the machine, and, in his capacity as a factual witness, is also able to authenticate the actual running of the program. Certainly the Courts have, no doubt wisely, refused to characterise the products of computer programs as hearsay.

---

86. Budha v. Bedariya, AIR 1981 MP 76; Lal Jugalkishore v. Bombay Revenue Tribunal, AIR 1959 Bom 81.
87. Saeed Ahmed v. S.Q. Ali, AIR 1973 All 24 following Gangaram v. Phulwati, AIR 1970 All 446 (FB); Pakhar v. Kishan, AIR 1974 Raj 112; Kunhabdulla v. Krishnan, AIR 1957 Ker 33; Bapayya v. Venkataratnam, AIR 1953 Mad 884; Lal Jugulkishore* v. Bombay Revenue Tribunal, AIR 1959 Bom 81.
88. Puvada Venkateswara Rao v. Chidamana Venkataramanna, AIR 1976 SC 869.
89. Vaman v. Khanderao, AIR 1935 Bom 247.
90. AIR 1958 Cal 251.
91. Abdul Shakur Khan v. R.D. Tyagi, 1999 Cr LJ 1524, 1532-33 (Bom).
92. L.M.S. Umma Saleema v. B.B. Gujral, AIR 1981 SC 1191.

In R v. Wood[93] data had been obtained from computer analyses of the chemical composition of certain metals which were subsequently stolen. These were compared with the results of an analysis of metals found in the accused's possession after the theft. The evidence was held admissible, and R v. Pettigrew[94] was said to be concerned only with the question of how the statute operated; and it is implicit that it would have been decided otherwise had the hearsay question been argued. In R. v. Wood,[95] the prosecution were able to call not only those who had run the machine but those who had programmed it. In R v. Ewing[96] however, it was never suggested that the personal knowledge of anyone other than the operator was relevant to the admission of computer records. That case turned on the application of the statutory provisions then in force which enabled such records to be introduced in evidence. Nonetheless, it is thought that the Courts have succeeded in avoiding the conclusion that the relevance of evidence of this kind depends on assumptions as to the truth of implied statements of fact."[97]

See also p. 352 ibid, and HALSBURY 4th Edn., para 59, pages 47 to 49 and The Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II.

ADMISSIONS

Admission defined

S. 17. An admission is a statement, [98][oral or documentary or contained in electronic form], which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, and which is made by any of the persons, and under the circumstances, hereinafter mentioned.

SYNOPSIS

1. The Information Technology Act, 2000—Definition of admission ... 237
2. Principle and scope ... 238
3. Admission—meaning ... 238
   Classification of admissions ... 239
4. Effect of Admissions ... 239
5. Presumption of Genuineness ... 240
6. Proof of Admission ... 240
7. Exceptions to General Principle ... 241
8. Statement—meaning of ... 242
9. Implied Admission ... 243
10. Binding Nature ... 243
11. Admission—Clear and Precise ... 244
12. Admission can be disproved ... 245
13. Admission—to be taken as a whole ... 245
14. Admission—Subject to condition or qualification ... 245
15. Admission—Confession ... 245
16. Admission—Construction ... 247
17. Admission—Not conclusive against third parties ... 247
18. Admission—Not conclusive proof ... 247
19. Admission in pleading whether can be used in other suits ... 247
20. Admission by an infant ... 248
21. Counter Admissions ... 248
22. Admission by one accused against another ... 248
23. Voluntary ... 248
24. Voluntary confession partly not true ... 249
25. Opinions as to custom ... 249
26. Affidavit ... 249
27. Admission on a Power of Law ... 249
28. Value of Admissions ... 249
29. Withdrawal of admission which is gratuitous ... 250
30. General cases dealt separately ... 250

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000—DEFINITION OF ADMISSION

Definition of admission would now include statements contained in an electronic form, besides including oral or documentary statements as the italicised words in the text of the section have been inserted by the Information Technology Act, 2000.

---

93. (1982) 76 Cr App R 23 CA.
94. (1980) 71 Cr App R 39 CA.
95. (1982) 76 Cr App R 23 CA.
96. (1983) QB 1039 CA; see commentary by J.C. Smith, (1983) Crim LR 472. See also R. v. Van Vreden, (1973) 57 Cr App R 818 CA; R v. Nicholls, (1976) 63 Cr App R 187 CA. See also R v. Minors, (1989) 2 All ER 208 CA; Sophocleus v. Ringer, (1988) RTR 52 DC.
97. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 648-649 (para 25-19).
98. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000 S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).

2. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section starts by saying that an admission is a statement, oral or documentary, suggesting an inference as to any fact in issue or a relevant fact. A statement in relation to a fact or circumstance which is not in issue or is not a relevant fact, is not an admission.[1] The latter part of this section says that an admission made by any of the persons and under the circumstances hereinafter mentioned is relevant. The circumstances are detailed in the succeeding Sections. BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY defines "admission" as a voluntary acknowledgement made by a party of the existence of certain facts which are inconsistent with his claim in an action.

A statement, if not denied, is tentamount to a waiver of the necessity of proving the fact which is admitted and, if such admission is not explained away, it would be tentamount to estoppel.[2]

3. ADMISSION—MEANING

According to STEPHEN, "An admission is a statement, oral or written, suggesting an inference as to any fact in issue or relevant or deemed to be relevant to any such fact, made by or on behalf of any party to any proceeding".[3]

An 'admission' is a statement of fact which waives or dispenses with the production of evidence by conceding that the fact asserted by the opponent is true. Admissions are admitted because the conduct of a party to a proceeding, in respect to the matter in dispute, whether by acts, speech, or writing, which is clearly inconsistent with the truth of his contention, is a fact relevant to the issue.

Admission should be clear cut and accurate specific statement of that very person in his own words. Inference drawn by someone else can not be admission.[4]

Admission is confession or voluntary acknowledgement, made by a party or some one identified with him in legal interest, of the existence of certain facts which are in issue or relevant to an issue in the case. The predominant characteristic of this type of evidence consists of its binding character. Admission can be made the foundation of the rights of the parties.[5] Admission is a positive act of acknowledgement or confession. Merely because the allegations have not been denied, it can not be admitted to be established.[6]

Admissions must be made on the basis of personal knowledge of the facts stated.[7]

An admission is of evidentiary value only to the extent that its maker has personal knowledge of the matters it contains.[8] Statements made by a person that an article was manufactured in U.S.A. which was based on markings was held not admissible. If a man admits something of which he knows nothing, it is of no real evidential value. A party's statement however of his own age is admissible although the party cannot be said to have personal knowledge.[9] Where the contents of the application of the plaintiff for old age pension were not put to her when she appeared in her suit, the statement by her in cross-examination that she was getting old age pension and that her form was filled by the 'pradhan' cannot be treated as admission in respect of the contents of her application for old age pension.[10]

Admissions may be oral or may be contained in documents, e.g., letters, depositions, affidavits, plaints, written statements, deeds, receipts, horoscopes.[11]

---

1. Sita Ram Bhau Patil v. Ramchandra Nago Patil, AIR 1977 SC 1712.
2. See CROSS-EVIDENCE, p. 245.
3. STEPHEN'S DIGEST, 7th Edn., Article 15. page 24.
4. H.G. Ramchandra Rao v. Srikantha, 1997 Cr LJ 347 (Kant).
5. Ajodhya Prasad Bhargava v. Bhawani Shankar Bhargava, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB).
6. Mukesh Kumar Ajmera v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 Raj 250.
7. Raghavan v. Soumini Amma, AIR 1957 Ker 178; Union of India v. S.P.L. Lekku Reddiar, AIR 1956 Mad 176, Dominion of India v. Firm Museram Kishunprasad, AIR 1950 Nag 85.
8. 1966 AC 367 at 371.
9. R. v. Twiner, (1910) 1 KB 346 at 362.
10. Twarku v. Surti, AIR 1997 HP 76.
11. Satish Mohan v. The State, AIR 1986 All 126.

Under Section 9(1) of the Civil Evidence Act (England) admission includes any representation of facts made in words or otherwise.

When denial of things said against a person could reasonably be expected his silence would amount to an admission.[12]

According to BARON ALDERSON 'what a person is over-heard saying to himself would even be evidence.'[13]

It is more satisfactory for a body entrusted with functions such as the customs authority, to take the precaution of getting the admission of the accused in writing, when its decision mainly depends upon such admission.[14]

It is immaterial to whom the admission is made. An admission made to a stranger is relevant.

Statement given by the accused to the doctor examining him as to the cause of injuries sustained by him, amounts to admission.[15] Where a party accepts his statement made in an earlier proceeding, it amounts to admission.[16] Where the accused police official stated that the deceased party started firing on the police party which necessitated the opening of fire by them and the first part of his statement was not proved from the evidence on record, the second part of his statement could be utilised as an admission.[17]

Classification of admissions.—Admissions are broadly of two categories:—

(1) Judicial admissions

(2) Extra-judicial admissions.

Judicial admissions are formal admissions made by a party during the proceedings of a case. Extra-judicial admissions are informal admissions not appearing on the record of the case. Judicial admissions are fully binding on the party that makes them. They constitute a waiver of proof.[18]

Admission in a pleading in the court is a judicial admission and it can be made the foundation of the rights of the parties.[19]

A pleading should not be construed strictly as an admission.[20] An averment in an application for setting aside an award, regarding the misconduct of the arbitrator by a party would not constitute 'admission' under Section 17.[21]

An admission by a party in a plaint may be used against him in another suit.[22]

Extra-judicial or informal admissions are also binding on the parties against whom they are set-up. Unlike judicial admissions, however, they are binding only partially, and not fully, except in cases where they operate as or have the effect of estoppel, in which case again they are fully binding and may constitute the foundation of the rights of the parties. (Section 31 infra).[23]

4. EFFECT OF ADMISSIONS

(1) An admission constitutes a substantive piece of evidence in the case and, for that reason, can be relied upon for proving the truth of the facts incorporated therein.

---

12. Bessela v. Stern, (1877) 2 CPD 265.
13. R. v. Simmons, (1834) 6 C&P 540.
14. Ambalal v. Union of India, AIR 1961 SC 264.
15. Ammini v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 260 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 (para 17) (SC).
16. Alpana v. Mohanlal, 1993 Cr LJ 1008 (para 6) (HP).
17. Brijlala Pd. Sinha v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 2443 : 1998 Cr LJ 3611.
18. See Section 58 of this Act.
19. Satish Mohan v. State of U.P., AIR 1986 All 126.
20. Bharath Fire and General Insurance v. Parameswari Prasad Guptha, AIR 1968 Del 68.
21. Malik Ghulam Ahmed v. J&K State Forest Corporation, 1996 AIHC 4426 (para 10) (J&K).
22. Basant v. Janaki, AIR 1967 SC 341.
23. Ajodhya Prasad Bhargava v. Bhawani Shankar Bhargawa, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB).

(2) An admission has the effect of shifting the onus of proving to the contrary on the party against whom it is produced, with the result that it casts an imperative duty on such party to explain it. In the absence of a satisfactory explanation, it is presumed to be true.

(3) An admission, in order to be competent and to have the value and effect referred to above, should be clear, certain and definite, and not ambiguous, vague or confused.[24]

Admissions as defined in Sections 17 and 20 and fulfilling the requirements of Section 21 are substantive evidence proprio vigore.[25] In Union of India v. Moksh Builders and Financiers Ltd.,[26] it was held that an admission by a party is substantive evidence of the fact admitted, and admissions duly proved are admissible evidence, irrespective of whether the party making them appeared in the witness box or not, or whether that party, when appearing as witness, was confronted or not with those statements in case he made a statement contrary to those admissions. (The court cited a statement from WIGMORE ON EVIDENCE (Vol. 4, 1048) to the effect that an admission need not be contrary to the maker's interest.[27]

In a previous suit filed by the wife for maintenance, the husband made a statement in his counter that she was his wife. In a later similar suit, he resiled from that statement. It was held that as the previous admission was against his own interest, it was relevant and it required no proof.[28] An admission of a party giving certain land to a particular person on sub-lease is substantive evidence.[29] As an admission is substantive evidence, there is no need to confront a party to a proceeding with such statement before acting upon it, as it becomes conclusive unless the admission is properly explained.[30]

Where in a case of specific performance of an agreement to sell, the defendant did not plead hardship in the written statement, it was held that mere admission by the plaintiff that the defendant would be left with only one bigha of land after the sale, could not be read as evidence to support the defendant's case in absence of any pleading to that effect.[31]

5. PRESUMPTION OF GENUINENESS

When an admission of party is satisfactorily proved, it can reasonably be presumed to be true, unless rebutted by other evidence.[32]

6. PROOF OF ADMISSION

When facts are admitted, they do not require any proof and they are presumed to be true unless the contrary is shown.

Proof of admission or confession can be offered by a witness who heard the admission or the confession.[33] Admission can be proved whether the maker is examined or not, or whether he is confronted with it or not, when examined.[34] An admission cannot be proved by recital in a judgment.[35]

In a criminal case, certain documents which were filed, though not proved by the prosecution, were put to the accused during the examination under Section 313, Cr. P.C.; the accused admitted those documents. It was held that the documents can be held as proved on the basis of the admission by the accused.[36]

---

24. Ajodhya Prasad Bhargava v. Bhawani Prasad Guptha, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB).
25. Thiru John v. Returning Officer, AIR 1977 SC 1724.
26. AIR 1977 SC 409.
27. See also HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, p. 53; Bharath Singh v. Bhagirathi, (1966) 2 SCJ 53 : AIR 1966 SC 405; Maimuna Bibi v. Rasool Mian, AIR 1991 Pat 203.
28. Ellammal v. Veeraswamy, 1975 Cr LJ 28.
29. Hanifabi Sheikh Abbas v. Balaji Ramaji, AIR 1976 Bom 219.
30. Yash Pal Malhotra v. S. Inderjit Singh, (1976) 12 DLT 53.
31. Ram Dhan v. Kalu Ram, 1997 AIHC 1935 (paras 10 and 11) (All).
32. Nagubai v. Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593; Jawaharbeg v. Abdul Aziz, AIR 1956 Nag 257; Sowcar v. S.I. Prasad, AIR 1978 Karnt 25.
33. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40.
34. Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405; Union of India v. Moksh Builders, AIR 1977 SC 409.
35. Dundbahadur Singh v. Durga Prasad Singh, AIR 1953 Pat 346.
36. Premeshwar v. State, 1981 Bom CR 798 : 1982 Cr LR 39.

An admission only binds the party who makes it to the extent of the admission and cannot be extended further.[37]

Admission of a document means admission of facts contained in the document.[38]

Admission of a signature on a document cannot be treated as an admission of the execution of a document.[39]

Execution implies conscious execution and knowledge of its contents.

When there was a statement of one A, that he and B are joint monthly tenants of a certain premises under a landlord, it was held that the statement of A, must be regarded as an admission on the part of A.[40]

Even when two executors who were members of the family acted upon the will, still it cannot be treated as admission by the members of the family, that a statement in the will is true.[41]

7. EXCEPTIONS TO GENERAL PRINCIPLE

An admission by one party may be given as evidence as against the maker but cannot be used against any other party. This general principle is accepted with two recognised exceptions: the first one is that when a party having a joint interest with others, makes an admission relating to a subject matter, it can be used against others; the second exception is that an admission which can be used against the maker can also be used against the heir of the maker and against the persons who claim the interest of the maker relating to the subject matter of the admission.

In Chalho Singh v. Jharo Singh,[42] it was held that a person who stands in the shoes of the party making the admission will be bound by the admission of the person through whom he claims as he derives this title from him.

When a person sues in a personal capacity admissions made by him in a representative capacity may be proved against him but not vice versa. Admission by a mother of her adultery was held not admissible in proceedings against her as administratrix of her husband's estate in which the legitimacy of the child was in issue.[43]

"So, where the admission has been made by a party's predecessor in title, or others in privity with him: Prive v. Woodhouse,[44] in which a copy of a judgment that had been dealt with by such predecessor was held primary evidence against the successor, though another copy which was merely found deposited among his papers was only received as secondary evidence after proof of the existence and loss of evidence."[45]

Where there is joint interest, whether in the case of co-plaintiffs or co-defendants in civil suits, or among the accused persons where there was conspiracy to commit an offence, or some common object to achieve, admission of one is relevant against the others. These principles are contained in a concise form in Section 18 of this Act, and were recognised in Kowsulliah Sundari Dasi v. Mukita Sundari Dasi,[46] and Meajan Matdor v. Alimuddin Mia,[47]. In the latter case the plaintiff's pleader gave evidence that a month prior to the institution of the suit, the second defendant approached him for a compromise. It was held that statement made by the second defendant was admissible against the other defendant.[48] Where several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, an admission by any one of them is

---

37. Sitaram Motilal v. Santanum Prasad, AIR 1966 SC 1697; Banarsidas v. Kanshiram, AIR 1963 SC 1165; Rulhu Ram v. Than Singh, AIR 1967 Punj 328.
38. Sitaram Motilal v. Santanu Prasad, AIR 1966 SC 1697; Birendra Nath Banerjee v. Shibaram Adityal, AIR 1953 Cal 283.
39. Githabai v. Dayaram, Shankar, AIR 1970 Bom 160; Birbal Singh v. Harphool Khan, AIR 1976 All 23; Brijmohan Bakhshi v. Amarnath Bakhshi, AIR 1980 J & K 54.
40. Shaw Prasad Agarwal v. Anil Ganguli, 1963 Cal LJ 75 : 68 Cal WN 786.
41. Pattabhiram Rao v. Mandavilli Narayanamoorthy, AIR 1922 PC 102.
42. ILR 39 Cal 995.
43. Legge v.Edmonds, (1855) 25 LJ Ch 125 at 141.
44. 3 Exch 616.
45. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000). page 1109-1110, (para 41-11).
46. (1855) 11 Cal 588.
47. ILR 44 Cal 130 : 1917 Cal 487.
48. Meajan v. Alimuddin, AIR 1917 Cal 487 : 44 Cal 130. See also Yagganna Obanna v. Kutagulla Gangaiya, AIR 1945 Mad 361.

receivable against himself and his fellows, provided the admission related to the subject-matter in dispute.[49]

Admission by one defendant cannot bind other co-defendants nor can it be evidence against them.[50] In a suit, the respondents were alleged to be tenants of a portion of land in dispute, and some of them were tenants in the other portion. But, in evidence, the other persons stated that they and the respondents were not tenants of the suit property. It was held that the allegation cannot be taken as relevant[51]. An admission made by one defendant does not bind other defendants unless he along with others is jointly interested to have some privity of title or obligation.[52] Normally, a statement of one person cannot be regarded as the admission of another person on the ground that the two persons are in collusion. Admissions bind the parties and their privies but not strangers.[53] Though an admission of a co-defendant jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit would bind other defendants, as the evidence was contradictory it was held that his admission lost its binding nature.[54]

8. STATEMENT—MEANING OF

The word 'statement' has been used in Sections 14 to 21, 32, 39 and 145 in its primary meaning of something that is stated; and communication is not necessary in order that it may be stated.[55]

A post-dated cheque in satisfaction of debts amounts to acknowledgment of liability irrespective of the fact whether the cheque is honoured or not.[56]

When there was an omission in the plaintiff's statement and it was explained by him, it was held that it would not be possible for the defendant to rely upon the said omission. It is doubtful as to whether an omission can be termed as a statement as contemplated by Section 17.[57]

Conduct by itself is no proof of a fact unless it amounts to a waiver or acquiesence. Where the trustees were not fully conscious of their rights and were not aware of the state of law, their conduct in keeping quiet cannot be taken as an admission.[58] Admissions may be implied from the acquiescence of a party.

Mere conduct does not amount to admission as defined in Section 17, for making it eligible to be used as admission under Section 21.[59]

However in PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 717-718, Para 28-16 it is stated "Conduct may amount to an admission. The admission may be inferred from positive acts or from demeanour (for example silence[60] after a direct accusation except, it would appear, in criminal cases[61] save where the parties are speaking on even terms)[62] in a particular situation.[63] Indeed a party's 49. Bhura v. Bahadur Singh, AIR 1976 Raj 249.

---

50. Phuljhari Devi v. Mithailal, AIR 1971 All 494.

51. Joao Andrade Souza v. Kashinath S. Vediekar, AIR 1971 Goa 2.

52. Jagabandhu Senapati v. Bhagu Senapati, AIR 1974 Ori 120; Harihar Rajguru Mahapatra v. Mabakishore Rajguru Mahapatra, AIR 1963 Ori 45.

53. Moati Ram v. Sri Lal, AIR 1934 All 684.

54. Ram Pukar Singh v. Sita Ram Mahton, AIR 1973 Pat 310.

55. Bhogilal Chunilal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 356. Also see CBI v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ 1905.

56. Rajpati Pd. v. Kaushalya Kuer, AIR 1981 Pat 187.

57. Tulsiram Jagannath v. Maroti Doma Koshe, 1980 Mah LJ 205.

58. Bihar State Board of Religious Trust v. Acharya Mahanthy Amrit Das, AIR 1974 Pat 95.

59. S. Narain Singh v. Baleshwar Singh, AIR 1974 Pat 91.

60. In, e.g. Bessela v. Stern, (1877) 2 CPD 265, silence after oral accusation held to be an admission: cf. Wiedemann v. Walpole, (1891) 2 QB 534, failure to reply to letters alleging that defendant had promised to marry, held no admission could be inferred, but see Gaskill v. Skene, (1850) 14 QB 664. See Lustre Hosiery Ltd. v. York, (1935) 54 CLR 134, 143. See too, Chap. 26, post.

61. R. v. Hall, (1971) 1 All ER 322.

62. R. v. Parkes, (1977) 64 Cr App R 25 : (1976) 3 All ER 380.

63. Way v. Penrikyber Colliery, (1940) 1 KB 517 CA (payment of compensation by employers after an accident was held to be an admission that a workman had met with an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment); James v. Biou, (1826) 2 Sim & St 606 : 4 LJ Ch 202; Chapman v. Beard, (1797) 3 Anst 942 per contra, Hart v. L. & Y. Ry., (1870) 21 CT 261 in which the fact that a company adopted additional precautions after an accident was held not to be admission by conduct of their previous negligence, BRAMWELL B. remarking: "People admission by conduct as to any material fact may generally be proved against him,[64] and evidence to explain or rebut such admissions is receivable in his favour.[65]

. . . . . PHIPSON refused to accept that conduct could amount to hearsay and accordingly, although he conceded that conduct may amount to an admission, he did not regard such an admission as being admissible under an exception to the hearsay rule. Rather, so thought PHIPSON, admissions by conduct are, properly, original evidence receivable either as constituting, wholly or in part, a fact in issue, as where A makes an offer to B, and B assents to it by his conduct; or as relevant facts from which a fact in issue may be inferred, e.g., guilt from the fabrication or suppression of evidence by the accused. The admissions by conduct of deceased persons against interest have been held receivable even against strangers,[66] but not those of third persons not deceased."[67]

Where the Government paid the price as ordered by the civil court subsequent to their taking possession, it was held that the conduct on the part of the Government in paying the price as ordered does not amount to an admission of a fact that payment represents the market price.[68] Where a person was paying for publication of a book containing pedigree, as a matter of grace, it was held that it cannot be taken as an admission of pedigree.[69] In a case there was an agreement between some tenants and landlord to divide the compensation paid under the Land Acquisition Act, in a certain proportion, it was held that such an agreement cannot be treated as an admission and hence cannot bind the tenants claiming higher amount if they are so entitled to it according to law.[70] The deposit of rent by the tenant in a proceeding under Section 7(1) of the Rent Control Act, does not amount to an admission of relationship of Landlord and Tenant within the meaning of this Act.[71] Any statement made by a guardian of a minor which would be adverse to the interests of the minor cannot be taken as admission on behalf of the minor.[72]

9. IMPLIED ADMISSION

Failure to deny the allegations in a plaint may be taken as an admission of the claim therein for the purpose of that suit, but not for purposes of subsequent litigations.[73] A statement in a draft deed of partition, not signed by both parties, though it might not amount to a contract would amount to an admission.[74]

Where a defendant remained ex parte in a suit, it was held that he cannot be deemed to have admitted the claim.[75]

10. BINDING NATURE

Admissions to be binding on a person must be very specific and should not be vague and secondly, an admission on a question of fact is binding on a party unless it is proved to be contrary or has been successfully withdrawn.[76]

---

do not furnish evidence against themselves simply by adopting a new plan to prevent the recurrence of an accident. . . . Because the world gets wiser as it gets older, it was not therefore foolish before."

64. Moriarty v. L.C. and D. Ry., (1870) LR 5 QB 314; R. v. Watt, 20 Cox 852.
65. Melhuish v. Collier, 15 QB 878.
66. Gerry v. Redman, 1 QB 161.
67. Watts v. Lyons, (1844) 6 M & G 1047.
68. Nageshwar Rao v. Deputy Collector, AIR 1959 AP 52.
69. Maharaj Hari Singh v. State, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 741.
70. Palghat Valia Raja v. T.S. Veera Raghava Iyer, AIR 1961 Ker 222.
71. Sheikh Hossain v. Naubahar Bibi, AIR 1972 Cal 446.
72. Kamla Devi v. Rodreshwar Prasad Singh, 1976 Hindu LR 185.
73. Narayana Pillai v. Kesara Pillai, 1962 Ker LJ 389; Ramabai Shrinivas Nadgir v. Govt. of Bombay, AIR 1941 Bom 144; Diali v. Lachhman Singh, AIR 1946 Lah 256.
74. Hemachandra Gupta v. Omprokash Gupta, 1987 Cal 69.
75. Govindan Asari Kesavan Asari v. Sankaran Asari Balakrishnan Asari, AIR 1958 Ker 203.
76. Anurag Misra v. Ravindra Singh, AIR 1994 All 174 (paras 11-13),

Admissions which are made in Income Tax Returns can be used in a limited way for the purpose of Income Tax proceedings only.[77] Where a statement was made by a firm in the Income Tax return showing the suit item as a debt by a firm to the plaintiff, it was held that it constituted an admission of liability of the firm to the plaintiff in respect of the amount mentioned therein.[78]

Admissions are as much binding on the crown as on ordinary persons.

An admission made in ignorance of legal rights or under duress cannot bind the maker of the admission.

For an admission to have the effect of substantive evidence it must be voluntary. In a case where a candidate was given permission to appear for Part 2 of the law examination on the basis of an undertaking that if he would not be able to get requisite permission from his employer to join law classes he would abide by any order that may be passed by the university, it was held that, as the candidate was anxious to appear for the examination, the undertaking given was in terrorem and in complete ignorance of his legal rights. He was, therefore, not bound by the undertaking.[79] Similarly, an admission made by a party in a previous criminal proceeding in order to get rid of the chances of conviction was held to be in terrorem and, therefore, of very little significance.[80] However in Morlays of Brickstone v. Minoff,[81] it was held that an admission made under threat or pressure may affect its weight but is not inadmissible.

Where the accused while admitting a statement to be his own did not complain to the court that it was not voluntarily given, the statement must be deemed to be voluntary even though, it was given in Hindi and recorded in English,[82] fraud or coercion is no admission, and it can be challenged in a court of law.[83]

11. ADMISSION—CLEAR AND PRECISE

An admission must be clear, precise, not vague or ambiguous. If the admission is capable of two interpretations, an interpretation unfavourable to the person making it, should not be put on his admission.[84] The admission must be clear and conclusive in that matter.[85] Before a right of property can be considered to have been defeated on the basis of an alleged admission by a person, the implication of the statement made by him must be clear and conclusive; there should not be any doubt or ambiguity about the alleged admission.[86]

Admission of the accused can be determined only if the plea of guilt has been recorded as nearly as possible in the words used by the accused. Where the accused simply said that he was guilty of the charge, it does not constitute an admission of guilt.[87] Where the witness produced to prove an admission was unable to give what actually were the words used by the parties, and where he was alleged to have admitted the title of the opposite party, it was held that the statements cannot be relied on to prove the alleged admission.[88] Where the Railway Authority issued a receipt for loading some bags, with a statement, "Wagon said to contain 200 bags", and later it was found that there was short delivery, it was held that there was no admission on the part of the Railway Authority that the wagon contained 200 bags.[89]

---

77. Gadadhar Ramanujdas v. Collector of Agri. Income-tax, Cuttack, AIR 1953 Ori 283.
78. Somanna v. Subba Rao, AIR 1958 AP 200.
79. Sri Krishna v. Kurukshetra University, AIR 1976 SC 376; Mohammad S. Labbai v. Mohammad Hanifa, AIR 1976 SC 1569; Bombay Agarwal Co. v. Ramchand, AIR 1953 Nag 154.
80. Mohd. v. Mohd., AIR 1976 SC 1569.
81. (1982) ILR 144.
82. Shankerdai v. Asst. Collector of Customs, (1968) 1 SCWR 237.
83. John Martin v. State of W.B., 1975 CrLJ 637 : 78 Punj LR 127.
84. Ramji Batanji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169; Ajodhya Prasad Bhargava v. Bhawani Shankar Bhargava, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB); State of Bihar v. Charanjitlal, AIR 1960 Pat 139; Melagiriyappa v. Tumalappa, AIR 1996 Kant 150 (para 9).
85. Chikkam Koteswara Rao v. Chikkam Subba Rao, AIR 1971 SC 1542.
86. Koteswararao v. Subba Rao, AIR 1971 SC 1542; Nagubai Ammal v. B. Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593; Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405; State of Bihar v. Charanjitlal, AIR 1960 Pat 139.
87. Sashidhara Kurup v. Union of India, 1994 Cr LJ 375 (para 7) (Gau).
88. Gangaram Kanhyalal v. Gulab Pooran, AIR 1954 MB 58.
89. Union of India v. S.P.L. Lekhu Reddiar, AIR 1956 Mad 176. Also see Union of India v. Roop Naravan, AIR 1997 Raj 123.

12. ADMISSION CAN BE DISPROVED

Admission can be used against the maker of it; but it is open to the maker of the admission to prove the admission as erroneous.[90]

13. ADMISSION—TO BE TAKEN AS A WHOLE

Admission must be taken as a whole and not in part, or rejected as whole.[91] Statements in pleadings are admissions against the party making them. A person cannot be heard to rely upon favourable parts and overthrow the rest of oral evidence.[92]

However, it was held by the Supreme Court that the Court has got power to reject the exculpatory part of the confession, and it is not bound to believe or disbelieve the admission as a whole, when there is other evidence which is reliable.[93] Admission in the debit side of an account contained an admission against the party; credit side may be taken advantage by the party against the adversary.[94]

14. ADMISSION—SUBJECT TO CONDITION OR QUALIFICATION

Where an admission is made subject to a condition or qualification, the condition or the qualifying part of the statement must also be taken and considered.[95] Where a person made a statement admitting the execution of a promissory note accompanied by an allegation that the pronote was discharged, it was held that the accompanying qualification for the admission should also be taken into consideration.[96]

It was held by the Supreme Court that where an admission consists of distinct and separate matters, the admission relating to one matter can be relied on without reference to the admission relating to the other matter.[97]

15. ADMISSION—CONFESSION

In English Law the term 'admission' is used in civil cases; whereas the term 'confession' is used in criminal cases as acknowledgement of guilt. This distinction is not maintained in the Evidence Act, and Sections 17 to 22 are applicable to civil as well as criminal cases.

A confession is one species of admission, namely an admission consisting of a direct assertion, by the accused in a criminal case, of the main fact charged against him or of some fact essential to the charge.[98] The expression 'confession' is not defined in the Act, but it occurs in the category of admissions. Confessions are sub-species of a 'statement' and a species of 'admission'.[99]

---

90. Duana Moliko v. Bhagabat Biso, AIR 1967 Ori 110; Shamsher v. Rustam, AIR 1988 Raj 188.
91. Md Koya v. Muthu Koya, AIR 1979 SC 154 : (1979) 1 SCR 664; Aghnoo Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119; Sk. Khadhimul Heque v. Maridubey, AIR 1965 Pat 262; In re : Pagoti Sanyasi Rao v. State, 1968 Cr LJ 1345; Jaswant Singh v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 83; Indermal Tekhaji Mahagan v. Ram Prasad Gopilal, AIR 1970 MP 40; Dharam Narain Sahu v. Kapil Deo, ILR (1973) 52 Pat 117 : 117 BLJR 749; Mahendra Manilal Nanavati v. Surhila Mahendra Nanavati, AIR 1965 SC 364 (Admission witness box); Abida Kaahtoon v. State, AIR 1963 All 260; Hara Chanda v. Rex, AIR 1950 All 355; Hanumant Govind v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343; Bachuran Kar v. State, AIR 1956 Cal 102; Velupillai Pudakalingam v. Paramanandam Yesudasan, AIR 1954 Tri-Cochin 152; Rosetta Evelyn Att-aullah v. Justin Attaullah, AIR 1953 Cal 530 (SB); Jaswant Singh v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 83; Dharamvati Bai v. Shiv Singh, AIR 1991 MP 18; Charan Singh v. State, 1961 All WR 67 : 63 Punj LR 629; Ishar Singh v. Babu Gajadhar Prasad Singh, AIR 1957 Pat 174; Bachuran Kar v. State, AIR 1956 Cal 102; Ramsurat Devi v. Satragi Kuer, AIR 1975 Pat 168.
92. Sunil Chandra v. Hemevdra, AIR 1985 Cal 233.
93. Nishikant v. State of Bihar, AIR 1969 SC 422; Kemalaghankar Bhute Shankar Dave v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 312; Shivram v. Shivcharan Singh, AIR 1964 Raj 126.
94. Harrison v. Turner, (1847) 10 QB 482.
95. Fatheh Chand Muralidhar v. Juggilal Karnlapat, AIR 1955 Cal 465; Essobhoy v. Mulji Haridas, AIR 1915 PC 2 : ILR 39 Bom 399.
96. Sundara Rajali v. Gopal, AIR 1934 Mad 100; Min. Sin v. Ko Kye, AIR 1941 Rang 117.
97. Karnail Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1954 SC 204 : 1954 CrLJ 580.
98. STEPHEN'S Digest Art. 24.
99. Azimaddy v. Emperor, AIR 1927 Cal 17; Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40; Queen Empress v. Babulal, ILR 6 All 509 at 539 (FB).

A confession may be defined as an admission of the offence by a person charged with an offence. It consists of several parts and may reveal not only the commission of the crime but also motive, preparations, the opportunity, the provocation, the weapon used, the intention, the concealment of the weapon and subsequent conduct.[1]

Statements by the accused are admissions under Sections 17 and 18, and prima facie evidence against the maker, but not in his favour.[2]

Every admission made by an accused person is not, in the view of the law, a confession, nor can it be held that admission means only statements made by parties to civil proceedings. Every statement, oral or documentary, which suggests any inference as to any fact in issue or relevant fact, made by an accused person is an admission under Sections 17 and 18, and under Section 19 an admission may be proved as against the person who makes it unless, under some provision of the Evidence Act or other law, it is rendered inadmissible. Under Sections 24-26, statements made by accused persons are inadmissible, subject to the provisions of Sections 27-29, when such statements are confessions.[3] A confession which is inadmissible may yet, for other purposes, be admissible as an admission under Section 18 against the person who makes it in civil matters.[4] Thus, admission of guilt by a person to a Police Officer, though not receivable in evidence in a criminal trial, may be proved in civil proceedings as an admission under this section and Sections 18 and 21.[5] Admission regarding motive in committing the murder of the deceased is admissible.[6]

All admissions are not confessions but all confessions are admissions.[7]

In criminal cases a statement by the accused, not amounting to confession, but giving rise to an inference that the accused might have committed the crime, is his admission. A statement of the accused giving suggestion that he might have been present when the offence was committed is an admission.[8]

A confession is an admission by an accused in a criminal case, of his guilt and if he does not incriminate himself it cannot be taken as a confession.[9] An accused admitted the offence immediately after the incident, that she stabbed the deceased in self-defence. As that statement justified her action, it would not amount to a confession.[10] Where an accused, in his statement under Section 164 Cr P.C. intra alia stated: "In fear of my own life I snatched his knife and assaulted him with it", the Assam High Court held that the statements of the accused cannot be treated as a confession of guilt and that on the other hand, he had thereby claimed a right of private defence.[11] Where the accused made a statement admitting the offence which formed the first information report, it was held that, as it was a confession made to a Police Officer, no part of it can be used as an admission.[12] The Allahabad High Court in Ram Singh v. State, stated that the acid test which distingishes a confession from an admission is that where conviction can be based on the statement alone, it is a confession, and where some supplementary evidence is needed to authorise a conviction, then it is an admission; that no statement which contains exculpatory matter can amount to a confession.....that a confession admits in terms what constitute the offence; that an admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact, is not in itself a confession.[13] If the statements of the accused suggest only that he committed the crime but do not show

---

1. Aghhoo Negesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 199.
2. Azimaddy v. Emperor, (1926) 54 Cal 237 : AIR 1927 Cal 17.
3. Illahi Baksh v. The Empress, 1886 PR No. 16 (Cr); Raj Mal v. The Empress, 1879 PR No. 3 of 1880 (Cr); Shree Singh v. The Empress, 1881 PR No. 21 of 1881 (Cr).
4. Queen Empress v. Tribhovan Manekchand, (1884) 9 Bom 131, 134.
5. Bishen Das v. Ram Labhaya, (1915) PR No. 106 of 1915 (Civil).
6. Baleswar v. State of Bihar, (1963) 2 SCR 433.
7. Beoparia v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1955 Ajmer 10.
8. Nishikant v. State, AIR 1969 SC 422; Kanda Padayachi v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 SC 66; Chintamani Das v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1970 Ori 100.
9. Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 Pat 448; Thingon Sashi Kumar v. Manipur Administration, (1963) 2 CrLJ 562 Mani (though confession was retracted).
10. State of Orissa v. Nirupama Panda, 1989 CrLJ 621 (Ori).
11. Manik Malakar v. State of Assam, 1976 Cr LJ 1921 (Gau).
12. Banarasi Das v. State of Punjab, 1981 CrLJ 1235 (P&H); Ugar Singh and Birendra Mohan Singh v. syed Akbar Hussain and Mukheshwar Prasad, AIR 1966 Pat 210.
13. Ram Singh v. State, AIR 1959 All 518; See also Malik Malakar v. State of Assam, 1976 CrLJ 1921 (Gau); Gadhapurni v. State, 1980 CrLJ 188 Ori; Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 Pat 448; Pakala Narayanaswamy v. R., AIR 1939 PC 47.

that he admitted in terms the offence, or substantially all the facts which constitute the offence, it was held that such statements individually or taken together cannot amount to a confession of the crime.[14]

Where an accused, after he had made an extra-judicial confession to a Tahsildar, was handed over to the police, who produced the accused before the first class magistrate, and the evidence of the magistrate was that the accused wanted to make a confession of his guilt after the police had been asked to withdraw, it was held that the alleged confession cannot be admitted in evidence as admission of guilt.[15]

An incriminating statement by the accused, though it does not amount to a confession, can be used as an admission as it is made against his interest.[16]

16. ADMISSION—CONSTRUCTION

Every admission should be given a plain, literal and fair meaning, and its scope should not be widened or restricted on the basis of suspicions or surmises.[17]

17. ADMISSION—NOT CONCLUSIVE AGAINST THIRD PARTIES

Any admission by a party is not conclusive against the third parties.[18] Admission cannot bind the third party unless he has derived some title or interest from the person admitting.[19] Admissions made by a witness in another suit are admissible against him alone but not against others.[20]

18. ADMISSION—NOT CONCLUSIVE PROOF

The law by no means regards admission as conclusive proof of the matters admitted. This is because, to a Court of Law, admissions are but statements which do no more than suggest an inference as to some fact or facts in issue. An admission is not conclusive proof of the matter admitted though in certain circumstances it may operate as an estoppel.[21]

Where a person executing a document admitted the title of his brother to certain property and the alienation of that property by his brother to a third person, it was argued that statement in the document amounted to estoppel against the person who executed the document. It was held by the Supreme Court that the document was relevant when relied on by the third person who purchased the property, as an admission and not as an estoppel.[22]

For a court to draw an adverse inference against a party on the basis of what he is stated to have admitted, the admission must be unequivocal. It must also be comprehensive. It must go the whole hog on the point at issue. If a party's admission falls short of the totality of the requisite evidence needed for a legal proof of a fact in issue, such an admission would be only a truncated admission.[23] Admission in a gift deed that donor has delivered possession of gifted property to the donee is a substantive evidence but it is not a conclusive proof, as it can be proved to be wrong from the circumstances appearing in the evidence.[24]

19. ADMISSION IN PLEADING WHETHER CAN BE USED IN OTHER SUITS

The Supreme Court in Basant Singh v. Janki[25] held that an admission by a party in a plaint signed and verified by him may be used as evidence against him in other suits, that such admission cannot however, be regarded as conclusive and the party can show it as not true.[26]

---

14. Omprakash v. Stateof U.P., AIR 1960 SC 409; Palvinder v. State, AIR 1952 SC 354; Veera v. State, AIR 1976 SC 1167.
15. Gurubasanaiah v. State of Karnataka, 1979 CrLJ 204 (Kar).
16. Pingla Khadia v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 249; Chintamani Das v. The State, AIR 1970 Ori 100.
17. Soraisem Kamini Singh v. Chongtham Iboyaima Singh, AIR 1954 Mani 11; Sirdar Bahadur Sirdar Indira Singh v. Commissioner of Income Tax, Orissa and Bihar, AIR 1943 Pat 169.
18. Bhaironlal v. Ram Parshad, AIR 1954 Raj 49.
19. Sujan Singh v. Dinanath, AIR 1988 J & K 77.
20. Ambika Prasad v. Ram Ekbal, AIR 1966 SC 605.
21. K.S. Srinivasan v. Union of India, AIR 1958 SC 419 : 1958 SCR 1295.
22. Dattatraya v. Rangnath, AIR 1971 SC 2548.
23. M. Manoharan Chetti v. M/s. C. Coomara Swamy Naidu and Sons, Madras, AIR 1980 Mad 212.
24. (1973) 3 Simla LJ 241. See also Federal Bank Ltd. v. State, AIR 1995 Ker 62 (paras 14 and 16).
25. AIR 1967 SC 341.
26. Rajkumar v. Gopinath Varman, AIR 1971 All 273 (unless the statement amounts to an admission); M/s. Luxmi Narayan Arjun Das v. S.B.I., AIR 1969 Pat 385; Biswa Nath Rana v. Laxman Rana, AIR 1971 Ori 267; 1966 Cut LJ 573; Ghanchi Pirbhai Kala v. Maghmal Sirumal, (1989) 1 Guj LR 183.

A person making an admission in a pleading cannot take advantage of it, but a party in whose favour it is made may get its benefit.[27]

Where an admission is made by a person in a proceeding to which another was not a party, such admission is not admissible against the other in a subsequent suit in which both were co-defendants.[28]

Any statement made by a person in his pleadings against his own interest would be admissible.[29]

A defendant in a written statement admitted that his father was married to the plaintiff's mother according to 'Henga' custom of marriage, but he did not come to the witness box. On those facts it was held that the defendant cannot be allowed to contend that the plaintiff's mother was not married according to 'Mange' custom of marriage.[30]

Where an admission was made in Court by a party in respect of certain affairs, the opposite party who not knowing those facts did not refer to the facts in his pleading will not be disentitled to rely upon the admission merely because of absence of plea in his pleadings.[31]

20. ADMISSION BY AN INFANT

Section 11 of the Indian Contract Act deals with the incompetency of a minor (below the age of 18) to contract with any one. But it was held that admissions made by an infant himself may be proved in an action brought against him after he attains majority.[32]

In a case where a minor represented to another that he was a major and borrowed money on a promissory note, it was held, in the suit for recovery of the money on the basis of the pronote, that he was estopped from pleading his minority.[33]

21. COUNTER ADMISSIONS

In a case where the plaintiff alleged in his plaint that he was a minor on a particular day, and the defendant alleged in his written statement that the plaintif was major on that date, when the matter came in appeal, each of them wanted to rely upon the admission of the other in the first court; it was held that the admissions by both the parties set the matter at large and the question must be determined on the facts of the case.[34]

However, it was held that the court may accept one admission in preference to the other but it will not be possible to consider both the admissions.[35]

22. ADMISSION BY ONE ACCUSED AGAINST ANOTHER

An admission by one accused cannot be used against another.[36] But it can be used if there is other evidence in the case.[37]

Even if a statement is not admissible as a confession as it does not fall within the definition of a confession, still the portions of the statement will be admissible if they are in the nature of admissions.[38]

23. VOLUNTARY

Where a document called 'na dabi patra' was found to be executed in favour of a party much before taking possession of the property, it was held to have been obtained by fraud as, if it was genuine, the

---

27. Surajnath Prakash Kedarnath v. The Union of India, AIR 1975 Cal 203.
28. Amarjit Kaur v. Kishan Chand, 1980 Rajadhani LR 43.
29. R. Ammal v. S.R. Srinivasan, 1978-1 MLJ 56 : 1978 Hindu LR 525.
30. Rasamani Das v. Patrabala Devi, AIR 1981 Gauh 42.
31. Debi Singh v. Bhim Singh, AIR 1971 Del 316.
32. Dharmaji Vaman v. Gurrav Shrinivas, (1873) 10 Bom HCR 311.
33. Jasraj Bastimal v. Sadashiv Mahadev, 22 Bom LR 975.
34. 1973 WLN 981 (Raj).
35. Tolsiram Jagannath Saoji v. Maroti Doma Koshe, 1980 Maha LJ 205.
36. Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 Pat 448.
37. Chintamani Das v. State, AIR 1970 Ori 100; Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, 1966 BLJR 861: AIR 1960 Pat 448.
38. Asst. Collector of Customs v. Shantilal Laxmichand Modi, ILR (1971) 2 Del 584.

beneficiary must have taken possession soon after the execution of the document.[39] Where the admission was found to be involuntary and in the nature of explanation and no warning was given as required under Section 164(2), Cr.P.C. , the admission was not admissible against the maker or the co-accused.[40]

24. VOLUNTARY CONFESSION PARTLY NOT TRUE

Where there was voluntary confession by an accused but the circumstantial evidence for proving the guilt of the accused showed that some part of the confession as false, it was held that the Court can reject that part of the confession which proved to be false, and accept the rest of the confession.[41]

25. OPINIONS AS TO CUSTOM

Where there is a question as to who under the law or custom is entitled to succeed to a property, any statement of a witness as to his notion of the law or custom is not binding on the party.[42]

26. AFFIDAVIT

The statement made in an affidavit may be used as an admission. As a matter of fact any statement made on oath may be used against its maker as an admission. Though not a substantive evidence, its contents can be proved through the maker.[43]

27. ADMISSION ON A POWER OF LAW

Where a defendant had admitted in a previous suit between the parties that the document in the suit was duly registered and in the latter suit he denied it, it was held that admission of a party cannot make a document a registered one unless there had been due compliance with the Registration Act, and it would not be sufficient to hold that the admission amounted to an estoppel.[44]

An admission, so far as the facts are concerned, would bind the maker but not so far as it relates to a question of law.[45]

Though the defence expressly stated that they were not urging that a certain statement was wrongly admitted in evidence, it was held that their concession on a question of law would not justify the court to depend upon it for any purpose.[46]

But an admission by an advocate regarding a fact is binding on his client.[47]

28. VALUE OF ADMISSIONS

It is well settled that a party's admission, as defined in Sections 17 to 20, fulfilling the requirements of Section 21, Evidence Act, is substantive evidence proprio vigore. An admission, if clearly and unequivocally made, is the best evidence against the party making it and, though not conclusive, shifts the onus on to the maker as it must necessarily be presumed to be true and until the presumption is rebutted the fact admitted must be taken to be established."[48] Admission is the best evidence that an opposite party can rely upon. Though it is not conclusive, it is decisive of the matter unless it is

---

39. Pramila Debbarma v. Gitasree Debbarma, AIR 1997 Gau 78.
40. Asstt. Collector of Central Excise (L&A) v. Fibre Foils (P) Ltd., 2001 Cr LJ 748 (paras 5-8 and 11) (Kant).
41. Budn Gowda v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 170 : (1965) 2 CrLJ 385; Keshoram Bera v. State of Assam, (1978) 2 SCC 407.
42. In re : Mahabir Singh, AIR 1963 Punj 66.
43. Michael Mascarenhas v. John Mascarenhas, AIR 1996 Kant 348 (para 10).
44. Sharnappa v. Pathru Saheb LR/by Chandrakanth, AIR 1963 Mys 335.
45. Banarsi v. Kainsi Ram, AIR 1963 SC 1165; Income Tax Officer v. Shambhoo Dayal Om Prakash & Co., AIR 1968 All 203; Ram Ekbul Singh v. Ghamandi Singh Yadam, 1966 BLJR 409.
46. Marudevi Avva v. State, AIR 1958 Ker 8; Bishan Devi Khanna v. Pirthi Singh, AIR 1953 Punj 66 (Law relating to succession).
47. Nishi Kant Jha v. State of Bihar, AIR 1969 SC 422.
48. Thiru John Subrahamanyan v. Returning Officer, Madras AIR 1977 SC 1724; Ramji Dayawala v. Invest Import, AIR 1981 SC 2085 : (1981) 1 SCR 899.

successfully withdrawn or proved to be erroneous.[49] Admission goes a long way to establish the case unless rebutted.[50]

However in Latafat Hussain v. Lala Onkar Mal[51] and Raja Partab v. Raja Rajgan,[52] it was held that admissions are a very weak kind of evidence and the court may reject them if it is satisfied from other circumstances that they are untrue.

When there are contradictory admissions made by each of the parties, the court may accept one admission in preference to the other, but it will not be possible to consider both the admissions.[53]

In a proceeding under Section 97, Cr.P.C. the wife admitted the factum of marriage between her and the husband. When a question arose under the Hindu Marriage Act whether there was solemnization of the marriage according to the Section 7 of the Act, it was held that the admission by the wife was not sufficient for proving legal and valid marriage and the evidence regarding the performance of necessary ceremonies should be placed on record.[54] Acknowledgement by a man or a woman to the effect that they have been living as husband and wife and they have got children, would not be sufficient to determine the question whether there was a valid marriage. The other party has to adduce evidence bearing upon the issue of marriage. In any view of the matter, a declaration as to the status of a petitioner as a wife, being a judicial act, cannot be founded on admissions but on evidence.[55]

Regarding admission made during the conduct of the suit, the courts are not precluded from taking into consideration the effect of such admissions. Where a party produces a document containing admissions made by the opponent, it can be used as evidence without drawing the attention of the opponent to those admissions in the cross-examination.[56]

An admission by a person in a suit that he was a tenant; can be used in a subsequent suit to show that possession was permissive.[57]

Previous admissions though they are not conclusive, can be admitted without confronting the party with such admissions when he is in the witness-box.[58]

29. WITHDRAWAL OF ADMISSION WHICH IS GRATUITOUS

When a person makes a gratuitous admission that he has no right in the property in certain estate, there is nothing to prevent him from withdrawing the said admission unless there is some obligation not to withdraw the gratuitous admission made by him.[59]

Where there was an admission in a suit filed by a party, mere withdrawal of the suit by him cannot destroy the effect of the admission made therein.[60]

30. GENERAL CASES DEALT SEPARATELY

It was held by the Supreme Court that by reasons of the admissions of a party, title to the property does not pass, the reason being that transfer of title to the party can only pass by a registered instrument.[61]

---

49. Bihar State Board of Religious Trust Patna v. Harkishun Das, AIR 1971 Pat 363; Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100.
50. Bharat Nidhi v. Shri Meghraj, AIR 1967 Del 22.
51. (1934) 10 Luck 423 : AIR 1935 Oudh 41.
52. (1936) 12 Luck 371.
53. Tolsiram Jagannath Saoji v. Maroti Doma, Koshe, 1980 Mah LJ 205.
54. Nasib Chand v. Surinder Kaur, 1980 Hindu LR 157.
55. Razaia Begum v. Sahebzadi Anwar Begum, AIR 1958 AP 195; See also Muhammad Allahadad Khan v. Muhammad Ismail Khan, 1886 ILR 10 All 289.
56. Veerabasa Varydhya v. Devotees Lungada Gudi Mutt, AIR 1973 Mys 280.
57. Madhao Pandurang v. Yeshwanth, AIR 1974 Bom 12.
58. Punjab University, Chandigarh v. Premchand Handa, AIR 1971 Punj 177.
59. Ramachandra v. Keshav Kanderao, AIR 1953 MB 184; Izhar Fatma Bibi v. Ansar Fatma Bibi, AIR 1939 All 348; Ramratanlal v. Kashinath Tiwari, AIR 1966 Pat 235; Aribam Kesharjit Sarma v. Kanjenbam Anq Singh, AIR 1969 Mani 23.
60. Chandrakanta v. Ram Mohini, AIR 1956 Cal 577 : 60 Cal WN 1006.
61. Ambika Prasad v. Ram Ekbal, AIR 1966 SC 605, 612; Ambika Prasad Thakur v. Ramekbal Rai, 1966 BLJR 147 : AIR 1966 SC 605.

Where the recitals in a gift deed show that possession was delivered to the donee, the burden lies on the donee to prove absence of delivery.[62]

Where an admission or a conduct of a party is in question, if the party making the admission is alive and capable of giving evidence, he must come forward to explain and if he fails to do so, adverse inference can be drawn against him.[63]

Where an admission of a patent of the plaintiff made against the interests of the plaintiff was sought to be used against the plaintiff, it was held that it was incumbent on the defendant to plead this admission in the written statement; that every admission is capable of being withdrawn, that, as the alleged admission was made in an application in a police case in which the plaintiff company was in danger of being prosecuted, such admission cannot be used against the plaintiff, and it cannot be treated as an admission.[64]

Admission by party to proceeding or his agent;

S. 18. Statements made by a party to the proceeding, or by an agent to any such party, whom the Court regards, under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorised by him to make them, are admissions.

by suitor in representative character;

Statements made by parties to suits, suing or sued in a representative character, are not admissions, unless they were made while the party making them held that character.

Statements made by—

by party interested in subject-matter;

(1) persons who have any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the proceeding, and who make the statement in their character of persons so interested, or by person from whom interest derived.

(2) persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit, are admissions, if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 252
2. Statement ... 252
3. Admission by silence ... 252
4. Parties to the proceeding ... 252
5. Admission by defendant ... 253
6. Admission by accused ... 253
7. Admission by co-owner ... 254
8. Admission of co-plaintiffs and co-defendants ... 255
9. Admission by witness ... 255
10. Admission by tenant ... 255
11. Admission by agent of a party ... 256
12. Admission by solicitors and counsel ... 256
13. Admission by counsel ... 257
14. Admission by partners ... 257
15. Admission by officers, subordinates etc. ... 258
16. Admission by guardian ... 258
17. Statements made by parties suing or being sued in a representative capacity ... 258
18. Principal and Surety ... 259
19. Statements against proprietary or pecuniary interest of the parties ... 259
20. Admissions by persons from whom the parties derived their interest ... 260
21. Lunatic ... 261
22. Statement by third parties ... 261

---

62. S.V.S. Muhammad Yusuf Rowther v. Muhammad Yusuf Rowther, AIR 1958 Mad 527.
63. Arjun Singh v. Virendra Nath, AIR 1971 All 29.
64. Bombay Agarwal Co. v. Ramchand Diwanchand, AIR 1953 Nag 154.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Sections 18 and 19 indicate the persons by whom an admission can be made.

Section 18 lays down five classes of persons who can make admissions—

(1) Party to the proceeding;

(2) Agent authorized by such party;

(3) Party suing or sued in a representative character, making admissions while holding such character;

(4) Person who has any proprietary or pecuniary interest in the subject-matter of the proceeding, during the continuance of such interest;

(5) Person from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest in the subject-matter of the suit, during the continuance of such interest.

2. STATEMENT

For meaning see Section 17 commentary.

3. ADMISSION BY SILENCE

No acknowledgement of admission can be inferred from a silence. Admission should be in an express term and there must be a conscious and deliberate act of making acknowledgement by a party relating to the existence of certain facts which are in issue or relevant to an issue in the case. Mere silence or inaction on the part of a person (say non-responding to a show cause notice) does not amount to admission.[65]

4. PARTIES TO THE PROCEEDINGS

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 707 (para 28-01), it is stated : "The general rule both in civil and criminal cases is that any relevant statement made by a party is evidence against himself."[66]

What is admitted by a party to be true must be presumed to be true unless the contrary is shown;[67] but before this proposition can be invoked, it must be shown that there is a clear and unambiguous statement by the party such as will be conclusive unless explained.[68] A statement made by a party in a former suit between the same or different parties is admissible. The proceeding may be civil or criminal.[69] An admission made by a party in a suit may not be used as evidence against that party in another suit. However, it can raise suspicion.[70] Admission by a party, after parting with his interest in the property, is not admissible.[71] A statement made by a party in a pleading cannot be evidence in subsequent proceedings before a court of law unless it amounts to an admission.[72] Where the defendant admitted about the oral agreement of sale and putting the plaintiff into possession in pursuance of it and there was evidence of mediators establishing the plaintiff's case, the plaintiff was held entitled to the decree of specific performance.[73]

---

65. State of Rajasthan v. Bhanwari Devi, 1997 AIHC 2335 (para 17) (Raj).
66. R. v. Erdheim, (1896) 2 QB 260, 270, per Lord RUSSELL of KILLOWEN C.J.
67. Nathoo Lal v. Durga Prasad, AIR 1954 SC 355.
68. Nagubai v. B. Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593.
69. Dattatraya Shripati v. Shankar, (1959) 61 Bom LR 792 : AIR 1960 Bom 153.
70. Rashmi Nagrath v. M/s Sarva Priya Co-operative House Building Society Ltd., 1998 AIHC 4769 (para 38) (Del).
71. Chironjilal v. Khatoon Bi, AIR 1995 MP 238 (para 11).
72. Raj Kumar v. Gopi Nath, AIR 1971 All 273.
73. Moturi Seeta Ramabrahmam v. Bobba Rama Mohana Rao, AIR 2000 AP 504 (paras 12 and 14).

It was held by the Supreme Court in Mahendra v. Sushila, that a court can base its decision on the admission of the parties. It confirmed the finding of the trial court based on an admission of the wife that the child was conceived by her before marriage. It was also held that the High Court was not right in remitting the case for recording on the question whether the child was conceived after the marriage, ignoring the admission.[74] Where in a suit for declaration and rendition of account, the trial Court decreed the suit on the basis of unequivocal admissions made by respondent in the written statement in the earlier proceedings but the appellate Court without pointing out any circumstance took the view that the admissions were made under constraint and compelling circumstances, it was held that the admissions in the written statement in the earlier proceedings, though not conclusive, in the absence of any reasonable and acceptable explanation, is a telling evidence heavily loaded against the respondent and the finding of the trial Court based on the evidence on issues was in extenso justified.[75]

The Court is not free to ignore or to get over a clear admission made by the parties in the witness-box on the ground that they were made by inadvertence or mistake, especially when there was no suggestion made in the examination of the witness to that effect.[76]

A statement by a plaintiff in the evidence can be treated by the defendant as an admission and used against the plaintiff.[77] The statements made by a co-plaintiff admitting the case of the defendant squarely bind the other plaintiff.[78]

The Privy Council in Chandrakunwar v. Chaudary Narpat,[79] relying on the decision in Slatterie v. Pooleu,[80] held that what the party himself admits to be true must necessarily be presumed to be so, and it is for him to establish circumstances to show that it is not true and hence not binding on him.[81] But the party who makes it can adduce evidence of a cogent and satisfactory nature as to the possibility of error or probable reason or motive for his statement, and show that it was incorrect and untrue, unless in the situation such admission amounts to an estoppel.[82]

Mere withdrawal of a suit does not destroy the effect of an admission made by the plaintiff therein.[83] Where one of the parties to the suit, a beneficiary to the suit property, admitted in an earlier proceeding that the said property was partitioned years back by virtue of a deed, the same would be admissible in proof of partition asserted subsequently.[84] In a suit for permanent injunction on the ground of agreement to sell the joint family property, the vender admitted the possession of the vendee on the suit property during trial as the possession was handed over before the execution of the sale deed, it was held that possession of the vendee was proved and he was entitled for permanent injunction.[85]

5. ADMISSION BY DEFENDANT

Where the defendant merely pleaded ignorance about the facts pleaded in the plaint, it was held to amount to admission unless by necessary implication it amounted to denial of the fact.[86]

6. ADMISSION BY ACCUSED

"In criminal cases statements made out of Court by an accused are similarly admissible against him though they are subject to special conditions of admissibility and are usually called "confessions." Confessions which comply with these special conditions, and other statements made by a party or an accused person are admissible against him as evidence of the truth of the facts asserted, and are termed

---

74. Mahendra v. Nanavati, AIR 1965 SC 364.
75. Sitaramcharya v. Gururajacharya, AIR 1997 SC 806 : (1997) 2 SCC 548.
76. Narayanan v. Krishnan Venki, AIR 1955 Tri 199.
77. Sampat Ragho v. Surajmal Kaluram, AIR 1959 Bom 504.
78. Dulal Chandra Adak v. Gunadhar Patra, AIR 1998 Cal 150 (para 6).
79. ILR 29 All 184 (PC).
80. (1840) 6 MW 664.
81. Amimaddin Manshi v. Tajaddin, AIR 1932 Cal 538; Abdul Rafiq v. Bhjan, AIR 1932 All 199.
82. Parasnath Rai v. Tileshra Kaur, 1965 All LJ 1080; Munnaiyya and Co. v. Varadharajulu, AIR 1964 AP 17 (recitals in a document amounting to an admission).
83. Chandrakanto Goswami v. Ram Mohini Debi, AIR 1956 Cal 577.
84. Krishtappa Shetty v. Rajivi Shedthi, 1998 AIHC 2371 (paras 12 and 13) (Kant).
85. Girdharbhai v. Patil v. Ganpatbhai Kalubhai, 1998 AIHC 3865 (para 15) (Guj).
86. Roopi Bai v. Mahaveer, AIR 1994 Raj 133 (para 15).

informal admissions.[1] Such admissions, unlike formal admissions, do not bind their maker but may be contradicted or explained."[2]

Statements by the accused are admissible under Section 18.[3]

In a case where an accused charged under the Foodgrains Control Order, made a general statement that he used to keep the foodgrain bags left by a businessman; it was held that as the statement did not make out the necessary ingredients of the offence to prove that the bags were stored for the purpose of sale, he could not be convicted on that statement.[4]

Where accused charged for an offence of grievous hurt under Section 326, Penal Code, filed an application stating that they never intended to cause injury to the complainant, and it was caused accidentally and they are sorry for it and may be pardoned, it was held that as the statement did not amount to an unequivocal admission of guilt, the conviction based on the alleged admission would be illegal.[5]

A previous statement made by the accused can be tendered in evidence against him in the course of a criminal trial, but what value should be attached to it, when proved, is for the court to decide.[6]

An admission by an accused in respect of a marriage cannot be taken as an evidence in a case for the offence of bigamy or adultery. In such a case proof of the second marriage or adultery by the accused has to be given.[7]

A statement made to a Police Officer is not admissible as evidence of confession of guilt, but such statement can be proved as an admission in a civil case.[8] Confessional statements of the accused made before custom officers, they not being Police Officers within the meaning of Section 25, are admissible in evidence.[9] The statement made by an accused admitting the execution of a document is admissible under this section.[10]

An incriminating statement, not amounting to a confession, but made against his interest, can be used as an admission under this section.[11]

An accused admitted that he was driving a truck at the time of the accident. It was held that it cannot be used as substantive evidence against him for proving the guilt but it can be used as an admission to lend support to the other evidence of the witnesses.[12]

The letters written by an accused person can be taken as evidence against him.[13]

When the accused admits certain facts in the statement made in the court under Section 342, Cr PC (Old), such admission is admissible subject to the provisions of Sections 24-27 of this Act, but the prosecution cannot be relieved from proving the guilt.[14]

7. ADMISSION BY CO-OWNER

Admission by one of the co-owners of a joint-property, regarding the right of the other co-owner can be relied upon.[15]

---

1. Basically, these are pleadings in civil proceedings and admissions in criminal proceedings.
2. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 707-708 (para 28-02).
3. Azimaddy v. Emperor, (1926) 54 Cal 237 : AIR 1927 Cal 17.
4. Sital Prasad v. State, AIR 1953 All 101; Mani v. State, 1963 Ker LT 969.
5. State of Mysore v. Sahib Gunda, (1964) 1 CrLJ 460 (Mys)
6. Tejumal v. State, AIR 1958 Raj 240.
7. Kanwal Ram v. H.P. Administration, AIR 1966 SC 614.
8. Biswanath Agarwalla v. Smt. Dhapu, AIR 1960 Cal 494.
9. Banshidhar Maharana v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 1310 (para 14) (Pat).
10. Hardevi Malkani v. State, AIR 1969 All 423.
11. Pingal Khadia v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 245; Chintamani Das v. State, AIR 1970 Ori 100.
12. Tejmani v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1976 Raj 71.
13. Sardul Singh v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 747.
14. Divisional Manager v. Sharif Ahmad, AIR 1968 All 422.
15. Raj Kumar v. Official Receiver, M/s Chiranji Lal Ram Chand, AIR 1996 SC 941 (para 8).

8. ADMISSIONS OF CO-PLAINTIFFS AND CO-DEFENDANTS

"When several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of the suit, the general rule is that the admissions of any one of these persons are receivable against himself and others, whether they be all jointly suing or sued, or whether an action is brought in favour of or against one or more of them separately, provided the admissions related to the subject-matter in dispute, and are made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered.[16]

An admission by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant. No defendant can, by an admission or consent convey the right, or delegate the authority to one, for more than his own share in property.[17] Thus, the admission by one defendant will not be relevant against a co-defendant, because it would be unjust to bind a co-defendant by the admission of another whom he has had no opportunity to answer or cross-examine; it would afford to the plaintiff opportunities of defeating his opponent by unfair means. Even a confession of judgment by one of several defendants is no evidence against another defendant.[18]

Admission made by one defendant is not binding on the co-defendants unless interest of the defendants in the suit be joint.[19]

In Sri Chand Gupta v. Gulzar Singh,[20] the landlord of a building filed a petition for eviction on the ground that the tenant B sublet the premises to his brother A. A had filed an affidavit before the Income Tax Authorities that he was the exclusive tenant. It was held that this statement could not be used against B as an admission that by sublet the premises to his brother A as A cannot be said to have any joint interest or derivative interest with or from B within the meaning of this section.

The Kerala High Court held that it is not a correct proposition of law to state that the only kind of admissions by parties to a litigation which will either be relevant to or conclude the matter in issue are admissions operating as estoppels. There are other admissions which are equally, if not more, effective, namely: (1) admissions contained in the pleadings in a case which would circumscribe the issues and avoid the necessity for proof; and (2) admissions made by parties to a suit on earlier occasions, either in prior proceedings in a court of law or in statements made out of court. But the admissions made by one defendant will not bind his co- defendant, though they would bind the party making them.[21]

9. ADMISSION BY WITNESS

An admission made by a witness cannot be treated as an admission of the party and is not binding on the party.[22]

10. ADMISSION BY TENANT

Where a married daughter of a tenant claimed possession of the premises whereas the tenant had earlier admitted that he was residing in the premises all alone after the death of his wife and the daughter never proved his admission erroneous nor he even withdrew his admission, the vacancy was rightly declared.[23]

---

16. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s. 743, p. 475; Meajan Matbar v. Alimuddin Mia, ILR (1916) 44 Cal 130, 143, 144 : AIR 1917 Cal 487.
17. Lachman Singh v. Tansukh, ILR (1884) 6 All 395; Azizullah Khan v. Ahmad Ali Khan, (1885) 7 All 353 ; Basanti Roy v. Manindra Roy, 2000 AIHC 2624 (para 7) (Gau) : AIR 2000 NOC 71 (Gau).
18. Amritlal Bose v. Rajoneekant Mitter, (1874) 75 2 IA 113 : (1875) 23 WR 214.
19. Paras Ram v. Dayaldas, AIR 1965 HP 32; Rampukar Singh v. Sitaram Mahton, AIR 1963 Ori 45; Gangram Kanhyalal v. Pooran Gulab, AIR 1954 MB 58; Ambikaprasad v. Ram Ekbal, AIR 1960 SC 605; Jagabandhu Senapati v. Bhogu Senapati, AIR 1974 Ori 120; Ambar Ali v. Lutfeali, ILR 1945 Cal 159; Tikoo Ram v. Jhabar, ILR (1960) 10 Raj 6 (a case where several persons are jointly interested in the proceedings to grant of patta).
20. AIR 1992 SC 123.
21. Chandi Avira v. Thomman Varkey, AIR 1951 Tri-Co 109 (FB); Phuljhari v. Mithai, AIR 1971 All 494; Prabhudas v. Lallubhai, AIR 1932 Bom 117; Kanta v. Makhan, 39 CWN 227.
22. Krishna Mohan v. Bal Krishna Chaturvedi, AIR 2001 All 334 (para 42) : AIR 2001 All 334.
23. Malini Agrawal v. Rent Control and Eviction Officer, Allahabad, 2000 AIHC 4170 (para 10) (All), relying on Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100.

11. ADMISSION BY AGENT OF A PARTY

The admissions of an agent are admissible because the principal is bound by the acts of his agent done in the course of business and within the scope of his authority. A statement made by an agent whom the Court regards, under the circumstances of the case, as expressly or impliedly authorized to make it, is admissible though it was not made on oath.[24] e.g. a statement by an agent before a settlement officer that his principal was a bastard.[25]

It must also be proved that the person making the admission is an agent.[26] Where a principal was sought to be bound by the admission made by his agent, it was held that the relationship of agency between the principal and the agent should be pleaded and established, that in the absence of a proper pleading and in the absence of an amendment later, the question of agency cannot be raised at the time of hearing of the suit.[27] For a statement to be received as an admission of an agent it must be shown that he was expressly or impliedly authorised to make the admission.[28] The court may presume agency from the circumstances in which the admission was made.[29]

Where a party to the suit makes unambiguous statements on oath and, on that basis, his counsel makes certain confessions, it was held that the admission by the advocate on the fact is binding on the party.[30] An admission of a fact contained in the memorandum of appeal filed by an advocate, though it is not verified, is binding on the client.[31] Facts secured from the counsel across the bar amount to an admission so far as they go against the interest of the party and must form part of the record.[32]

A statement which was recorded in a judgment or order of a Court, about what had taken place in the Court, is conclusive and if the party is agrieved he can only apply for review.[33]

Suggestions put in the cross-examination by counsel are no evidence at all and on the basis of such suggestions no inference can be drawn against the accused that he admitted the facts referred to in the suggestion.[34]

Where there was no privity of contract between two persons, an admission by one will not bind the other.[35]

A person called by a party as his witness cannot, however, be regarded as his agent within the meaning of this section.[36]

12. ADMISSION BY SOLICITORS AND COUNSEL

The admission of a party's solicitors before the commencement of litigation are not relevant. Observation of formalities is, however, something different. The testimony of counsel that the thumb impression taken as a specimen was that of his client cannot be excluded on the ground that a counsel cannot admit facts on client's behalf.[37]

---

24. Govindji v. Chotalal, (1900) 2 Bom LR 651.
25. Raja Fateh Singh, Thakur v. Baldeo Singh, Thakur, (1928) 3 Luck 416 : AIR 1928 Oudh 233.
26. Brijsundar Sharma v. Election Tribunal Jaipur, AIR 1957 Raj 189.
27. Kedarnath Bojoria v. State of Bengal, AIR 1954 SC 660.
28. Raja Fateh Singh v. Baldeo Singh, AIR 1928 Oudh 233 (Raj); Brij Sundar Sharma v. Election Tribunal Jaipur, AIR 1957 Raj 189.
29. Raja Braja Sunder Deb v. Raja Rajendra Naraya Bhanj Deo, AIR 1941 Pat 260.
30. Mt Lachmi v. Anant Ram, AIR 1956 HP 68 (admission regarding a custom in the matter of land allienation), Prithwi v. Sukhraj, 1940 FC 25.
31. Ghanshyam Das v. State, 45 Cut LT 524 : ILR 1978 Cut 5.
32. Sunder v. Calter Ltd., AIR 1969 Bom 24.
33. Virabhadra Rao v. Sakalchand, AIR 1951 Mad 796.
34. Trikam v. State, AIR 1969 Guj 69.
35. Venkata Raman & Co. v. State, AIR 1966 SC 1089.
36. Prabhu Gordhan Das v. Lallubhai Khushal, AIR 1932 Bom 117.
37. Raghunath v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 1100.

13. ADMISSION BY COUNSEL

Admissions of facts made by a pleader in the conduct of a suit on his client's behalf are binding on the client.[38]

Admission by the counsel of a party on a point of law is not binding on the party and amounts to no more than his view that the question is unagreable.[39] A party is not bound, generally speaking, by a pleader's admission in argument on what is a pure question of law.[40] An admission by a counsel or a pleader on a point of law cannot, therefore, bind the client.[41]

In a suit for possession, defendants contested that they were joint tenants with the last owner and they also were the next reversioners, and that the surrender by the widow of the last male-holder was not binding on them. The plaintiff was a lessee from a lambardar to whom the suit land was surrendered by the widow. In the lower appellate court the defendant's counsel stated that they are not defending the suit on the ground of their being reversioners. It was found that the surrender was bad. It was held that the statement by the counsel is not binding the defendant, so as to preclude the defendant in a second appeal from raising the pure question of law, namely, whether the surrender which was not for legal necessity was binding on the reversioners.[42]

There cannot be an admission by counsel in a criminal case, to relieve the prosecution of the duty of satisfying the court by proper evidence, in respect of the guilt of the accused.[43]

A pleader cannot give up any portion of his client's case without express authority, nor is he entitled to admit the claim of the other party.

14. ADMISSION BY PARTNERS

Partners are agents of one another insofar as the business of partnership is concerned. Where several persons are engaged in one common business or dealing, a statement made by one of them with reference to any transaction which forms part of their joint business, has always been held to be admissible as evidence against the others.[44] Each member of a firm, being the agent of the others for all purposes within the scope of the partnership business, admissions by one member are binding on all. Admissions by a partner of a dissolved firm are binding on the other partners when they have an identical interest in the subject-matter of the suit.[45] Entries made by a partner in the firm's account books though made behind the back of other partners, are binding and are prima facie evidence against other partners.[46] Where a partner admits the infringement of a trade mark, the admission, if made in a representative capacity, is evidence against the firm.[47] Any admission made by one partner, which is not in respect of the affairs of the business of the firm, or is not made in the ordinary course of the business, would not bind the other members of the firm.[48]

It was held that acknowledgement of debt by one partner, in order to save limitation under the Limitation Act, would not bind the other partners unless he has authority, express or implied, from the other partners.[49] But the Bombay High Court, has held that even if the partner had no express authority

---

38. Khajan Abdool Ghani v. Bour Monee Debia, (1868) 9 WR (Civil) 375; Mahadev v. Sundrabai, (1901) 3 Bom LR 467; Emperor v. Bansilal Gangaram, (1928) 30 Bom LR 646 : AIR 1928 Bom 241.
39. Shanker Lal v. Motilal, AIR 1957 Raj 267; Veeramma v. Appayya, AIR 1957 AP 965; P.L. Singh v. M.M. Singh, AIR 1956 Mani 18; Jetmull Bhojraj v. State, AIR 1967 Pat 287; Shiv Singh v. S.T.A. Tribunal, AIR 1969 All 14; Union of India v. Jagesors, ILR (1976) 2 Del 515; Narayan v. Venkatacharya, ILR 28 Bom 408; Krishanji v. Rajmal, ILR 24 Bom 360; Societe Belge de Banaue v. Rao Girdhari Lal Chaudhary, AIR 1940 PC 90.
40. Narayan v. Venkatacharya, (1904) 6 Bom LR 434: 28 Bom 408.
41. Krishnaji v. Rajmal, ILR (1899) 24 Bom 360: 2 Bom LR 25.
42. See Surya Prakaso Rao v. Mahanti Rajaram, AIR 1945 Mad 256.
43. S.C. Mitter v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 435; State of Orissa v. Lachhmi Munshe, (1978) 46 Cut LT 122 (a case of concession by a prosecutor).
44. Kowsulliah Sundari Dasi v. Mukta Sundari Dasi, (1885) 11 Cal 588.
45. Sohanlal v. Gulab Chand, AIR 1966 Raj 229.
46. Valliammai v. Ramanathan, AIR 1969 Mad 257.
47. Thomas Bear & Sons Ltd. v. Rulia Ram, AIR 1934 Lah 625.
48. Seth Abdeali v. Askaran, AIR 1924 Nag 411.
49. Valasubramania v. Ramanathan Chettiar, ILR 32 Mad 421; Pandiri Veeranna v. Grandhi Veerabhadra Swami, 41 Mad 427 : AIR 1919 Mad 1140.

to sign the acknowledgement of debt, he must be presumed to have had authority from the other partners.[50]

One member of a firm can borrow money from the business of the firm by executing promissory notes and other partners are liable for the debt under the promissory notes.[51]

15. ADMISSION BY OFFICERS, SUBORDINATES ETC.

Admissions of officers of a company have been received against the company when made during transactions with third persons.[52]

Admission by a station master has been received against a railway undertaking.[53]

In the absence of express authority, statements made by subordinates do not normally constitute admissions binding on their employers.[54]

16. ADMISSION BY GUARDIAN

The admissions of a guardian ad litem, or next friend, do not bind the minor. The guardian of an infant has no power to bind him by admissions. According to the Bombay and the Madras High Courts, a guardian appointed under the Guardians and Wards Act can sign an acknowledgement of liability in respect of, or pay in part the principal of, a debt, so as to extend the period of limitation against his ward, provided the guardian's act was for the benefit of the ward's property.[55] If a guardian makes an acknowledgement of debt to save limitation, it is not ordinarily sufficient to revive the debt, but if it was done for the benefit of the minor, it can be equated with that of an agent duly authorised in that behalf, and it gives a fresh start of limitation.[56] A guardian ad litem can make admissions if they are made in good faith and for the benefit of the minor. Where the guardian made some admissions regarding the title of the minor to a property, it was held that it was not made for the benefit of the minor; as there was want of good faith on the part of the guardian, the admissions were not admissible against the minor in a subsequent suit brought by him after his attaining majority.[57]

17. STATEMENTS MADE BY PARTIES SUING OR SUED IN A REPRESENTATIVE CAPACITY

This means trustees, executors, administrators, managers in the character of an executor or administrator, or the assignee of a bankrupt.

However, where a public institution is a party to the suit it was held that the personal conduct or admissions of the trustee of the institution cannot prejudice the interest of the institution.[58]

It is important that such persons must make the statement in their character of persons so interested. A statement made by a trustee, executor or administrator, is not admissible against him when sued as trustee, etc., if it was made before he became trustee, etc. This principle is grounded on the fact that a statement against the interest of person making it will not be made unless truth compelled it. But the fact that two persons have a common interest in the subject- matter does not entitle them to make admissions respecting it, as against each other.[59]

---

50. Gordhandas v. Bhulabhai Ranchoddas, AIR 1932 Bom 316
51. Shanmuganatha Chettiar v. Srinivas Iyer, 40 Mad 727 : AIR 1970 Mad 108.
52. Panorama Developments v. Fidelis Furnishing Fabrics, (1971) 2 QB 711.
53. Kirkstall Brewery Co. v. Furness Ry. Co., (1874) LR QB 468.
54. Johnson v. Lindsaey, 1891 AC 371 (manual labourer); Tustin v. Arnold, (1915) 84 LJ KB 2214 (Driver); Edwards v. Brooks, (1963) 3 All ER 62.
55. Annapaguada v. Sangadyapa, (1901) 3 Bom LR 817 : ILR 26 Bom 221 (FB); Kailasa Padiachi v. Ponnukannu Achi., ILR (1894) 18 Mad 456; See Limitation Act, 1963, s 20(1).
56. Ramcharan v. Gaya Pandi, ILR 30 All 422.
57. M.C. Singh v. C.N.M. Devi, AIR 1957 Mani 32.
58. Balak Ram High School Panipat v. Nanumal M., AIR 1930 Lah 508.
59. STEPHEN'S DIGEST, Art. 17.

An admission of a Mutawalli cannot estop him from claiming his share in the wakf property as heir, if the wakf is avoided.[60] Statements made by previous Mahants are not binding on his successor or the worshippers of the Mutt.[61]

Where a father or other managing member makes an admission while acting on behalf of the family, for protecting the interest of the family or for acquiring properties for the family, he does so on his own behalf and on behalf of the members of the family; and in that representative capacity it binds all the members of the family.[62] The father can maintain suits on behalf of the family, execute decrees, receive payments and give valid receipts binding on the family.[63] However, he cannot revive a time barred debt unless specifically authorised by other members.[64] It was held by the Calcutta High Court that when a payment was made by the managing member, it was to be treated as by an agent duly authorised within the meaning of the Limitation Act 25 of 1877.[65]

When a creditor of the family was dealing not only with the managing member but also with other members of the family as co-obligors, it was held he cannot rely upon an acknowledgement on behalf of all co-obligors, so as to avoid the question whether the transaction was really for the benefit of the family.[66]

If an admission was made by the father or managing member of the family in furtherance of his own interest such admission cannot bind his sons.[67]

18. PRINCIPAL AND SURETY

The admissions of a principal can sometimes (but only seldom) be received as evidence in an action against the surety upon his collateral undertaking. In these cases the main inquiry is whether the declarations of the principal were made during the transaction of the business for which the surety was bound, so as to become part of the re gestae. If so, they are admissible; otherwise, they are not.[68]

In a suit filed by a principal against his agent and his surety, the accounts which were settled after the agency had ceased were held to be admissible against the surety.[69]

However, where a public institution is a party to the suit it was held that the personal conduct or admissions of the trustee of the institution cannot prejudice the interest of the institution.[70]

19. STATEMENTS AGAINST PROPRIETARY OR PECUNIARY INTEREST OF THE PARTIES

When several persons are jointly interested in the subject-matter of a suit, an admission of any one of these persons is receivable not only against himself but also against the other defendants, whether they be all jointly suing or sued, provided that the admission relates to the subject-matter in dispute and be made by the declarant in his character of a person jointly interested with the party against whom the evidence is tendered.[71] If the document is inter partes it would amount to a joint statement by the parties

---

60. Rukeya Banu v. Nazira Banu, AIR 1928 Cal 130.
61. Ram Parsad v. Shiromani Gurudwara Prabandak Committee, Amritsar, AIR 1931 Lah 161.
62. Nagaya Sami v. Kochadai, AIR 1969 Mad 329; Kandasami Asari v. Somaskanda, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 177 (He is not an agent in the strict sense of the term); Kota Ramasami Chetty v. Bangari Sushamma, (1881) 3 Mad 145; Jagan Nath v. Munnulal, ILR 16 All 231 (In the absence of fraud or collusion it is binding).
63. Sheo Shamrar Ram v. M.V. Sammat Jado Kunwar, 36 All 383 : 18 Cal WN 968 (PC); Jaganath v. Lachman Das, ILR 34 All 549 (FB); 38 Mad 685.
64. Chinnaya v. Gurunatham, ILR (1881) 5 Mad 169 (FB); Kailasa v. Ponnukannu, 18 Mad 456; Dinkar v. Appaji, ILR (1894) 20 Bom 155.
65. Ramcharan v. Gaya Pandit, ILR 30 All 422 (FB) Contra Kandaswami Asari v. Somaskanda, ILR (1912) 35 Mad 177.
66. Narayan v. Venkataramana, ILR 25 Mad 220 (FB).
67. Nagayasami v. Kochadai, AIR 1969 Mad 329.
68. TAYLOR 12th Edn., Vol. I, s. 785, p. 494; Bain v. Cooper, (1842) 9 M&W 701; Retikchan, In re : (1881) 17 ChD 668; see also PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 13th Edn., p. 392.
69. Parmeswara v. Viyathen, 25 MLJ 51.
70. Balakra High School Panipat v. Nanumal M., AIR 1930 Lah 508.
71. Meajan Matbar v. Alimuddin Mia, ILR (1916) 44 Cal 130, 143; TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s. 743, p. 475.

to the document, and therefore, relevant against all of them as an admission.[72] Recitals in a mortgage deed executed by mortgagors that they are in Khas Possession cannot be treated as admissions by mortgagees under this section, but are admissions under Section 13 as assertions of title if the mortgagees claim their probative value as against them and as against their lessees whom claim under them.[73] A recital in a gift deed that possession was given to the donee, (as such recital is an essential condition for the validity of the gift deed), would be binding on the donor, and, if he dies, on those claiming under him.[74]

In a suit for declaration of title, a statement by the suitor's father that the defendant was in possession was admitted.[75] Admissions made by a person about his ownership of property after he had transferred it are not relevant to the prejudice of the buyer's interest. After transfer he no longer has any interest in the property.[76] An admission made by one of several parties in fraud of the others jointly interested will not bind the others.

The recitals of boundaries in a document between a party to the suit and a stranger, are admissible against the party as an admission. But, it cannot be taken in his favour, unless the fact recited is deposed in the court by the executant of the document, in which case the recital will become admissible under Section 157, to corroborate the evidence of the executant, or under Section 155 to contradict such evidence.[77]

20. ADMISSIONS BY PERSONS FROM WHOM PARTIES DERIVED THEIR INTEREST

Statements made either by parties interested or by persons from whom the parties to the suit have derived their interest are admissible only if they are made during the continuance of the interest of the persons making the statements. The admissions of a former owner of property, after he had ceased to have any interest in it, are not evidence against the party in possession.[78] Where the children from the first wife brought a suit for possession of their father's property disputing the second marriage of their father, the admission of their deceased father that the defendant, his second wife, was his legally wedded wife was binding on the plaintiffs.[79]

A, a landowner, filed a suit for ejectment against B, a tenant. B alleged he was a permanent tenant at a fixed rent under an agreement with the original owner of the land, who was dead, and put in evidence statements made by the original owner after he had transferred his interest. It was held that the statements were inadmissible.[80]

This clause indicates that there ought to be a privity, i.e., mutual or successive relationship to the same right of property. Privies are of three kinds:—

(1) Privies in blood, such as a heir, an ancestor, and coparceners.

(2) Privies in law, as executor and testator, administrator and a person dying intestate.

(3) Privies in estate or interest, as vendor and purchaser, lessor and lessee, mortgagor and mortgagee, donor and donee.

The grounds upon which admissions are evidence against those in privity with the party making them are that they are identified in interest. Where it was proved that an agreement sued on was made by the plaintiff on behalf of himself and the other proprietors of a theatre, evidence of the declarations one of such other proprietors was held admissible on the part of the defendant.[81] The recitals in a sale deed are statements made at a time when the vendor has interest in the property, and those statements are

---

72. Rangayyan v. Innasimuthu Mudali, AIR 1956 Mad 226.
73. Harihar Prasad v. Deonarain Prasad, AIR 1956 SC 305.
74. Md. Yusuf Rowther v. Md. Yusuf Romther, AIR 1958 Mad 527.
75. Shahdeo v. Board of Revenue, AIR 1980 All 408.
76. Hardatt Sharma v. Jaikishen Sham Lal & Son, AIR 1983 J&K 29.
77. Rangayyan v. Innasimuthu Mudali, AIR 1956 Mad 226; Radha Krishna v. Sarabeswar, AIR 1925 Cal 684; Sheik Ketabuddin v. Nafar, AIR 1927 Cal 230; Dasmal v. Sunder Singh, AIR 1937 Lah 480.
78. Khenum Kuree Chowdhrain v. Gour Chunder Mojoomdar, (1866) 5 WR 2678.
79. Nirmala v. Rukminibai, AIR 1994 Kant 247 (para 11).
80. Shwe Yat Aung v. Da Li, (1916) 9 LBR 27.
81. Kemble v. Farren, (1829) 3 C&P 623.

admissible against his successor in interest in respect of the same property.[82] Where a mortgage was executed by A and B, and in that A admitted that B was the adopted son of his deceased brother C, when the question arose whether that admission was binding on the grandson of A, it was held that the words 'during the continuance of the interest' only means while the interest was subsisting and before that interest was parted with; that, as A was having interest in the property which was mortgaged at that time, that admission was binding on the grandson of A.[83] Where there was recital in a gift deed executed by a deceased donor that possession of the property was delivered to the donee it was held that it was an admission not only binding on the deceased donor but also on the persons claiming under him, and they had to prove that delivery of possession was in fact not given to the donee.[84]

Any subsequent statements of a vendor after the sale deed are not binding.[85] Any admission by a party is not binding upon a person who does not claim any interest through that property.[86] Where a person had made an admission that his deceased brother's widow adopted a boy, and in a subsequent suit by the sons of that person after the widow's death, claimed declaration of their reversionary rights, it was held that the admission of their father was not binding on them since they claimed in their own right and not as sons of their father.[87] Where a gift deed executed by the father contained certain admissions, it did not bind the sons because they were claiming not through him, but in their own right as co-parceners.[88] Admissions by husband in respect of some property will not be binding on the wife unless she derives title to the property through her husband.[89]

When a statement in evidence is made by a person, it not only binds the maker but also those who claim through him.[90]

Where a lease deed contained a clause giving option for renewal of the lease, the lessee exercised that option by issuing a registered letter to his lessor before the expiry of his lease and also before the lessor contracted for sale of that property to another. In a proceeding when the transferee of the land attempted to eject the assignee of the lessee, the original lessor of the land admitted having received the registered letter under which the lessee exercised the option in the lease deed for renewal. It was held that the assignee from the lessee was entitled to take advantage of that admission, from the original lessor and claim benefit of the option exercised by his assignor.[91]

21. LUNATIC

A lunatic, either himself or through his guardian or his advocate, cannot admit or deny that he is a lunatic because a lunatic, by the very fact of his deranged mind, will be unable to know whether he is of sound mind or unsound mind.[92]

As Order 32, Rule 15, C.P.C. provides for a judicial enquiry before the court declares a person as a lunatic, and a person cannot be judged a lunatic on the opinion of others, the court may take the opinion of an expert.[93]

22. STATEMENT BY THIRD PARTIES

Where an office note put up for sanction of certain amount contained a statement to the effect that amount was towards consideration for relinquishment of a co- parcenary right by a person in an impartible estate, it was held that it was a statement by a third party who put up the note and cannot have

---

82. Krishna Subala Bose v. Dhanapati Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59; Gangaram Kanhyalal v. Pooran Gulab, AIR 1954 MB 58.
83. Harihar v. Nabakishore, AIR 1963 Ori 45.
84. Md. Yusuf Rowther v. Md. Yusuf Rowther, AIR 1958 Mad 527.
85. Gangaram Kanhyalal v. Pooran Gulab, AIR 1954 MB 58; Ram Singh v. Gainda Ram, AIR 1953 Punj 163 (a case of pre-emption).
86. Hutche Gowda v. Chennige Gowda, AIR 1953 Mys 49; Kaliammal v. Sundarammal, AIR 1949 Mad 84.
87. Gopal Singh v. Hukam Singh, AIR 1950 All 644.
88. Avtar Singh v. Atma Singh, AIR 1982 J&K 141.
89. Goru Satyarajulu v. T.C. Panigrahi, ILR 1964 Cut 274.
90. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sunder Mal, AIR 1934 PC 157; Gopaldas v. Shri Tahakurji, AIR 1943 PC 83; Shamboonath v. Kapoor Singh, AIR 1967 J&K 52.
91. Kochuvareed v. Mariappa Goundan, AIR 1954 Tri-Co 10; Sankara Pillai v. Ananda Pillai, AIR 1958 Ker 307.
92. Balakrishnan v. N.B. Balachandra, (1956) 21 Mad LJ 459.
93. Ramanathan v. Somasundaram, (1941) 1 MLJ 234; Mohd. Ibrahim v. Shaik Mohammad, (1948) 2 MLJ 277.

any probative value nor can it be relevant evidence against a person who is not a party or signatory to such note.[94]

Admissions by persons whose position must be proved as against party to suit.

S. 19. Statements made by persons whose position or liability it is necessary to prove as against any party to the suit, are admissions, if such statements would be relevant as against such persons in relation to such position or liability in a suit brought by or against them, and if they are made whilst the person making them occupies such position or is subject to such liability.

ILLUSTRATION

A undertakes to collect rents for B.

B sues A for not collecting rent due from C to B.

A denies that rent was due from C to B.

A statement by C that he owed B rent is an admission, and is a relevant fact as against A, A denies that C did owe rent to B.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section forms an exception to the rule that statements made by strangers to a proceeding are not admissible as against the parties. Ordinarily statements by strangers to a proceeding are not relevant as against the parties. This section makes it possible to take in the evidence of admissions of third persons who are strangers to the suit. This section and Section 20 are the two exceptions to the general rule contained in Section 18. These exceptions would show when and under what circumstances the admissions of strangers who are not parties to the suit are relevant and admissible. In Appavu v. Nanjappa,[95] it was observed: "The object of this section is not to lay down that certain statements are relevant or admissible, but merely to add to the category of persons by whom a statement may be made before it can be considered to be an admission within the terms of the Indian Evidence Act. The statements referred to in Section 19 become admissible provided they satisfy the requirements of Section 17 as regards their nature, and Section 21 or any of the following sections, as regards their liability."

In that case in an action by the trustees of a bankrupt, the latter's admissions, made before the act of bankruptcy, were held admissible in proof of the petitioning creditor's debt. It was further observed: "The admission in the written statement of one co-mortgagee of the receipt of the whole mortgagee debt is admissible in evidence against the other co-mortgagee."[96]

The admission of a third person against his own interest, when it affects his position or liability, and when that position or liability has to be proved as against a party to the suit, is relevant against the party. Admission of due execution of a will by the testatrix by the preferential heirs to her estate against their own interest is relevant.[97]

The illustration given under this section explains how a statement of a third party becomes relevant and admissible. The illustration exemplifies how, when the liability of a person who is one of the parties to a suit, depends upon the liability of a stranger to the suit, then an admission by the stranger in respect of his liability amounts to an admission on the part of that person. In Ali Moidin Ravuthan v. Elayachanilathi Kombi Achan,[98] two persons A and B jointly borrowed some money from a lender C, who brought an action against A alone. A raised an objection saying that B should also be joined as a party as there is joint liability on him. It was held that the admission of B, while borrowing the amount, as to his joint liability is relevant between A and C, though B was alive and was not cited as a witness.

---

94. Rajchy Sivarama Prasad v. Y Venkata Ramalingama Prasad, ILR (1961) 1 AP 538 : (1961) 1 An WR 183.
95. ILR 25 Mad LJ 329.
96. Appavu Chettiar v. Nanjappa Goundan, (1913) 25 MLJ 329; TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s. 759, Vol. I, p. 484.
97. Laxmi Bai v. C. Chandravati, AIR 1995 Ori 131 (paras 14 and 15).
98. (1913) 5 Mad 239.

2. STATEMENT—MEANING OF

The statements referred to in this section become admissible provided they satisfy the requirements of S. 17 as regards their nature and S. 21 or any of the following sections as regards their liability.

The Supreme Court held that the word 'statement' in Sections 17 to 21 is used in its ordinary sense, i.e., something said, and communication is not necessary in order that it may be a 'statement'.[1]

Where there was a question whether A agreed to purchase a land from B on a certain date, a letter written by B to a third party was sought to be relied by B. It was held that the latter is not admissible against A.[2]

Admissions by persons expressly referred to by party to suit.

S. 20. Statements made by persons to whom a party to the suit has expressly referred for information in reference to a matter in dispute are admissions.

ILLUSTRATION

The question is, whether a horse sold by A to B is sound.

A says to B—"Go and ask C, C knows all about it." C's statement is an admission.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope	... 263	6. Agreement is necessary between the parties	... 265
2. Principle applies to criminal cases also	... 264	7. Binding nature	... 266
3. English Law	... 264	8. When can a party resile from the agreement	... 266
4. "Information"	... 265
5. Reference is akin to arbitration	... 265	9. Statement	... 267

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section forms another exception to the rule that admissions by strangers to a suit are not relevant. Under it the admissions of a third person are also receivable in evidence against, and have frequently been held to be in fact binding upon the party who has expressly referred another to him for information in regard to an uncertain or disputed matter.[3]

There must be an express reference for information in order to make the statement of a person referred to admissible. The section makes vicarious admission in a dispute admissible. Where the parties refer expressly to a third person for information or an opinion regarding their dispute, the statements made by the third person, who may be called as a referee, are admissible. When once a matter is referred to a third person, it means that the parties to the dispute, in anticipation of the opinion to be given in the dispute, approve of it and adopt it as if it were their own. In Hirachand Kothari v. State of Rajasthan,[4] it was held that, where a party refers to a third person for information in respect of a matter in dispute, the statements made by the third person are receivable as admissions against the party making the reference; the reason being that, when a party refers to another person for his views by way of a statement, the party approves his utterance in anticipation and adopts it as his own. The principle is the same as that of a reference to arbitration, but, in any case, there must be clear admission to refer, and such admissions are generally conclusive.

In Himachal v. Jatwar,[5] the following observation of Taylor was quoted; "Mr. Taylor observes that the purposes of justice and policy are sufficiently answered by throwing the burden of proof on the opposing party, as in the case of an award, and by holding him bound, unless he can impeach the test

---

1. Bhogilal Chunilal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 356.
2. Richard Gullive v. Posho Ltd., AIR 1939 PC 146.
3. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s. 760, p. 484.
4. AIR 1985 SC 998.
5. ILR 46 All 710 : AIR 1924 All 570.

referred to by clear proof of fraud or mistake.... Parties agreeing to be bound by any statement which a third person to whom they agreed to refer, may make; the statements of such referee may be regarded as admissions of the parties under the section."[6] Though, admissions are not conclusive, where the two parties agree to abide by the statement or information of the referee, the statement of the referee becomes an admission of both the parties as binding on them. Where there has been between the parties mutuality, it becomes an agreement between them and their conclusiveness follows from the principle of estoppel; then the parties cannot be allowed to go back upon it and, therefore, the admission is conclusive against both and can be said to operate as an estoppel.[7]

PHIPSON observes (13th Ed., p. 402): "When a party refers to a third person for information or opinion on a given subject, the information or opinion so given is receivable against the referrer as an admission. And it will be conclusive where there has been an agreement to refer, or where the position of the party tendering the evidence has been altered thereby."

"Where a party agrees to be bound by what a third person says, or refers an opposite party to a third person for information or an opinion on a given subject, the third person's reply is admissible against the party so agreeing or referring; and if the reference has been made by agreement, it will be conclusive." (HALSBURY'S 4th Ed., Vol. 17, Para. 74, Page 57).

According to this section, there are three parties concerned with the dispute. The party who refers the matter, the opposite party, and the party to whom the reference is made, for information. The party who refers the matter would be presumed to undertake the opinion or the information of the referee as his own.[8]

If one party in a cause offers to the other party to settle it, provided that a witness makes a statement on oath as to a certain fact in dispute, and the statement is made, it shall bind the party making the offer.[9] Where the defendant said: "If C will say that he did deliver the goods, I will pay for them," it was held that C's statement was admissible and the defendant was bound by it.[10] Similarly a person cannot resile from the admissions of the person whom he has given the power of attorney.[11]

The rule contained in Section 20 must not be understood as giving the force of an admission to statements made by a witness, as against the party who calls him. There must be an express reference for information, in order to make the statement an admission.

The Privy Council, in Chabba Lal v. Kallu Lal,[12] observed: "It is obvious that a reference to an outside party to decide matters in dispute in a suit and the question of costs is not a reference to that party for information in reference to a matter in dispute, and if the references is to be regarded as made only under Section 20, it is a bad reference."

2. PRINCIPLE APPLIES TO CRIMINAL CASES ALSO

The principle underlying this section applies to criminal cases also. It was held that, where the accused told a constable that his wife would make out a list of the properties and when subsequently a list was made out by her, it would be evidence against her husband.[13]

3. ENGLISH LAW

Under the English Law the principle applies in respect of facts or of law. It is immaterial whether the disputed matter be one of law or fact; whether the referee has, or has not, any peculiar knowledge on the subject; or whether the reference is made expressly, or by conduct evincing an intention to rely on the statement as correct.

---

6. Chinna Venkata Swami v. Venkataswami Naiker, ILR 42 Mad 625.
7. Akbari Begum v. Rahmat Hussain, AIR 1933 All 861, 880 (FB).
8. D Cruz v. Secy of State, 40 Cal WN 865; Bhattacharjee v. Sentinel Assurance Co., AIR 1955 Cal 594.
9. Lloyd v. Willian, (1794) 1 Esp 178.
10. Daniel v. Pitt, (1806) 1 Camp 366n.
11. Ram Sahai v. Jai Prakash, AIR 1993 MP 147 (paras 13 and 16).
12. AIR 1946 PC 72 : 73 IA 52.
13. R v. Mallory, (1884) 13 QBD 33.

4. INFORMATION

Explaining the term "information", the Supreme Court has said: "The word 'information' occuring in S. 20 is not to be understood in the sense that the parties desired to know something which none of them had any knowledge of. Where there is a dispute as regards a certain question, and the Court is in need of information regarding the truth on that point, any statement that the referee may make is nevertheless information within the meaning of S. 20".[14] The court accordingly regarded the report of an assessor, an "information" within the meaning of the section. The court said that it would also include reference to arbitration.

This section postulates an express reference for information in respect of a matter in dispute, in order to make the statement of the person referred to admissible.

It was held that the information referred in Section 20 "need not be information specially within the knowledge of the person" referred to. The information may be gathered by inspection of the lands or by reference to accounts or by any other means.[15]

The word 'information' includes decision of any kind. Where there was an agreement of parties, they referred the dispute to a referee, an appointed arbitrator. In that case, it was held that as the referee was to evaluate evidence not beyond his jurisdiction, he is not bound to make statement contemplated under Section 20.[16]

5. REFERENCE IS AKIN TO ARBITRATION

An admission by a person referred to by the party comes very near to the case of arbitration (STEPHEN DIG. 7th Edn., Note to Art. 19, p. 1789). If a reference is made over a disputed matter to a third person, not in the nature of a submission to arbitration, but rather as an aid to the settlement of the differences existing between the parties and to enable the parties themselves to effect a settlement on the information, in such cases the party is bound by the declaration of the person referred to in the same manner and to the same extent as if it was made by himself.[17] A referee is deemed to be an arbitrator and his decision is an award.[18] It may be noted here that under the Arbitration Act the parties to a dispute in a court of law may request the court to refer the dispute to an arbitrator. Apart from that, there may be provision in the contract between two parties, to refer if any dispute arises, to arbitration. In such cases the arbitrator, after going through the evidence that may be placed before him, comes to a finding. If that happens in the proceedings before the court, the parties will have an opportunity to raise objections which have to be considered by the court, which will pass a decree either in terms or in modification of certain findings of the award. All that procedure will not be available if a reference is made to a third party for his opinion under this section. So it would not be proper to call the statement of the referee as an award. So far as the reference contemplated under this section is concerned, the Supreme Court held that the principle is the same as that of a reference to arbitration.[19]

In Ramjilal v. Ram,[20] it was held that though parties expressly empower a third person to make enquiries in the dispute and give information to the court and that referee makes a statement, Section 20 is not applicable to such a statement, as the statement of a third person is in the nature of an arbitration award.

6. AGREEMENT IS NECESSARY BETWEEN THE PARTIES

Where a suit was filed against the insurance company to recover money on the basis of an insurance policy, and a certain report of a medical officer was sought to be relied on in defence, it was held that the statement contained in the report of the medical officer, which was given to the company on a reference

---

14. Hirachand Kothari v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1985 SC 998 at 1000-1.
15. Seetaramacharyulu v. Ranganayakamma, AIR 1958 AP 304; Akbari Begum v. Rahmat Hussain, AIR 1933 All 861 at 879.
16. Shanbhu Nath Gognka v. Madan, ILR (1977) 1 Del 247.
17. Sloman v. Herme, (1799) 2 Esp. 695; Williams v. Bridges, (1817) 2 Stark 42.
18. Ramjilal v. Ram, AIR 1978 All 351. See also ILR (1977) 1 Del 247; Sadliu Ram v. Vobe Ram, AIR 1967 Punj 179.
19. Hirachand Kothari v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1985 SC 998.
20. AIR 1978 All 351.

made to him, should not be treated as statement made under an implied agreement for medical reference between the company and the insured.[21]

Where an assured made a claim against an insurer who referred the assured to a surveyor for certain information, it was held that the contents of the surveyor's report were "admission" against the insurer under Section 20, and they could not be regarded as "admissions" against the assured, as there was no express agreement for a reference to a surveyor.[22] Where a surveyor was appointed by a Fire Insurance Co., to assess the loss caused to the plaintiff, who was informed about the appointment of the surveyor, it was held that, as the surveyor failed to supply a copy of the report to the plaintiff, the report of the surveyor is not admissible and Section 20 does not apply.[23] Where a person filed a suit against a corporation for buying his house for a certain price, basing on an agreement to that effect, and the corporation repudiated that agreement on the ground that there was a defect in title, and the plaintiff produced a report of surveyors on which basis the corporation passed a resolution accepting the terms of the plaintiff with knowledge of imperfect title, it was held that the report of the surveyor was not admissible as there was no agreement by the plaintiff to refer to a surveyor.[24] Similarly, where a master called for a report from a servant regarding the conduct of another servant who was later dismissed for misconduct, in a suit filed by the dismissed servant, it was held that the report of the servant is not admissible as there was nothing to indicate that the master intended to regard the servant's report as conclusive, and as there was no express agreement by the dismissed servant to refer to the other servant for a report and abide by it.[25]

7. BINDING NATURE

Where there was an agreement between the parties to abide by the statement of the referee, and when the referee gave his statement to the court, it was held that it was binding on the parties.[26] If a party in a civil suit offers that he will be bound by a statement of the other party if such statement is made on oath, it was held that if it is accepted by the other party, the party who offered is bound by the statement given by the opposite party, though it did not fall under the Oaths Act.[27] The repeal of the Oaths Act 1873 by Section 9 of the Oaths Act of 1969, does not affect the application of Section 20 of the Evidence Act. The oath administered as per the petitioner's statement that he would be bound by the oath would amount to an admission of the respondents claim within the meaning of Section 20 of the Evidence Act.[28]

If once the referee makes a statement which becomes an admission, it operates as an estoppel.[29]

Where the question is in regard to the genuineness or the validity of a will, a reference can not be made to a referee under this section.[30]

8. WHEN CAN A PARTY RESILE FROM THE AGREEMENT

A party may resile from the agreement before the referee makes his statement.[31] The same view was expressed in Gianchand v. Bansi,[32] stating that the word agreement is not adjustment of the suit within the meaning of Order 23, Rule 3, C.P.C., and so a party is not debarred from resiling from an agreement

---

21. Oriental Government S.L. Assurance Co., v. Narasimha, ILR 25 Mad 183.
22. Industrial Electrodes & Ganges Ltd. v. Hemouer Insurance Co., ILR (1973) 2 Cal 392.
23. Bhattacharjee v. Sentinel Assurance Co., AIR 1955 Cal 594.
24. Cooper v. Metropolitan Board of Works, (1883) 25 ChD 472 (CA).
25. D'Cruz v. Secy of State, 40 Cal WN 865.
26. Ram Narayan v. Santosh Kumar, AIR 1952 Punj 344; Gian Chand v. Bansi Lal, AIR 1961 Punj 31; Chinna Venkataswami v. Venkataswami, 42 Mad 625; Keshoram v. Piara, AIR 1923 All 443; Himachal v. Jatwar, 46 All 710
27. Himachal Singh v. Jatwar Singh, ILR 46 All 710 referring to Muhammad Asherali v. Muhammad Imtiaz Ali, 1898 Awn 200; Keshoram v. Piar, 21 ALJ 209 : AIR 1923 All 443; Babu Bishunath Singh v. Lalajamuna, AIR 1937 Oudh 67; See also Chinna Venkata Swami v. Venkataswami, ILR 42 Mad 625.
28. Munuswami Naidu v. Thyaraja Chettiar, AIR 1977 Mad 273 and Thakur Singh v. Inder Singh, AIR 1976 P&H 287 referred to with approval K.M. Singh v. Secretary, Association of Indian Universities, AIR 1992 SC 1356.
29. Umrai v. Intizami, AIR 1939 All 176; Ram Narain v. Santosh Kumar, AIR 1952 Punj 344.
30. Suraj Kaur v. Som Dutta, 1976 Pun LR 46.
31. Tumman v. Sheo Darshan, ILR 52 All 235; Joginder v. Bahadur, (1978) 2 Rent Law R 708.
32. AIR 1961 Punj 31.

before the referee makes the statement. However, in a later Punjab case,[33] overruling[34] it, it was held that, according to the provisions of this section, when one person offers to refer the dispute to a third party for information or opinion and when the other party accepts it; it becomes an agreement under the Law of Contract and thereupon none of the parties can resile therefrom.[35]

In Bishambar v. Shri Takurjee Maharaj,[36] it was held that the statement of the referee is to be considered in the nature of a pronouncement in the case, and so, before the statement is made, a party can resile. It was further held that the agreement was a valid contract and did not amount to adjustment of the suit; that it amounts to an agreement or a procedure which may end in an adjustment of the suit; and until the referee makes his statement there cannot be any question of adjustment.

The Madras High Court treated such an agreement as an adjustment of the claim.[37]

9. STATEMENT

See commentary under 'Statement' in Sections 18 and 19.

Proof of admissions against persons making them, and by or on their behalf

S. 21. Admissions are relevant and may be proved as against the person who makes them, or his representative in interest; but they cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them or by his representative in interest, except in the following cases:—

(1) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under Section 32.

(2) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, when it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body, relevant or in issue, made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable.

(3) An admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question between A and B is, whether a certain deed is or is not forged. A affirms that it is genuine, B that it is forged.

A may prove a statement by B that the deed is genuine, and B may prove a statement by A that the deed is forged; but A cannot prove a statement by himself that the deed is genuine, nor can B prove a statement by himself that the deed is forged.

(b) A, the captain of a ship, is tried for casting her away.

Evidence is given to show that the ship was taken out of her proper course.

A produces a book kept by him in the ordinary course of his business showing observations alleged to have been taken by him from day to day, and indicating that the ship was not taken out of her proper course. A may prove these statements, because they would be admissible between third parties, if he were dead, under Section 32, clause (2).

(c) A is accused of a crime committed by him at Calcutta.

He produces a letter written by himself and dated at Lahore on that day, and bearing the Lahore post-mark of that day.

---

33. Florabel Skinner v. J.B.K.M. Ram Lila Mandal, AIR 1980 Punj 284 (FB).
34. Thakur Singh v. Inder Singh, AIR 1976 Punj 287.
35. See also Sahebram v. Ram Newaz, AIR 1952 All 882; Ramchaj v. Dunichand, AIR 1926 Lah 240; Kundan v. Kartara, (1967) 69 Punj LR 651; Rustum v. Financial Commissioner, (1981) 83 Punj LR 759.
36. 53 All 673.
37. Chunnavenkataswami v. Venkataswami, ILR 42 Mad 625; See also Basdeo Singh v. Ram Raj Singh, AIR 1932 All 166; relying on Himachal Singh v. Jatwar Singh, ILR 46 All 710.

The statement in the date of the letter is admissible, because, if A were dead, it would be admissible under Section 32, clause (2).

(d) A is accused of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen.

He offers to prove that he refused to sell them below their value.

A may prove these statements, though they are admissions, because they are explanatory of conduct influenced by facts in issue.

(e) A is accused of fraudulently having in his possession counterfeit coin which he knew to be counterfeit.

He offers to prove that he asked a skilful person to examine the coin as he doubted whether it was counterfeit or not, and that that person did examine it and told him it was genuine.

A may prove these facts for the reasons stated in the last preceding illustration.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 268
2. Representative in interest ... 270
3. Admission in prior proceedings ... 270
4. Admission not binding on third party ... 271
5. Admission and former statement of a witness ... 272
6. Admission by accused ... 273
7. Statement made to a magistrate before starting the proceedings or investigation ... 274
8. Admissions and confessions during the course of investigation ... 274
9. As against the person who makes them ... 276
10. Value of admission ... 276
11. Exceptions ... 277
    - Maker of admission dead [Exception 1] ... 277
    - Admission made in a particular mental or physical state [Exception 2] ... 278
    - Admission relevant otherwise than admission [Exception 3] ... 278

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section lays down as a general rule that admissions are relevant and may be proved against the person who makes them or his representative in interest. Admissions must be clear if they are to be used against the person making it. Admissions are substantive evidence by themselves, in view of S. 17 and this section, though they are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted. The effect usually given to admissions proved against persons who make them is destructive, not constructive. Whether they are true or not does not matter. The effective point is that they destroy the force of inconsistent statements made later.

Where there was a suit against an insolvent and the official assignee for the sale of the mortgage property, evidence of a witness whom the plaintiff informed before his adjudication as an insolvent, that certain documents relating to the land were deposited with him as security by a person, was held inadmissible[1] by the Privy Council which observed: "Section 21 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, enacts that admissions are relevant and may be proved as against the person who makes them or his representative in interest, but they cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them or by his representative in interest except in three cases named, of which the present case is not one. The meaning of this section is very plainly illustrated by the illustration (a) to the section."

An admission cannot confer title on a person, but it would only shift the burden on the person making such admission to prove the want of title in persons in whose favour the admission is made.[2]

In certain circumstance an admission may operate as an estoppel.[3] What a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, and until that presumption is rebutted, the fact admitted should be taken to be established.[4]

PHIPSON observes: "(1) It is sometimes said that a party's admissions are receivable against him as a waiver of proof. This, however, can only apply to admission voluntarily made with a view to the trial and

---

1. Miller v. Madhodas, ILR 19 All 76 (PC) : 23IA 106, 116.
2. Abid Ali Khan v. Secretary of State, AIR 1951 Nag 327 relying on, 26 Cal 31 (PC).
3. Srinivasan v. Union of India, AIR 1959 SC 419.
4. Per BARON PARKE in Sletterie v. Pooley, (1840) 6 M&W 664 at 669; Reyappa v. Madhava Rao, AIR 1960 Mys 97.

not to those used as evidence, for the latter usually consist of casual statements made before litigation was contemplated, which are not conclusive, but which the jury are at liberty accept or reject, either wholly or in part, as they see fit.

(2) A second ground suggested is that the declarations, being against interest, are probably true. This however, seems equally unsatisfactory, since statements made against interest were not, at common Law, receivable per se, but only if the declarant be dead; and, moreover, statements by a party are receivable against him even though, when made, they were, in fact, in his interest. Thus, if A states that B owes him a debt, and A afterwards sues C for the same debt, this statement though in A's interest when made, may be proved against him by C as an admission (cf. Lucas v. Declacour);[5] while conversely, a statement by A, though against his interest when made, would not be receivable if tendered in his own favour.

(3) A third and more specious ground sometimes advanced is that furnished by the analogy of contradictory statements by witnesses, i.e. that admissions are receivable against a party not as evidence of their truth and so as exceptions to the hearsay rule, but merely as being inconsistent with, and so discrediting, the case afterwards set up. The condition that admissions, to be receivable, must be "unfavourable to the conclusion contended for by the party" was also adopted in Stephen's Digest (1st Edn.), art. 15, but was abandoned in later editions in consequence of a criticism in 20 S.J. 894. Although, however, this is the usual reason for tendering them, it is by no means an essential one, since a party is entitled to prove any material fact by his opponent's declaration, even though such fact be not necessarily inconsistent with the latter's case.

(4) The most generally accepted ground of reception appears to be that a party's declarations, whether for or against his interest when made, may always be taken to be true as against himself.[6]

The weight of the declaration is, of course, a totally different matter; this may vary with the circumstances, and will, no doubt, be greater if against interest at the time, than the contrary".[7]

SIR JAMES STEPHEN observes: "The general rule with regard to admissions, which are defined to mean all that the parties or their representatives in certain degrees say about the matter in dispute, or facts relevant thereto, is that they may be proved as against those who made them, but not in their favour. The reason of the rule is obvious. If A says, "B owes me money", the mere fact that he says so does not even tend to prove the debt. If the statement has any value at all, it must be derived from some fact which lies beyond it; for instance, A's recollection of his having lent B the money. To that fact, of course, A can testify but his subsequent assertions add nothing to what he has to say. If, on the other hand, A had said "B does not owe me anything" this is a fact of which B might make use and which might be decisive of the case."[8]

NORTON says that it would be unsafe to allow a person to make admission in his own favour which would affect his opposite party.[9]

The true meaning of this section is plainly illustrated by illus (a) to the section.[10]

In Jeremiah v. F.S. Vas,[11] it was observed that this section refers to an admission made before the start of the proceedings in which it may be given in evidence; that it does not refer to the pleading in a case or to an admission contained in the proceedings. Simply because a landowner sought exemption from the Urban Land Act in respect of a certain piece of land, it could not be taken to be an admission that his land was amenable to the said Act.[12]

This section states two propositions. Firstly, an admission would be relevant and may be proved against the maker of it and his representative in interest; as already seen, Section 17 provides how an admission is to be considered as good evidence against the maker. This section binds the representative

---

5. 1 M&S 249 (two partners sued to receiver goods alleged to belong to the partnership. An admission by one partner that the goods were his sole property was held to be admissible to reject the joint claim).
6. Sletterie v. Pooley, 6 M&W 664, per PARKE B.: "Whatever a party says is evidence against himself.... what a party himself admits to be true may be presumed to be so."
7. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), p. 708-709 (para 28-03).
8. INTRODUCTION TO THE EVIDENCE ACT, p. 164-165.
9. NORTON'S EVIDENCE, 151
10. Miller v. Babu Madhohas, ILR 19 All 76, 92 (PC).
11. ILR 36 Mad 457.
12. Dilipsinh Mohansinh v. S.J. Mansha, AIR 1995 Gau 1 (para 5).

in interest also.[13] Secondly, an admission can be proved on behalf of the maker but it is subject to the three exceptions contained in the section.

Where the question was whether a certain transaction was benami and it was contended by the opposite party that the question cannot be examined on the basis of statements made several years after the date of transaction, it was held by the Supreme Court that as those statements were made against the proprietary interest of the maker thereof, they were admissible under Section 21 and also Section 32, clause (3) of the Act.[14]

Where during its pendency, of a suit for partition there was an agreement between the parties to take specific shares in the family property, it was held that such statements in the agreement of the parties amounted to an admission and could be relied on as admissions within the meaning of this section, and so the parties were bound by the agreement.[15] Where the tenant had admitted the execution of a sale deed in favour of the landlord by the original landlord, the sale deed not be proved by the landlord by submitting the original sale deed or by adducing secondary evidence.[16]

An admission in a document can be admitted against its maker.[17]

A statement given before a Police Officer is admissible as an admission in a civil case.[18]

Where the letter tendered in evidence before the substituted defendant came to depose did not contain any admission or any statement by the substituted defendant but contained the statement by the original defendant, it was held that the letter was not an admission as such requiring to be confronted with the substituted defendant.[19]

2. REPRESENTATIVE IN INTEREST

This expression will include those who are privies in blood, law or estate. The purchaser at an ordinary execution sale is in privy with, and is the representative in interest of the judgment-debtor so as to be bound by the latter's admission.[20] There is a distinction between the position of a purchaser in a private sale and in a public sale in execution of a decree. In the former he derives his title through, and cannot acquire a better title than the vendor: in the latter he acquires his title by operation of law adversely to the judgment-debtor and so freed from all alienations and incumbrances effected by the debtor subsequently to the attachment of the property sold in execution.[21] But the purchaser in a public or a private sale acquires only the right, title and interest of the judgment-debtor with all its defects and the creditor takes the property subject to all equities which would affect it in the debtor's hands.

3. ADMISSION IN PRIOR PROCEEDINGS

An admission made by a party in a plaint signed and verified by him may be used against him in other suits. In other suits, this admission cannot be regarded as conclusive, and it is open to the party to show that it is not true.[22] If an admission in a pleading is made subject to a condition, it must be either accepted subject to that condition or not accepted at all.[23] The value of an admission depends upon the

---

13. Biharilal v. Makhdum Bakhsh, ILR 35 All 194; Kheturam v. Harphool, AIR 1927 Lah 800; Bakshi Ram v. Liladhar, ILR 35 All 353; Ramchand v. Chunnun Mal, AIR 1925 Lah 371 (FB).
14. Bhim Singh v. Kamnsingh, AIR 1980 SC 727.
15. Kalu v. Bhawanji, AIR 1954 Hyd 211; Sohanlal Pachisia and Co v. Bilasray Khemani, (In the case of partnership firm) AIR 1954 Cal 179.
16. Gopal Kishan v. Bajrang Lal, 1996 AIHC 4064, at p. 4066 (Raj).
17. Neminath Appayya Hammannavar v. Jamboorao Satappa Kozheri, AIR 1966 Mys 154.
18. Biswanath v. Dhapu, AIR 1960 Cal 494.
19. Salil Kumar Roy v. Badu Devi Bhansali, AIR 1999 Cal 270 (para 22). The Court referred to Sitaram Bhau Patil v. Ram Chandra Nago Patil, AIR 1977 SC 1712.
20. Ishan Chunder Sirkar v. Beni Madhub Sirkar, (1896) 24 Cal (62) FB; Mahomed Mozuffer Hossein v. Kishori Mohun Roy, (1895) 22 Cal 909 : 22 IA 129.
21. Dinendronath Sannyal v. Ramcoomar Ghose, (1880) 8 IA 65, 75 7 Cal 107.
22. Basant Singh v. Janki Singh, AIR 1967 SC 341. Contra : Rashmi Nagrath v. M/s. Sarva Priya Co-operative House Building Society Ltd., 1998 AIHC 4769 (para 38) (Del).
23. Calcutta National Bank v. Rangaroon Tea Co., AIR 1967 Cal 294.

circumstances in which it was made. Where those circumstances had not been properly investigated, the court was not able to determine the value of the alleged admission.[24]

Admission by a party in a previous suit is admissible in a subsequent proceeding.[25] Where a person made a statement as a defendant in a written statement in a former suit, it was held admissible in a subsequent suit filed by him as a plaintiff, though the weight to be given is a different matter and such admission is capable of rebuttal.[26] Where there was a compromise between A and B and a decree was passed and A had also admitted the compromise in an earlier application, his subsequent statement that he did not sign the compromise, has to be rejected in view of his earlier admission.[27] Where a party accepts his statement made in his earlier proceeding, it amounts to admission and before using the same in the later proceeding opportunity to explain the same by calling him as witness need not be given.[28] Where a land owner in a prior requisition proceedings made an admission that the land was not useful for building purposes no decision was taken in those proceedings, on that admission. In a subsequent proceeding under the Land Acquisition Act for acquiring the land to establish a township there, it was held that the previous admission was not binding in the subsequent proceeding and it did not preclude the land owner from contending that the compensation should be fixed on the basis that the land was suitable for building purposes when the land acquired had potential value as a building site.[29] Admission in prior proceedings must be clear, and must not admit of any doubt or ambiguity, before it is admitted against the maker in a subsequent proceedings.[30]

Failure to deny allegation in the plaint may be taken as an admission of the claim therein for the purpose of that suit; but not for the purpose of subsequent litigation.[31]

Where a husband was charged with the murder of his wife who was missing for some days; and when a photograph was published in a newspaper, of an unidentified dead body recovered by the police the husband made a statement indicating a disturbed mind, it was held that such statement was admissible under this section and also under Section 8, para-2.[32]

The person against whom an admission is proved is at liberty to show that it was mistaken or untrue. When an admission is duly proved and the person against whom it is proved does not satisfy the court that it was mistaken or untrue, the court may decide the case in accordance with it. An erroneous admission does not bind the person making such admission. Admission must be considered as a whole.[33]

Though admission is not conclusive it can be used against the maker unless explained by the maker.[34]

4. ADMISSION NOT BINDING ON THIRD PARTY

Admissions of a party can be used as evidence against the party making it and they cannot be used against the third person.[35]

---

24. Prem Ex-serviceman Co-operative Society v. Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1121.
25. Mohammed Seraj v. Adibar Rahaman Sheikh, AIR 1968 Cal 550.
26. Padma Charan Pavtari v. Commissioner, Hindu Religions Endowments, ILR 1961 Cut 183; following Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100; Lal Singh Didarsingh v. Guru Granth Sahib, AIR 1951 Pepsu 101; Ramkrishna Ajabrao v. Vithal Laxman Vanmal, 1980 Mah LJ 477; see Contra Lala Laxminaryan v. Rukhmabai, ILR 1950 Nag 834; Satyadeo Prasad v. Chanderjoti Debi, AIR 1966 Pat 110; Janki v. Koshalyanandan, AIR 1961 Pat 293; Chandra Choor Deo v. Bibhuti Bhushan Deva, AIR 1945 Pat 211; Sarvabhtatla Thatapalle Chendrikamba v. Kamala Indrikanti Vishwanathamayya, AIR 1939 Mad 446; Jairam Maniaton v. Lokenath Mahton, AIR 1930 Pat 405.
27. 1971 All LJ 1027.
28. Alpana v. Mohanlal, 1993 Cr LJ 1008 (paras 6 and 7) (HP).
29. M G Dunne v. Callector, ILR 1961 MP 845.
30. Ram Prasad v. Smt. Kalyani, AIR 1973 Raj 208; Koteswara Rao v. Subbarao, AIR 1971 SC 1542; Nagubai Ammal v. B Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593.
31. Narayana Pillai v. Kesaua Pillai, 1962 Ker LJ 389.
32. Arun v. State, AIR 1962 Cal 504.
33. Mahendra v. Sushila, AIR 1965 SC 364; Abida Khatoon v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 All 260.
34. AIR 1974 Mys 280.
35. Basant Singh v. Janaki Singh, AIR 1967 SC 341; Idayanath Sahu v. Rathnakar Bej, AIR 1967 Ori 130 (Statement by one member of the family is not binding on the other member.); Shanti Sarup v. Radhaswami Satsang Sabha, Dayalbagh, Agra, AIR 1969 All 248.

Where a mother gave information about her giving birth to a child and mentioned her husband's name, and that was recorded in the birth register and when she produced the extract of the birth register before the court in a case dealing with the legitimacy of the child, it was held by the Madras High Court that such admission is not binding on the presumed father as there cannot be any presumption of law as to paternity.[36]

5. ADMISSION AND FORMER STATEMENT OF A WITNESS

An admission is distinct from the former statement of a witness which is cited to contradict him. An admission can be proved without confronting the maker with his earlier statements.[37] Admissions, when proved, are substantive evidence, even though the parties are not confronted with the statements; but their weight which has to be given is a matter for the court to decide.[38] Where a witness's statement contains certain admissions in a previous matter, it was held that such admissions would fall within the section and it requires no proof; when such statements are admitted by the witness, it is substantive evidence and it is not obligatory to draw the attention to those admissions in the cross-examination.[39]

In Malik Desraj v. Piara Lal,[40] three important principles in this regard were enuniciated: (1) A previous admission of a party is relevant under this section and it can be used if the maker does not choose to appear in the witness box.

(2) If the maker appears as a witness but makes no statements inconsistent with the previous admission, or if he does not deny the previous admission, it can be used. In such a case Section 145 of the Act would not apply.

(3) When the maker comes into the witness box and makes a statement inconsistent with the previous admission it cannot be used unless his attention is drawn to that admission in accordance with Section 145 of this Act.[41]

When a document contained an admission by the opponent and it was admitted by the opponent's counsel, it was held that it can be admitted without drawing the opponent's attention to it in the cross-examination.[42] Where a document contained an admission by a witness and there was contradiction by the party with reference to a previous admission and explanation for such contradiction was offered, it was held that the document can be used to contradict him without drawing his attention to that admission.[43] A party producing documents can be permitted under this section to use them as substantive evidence in the case without drawing the attention of the opponent in cross-examination to those admissions; that though the admission should ordinarily be put to the party in the witness box on principle of fairness, the admission of the parties, which is otherwise relevant under this section, does not become irrelevant by reason of his attention not being drawn in the course of cross- examination. The rule of fairness embodied in Section 145 of the Act that if a witness is under cross-examination on oath he should be given an opportunity, if the documents are to be used against him, to tender his explanation and to clear up the particular point of ambiguity or dispute, should also be applied to parties who enter the witness box, but the omission to follow this procedure in the case of a party who is examined as a witness does not make his admission, which is otherwise relevant under this section, inadmissible.[44]

---

36. B. Mahadeva Rao v. Yesoda Bai, AIR 1962 Mad 141. See also Satya Gupta v. Om Prakash, 2001 AIHC 1276 (paras 44 and 47) (All).

37. Biswanath Pd. v. Dwarka Pd., AIR 1974 SC 117.

38. Bharat Singh v. Bhagirathi, AIR 1966 SC 405; Punjab University v. Premchand Handa, AIR 1971 P&H 177; Veerabasava Radhya v. Devotees, AIR 1973 Mys 280; Arjun v. Monda, AIR 1971 Pat 215; Murlidhar Bapuji Valve v. Yallappa Lalu Chaugule, AIR 1994 Bom 358.

39. Venkatlal v. Kanhiyalal, AIR 1963 MP 155.

40. AIR 1946 Lah 65 (FB).

41. Janaki v. Koshalyanandan, AIR 1961 Pat 293; Ramkishun v. Kausal, AIR 1958 Pat 294; Ramachandra v. Rajendranarayan, AIR 1957 Ori 104; Parasram v. Champalal, 1957 MB 118; Harihar v. Nabhakishore, AIR 1963 Ori 45; Pannalal v. Union of India, AIR 1956 Vindh Pra 26.

42. Ajoydhya v. Bhavani, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB).

43. Venkatalal v. Kanhiyalal, AIR 1963 MP 155.

44. Seethamma v. Hanumantha, (1959) 2 Andh WR 7 : 1960 Andh LT 118; Channo v. Jang, AIR 1957 Pat 203; following Dargahan Bibi v. Jyoti Prasad Singh Deo, AIR 1934 Pat 35; Ramkeshwar Das v. Baldeo Singh, AIR 1936 Pat 588.

The Supreme Court following its previous decision in Bharath v. Bhagirati,[45] observed: "There is a cardinal distinction between a party who is the author of a prior statement and a witness who is examined and is sought to be discredited by use of his prior statement. In the former case an admission by a party is substantive evidence if it fulfils the requirements of Section 21; in the latter case a prior statement is used to discredit the credibility of the witness and does not become substantive evidence. In the former there is no necessary requirement of the statement containing the admission having to be put to the party because it is evidence proprio vigore; in the latter case the court cannot be invited to disbelieve a witness on the strength of a prior contradictory statement unless it has been put to him, as required by Section 145.[46]

Where a person made an admission in an application in a police case, in which his company was in danger of being prosecuted, it was held that such admission cannot be used against him without affording an opportunity to explain it or, if so advised, to withdraw the admission.[47]

6. ADMISSION BY ACCUSED

There is nothing in Sections 18 to 21 to suggest that they apply to civil cases only; they apply also to admissions in criminal cases.[48] The accused went to a police station and lodged a first information of murder, narrating the events preceding the commission of the offence and stating further how the offence was committed. It was held that the narrative of the antecedent events was admissible as admissions not amounting to confessions.[49] Illustration (a) exemplifies this rule.

The scheme of Sections 21 to 27 shows that this group of sections relates to admissions, of which a confession made by an accused is a species, and to certain circumstances which may prohibit the proof of such confessions or admissions. A confession is a kind of admission and there is no clear-cut line of demarcation between the two. Again, admission may be relevant in civil as well as in criminal cases, and admissions that might be proved in civil cases are not inadmissible in criminal cases as such.[50]

Where the accused whilst in police custody made a statement before the doctor that the injury on his person was caused by the murdered person, as the statement does not amount to a confession, it is not barred and can be relied upon as an admission under S. 21 of the fact that he was in the deceased's room.[51]

This section has to be read subject to the special provisions dealing with confessions and statements of the accused persons in Sections 24, 25 and 26 in this Act, and also Sections 164 and 364 of the Cr. P.C. (Old), Section 281, Cr.P.C. (New). Confessions or statements of the accused persons which are not recorded in accordance with the provisions of Sections 164 and 364, Cr.P.C. may be proved as admissions of the accused.[52]

While dealing with this aspect one has to remember the different circumstances under which a person, who may be an accused or later becomes an accused, makes a statement. Firstly, a person may make a statement before the starting of any proceedings or investigation, or a person, may, immediately after the occurrence, state to another person or may go directly to a police station and make a statement. Secondly, a person may go directly to a magistrate and make a statement. The magistrate may record a statement or may not record a statement. If he records the statement, he may or may not follow the strict procedure as required under Section 164, Cr.P.C. Thirdly, a person may make a statement to the police after the first information report was registered, and the investigation started. Fourthly, during the investigation the person may give a statement to a magistrate who records it as per the provisions of Section 164 or 364, Cr.P.C. Fifthly, he may give a statement during his examination under Section 342, Cr.P.C. (Old) or 313, Cr.P.C. (New).

---

45. AIR 1966 SC 405.
46. Biswanath Prasad v. Dwarka Prasad, AIR 1974 SC 117; Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100; Madan Mohan v. Brundaban Pal, (1972) 2 Cut WR 1842 : 38 Cut LT 1323.
47. The Bombay Agarwal Co. v. Ramchand Diwanchand, AIR 1953 Nag 154.
48. Md. Baksh v. Crown, (1914) Ker 257.
49. Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, (1921) 49 Cal 167 : AIR 1922 Cal 342; Pakala Narayana Swamy v. King- Emperor, ILR (1937) 17 Pat 15 (PC).
50. Ramachandran, In re : (1960) Mad 191 (DB).
51. K. Padayachi v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 SC 66. Also see N. Rajan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 322 (para 16) (Ker).
52. Queen-Empress v. Bhairab Chunder, (1898) 2 Cal WN 702.

In re.: Natesan,[53] it was held that where the Magistrate records a statement of the accused without complying with the formalities u/s. 164, Cr.P.C. during the course of the investigation, it cannot be held that such admissions are admissible u/s. 21, unless they fall within the mischief of Section 24, 25 of this Act.[54]

7. STATEMENT MADE TO A MAGISTRATE BEFORE STARTING THE PROCEEDINGS OR INVESTIGATION

There is a distinction between admissions and confessions made to a magistrate not enquiring or investigating the case; nor with any facts connected with the case and before the investigation or enquiry under Section 164, Cr.P.C. on the one hand, and statements recorded by him during the course of investigation under Section 164, Cr. P.C. on the other hand. In the first two cases, the admissions and confessions are provable under this section, whereas in the latter case, as the recording by the magistrate was during the investigation or the enquiry of the case, it is an official act and is admissible provided the formalities under Section 164, Cr.P.C. are complied with. The statement recorded, not in accordance with Section 164, Cr.P.C. cannot be treated as a judicial confession.[55]

8. ADMISSIONS AND CONFESSIONS DURING THE COURSE OF INVESTIGATION

If admissions and confessions are recorded by a magistrate under Section 164, Cr.P.C., during the course of the investigation of the case, the Privy Council, in Nazir Ahmad v. King Emperor,[56] held that if the provisions of 164, Cr.P.C. had been followed, they would be admissible; if the provisions are not followed, such confessions are not admissible. That view was followed in a Madras case. In re.: Thothan,[57] but the latter part of the view of the Privy Council viz., that, if the provisions of Section 164, Cr.P.C. had not been followed, they would not be admissible, would have to be read alongwith the observations of the Supreme Court in Slaney v. State of M.P.[58] It observed therein: "The true test in all such cases is whether the non-compliance was so vital as to cut at the root of the jurisdiction, or so abhorrent to natural justice—that a serious prejudice has been occasioned. Where it is not the case, even a departure from the strict terms of Section 164, Cr.P.C. may not necessarily render a judicially recorded confession inadmissible." In this connection, it is to be noted that Sections 24 to 26 of this Act would show that certain conditions are to be complied with before confession is admissible. They do not make any difference as to admissions which would not amount to confessions. That is the reason why the statements made to a Police Officer before the investigation starts are admissible. If once the investigation is started, the statements may be admitted in evidence only as admissions under this provision, provided such statements would amount to confessions and are hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C.[59]

Letters written by the accused to third parties concerning the offence in question were held to be admissible against the accused.[60]

Where the accused and his lawyer signed statements before the customs authorities, and when the accused admitted the signatures on the statement, it was held that the statement was proved and was admissible and that the lawyer need not be examined.[61] A person gave a statement to a police after the occurrence, and it was registered as a first information report, and subsequently he became an accused in that case and was tried on the charge of murder. It was held by the Supreme Court that the statement given by the accused was not a confessional first information report, but was an admission by him of

---

53. AIR 1960 Mad 443.
54. See contra Laldin v. The State, 1952 CrLJ 133: AIR 1952 HP 3; State v. Lobsang Sharap, 1973 CrLJ 85 (HP)
55. Heera Lal v. State of U.P., 2001 Cr LJ 2849 (para 28) (All).
56. AIR 1936 PC 253.
57. AIR 1956 Mad 425.
58. AIR 1956 SC 116.
59. Akal Sahu v. King Emperor, AIR 1948 Pat 62; Pakala Narayanaswamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47, In re : R Titus, AIR 1941 Mad 720; Muhamad Baksh v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Sindh 129, Queen- Empress v. Nilmadhieb Mitra, (1888) 15 Cal 595 (FB).
60. Sardul Singh v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 747, State v. Darshan Singh, ILR 1961 MP 403 (Statement by each individual accused when questioned by a Superior Official immediately after the event.)
61. Vallabhadas v. Assistant Collector, AIR 1965 SC 481.

certain facts which had a bearing on the question to be determined by the court, and was admissible to prove against him, his admission being relevant under Section 21.[62]

The first information report, when given immediately after the occurrence by the accused, is neither a confession nor a statement made to a police officer during the course of investigation; and its admissibility is not barred either by Section 25 of the Evidence Act or by Section 162, Cr.P.C.[63]

Where a report of an accident given by the driver of a motor vehicle, as required under the Motor Vehicles Act, contained a statement that the accused was driving the motor vehicle at the time of the accident, it was held that the report was not a first information report within the meaning of Section 154, Cr.P.C.—and that the admission would be relevant under this section, as the question as to who was driving the vehicle at the time of the accident was a relevant fact.[64] A person, after killing the deceased, went to a magistrate and stated that he killed the deceased, the statement was recorded and it was signed by the accused. It was held that the statement was admissible, as it was given before the arrest of the accused and the investigation was started, and that where the statement was exculpatory but contained various features which were in the nature of admissions, the statement can be relied upon against the accused.[65] Where the accused gave a statement before the police giving his version of the occurrence and stated that he had acted in the right of private defence, it was held that such a statement is an exculpatory statement within the rule propounded in Pakala Narayanaswamy's case,[66] and is not a confession in any sense of the term, and it is admissible under this section as a piece of admission and can be used against the matter.[67] Where the accused prepared a cross-complaint to the police, and an uncertified copy was produced through a defence witness, and when the accused himself did not choose to examine himself in the court, it was held that the cross-complaint given by the accused can be used as an admission against him but not in his favour.[68] An admission regarding the motive in committing the offence was held admissible under this section.[69] Where an admission was contained in a letter written by A to B, that A had association with a co-accused K and had business dealing with him, it was held that such admission is binding on the maker A though it is not binding against K.[70] When a person detained a married woman with a criminal intent and admitted in his statement under Section 313, Cr. P.C. that she was a married woman, it was held that his admission can be received under this section. Accordingly the conviction was upheld.[71]

Where the accused showed the place wherefrom certain articles were recovered and in the recovery memorandum, the accused admitted his guilt, it was held that such an admission is not admissible as it comes under the exception in Section 24 of this Act.[72] Where the accused admitted to the commission of murder in the first information report; it was treated as a confession made to a Police Officer, it was held that no part of it could be used as an admission under this section.[73]

The procedure laid down in Section 145 does not apply to admissions which come within the purview of Section 17 and Section 21.[74]

---

62. Faddi v. State of M P, AIR 1964 SC 1850; Reading v. Fletcher, 1917 PC 25 : (1917) 1 Ch 339; State v. Shiv, AIR 1962 Raj 3; The State v. Balchand, AIR 1960 Raj 101: 1959 All LJ 340; Maina v. Niranjan, AIR 1976 Raj 71; The State of Assam v. Upendra Nath Rajkhowa, 1975 CrLJ 354 (Gau). Also see B.A. Ramaiah v. State of A.P., AIR 1997 SC 496.
63. Faddi v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 1850; Sankaran Nair Challeppen Nair v. The State of Kerala, (1965) 2 CrLJ 647 : AIR 1965 Ker 248 (Accused gave incidence of previous day and not relating to occurrence); Ram Sajiwan v. The State of U.P., AIR 1964 All 447; Jawan Singh v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 111.
64. Jawan Singh Ramsing v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1963 Guj 111; Maina v. Niranjan, AIR 1976 Raj 71 (held; though it is not substantive evidence it lends support to other evidence that he was the owner of the vehicle).
65. In re : Yendra Narasimha Murthy, AIR 1966 APO 131 : 1966 CrLJ 509.
66. 1939 PC 47.
67. Mathai v. State of Kerala, 1959 Ker LR 839; Reading v. Fletcher, AIR 1917 PC 25; State v. Kartar Singh, AIR 1958 All 90.
68. Lalpratapsing Shivsahay Sing v. State, (1963) 1 CrLJ 355 (Guj); Mahendra Manilal Nanavati v. Sushila Mahendra Nanavati, AIR 1965 SC 364.
69. Baleshwar Rai alias Nepali Master etc. v. The State of Bihar, (1963) 2 SCJ 128 : (1964) 1 CrLJ 564 (SC).
70. Khali Sahu v. State, (1975) 41 Cut LT 751.
71. Sonu Pujari v. Arjun Bissoyi, (1980) 49 Cut LT 207 (Ori).
72. Mahfuz Ali v. State, 1953 CrLJ 340 : 1953 All 110.
73. Banarsi Dass v. State of Punjab, 1981 CrLJ 1235 (P&H); Badri v. State of U.P., 1973 CrLJ 1478 (All).
74. Arjun v. Monda, AIR 1971 Pat 215.

Where an accused made some admission in a bail application, it was held that it cannot be taken into consideration as the admission was not put to the accused when he was examined under Section 342, Cr.P.C.[75]

9. AS AGAINST THE PERSON WHO MAKES THEM

The rule as regards statements made by a person is that they may be proved only when they are against him; otherwise a party may manufacture any amount of evidence in his own favour.[76]

Where the statements are against the interest of the person making them, there is a natural presumption of truth, and they may be proved. An admission is not conclusive as to the truth of the matters stated therein. It is only a piece of evidence, the weight to be attached to which must depend on the circumstances under which it is made. It can be shown to be erroneous or untrue, so long as the person to whom it was made has not acted upon it to his detriment, when it might become conclusive by way of estoppel.[77]

An admission by a plaintiff of her marriage with a person, made before there was any dispute about such marriage, may be proved by or on behalf of her under cl. (1) of this section read with Section 32.[78]

A receipt is nothing but an admission by the party making it that he has received the amount specified in the document. It is an admission against his own interest and he is, of course, bound by it, and so are those who claim through or under him.[79]

Where the accused lodged the F.I.R., it was held that it cannot be used to contradict the evidence of prosecution witnesses or to corroborate the defence evidence. It can only be used against the maker (accused) himself.[80]

10. VALUE OF ADMISSION

The Supreme Court, in Nagubai Ammal v. Shamarao,[81] held that what a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so, but before this rule can be invoked, it must be shown that there is clear and unambiguous statement by the opponent, that such admissions will be conclusive unless explained. It was held that a statement by a party that certain proceedings were fraudulent in character would not be sufficient, without more, to sustain a finding that the proceedings, where collusive as there is a clear distinction between a proceeding that is fraudulent and a proceeding that is collusive. It is well-settled that the effect of an alleged admission depends upon the circumstances in which it was made and that it can be evidence against the maker unless explained under what circumstances he made such admission.[82] Where there is no clear and unequivocal admission it affords no evidence in the case.[83]

Self-serving statements of a party in previous proceedings cannot be used as substantive evidence in subsequent proceedings against that maker.[84]

---

75. Satyavir v. State, AIR 1958 All 746 : 1958 CrLJ 1266.

76. Ramani Pershad Narain Singh v. Mahanth Adaiya Gossain, ILR (1903) 31 Cal 380; Mahendra v. Sushila, AIR 1965 SC 364.

77. Nagubai v. B. Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593.

78. Musammat Bashiram v. Mohammad Hussain, ILR (1941) 16 Luck 615.

79. Akal Sahu v. King-Emperor, ILR (1947) 26 Pat 49 : AIR 1948 Pat 62.

80. 1982 Law Summary 68 (AP).

81. AIR 1956 SC 593 following; Chandra Kunwar v. Chaudhary Narpat Singh, ILR (1906) 29 All 184 (PC) : 34 IA 47; See also Revappa v. Madhava Rao, AIR 1960 Mys 97; Jhunkari Bahu alias Katrawali v. Phoolchand alias Manickchand Chhotelal Jain, AIR 1958 MP 261; Ulfat v. Zubaida, AIR 1955 All 361 AIR 1974 SC 280; Krishnawati v. Hansraj, (1974) 2 SCR 524 (As substantive evidence in subsequent proceedings against the maker).

82. M/s. Prem Ex-Servicemen Co-operative Tenant Farming Society Ltd. v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1121.

83. Guru Satyara Julu v. T.C. Panigrahi, ILR 1964 Cut 274.

84. Krisnawati v. Hansraj, AIR 1974 SC 280.

It was held by the Madras High Court that the usual rule of law is that the admissions of ryots that they have no occupancy rights in ryoti lands will have little value, in the face of a statute conferring occupancy rights, if they are proved, as a matter of fact, to be ryoti lands.[85]

Where an admission is capable of two interpretations, an interpretation unfavourable to the person making it, should not be put on his admission.[86]

In a prior sale deed executed in favour of a plaintiff and the widow of one G, it was stated that the plaintiff was the adopted son of G. In a subsequent will executed by the widow, it was stated that she had no son. Thus there were two statements (different) in the two documents, to which the widow was a party. It was held that the mention of the plaintiff as the adopted son in the earlier document is of little value unless the change in the second document can be explained. As the widow gave the explanation for the recital in the first document that the plaintiff was intended to be adopted and so his name was mentioned as an adopted son, and as the evidence in respect of the adoption was thoroughly unreliable, the explanation given by the widow was accepted as plausible.[87]

11. EXCEPTIONS

Maker of admission dead [EXCEPTION 1]

Admissions cannot be proved by or on behalf of the person who makes them, or by representative in interest, except when:

(1) it is of such a nature that, if the person making it were dead, it would be relevant as between third persons under Section 32;

(2) it consists of a statement of the existence of any state of mind or body made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed, and is accompanied by conduct rendering its falsehood improbable;

(3) it is relevant otherwise than as an admission.

Admissions cannot be proved by, or on behalf of, the person who makes them, because a person will always naturally make statements that are favourable to him. Thus the opinion of a person as to the valuation of his property which is under acquisition is not relevant.[88]

Under this clause, an admission of a person may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it when such admission is of such a nature that if the person making it were dead it would be relevant as between third parties under Section 32. For example, a wife will have special means of knowledge about her marriage and if she says that she is the wife of one G, it is admissible under this clause if the statement was made before the dispute in respect of her marriage arose.[89] Similarly, where in a previous deposition long before the present dispute arose, a pedigree of the family, showing two individuals are brothers, was relied upon, it was held that such pedigree was admissible.[90]

Where a husband had written some letters to his wife making reference to a settlement and asking her to do certain acts to forward the settlement, it was held such statements in the letters are admissible under Section 32(2) of the Act read with this section.[91]

Illustrations (b) and (c) are examples of this first exception to clause 1. It may also be noted here that the illustrations given under Section 32 also deal with the same principle. The principle underlying this exception is necessitated by the unavailability of the person making the admission.[92]

---

85. Marian v. Rourther, (1959) 1 Mad LJ 22 : 1959 Mad WN 251.
86. Ramaji Batanji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
87. Bajji v. Bhairon, AIR 1957 Raj 261.
88. Mariam v. State, AIR 1980 Ker 176.
89. Bashiram v. Md. Husain, AIR 1941 Oudh 284.
90. Jadhunath Sarkar v. Mahendranath, 12 Cal WN 266.
91. Ramamurthi v. Subbarao, AIR 1937 Mad 19.
92. See commentary under Section 32 of this Act.

Admission made in a particular mental or physical state [EXCEPTION 2]

The state of a man's mind or body is relevant under S. 14; and statements narrating such facts, indicating the state of mind or body, may be proved on behalf of a person narrating them. But such statements should have been made at or about the time when such state of mind or body existed; see illustrations (d) and (e). Section 14 merely declares that such statements are relevant. This clause shows that such facts or statements may be proved on behalf of the person making them, notwithstanding the general rule that persons cannot make evidence for themselves by what they choose to say.

In Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. Hillmon,[93] GRAY J., observed: "Letters from him (a person) to his family and to his betrothed were the natural, if not the only attainable evidence of his intention.....A man's state of mind or feeling can only be manifested to others by countenance, attitude, or gesture, or by sounds or words, spoken or written..... The existence of a particular intention in a certain person at a certain time, being a material fact to be proved, evidence that he expressed that intention, at that time, is as direct evidence of the fact as his own testimony that he then had that intention would be. After his death, there can hardly be any other way of proving it and while he is still alive, his own memory of his state of mind at a former time is no more likely to be clear and true than a bystander's recollection of what he then said, and is less trustworthy than letters written by him at the very time and under circumstances precluding a suspicion of misrepresentation."

A declaration as to the religion of a person in his will is admissible under this exception and also under Section 14.[94]

Admission relevant otherwise than admission [EXCEPTION 3]

This clause states that an admission may be proved by or on behalf of the person making it, if it is relevant otherwise than as an admission. In this connection Section 6 of this Act may be referred to, wherein it is stated, that facts which, though not in issue, are so connected with a fact in issue as to form part of the same transaction, are relevant whether they occur at the same time and place or at different times and places; to put it in other words, as part of res gestae, or as a statement accompanying or explaining a particular conduct; but it is impossible to held that a statement which is inadmissible as an admission under the general rule can be made admissible as such under this cl. (3).[95]

Where a house was built over half a century back, it was held that old documents showing by whom it was built may be admissible under Section 11(2) and Section 13(b) of the Act.[96]

NORTON observes: "A fact which is relevant under Section 8, clause (1) and Section 11, clause (1) as inconsistent with a relevant fact, e.g., the establishment of a prisoner's innocence by circumstances incompatible with the facts on which his guilt has been sought to be established, or under Section 14, as evidence of intention, knowledge, or good faith, shall not be rejected simply because it assumes the form of an admission. Illustrations (a) and (e) sufficiently exemplify this clause."

Where a defendant in his previous deposition in proceedings under Section 145, Cr. P.C. admitted the plaintiff's right as a shebait to certain lands of the deity, it was held that such admission can be used in a subsequent civil suit.[97] A statement by a deceased donor in his will that the gift deed executed by him was fictitious was held to be an admission under this exception.[98]

Where defendants No. 2 and 4 sold a property to defendant No. 1, which they obtained under a partition, and subsequently colluded with the plaintiff and denied the partition as well as the sale, the statements made by them in a petition and a written statement filed by them in certain previous suits, which went to show that there had been a partition and that they had changed their attitude, were held to be admissible as against them under clause (3) of this section and S. 11(2).[99] Where the question was whether there was subletting, and the respondent relied principally upon some previous self-serving

---

93. 145 US 285 : 36 Law Ed P 706.
94. Leong Hohe v. Leon Ah. Foon, ILR 7 R 120 : AIR 1930 R 42.
95. Paschand Nixon, AIR 1930 Oudh 441.
96. Raghunath v. Bindeswari, AIR 1942 All 526.
97. Janaki Raman Prasad Mishra v. Koshalyanandan Prasad Mishra, AIR 1961 Pat 293.
98. Ram Bharose v. Diwan, 1938 Oudh 26.
99. Gyannessa v. Mobarakannessa, AIR (1897) 25 Cal 210.

statements made in another legal proceeding, it was held that they could not be used as substantive evidence in the present case.[1]

If an admission becomes admissible in favour of a person who made it under some other section of this Act, it would not be rendered inadmissible by the rule in this section. Where there are entries in account books regularly maintained and kept, they are admissible under Section 34, even if those entries amount to admission in one's own favour.[2]

When oral admissions as to contents of documents are relevant

S. 22. Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under the rules hereinafter contained, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

The contents of a document which is capable of being produced must be proved by the instrument itself and not by parol evidence. Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are excluded under this section.

This section, however, contemplates giving evidence of oral admissions as to the contents of a document on two grounds. A party who seeks to rely on such admission must show that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such a document according to the provisions contained in this Act, or that the genuineness of the document itself is in question.

In England, the rule is contrary to the principle underlining this section. In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE[3] it is observed: "When the admission concerns the contents of a document which cannot be proved even by secondary evidence, it will still be admissible notwithstanding the absence either of a notice to produce or of an explanation for the whereabouts of the original.[4] An admission may take the form of an acknowledgment of the truth of a statement made in the party's presence.[5] Equally, an admission may be implied where it is the only inference to be drawn from words used in particular circumstances.[6] If the words are ambiguous or if there is a material uncertainty as to what they were, such an inference cannot be drawn."[7]

In a case before the Privy Council the plaintiff sued for a sum of money said to be due on a settlement of account. He produced evidence to prove the admission of the debt instead of producing and proving the account between him and the defendant. The Privy Council held "They consider that it is a very dangerous thing to rest a judgment upon verbal admissions of a sum due, without very clear evidence, especially when there are other means of proving the case, if a true one,"[8] where it was observed that this present section does away with the rule in Slattery v. Pooley,[9] and adopts the Irish view expressed in Lawless v. Quelae.[10]

2. WRITTEN ADMISSIONS

This section states that oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant. They are, however, admissible when the party is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document under Sections 65 and 66. Such admissions are also admissible when the genuineness of the

---

1. Gyannessa v. Mobarakannessa, AIR (1897) 25 Cal 210.
2. Rajbali Lal v. Partappur Co. Ltd., AIR 1940 Pat 622.
3. 15th Edn. (2000), p. 716, para 28-14.
4. Slatterie v. Pooley, (1840) 6 M&W 664; Earle v. Picken, (1833) 5 C&P 542.
5. R. v. Christie, (1914) AC 545 and generally Chap 26.
6. R. v. Brown, (1964) Crim LR 397 (CCA).
7. R. v. Norton, (1910) 2 KB 496. Vide also HALSBURY 4th Edition, Vol. 17 (para 62).
8. Sheopershad v. Juggernath, 10 IA 79; See also Raghubar Dayal Sahu v. Bhikya Lal Misra, 12 Cal 69.
9. (1840) 6 M&W 669.
10. (1845) 8 ILR 382.

document produced is in question. Written admissions in contradistinction with oral admissions are relevant. A written admission is admissible under Section 65, clause (b) of this Act as secondary evidence of the contents of a document.[11]

Section 65 states in which cases secondary evidence relating to documents may be given. Under clause (a), if a document is in the possession or power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, after giving notice as required under Section 66, if the other party does not produce it, then secondary evidence can be given. Under clause (b), when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest, secondary evidence may be given. The other clauses state when secondary evidence can be given, when the original is lost or destroyed or cannot be brought to court, or when the original is a public document, etc.

Under Section 91 of this Act when the terms of a contract or of any other disposition of property have been reduced to the form of a document, or in cases in which it is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no oral evidence can be given except the document itself, or secondary evidence of its contents wherever it is admissible under the provisions of the Act.

Section 58 of this Act says that no fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing. Even before the hearing they can agree in writing to admit. By a rule of pleading, they may also be deemed to have admitted. Of course, the court may in its discretion require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

3. WHERE THE GENUINENESS OF A DOCUMENT IS IN QUESTION

So far as the contents of a document are concerned, secondary evidence can be given as pointed out earlier, but when the question is whether the document is genuine or not, it may be proved in different ways, as contemplated by different sections of this Act. It may be proved under this section and Section 70 which says that the admission of a party to an attested document of its execution by himself shall be sufficient proof of its execution as against him, though it be a document required by law to be attested. An attesting witness may be produced to prove the document which is required by law to be attested under Section 68. A document may be proved by comparison of handwritings according to Section 73, or by getting opinions of experts as provided under Section 45.

In a suit regarding a promissory note, when it was found that the pronote was inadmissible in evidence for want of stamp, it was held that plaintiff cannot rely merely on the admission of the contents of the document in the written statement of the defendant.[12]

Where a plaintiff admitted in a deposition about the contents of the document and not in the pleadings, it was held that it was only secondary evidence and it did not take the place of the document itself.[13]

When oral admission as to contents of electronic records are relevant.

[14][S. 22A. Oral admissions as to the contents of electronic records are not relevant, unless the genuineness of the electronic record produced is in question.]

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000 ORAL ADMISSIONS AS TO CONTENTS OF ELECTRONIC RECORDS

The Information Technology Act, 2000 has added a new Section 22A providing that oral admissions as to the contents of electronic records are relevant unless the genuineness of the electronic record produced is in question.

---

11. Jaigopal v. Divisional Forest Officer, AIR 1953 Pat 310; Hira Lal v. Ram Prasad, AIR 1949 All 677.
12. Damodhar Jagganath v. Atmaram Babaji, ILR (1888) 12 Bom 443.
13. Shakil Ibrahim v. Purvata, 8 Bom HCR 163.
14. Inserted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

"Provision is made for the required evidence of reliability to be provided by a certificate purporting to be signed by a person occupying a responsible position in relation to the operation of the computer.[15] The Court has power to require oral evidence of anything of which evidence could be given by such a certificate.[16] However, evidence by certificate is merely one option. The conditions of admissibility may be proved by oral evidence from a person familiar with the operation of the computer who can give evidence of its reliability and such a person need not be a computer expert or someone qualified to sign a certificate.[17] The Court is not entitled to rely on the maxim omnia praesumuntur rite esse acta.[18] The conditions of admissibility must be proved beyond reasonable doubt if the document is tendered by the prosecution,[19] but on the balance of probabilities if tendered by the defence.[20] If the conditions of admissibility are in dispute, a trial within a trial may be required."[21]

Admissions in civil cases, when relevant.

S. 23. In civil cases no admission is relevant, if it is made either upon an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given, or under circumstances from which the Court can infer that the parties agreed together that evidence of it should not be given.

Explanation.*—Nothing in this section shall be taken to exempt any barrister, pleader, attorney or vakil from giving evidence of any matter of which he may be compelled to give evidence under Section 126.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 281
2. Scope ... 282
3. Waiver of privilege ... 284
4. Application between husband and wife ... 284
5. From which circumstances the Court can infer that the parties agreed together that Evidence of it should not be given ... 284
6. Explanation—Legal Counsel not prevented from giving evidence ... 285

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section excludes the admission of parties in civil cases under two circumstances:—firstly, if the admission is made upon an express condition that evidence of it is not to be given; secondly, under circumstances from which the court infers that the parties agreed that evidence of the admission should not be given. However, according to the explanation, the admission of any barrister or pleader or attorney or vakil who may be compelled to give evidence under Section 126 of this Act, is not excluded under this section.

This section is based, firstly, on public policy and, secondly, as a matter of privilege or confidentiality. It is based on the maxim "Interest rei publical at sit finis liticem" (it is in the interest of the State that there should be an end to litigation).

This section protects communications made 'without prejudice'. Confidential overtures of pacification and any other offers or propositions between litigating parties, expressly or impliedly made without prejudice, are excluded on grounds of public policy. For, if parties were to be prejudiced by their

---

15. Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984, Sched. 3, Part II (para. 8).
16. Ibid., (para 9) (as amended), but examining justices have no such power.
17. R v. Shephard, ante. Cf. Darby v. DPP, The Times, November 4, 1994, DC (police officer's evidence as to the working of a speed trap device).
18. R v. Shephard, ante, overruling R. v. Spiby, (1990) 91 Cr App R 186; R. v. Governor of Pentonville Prison, ex p. Osman, (1990) 90 Cr App R 281, 307 DC.
19. R. v. Minors and Harper, (1989) 90 Cr App R 102.
20. As in the case of proof of admissibility under the Criminal Justice Act 1988, Ss. 23, 24.
21. R v. Minors and Harper, (1989) 90 Cr App R 102, 103-104. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), p. 700 (para 27-34).

efforts to compromise it would be impossible to attempt any amicable arrangement of differences.[22] The expression 'without prejudice' means without prejudice to the writer of the letter if the terms he proposes are not accepted. It means that: "I make you an offer which you may accept or not, as you like; but if you do not accept it, my having made it is to have no effect at all."[23] If the terms proposed in the letter are accepted, a complete contract is established, and the letter, although written without prejudice, operates to alter the old state of things and to establish a new one.[24] If letters marked "without prejudice" are tendered in evidence and the other party admits them, the admission implies that the privilege is withdrawn and the letters are free to be used as evidence in a judicial proceeding. Letters so marked show the writer's desire as to the privilege, but unless there are circumstances from which it can be inferred that the other party agreed to respect the privilege, the letters cannot be excluded under this section.[25]

There would not be any attempt by the parties for any compromise or adjustment of their disputes if their private talks during negotiations are not excluded from being let in as evidence.

LORD MANSFIELD in Walker v. Wilsher,[26] observed: "All men must be premitted to buy their peace, without prejudice to them, should the offer not succeed; such offers being made to stop litigation, without regard to the question whether anything is due or not. If, therefore, a defendant, on being sued for £ 100 should offer the plaintiff £ 20, at the same time stating that he made such offer 'without prejudice', evidence of the offer would not be admissible in evidence; for it is irrelevant to the issue; it neither admits nor ascertains any debt, and is no more than saying that he would give £ 20 to be rid of the action. An offer made 'without prejudice' cannot be looked at even upon a question of costs."

Confidential overtures of pacification, and any other offers of propositions between litigating parties, expressly or impliedly made without prejudice, are excluded. This is on grounds of public policy.

It is considered necessary to allow the parties to speak somewhat freely in attempting settlements, and to disclose their cases to each other to some extent. It is usual, and certainly advisable, expressly to state that the communications in question are made without prejudice; but it seems clear that the rule of exclusion would apply if it appeared from the circumstances that it was intended that the communications should not be used as evidence.[27]

Negotiations when conducted with a view to settlement, should be deemed to be conducted "without prejudice" and it is not open to either party to give evidence of an admission made by the author.[28]

WIGMORE[29] observes: "The true reason for excluding an offer of compromise is that it does not ordinarily proceed from and imply a specific belief that the adversaries' claim is well founded but rather a belief that the further prosecution of that claim, whether well founded or not, would in any event cause such annoyance as is preferably avoided by the payment of the sum offered. In short, the offer implies merely a desire for peace, not a concession of wrong done."

2. SCOPE

From the opening sentence of this section it is clear that the section applies only in civil cases and not to criminal cases.

Offers of compromise made expressly or impliedly "without prejudice" cannot be given in evidence against a party as admissions; the law, on grounds of public policy, protecting negotiations bona fide entered into for the settlement of disputes. The rationale of the doctrine is a complex of factors. The policy of the law is to encourage settlements[30]; it is thought to be "unfair" that advantage should be taken of the willingness of one party to negotiate.[31] and some cases discover an express or implied contract between the parties that without prejudice communications should not be disclosed.[32] Wigmore (4

---

22. Hoghton v. Hoghton, (1852) 15 Beav 278.
23. In re : River Steamer Company, (1871) LR 6 Ch 822, 832.
24. Walker v. Wilsher, (1889) 23 QBD 335 (CA).
25. The Lucknow Improvement Trust v. P.L. Jaitly & Co., (1929) 5 Luck 465.
26. (1889) 23 QBD 335 (CA).
27. Copy v. Bretton, (1830) 4 C&P 462; Jones v. Foxall, (1852) 21 LJ Ch 725.
28. P.C. Gangoly v. Nawn Estates (P) Ltd., 72 CWN 852 at 857.
29. Vol. 4, Section 1061, P-28.
30. Tennant v. Hamilton, (1839) 7 Cl & Fin 122 (HL); Scott v. Drayton Paper Works, (1927) 44 RPC 151.
31. Rabin v. Mendoza, (1954) 1 WLR 271; Bell v. University of Auckland, (1969) NZLR 1029 (SC).
32. Rabin v. Mendoza (ante); Whiffen v. Hartweight, (1848) 11 Beav 111; but see Vaver, loc. cit. p. 99.

Wigmore, Evidence (3rd ed.) 27 p. 1061) thought that the doctrine was based on the fact that the statement was conditional, but this is inconsistent with the English and Commonwealth authorities.[33]

According to HALSBURY[34] "The contents of a communication made "without prejudice" are admissible when there has been a binding agreement between the parties arising out of it,[35] or for the purpose of deciding whether such an agreement has been reached.[36] and the fact that such communications have been made (though not their contents) is admissible to show that negotiations have taken place[37]; but they are not otherwise admissible. Thus, they cannot be used as admissions, or as acknowledgments to prevent a debt from becoming statute-barred[38]; or, normally, for the purpose of deciding the question of costs[39] or to show malice,[40] although it has been held that they may be admitted to prove matters not connected with the merits of the dispute.[41]

The consent of both parties to the dispute is required for the privilege to be waived,[42] even if there has been only one communication.[43] In the absence of an agreement between the parties that evidence of the statements is not to be given, they are admissible.[44] It was held by the Privy Council that where there was an offer to accept a smaller amount as a result of a compromise, it cannot be treated as an admission.[45]

In Shibcharandas v. Gulabchand,[46] negotiations were conducted with a view to settlement. It was held that the negotiations must be taken to have been conducted without prejudice and if one party offers to take something less than what he claims it must not be used against him as an admission. In Nageswarsabu v. Shah Bahadur,[47] it was observed: "Parties often make admission for purpose of effecting a compromise to which it would be unfair to hold them if the compromise falls through" following the above decisions and that of Surjit Kaur v. Gurcharan Singh,[48] it was held in B. Mohanty v. S C. Mohanty,[49] that where a compromise petition was signed by the parties but was not acted upon and filed into court, the recitals were not intended to be treated as evidence by the parties and recitals thereon could not be treated as evidence.

---

33. Waxman & Sons Ltd. v. Texaco Canada Ltd., (1968) 67 DLR (2d) 295. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 13th Edn., Page 373 (para-19.10).
34. 4th Ed., Vol. 17 (para 213) Page 152.
35. The agreement which has been reached may thus be construed. Holdsworth v. Dismsdale, (1871) 19 WR 798; Re, River Steamer Co., Mitchell's Claim, (1871) 6 Ch App at 832; Re, Leite, Leite v. Ferreita, (1881) 72 LT JO 97; Cf. Walker v. Wilsher, (1889) 23 QBD 335 (CA) : (1910) 45 LJ 326.
36. Tomlin v. Standard Telephones and Cables Ltd., (1969) 3 All ER 201 : (1969) 1 WLR 1378 (CA). Such a communication may also be looked at by the judge (though not by the jury) to decide the question of its admissibility: Re, Daintrey, ex parte Holt, (1803) 2 QB 116. The question of admissibility is decided at the hearing: Re, Jessopp (a Solicitor) (1910) 54 Sol JO 543 (CA).
37. E.g. when there is an allegation of laches: see Walker v. Wilsher, (1889) 23 QBD 335 at 338. Per LINDLEY LJ. See also Janes v. Foxall, (1852) 15 Beav 388.
38. Cory v. Bretton, (1830) 4 C&P 462; and see Re, River Steamer Co., Mitchell's Claim, (1871) 6 Ch App 822. Cf. Froysell v. Lewelyn, (1821) 9 Price 122. See also LIMITATIONS OF ACTIONS.
39. Walker v. Wilsher, (1889) 23 QBD 335 (CA); Stotesbury v. Turner, (1943) 1 KB 370. Dicta to the contrary in Woodard v. Eastern Countries and London and Blackwall Rly. Co., (1885) 1 Jur NS 899, must be regarded as wrong. However, in matrimonial proceedings relating to finance a party may make a compromise offer in respect of financial provision or property without prejudice to that issue at the hearing, but reserving the right of the party making the offer to it on the issue of costs; see Calderbank v. Calderbank, (1976) Fam 93 : (1975) 3 All ER 333 (CA). There is a comparable practice in collision actions in the Admiralty Court: See ADMIRALITY, Vol. 1 (para 438).
40. Watt v. Watt, (1905) AC 115 (HL).
41. Waldridge v. Kennison, (1794) 1 ESP 143 (Admission by defendant during "without prejudice" discussion that a document was in his handwriting).
42. Mc Taggart v. Mc Taggart, (1949) p 94 : (1948) 2 All ER 754 (CA) and Blow v. Norfolk Country Council, (1966) 3 All ER 579 : (1967) 1 WLR 1280 (CA). As to waiver of privilege generally, see para 235, post.
43. Walker v. Wilsher, (1889) 23 Q3D 335 (CA) disapproving the contrary opinion expressed in Williams v. Thomas, (1862) 2 Drew & Sm 29.
44. Firm Bulaki v. Bhagath, AIR 1926 Lah 548.
45. Chandrika v. B.B. & C.I. Rly Co., AIR 1935 PC 59.
46. AIR 1936 All 157.
47. AIR 1922 Oudh 231.
48. AIR 1973 Punj 18.
49. AIR 1992 Ori 136.

A debtor acknowledged the debt in a postcard and sent it to the plaintiff. The defendant specifically wrote on the card "without prejudice". When the suit was filed, the defendant pleaded inter alia that the claim was barred by limitation. The plaintiff relied on that postcard to show that there was an acknowledgement of the debt. CANDY J. observed: "But, even if the card is admitted in evidence, what does it amount to? What do the words 'without prejudice' mean? simply this:— "I make you an offer: if you do not accept it, this letter is not to be used against me".[50] When an assessee files a statement before the Income Tax authorities admitting the matter in dispute without affecting the merits of the issue in a civil litigation, it is open to the assessee to mark the statement as "without prejudice" which means that the statement is for a limited purpose of income tax assessment.[51]

Where a person filed a written statement in a suit on the basis of a compromise arrived at earlier and when that written statement was sought to be relied on by the plaintiff, it was held that, where the draft compromise provides that the parties to it are free to repudiate any condition of the proposed compromise by which in their opinion, their rights were prejudicially affected, it should be excluded.[52]

In another case it was held that the admission in the written statement cannot be looked into.[53]

3. WAIVER OF PRIVILEGE

Where there was an inscription 'without prejudice', on two letters produced by the plaintiff in evidence, the defendant's counsel admitted those letters. It was held that the admission on the part of the counsel implied that the privilege was withdrawn and the letters were not inadmissible, as there was nothing to show either by implication or otherwise any circumstances from which it could be inferred, that the plaintiff also agreed to respect the privilege.

The consent of both parties to the dispute is required for the privilege to be waived, even if there has been only one communication.[54]

4. APPLICATION BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE

The principle under this section has greater relevancy in matters where marital relationship is concerned. Where a petition under the Hindu Marriage Act was pending, a letter written by one of the parties containing an admission of cruelty and seeking an apology was filed. That letter was written during the period of negotiations for a compromise between the parties. It was held that the letter is a privileged document and it may be inferred that the parties did not want to let in evidence in respect of the letter.[55]

5. FROM WHICH CIRCUMSTANCES THE COURT CAN INFER THAT THE PARTIES AGREED TOGETHER THAT EVIDENCE OF IT SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN

Circumstances must be of such a character that the court must naturally come to the conclusion that the parties agreed together that evidence of it should not be given. In a suit for rent, there was a talk of settlement between the plaintiff's pleader and one of the defendants when the suit was about to be instituted. It was held that the mere fact of the conversation taking place when the parties were contemplating that a suit might be instituted was not in itself sufficient to prevent the conversation from being put in evidence.[56]

The reply to a letter written 'without prejudice' cannot be admitted in evidence even though not guarded in a similar manner. The words once used will exclude an entire correspondence.

The rule which excludes documents marked 'without prejudice' has no application unless some person is in dispute or negotiation with another and terms are offered for the settlement of the dispute or negotiation.[57]

---

50. Madhavrao Ganeshpat Oze v. Gulabbhai Lallubhai, ILR (1893) 23 Bom 177.
51. Gadadhar Ramanuj Das v. Collector of Agricultural Income-tax, Orissa, AIR 1953 Ori 283.
52. Surendra Persad Lahiri v. Govindadas, 48 Cal WN 15.
53. Tilkayat Govindlalji v. State, AIR 1962 Raj 196.
54. HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17 (para 213), Page 152.
55. Surjit v. Gurcharan, AIR 1973 Punj 18.
56. Meajan Matbar v. Alimuddin Mia, ILR (1916) 44 Cal 130.
57. Madhavrao v. Gulabbhai, ILR (1898) 23 Bom 177, 180.

An admission made to a stranger, under whatever terms as to secrecy, is not protected by law from disclosure.

6. EXPLANATION—LEGAL COUNSEL NOT PREVENTED FROM GIVING EVIDENCE

Under the Explanation the legal adviser of the party will not be prevented from giving evidence of any communication made in furtherance of any illegal purpose of any fact showing that crime or fraud has been committed since his employment.

Confession caused by inducement, threat or promise, when irrelevant in criminal proceeding.

S. 24. A confession made by an accused person is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding, if the making of the confession appears to the Court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise, having reference to the charge against the accused person, proceeding from a person in authority and sufficient, in the opinion of the Court, to give the accused person grounds, which would appear to him reasonable, for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 285
2. Appears to the court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise ... 286
   (a) Principle ... 286
   (b) Object ... 286
3. Confession ... 292
4. Recording of confession ... 292
5. Essentials of a confession ... 292
6. Held not amounting to a Confession ... 294
7. Made by an accused ... 295
8. Confession of the co-accused ... 296
9. Involuntary Confession ... 296
10. Voluntary Confession ... 297
11. Temporal nature—Spiritual Exhortation ... 297
12. Burden of proof ... 299
13. Having reference to the charge against the accused person ... 301
14. Person in Authority ... 301
15. Retracted confession ... 305
16. Extra Judicial confession ... 308
17. Extra-judicial confession to stock witness ... 313
18. Evidentiary value of confession ... 313
19. Necessity for corroboration ... 315
20. Confession to be taken as a whole ... 316

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

The substantive law of confession is contained in Sections 24 to 30 of the Evidence Act and in Sections 164, 281 and 463 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1973. Confessions are received in evidence in criminal cases upon the same principle on which admissions are received in civil cases, namely on the presumption that a person will not make an untrue statement against his own interest. A man of sound mind and full age, who makes a statement in ordinary simple language and has not been the victim of malpractice, threat or inducement in making such statement, must be bound by the language of the statement and by its ordinary plain meaning and the act spoken of must be given its legal consequence.[1] Deliberate and voluntary confessions of guilt if clearly proved, are among the most effectual proofs in law.[2]

The principle of receiving voluntary confession is on the presumption that no person would voluntarily make a statement which is against his interest, unless it is true. The presumption of truth as to the incriminating statement is based upon the sentiment of mankind that a person will not, as a general rule, make a statements against himself unless they are true.

---

1. Per MEARS, CJ in Raggha v. Emperor, (1925) 23 A LJR 821, 826 (FB) : AIR 1925 All 627.
2. Emperor v. Narayen, (1907) 9 Bom LR 789 (FB).

When there is no statutory inhibition for using a confession on the premise that it was not recorded during the investigation of a particular offence which is under trial, there is no need or reason for the Court to introduce a further fetter against the admissibility of the confessional statement. It often happens that a confessor would disclose a very many acts and events including different facets of his involvement in the preparation, attempt and commission of crimes including the acts of his co-participators therein. But to expel every other incriminating disclosures than those under investigation of a particular crime from the ambit of admissibility is not mandated by any provision of law. Therefore, there is absolutely no doubt that a confession, if usable under Section 15 of the TADA Act, would not become unusable merely because the case is different or the crime is different. If the confession covers that different crime it would be a relevant item of evidence in the case in which that crime is under trial and it would then become admissible in that case.[3]

2. APPEARS TO THE COURT TO HAVE BEEN CAUSED BY ANY INDUCEMENT, THREAT OR PROMISE

(a) Principle

According to the section, a confession by an accused is irrelevant, if it is caused by (1) inducement; (2) threat; or (3) promise. The inducement, threat, or promise should have (a) reference to the charge against the accused; (b) proceeded from a person in authority, and (c) sufficiently given the accused person reasonable grounds for supposing that by making the confession he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him.

Administration of caution to a person summoned under Section 40 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 to make statement that not making a truthful statement would be an offence, does not amount to use of pressure to extract the statement. Such caution is rather in the interest of the maker of the statement.[4]

A confession is relevant—

(1) if it is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat or promise has been fully removed (Section 28). The fact that the confessional statement was made by the accused while he was in custody of the Intelligence Officer and he had retracted the same, was no ground to discard it as having been made under threat or pressure.[5]

(2) if it is not made to a Police Officer (Section 25). The Intelligence Officer of the Narcotic Control Bureau is not a police officer. The confession statement recorded by him is admissible in evidence.[6]; or

(3) if it is made in the presence of a Magistrate when the accused is in the custody of a police-officer (Section 26). A confessional statement of an accused can be recorded only by a Judicial Magistrate and not by an Executive Magistration. One recorded by the latter will not be admissible in evidence.[7]

(b) Object

This section is mainly intended to safeguard the interest of the accused, on the ground of public policy and for proper administration of justice. The Supreme Court observed: "It is abhorrent to our notions of justice and fair play, and is also dangerous, to allow a man to be convicted on the strength of a confession unless it is made voluntary and unless he realises that anything he says may be used against him; and any attempt by a person in authority to bully a person into making a confession, or any threat or coercion would at once invalidate it, if the fear was still operating on his mind at the time he makes the confession, and if it 'would appear to him reasonable for supposing that by making it he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him'."[8]

---

3. State of Gujarat v. Mohammed Atik, AIR 1998 SC 1686 : 1998 Cr LJ 2251 (paras 6 and 7).
4. C. Sampath Kumar v. Enforcement Officer, Enforcement Directorate, Madras, (1997) 8 SCC 358.
5. Pon Adithan v. Deputy Director, Narcotics Control Bureau, Madras, 1999 Cr LJ 3663 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2355.
6. Nandi Francis Nwazor v. Narcotics Control Bureau, 1995 Cr LJ 665 (paras 18 and 19) (Del).
7. State of Haryana v. Parmanand, 1995 Cr LJ 396 (para 11) (P&H).
8. Aher Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217.

LORD SUMNER in Ibrahim v. R.,[9] observed: "Even the rule, which excludes evidence of statements made by a prisoner when they are induced by hope held out, or fear inspired by a person in authority, is a rule of policy."[10]

Law does not presume that such confessions are untrue, but because of the danger of receiving such evidence, judges thought it better to reject it for the due administration of justice. When hope or fear in respect of the confession was not in question, such statements were admitted as relevant, though with some reluctance and subject to strong warnings as to their weight.[11]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn., pages 418-419, para 22.08 it is stated: "The ground for the rejection of confessions which are not voluntary is the danger that the prisoner may be induced by hope or fear to incriminate himself falsely."[12]

"One possible ground of exclusion was said to be that, it would not be safe to receive a statement made under any influence of fear.[13] However, LORD DIPLOCK said that "the underlying rationale of this branch of the criminal law, though it may originally have been based on ensuring the reliability of confessions is, in my view, now to be found in the maxim, memo debet proderese ipsum, no one can be required to be his own betrayer, or in its popular English mistranslation 'the right to silence".[14]

Another suggested rationale for the rule was that it was intended thereby to restrain law enforcement agencies from oppressive behaviour.[15] In R. v. Sang,[16] LORD DIPLOCK disapproved of this theory in clear terms and said that it was no part of the judges' function to exercise disciplinary powers over the police or prosecution. It is thought that there is more than one factor at the base of the rule.[17] For present purposes, "the question whether the rule is based on 'the reliability principle' or 'the disciplinary principle'..... is only of academic interest. It does not touch the effect or undoubted validity of the rule."[18] The rule is often criticised as devised to meet circumstances which no longer obtain.[19]

"It has long been established as a positive rule of English criminal law that no statement by an accused is admissible in evidence against him unless it is shown by the prosecution to have been a voluntary statement in the sense that it has not been obtained from him either by fear of prejudice or hope of advantage exercised[20] or held out by a person in authority"[21] or by oppression. The addition of the words or by oppression" appears to have originated in an obiter dictum of Lord PARKER C.J. in Callis v. Gunn,[22] and it became enshrined in a revised preamble to the Judges' Rules[23] and was approved in

---

9. AIR 1914 PC 599.
10. P.K. Adimoola Chettior, In re : (1957) 2 MLJ 358.
11. Reg. v. Baldry, 5 Cox CC 523; Ibrahim v. Emperor, AIR 1914 PC 155.
12. R v Warwickshall, (1783) 1 Leach 263, R. v. Thomas, (1826) 7 C&P 345; R. v. Mansfield, 14 Cox 639.
13. Per POLLOCK C.B. in R. v. Baldry, (1832) 2 Den 430. Approved by LORD SUMMER in Ibrahim v. R., ante.
14. R v. Sang, 1979 2 All ER 1222, 1230b also reported at (1979) 3 WLR 263; see also per LORD SCARMAN at p. 1245 et seq It is worthy of note that their Lordships extended no approval of the maxim, and see the advice of the Privy Council delivered by LORD DIPLOCK in Haw Tua Tau v. Public Prosecutor, (1981) 3 WLR 395 and Sundran Jaykumal v. Public Prosecutor, (1981) 3 WLR 408. They held that a warning by the judge that adverse inference might be drawn from the accused's failure to give evidence, and a similar warning by the police as to failure to disclose his defence, was not contrary to natural justice. These warnings were given as a result of a change in the law of Singapore which has no counterpart in English Law.
15. R. v. Baldry, ante; Ibrahim v. R., ante; see Criminal Law Revision Committee, 11th Report—, Evidence General (1972) Cmnd, 1991.
16. (1979) 2 All ER 1222 also reported at (1979) 3 WLR 263.
17. See generally the speech of LORD REID in Commissioners of Customs and Excise v. Harz and Power, where the privilege against self-crimination is given a role in justifying the rule.
18. D.P.P. v. Ping Lin, (1975) 3 All ER 419, per LORD SALMON at p. 188e-f.
19. D.P.P. v. Ping Lin, (1975) 3 All ER 419 per LORD HAILSHAM at 182d-g (and cases there cited); but the remedy is no longer in the hands of the judiciary. (Ibid).
20. This may be a misprint for "excited"—DPP v. Ping Lin, (1976) AC 574, 598 per Lord HAILSHAM.
21. Ibrahim V R., (1914) AC 599, 609 approved in Commissioners of Customs and Excise v. Harz and Power, (1967) 1 AC 760 HL and DPP v. Ping Lin, (1976) AC 574 HL.
22. (1964) 1 QB 495, 501.
23. (1965) (para (e)).

subsequent cases.[24] "Oppression" was described as importing "something which tends to sap, and has sapped, that free will which must exist before a confession is voluntary."[25]

There was extensive case law on who was to be regarded as a person in authority. Although the question of what was a relevant threat or promise was, or should have been,[26] essentially a question of fact there was also a body of authority on that question. The most unsatisfactory aspect of the law was the test of voluntariness. Very few confessions are voluntary in the sense that they are volunteered without the process of arrest and questioning. The Court of Appeal recognised that in an important judgment in R. v. Rennie,[27] where Lord LANE L.C.J., delivering the Court's reserved judgment, said :

> "Very few confessions are inspired solely by remorse. Often the motives of an accused person are mixed and include a hope that an early admission might lead to an earlier release or a lighter sentence. If it were the law that the mere presence of such a motive, even if prompted by something said or done by a person in authority, led inexorably to the exclusion of a confession, nearly every confession would be rendered inadmissible."[28]

The reading of this section would show that the court will have to perform a three-fold function. Firstly, it has to determine the sufficiency of the inducement, threat or promise as affording certain grounds for giving the confession. Secondly, it will have again to clothe itself with the mentality of the accused to see whether the grounds would appear to the accused reasonable for a supposition that, by making the confession, he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him. Thirdly, it has to see if the confession appears to have been caused in consequence of the inducement, threat or promise. If the circumstances would show anything ranging between the barest suspicion on the one hand and absolute certainty on the other hand, would be sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the section.[29]

CAVE J., laid down a test for the admissibility of a confession which is as follows: "it was preceded by any inducement to make a statement held out by a person in authority. If it is proved to be free, and voluntary, and it was not made in consequence of an inducement, threat or promise by a person in authority, it can be taken into consideration."[30] It was held by the Patna High Court that the principle is the same in our country also.[31]

SHAH J., in State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya,[32] after dealing with Sections 24-27 individually, observed as follows:

"On an analysis of Sections 24 to 27 of the Indian Evidence Act, and Section 162 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the following material propositions emerge:

(a) Whether a person is in custody or outside, a confession made by him to a Police Officer, or the making of which is procured by inducement, threat or promise, having reference to the charge against him and proceeding from a person in authority, is not provable against him in any proceeding in which he is charged with the commission of an offence.

(b) A confession made by a person whilst he is in the custody of a Police Officer to a person other than a Police Officer is not provable in a proceeding in which he is charged with the commission of an offence unless it is made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

(c) The part of the information given by a person whilst in police custody, whether the information is confessional or otherwise, which distinctly relates to the fact thereby discovered but no more, is provable in a proceeding in which he is charged with the commission of an offence.

(d) A statement, whether it amounts to a confession or not, made by a person when he is not in custody, to another person, such latter person not being a Police Officer, may be proved if it is otherwise relevant.

---

24. E.g. R v. Prager, (1972) 56 Cr App R 151 CA; R. v. Rennie, (1982) 1 WLR 64 CA.
25. R v. Priestley, (1965) 51 Cr App R 1, per SACHS J., adopted in R. v. Prager, (1972) 56 Cr App R 151 CA.
26. DPP v. Ping Lin, (1976) AC 574 HL.
27. (1982) WLR 64 CA.
28. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pp. 748-749 (para 31-04).
29. Emperor v. Panchkowri Dutt, (1925) Cal 587; Emperor v. Bhagi, 8 Bom LR 697.
30. Queen v. Thompson, (1893) 2 QB 12.
31. Krishnandan Prasad Verman v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166; See also Emperor v. Dewan Kahar, AIR 1923 Pat 13.
32. AIR 1960 SC 1125.

(e) A statement made by a person to a Police Officer in the course of an investigation of an offence under Chapter 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code cannot except to the extent permitted by Section 27 of the Indian Evidence Act, be used for any purpose at any enquiry or trial in respect of any offence under investigation at the time when the statement was made in which he is concerned as a person accused of an offence.[33]

A confession made and recorded even during a trial can be corroborated by the evidence already recorded. It may be made and recorded in the court of a committing Magistrate and materials already in the possession of the police may be used for the purpose of corroboration.[34]

The Supreme Court in Shankaria v. State of Rajasthan,[35] observed: "It is well settled that a confession, if voluntarily and truthfully made, is an efficacious proof of guilt. Therefore, when in a capital case the prosecution demands a conviction of the accused primarily on the basis of his confession recorded under Section 164 Cr. P.C., the court must apply a double test:

(1) Whether the confession was perfectly voluntary?

(2) If so, whether it was true and trustworthy?

Satisfaction of the first test is a sine qua non for its admissibility in evidence. If the confession appears to the court to have been caused by any inducement, threat or promise, such as is mentioned in Section 24, Evidence Act, it must be excluded and rejected brevi manu. In such a case, the question of proceeding further to apply the second test, does not arise. If the first test is satisfied, the court must, before acting upon the confession, reach the finding that what is stated therein is true and reliable. For judging the reliability of such a confession or, for that matter, of any substantive piece of evidence, there is no rigid cannon of universal application. Even so, one broad method which may be useful in most cases for evaluation of a confession may be indicated. The court should carefully examine the confession and compare it with the rest of the evidence, in the light of the surrounding circumstances and probabilities of the case."[36]

This section places the heaviest responsibility on the court. Under the latter part of the section, the court has to form an opinion that the inducement, threat or promise by the person in authority is sufficient to give the accused person grounds which would appear to him reasonable for supposing that, by making it, he would gain any advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature. The responsibility of the court would be great because the court must relegate itself to the position of the accused and see whether the inducement, threat or promise given to the accused would appear reasonable to make the accused feel that he would gain an advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature with reference to the charge against him.[37] Thus, it can be seen that this section through its wording has given the fullest discretion to the court to reject the alleged confession if it entertains a suspicion. The usage of the word "appears" in the first part of the section indicates a lesser degree of probability than 'proof' as defined in Section 3. On the other hand the court is saddled with the delicate task of enquiring into the facts which were passing in the mind of the accused at the time of making the confession.[38] If it appears to the court, from the facts and circumstances of the case, that the confession is not voluntary but it is the result of inducement, threat or promise, it should be rejected. It is not easy for an accused to show positively that the confession is the result of inducement, threat or promise.[39]

In all the cases the general principle would be what a prudent man believes on the same set of facts and circumstances. This was pointed out in Pyarelal v. State,[40] by the Supreme Court stating that the standard of a prudent man is not completely displaced, but the stringent rule of proof is relaxed, though it

---

33. Rajkishore Bhuyan v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 190.
34. Hem Raj v. State of Ajmer, 1954 SCR 1133.
35. AIR 1978 SC 1248.
36. Devendra Prasad Tiwari v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 1544; State of Gujarat v. Subamiya Dosmahmeh, 1979 Cr LR (Guj) 366; Mobeni Minji v. Union Territory of Arunachal Pradesh, 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 39; Kuthu Goala v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 424 (Gou); Jai Singh v. State, AIR 1967 Del 14.
37. Pyare Lal Bhargua v. State of Raj, AIR 1963 SC 1094; Mst. Kistoori v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 Raj 98; Satbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1294.
38. In re : Ahmad, AIR 1950 Mys 82.
39. R. v. Panchkouri, AIR 1925 Cal 587; Emperor v. Jamuna, AIR 1947 Pat 305; Raggha v. Emperor, AIR 1925 All 627 (FB); R. v. Saw Min, AIR 1939 Rang 219.
40. Pyare Lal Bhargua v. State of Raj., AIR 1963 SC 1094.

does not warrant a court's opinion based on pure surmise that a prima facie opinion based on evidence and circumstances may be adopted as a standard laid down by this section.[41]

Even when the judge feels that it is doubtful whether an explanatory statement by the accused was not given as a result of inducement, threat or promise, the confession should not be admitted in evidence.[42] A confession must be voluntary and uninfluenced by anything.[43] Unless the court is satisfied that the confession is voluntary it cannot be used against the accused.[44] The criterion for the admissibility of a confession is not whether an accused is questioned immediately by the police and the accused spontaneously comes out with confession of his guilt; the criterion is whether it is voluntarily made before the Magistrate under Section 164 Cr. P.C.[45] The confessional statement made under S. 164 Cr.P.C. and retracted later on during the examination of the accused under Section 313, is presumed to be voluntary.[46]

Where the Magistrate while recording a confession has elicited answers by questioning the accused, it cannot be said that the answers given are voluntary statements of the accused.[47]

MAHMOOD J., stated that the rule underlying this section is, speaking strictly, a rule of relevancy, called forth by the abstracts principles of evidence and not a positive prohibition necessitated by exigencies. It is a rule of exclusion because, this section declares that a confession made by an accused under certain circumstances is irrelevant in a criminal proceeding. Therefore, it is only the satisfaction of the court that is necessary, though there may not be a decision in so many words that a confession is not relevant.[48]

A confession can be admitted only if it is voluntary; and one obtained by inducement, threat or promise held out by a person in authority is not to be admitted.[49] Inducement, threat or promise need not be express, but may be implied from the conduct of the person in authority, the declarations of the accused, or the circumstances of the case.[50]

The Nagpur High Court held that a well-grounded conjecture is also sufficient to exclude a confession. But that conjecture must be reasonably based upon the circumstances shown in the evidence.[51]

The inducement that is contemplated under this section, is to make a statement relating to the charges by influencing the mind of the accused with respect to the escape from the charge.[52] A confession made by an accused on the faith of a promise made by the police-officer making the inquiry, that he would be let off if he made a disclosure is not admissible.[53] Where the accused, in making a confession before a Magistrate, admitted that he had been asked to tell the truth by the Sahib who said he would be released, if he told the truth, it was held that the confession was vitiated by inducement.[54] A confession made before a Magistrate who had told the accused that if he made a full confession he would

---

41. R. v. Dewan Kahar, AIR 1923 Pat 13; See also Abraham v. State, AIR 1965 Ker 175; Budhoo v. R. AIR 1928 Lah 676; Roshanlal v. Union of India, AIR 1965 HP 1 distinguishing Vidymati v. State, AIR 1951 HP 82.
42. Abraham v. State, AIR 1965 Ker 175; Joymangal v. State, 59 Cal WN 993.
43. Tilak v. State of M.P., 1978 Cr LJ 112 (MP).
44. Alier Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217 : 1956 Cr LJ 426; Devendra Prasad Tiwari v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 1544; Sankaria v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1978 SC 1248; Eapen and Eapen v. State, AIR 1954 Tr-Co 282: 1954 Cr LJ 491; Bhabananda Banerjee v. Emperor, AIR 1993 Cal 747.
45. Re : Kakana Ramana Reddy, AIR 1953 Mad 74 : 1953 Cr -LJ 264 (Mad).
46. Dev Dass v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1441 (para 10) (Cal), relying on Sankaria v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1978 SC 1248 (para 49) at p. 1258.
47. Lingiah, (1954) Mys 27; State of M.P. v. Dayaram Hansraj, AIR 1981 SC 2007.
48. Queen-Empress v. Babulal, ILR 1884 6 All 509.
49. Kuruma v. The Queen, (1955) AC 197.
50. Reg v. Gills, (1866) 11 Cox 69; King-Emperor v. Akhileshwari Prasad, ILR (1925) 4 Pat 646; Babu Lal, (1956) Raj 359; Amrut v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 Bom 488.
51. Mst. Bhukin v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Nag 344; Mst. Viran Wali v. State, AIR 1961 11.
52. Chaman Lal v. State of J&K, 1976 Cr LJ 1310.
53. Mussammat Nurai v. The Empress, ILR (1881) PR No. 8 of 1882 (Cr) or would get a pardon, was held inadmissible in evidence. Emperor v. Misri, ILR (1909) 31 All 592 (FB); Emperor v. Khetal, ILR (1923) 45 All 300 : AIR 1923 All 352; Muhammad Shaffi v. Queen-Empress, (1899) Pr. No. 1 of 1899 (Cr); Emperor v. Cunna, (1929) 22 Bom LR 1247, in which there was a difference of opinion amongst the Judges as to the admissibility of evidence of the accused by virtue of Section 339(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code.
54. Emperor v. Dinanath Sundarji, (1920) 45 Bom 1086 : 22 Bom LR 338 : AIR 1921 Bom 70.

take that fact into consideration in awarding punishment, is inadmissible.[55] Where a Magistrate recorded a statement from an accused produced in hand-cuffs from the police custody, after giving him only 15-20 mts time to compose himself, and no question was put to the accused as to why he was making a confession, it was held that the confession was within the mischief of this section.[56]

Where a confession was recorded by a Magistrate in the presence of the escorting police, it was held that, as the escorting police are not connected with investigation it was voluntary.[57] The Supreme Court rejected a confession made to a villager with a request that he should arrange for surrender as it was unnatural because the police was already in the village and there could have been a direct surrender. [58] The Privy Council, held that, when the record of the Magistrate proves positively that the confession was voluntary, the fact that the accused confessed in the hope of pardon, will not justify its rejection, as being improperly induced, in the absence of evidence to suggest that any Police Officer or other person in authority did or said anything which could possibly be construed as holding out a hope of pardon.[59] In the absence of evidence to show that any inducement, threat or promise was made to the accused, when the accused was not continuously questioned all the time, but only at intervals, the mere fact that the accused was taken to the house of the Mukhia, and it took two or three hours time, did not make the confession made to the Mukhia any the less free and voluntary.[60]

The question whether a confession is voluntary or not is always a question of fact. And there is no rule of law that, if a certain period is not given for reflection it is sufficient to exclude the confession. But, at the same time, all the circumstances including the important factor of the time given for reflection must be considered, before deciding whether the court is satisfied that, the impression caused by any inducement, threat or promise has been fully removed as provided in Section 28.[61] Where sufficient time was given for reflection, and the Magistrate took care to see if the accused was in a state of mind fit to make a voluntary statement, and to comprehend the implication of his admission, it was held that it was a voluntary confession, though the Magistrate did not put any pointed and searching questions.[62] Where only 3½ hours time was given for reflection to an accused, it was held that it was not a valid confession.[63] However where only 3 hours time was given to the accused who made a confessional statement before the Judicial Magistrate the Supreme Court observed that it is not possible to reject the confessional statement merely because only 3 hours time had been given for reflection if it is otherwise acceptable. But the court added that the Magistrate would have been well advised if he had given more time for reflection to the accused.[64]

Even in a case of confession recorded by a Magistrate in the form of question and answers, where questions virtually amounted to cross-examination of the accused the Supreme Court held that the rejection of confession was proper.[65]

It is quite injudicious on the part of the Magistrate to go in the company of the Police Officers to the jail premises for recording a confession, as it is likely to be mis-understood or mis-interpreted by others.[66] Where the Magistrate recorded the confession in his chamber, and it was closed, and the police men were sitting on a parapet wall of the veranda, which abutted the court room, it was held that the possibility of duress was ruled out.[67]

---

55. Queen-Empress v. Nga Paw Lon, (1884) SJLB 289.
56. Chatru v. State, AIR 1953 Bilaspur 3 : 1953 Cr LJ 708.
57. Ramesh Ch. Choudhury v. Mokeswar Khataniar, (1961) 1 Cr LJ 464. Confession voluntary, Ram Lal v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 736 (para 4) (J&K).
58. Jagta v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1545.
59. Mukand Singh v. Emperor, 1927 PC 215; See also Emperor v. Sher Singh, AIR 1933 Lah 388.
60. Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18.
61. Vali Isa Mahmed v. State, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 755 : 1963 Guj 135 following Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637.
62. Gendra Brahma v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 430 (Gau).
63. Kadraka Sitana v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 414 (Ori).
64. H W. Roberts v. State of Assam, AIR 1985 SC 823; See also Heramba v. State of Assam, AIR 1982 SC 1595.
65. AIR 1981 SC 200.
66. Birey Singh v. State, 1953 Cr LJ 1817 All : 1953 All 78.
67. 1985 Cr LR (Mah) 96.

3. CONFESSION

The word 'confession' has not been defined anywhere in the Act. A 'confession' is an admission made at any time by a person charged with a crime, stating or suggesting the inference that he committed that crime.[68] A confession is a statement which either admits in terms the offence or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence.[69]

Admission includes confession. Statement is genus, admission is species and confession is sub-species.[70]

A confession differs from an admission.

(1) A confession is a statement made by an accused person, which is sought to be proved, against him in a criminal proceeding to establish the commission of an offence by him; while an admission usually relates to a civil transaction and comprises all statements amounting to admissions as defined in Section 18.

(2) A confession, which if deliberately and voluntarily made, will be accepted as conclusive in itself of the matters confessed.[71]

(3) A confession always goes against the person making it; an admission may be used on behalf of the person making it under the exceptions provided in Section 21.

(4) The confessions of one of two or more accused jointly tried for the same offence can be taken into consideration against the co-accused (Section 30). But an admission by one of several defendants in a suit is no evidence against another defendant.

A composite disclosure statement made by one of the accused relating to all the weapons allegedly used for the commission of the crime cannot be said to a confession.[72]

See comment on Section 17, supra.

4. RECORDING OF CONFESSION

Omission to obtain the signature of the accused at the end of confession is curable under Section 463 Cr.P.C. and it was held that the said confession would be admissible.[73]

5. ESSENTIALS OF A CONFESSION

Admissions and confessions are exceptions to the hearsay rule, they are placed in the category of relevant evidence in Sections 17-30 presumably on the ground that, being declarations against the interest of the person making them, they are probably true. Their probative value does not depend upon their communication to another, though, just like any other piece of evidence, they can be admitted in evidence only on proof which can be offered by witnesses who heard the admission or the confession, as the case may be.[74] Before a confession is relied on, it must be clear and unequivocal, whether it is a judicial or extra-judicial confession. Where the alleged confession was made by a large number of

---

68. STEPHEN'S DIGEST, 12th Edn., Art. 22; Queen-Empress v. Babu Lal, (1884) 6 All 509, 539 (FB); Queen Empress v. Nana, (1889) 14 Bom 260 (FB); Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Bhaju Majhi, ILR (1929) 57 Cal 1062 : AIR 1930 Cal 291.

69. Dhanapati De v. Emperor, AIR 1946 Cal 156.

70. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40.

71. Queen-Empress v. Sangappa, (1889) Unrep Cr C 463, Cr R No. 22 of 1896; Emperor v. Narayen, (1907) 9 Bom LR 789, 801 : 32 Bom 111 (FB); an admission is not a conclusive proof of the matters admitted, but may operate as an estoppel.

72. Gopalakrishnan v. State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 2438 (para 13) (Ker).

73. State of T.N. v. Nalini, 1999 Cr LJ 3124 (paras 128 and 129) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2640, overruling Abdul Razak Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1988 Cr LJ 382 and Neharoo Mamgtu Satnami v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Nagpur 220 : 1937 (38) Cr LJ 642.

74. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40; extra-judicial confession need not be addressed to any particular person, Luku Paike v. State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 1207 (para 9) (Ori).

persons before a panchayat, it was held to be more in a gener and vague term and could not be relied upon.[75]

Before a confession can be accepted in evidence, it must be established by cogent evidence what were the exact words used by the accused. Even if so much is established, prudence and justice demand that such evidence cannot be made the sole ground of conviction. It may be used only as a corroborative piece of evidence.[76] The Supreme Court prescribed this guideline in a case where it held that the evidentiary value of a confession was not destroyed by the facts that the accused was taken from one place to another because of the non-availability of a Magistrate there and that a police-station was in the vicinity of the judicial lock-up.

If it appears that the confession has been improperly induced, then the Court is bound to exclude it, no matter how true it may be.[77] Where the Magistrate did not ask any question whatsoever to ascertain whether the accused was making the confession voluntarily, it was held that the High Court was not at all justified in entertaining the confession as a piece of evidence.[78] Where confession was made under fear on account of threat given by the village patel, it had lost its credibility.[79]

Where the effect of the statements might at most be described as suggesting the inference that the accused committed the crime, but they did not show that the accused admitted in terms the offence, or substantially all the facts which constituted the offence, the statements individually or taken together do not amount to a confession of the crime.[80] Where the accused on questioned pleaded guilty but did not explain the exact crime or accusation, the same did not amount to admission of guilt.[81]

A confession must either admit in terms the offence, or at any rate substantially all they acts which constitute the offence. An admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact, is not itself a confession. A statement that contains self-exculpatory matter cannot amount to a confession, if the exculpatory statement is of some fact which, if true, would negative the offence alleged to have been confessed. A statement which, when read as a whole, is of an exculpatory character and in which the prisoner denies his guilt is not a confession and cannot be used in evidence to prove his guilt.[82]

If the confession is an extra-judicial confession, it must pass the test of reproduction of exact words. The reason or motive for confession and the person in whom confidence is reposed by the accused are essential for its truthfulness.[83]

An admission of a fact, however incriminating, but not by itself establishing the guilt of the maker of such admission, does not amount to a confession within the meaning of Sections 24 and 25 of the Evidence Act.[84] A statement made under S. 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which does not amount to a confession, can be used against the maker as an admission within the purview of Ss. 18 to 21.[85] In a case, a truck driver made a statement under Section 18 of the Customs Act, that he was not aware that the packages which were loaded in the truck were contraband goods and they were not loaded under his instructions, it was held that it was not a confession within the meaning of Section 21.[86] Where the

---

75. Kishan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 4070 (paras 23 and 24) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3062, reversing 1998 Cr LJ 452 (Raj).
76. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40.
77. Emperor v. Bhagi, (1906) 8 Bom LR 697, 699. Contra : Valiyaveetil Ashraf v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 555 (para 32) (Ker).
78. Preetam v. State of M.P., AIR 1997 SC 445. Also see Naresh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 3793 (All).
79. Narain v. State of M.P., 1998 Cr LJ 3183 (paras 6 and 7) (MP).
80. Om Prakash v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 409 reversed AIR 1957 All 388; Pakala Narayanaswamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354. Accused not admitting his complicity in crime, Valiyaveetil Ashraf v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 555 (para 22) (Ker).
81. Tarakeswar Prasad Sah v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 121 (Ori), relying on 1966 Cr LJ 68 (SC).
82. Abdul Hanan v. State of Orissa, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 229; Om Prakash v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 SC 409 following Pakala Narayanswami v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; Veera Ibrahim v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 1167; Jasoda Haldar v. Sailendranath Samantha, 1957 Cr LJ 707: AIR 1957 Cal 372; Ashutosh Roy v. State, 1959 Cr LJ 1197 : AIR 1959 Ori 159; Anwarul Hasan v. State, 1953 Cr LJ 385 : AIR 1953 All 142; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354; Behera Tanti v. State, 1950 Ori 202; Lal Chand v. Rex, 1951 Ajmer 15; Ram Chandra Singh v. State, ILR (1973) 56 Pat 528.
83. (1985) 2 Cr LC 189 : (1985) 1 Ori LR 638; Palani v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 1679 (para 18) (Mad).
84. Kanda Padayachi v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 SC 66; Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 Pat 448.
85. Ghulam Hussain v. King, (1949) 52 Bom LR 508 : 77 IA 65.
86. Veera Ibrahim v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 1167.

accused stated that he killed the deceased because of the threat to kill him with an axe, it was held that the statement, being self-exculpatory, did not amount to confession.[87] Where the statement made by the accused contained an admission that she had placed the dead body of her husband in a trunk and had carried it in a jeep and thrown it into a well, but with regard to the cause of the death, the statement made by her was that her husband had accidentally taken a poisonous substance which was meant for washing photos, erroneously thinking it to be a medicine, it was held that the statement read as a whole was exculpatory in character and that the whole statement was inadmissible in evidence.[88] When the accused makes an extra-judicial confession saying that, as the deceased threatened to kill him, he killed the deceased, it is self-exculpatory and it does not amount to a confession.[89]

Where the accused gave reasons in his statement before a Magistrate, for giving blows by a dagger on the body of the deceased, it was held that it amounted to a confessional statement.[90] The accused, seven days after being remanded to judicial custody made confession before the Magistrate giving full length of the role played by him alongwith the other accused and the Magistrate certified that in his opinion the confession was voluntary. It was held that it could not be said that the accused was pressurised by the police or prevailed upon by any extraneous influence to make confession as prior to it he had been in police custody and was produced before the Magistrate on three occasions.[91] Where the accused stated that, as he presumed that the deceased would kill him he committed the offence, it was held that such statements giving the reason amount to a plea of justification but not a denial of what he did so it was not self-exculpatory, and hence it was admissible.[92] A statement by the accused to the effect that he fired the rifle amounts to an admission of a grave incriminating circumstance, though he did not say that he had fired to kill or to cause such bodily injury as was likely to result in the victim's death.[93]

An admission of a gravely incriminating fact is not in itself a confession.[94]

Any confessional statement not relating to the alleged crime, which is not the subject matter of the indictment, cannot be relevant under this section and cannot be relied upon.[95]

6. HELD NOT AMOUNTING TO A CONFESSION

Where the accused keeps silence and does not speak, it would not amount to a confession of guilt; the confession should be an unequivocal one, admitting the commission of the crime.[96] Where the accused does not implicate himself either directly or indirectly, it cannot be a confession.[97] Where the Honorary Secretary of a Co-operative Society was found to have deposited lesser amount that what he received from the members towards the share money, he wrote a letter, on being threatened by the President of the Society with criminal proceedings, stating that out of inexperience he made a mistake in totalling the amount, and Rs. 17/- was due on him, which he deposited, it was held that it was only an explanation and not an admission of guilt of misappropriating the money.[98] Where a person admitted that he accompanied the co-accused as an informer, it was held that it did not amount to a confession.[99] Where an accused stated that he was the owner of the knife which caused the death and was in recent

---

87. Jaisingh Madakami v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 117 (Ori); Vallabha alias Munna Govan v. State of Gujarat, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 540 (Guj).
88. Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, (1953) SCR 94 : AIR 1952 SC 354; See further Keshoram Bora v. State of Assam, AIR 1978 SC 1096: 1978 Cr LJ 1089; Mohan Lal v. Ajit Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1183 : 1978 Cr LJ 1107; Bhagwan Singh Rama v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 1797, noted elsewhere under this section.
89. Jaisingh Madakami v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 117 (Ori); Vallabha alias Munna v. State, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 540 (Guj).
90. Amar Singh v. State, AIR 1956 MB 107 : 1956 Cr LJ 408.
91. State of T.N. v. Kutty, 2001 Cr LJ 468 SC (paras 15, 17 and 18) : AIR 2001 SC 2778.
92. Bnda Kirsoni v. State, ILR 1965 Cut 369 : (1905) 31 Cut LT 804; Anand Prakash v. State, (1960) 62 Punj LR 781.
93. Ram Chandra Singh v. State, ILR (1977) 56 Pat 528.
94. Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, ILR (1953) Punj 107 : 1953 SCR 94.
95. Rajkishore Sahu v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 1715 (Ori).
96. Isher Dass v. State, AIR 1954 J & K 19 : 1954 Cr LJ 505.
97. Harbans Singh v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 722 : 1960 Cr LJ 1577; State v. Rambali, AIR 1953 All 163.
98. Anwarul Hasan v. State, AIR 1953 All 142 : 1953 Cr LJ 385.
99. Kanan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1127; Provash Kumar v. King, AIR 1951 Cal 475 : 52 Cr LJ 819; In re : Vokkaligara Yengtappa, AIR 1952 Mad 535; State v. Rambali, AIR 1953 All 163.

possession of it, it is not a confession.[1] Where the accused stated before Panchayatdars that the other accused gave her a bottle for being kept in safe custody, and she produced that bottle containing arsenic, it was held that, it was not a confession.[2] Where the accused makes a statement giving out some facts, which if true, would bring his act within the general exceptions of Sections 96-105 of the Penal Code, such statements cannot held to be a confession.[3] Where a mother stated that she put her child into the pond, it was held that it was not a confession of murdering the child, but might be an admission of an incriminating fact, especially when the cause of the child's death was not known.[4] Where an accused wrote on a piece of paper in Assamese, in answer to the questions of the witnesses about the whereabouts of the wife and three daughters of the accused, and that paper showed that they were not in this world, it was held that it was not a confession and was, at the most, an admission of a fact, admissible under Section 21 of the Act. It was further held that even the oral statements are of the same category.[5]

The statement of the accused recorded by an official referred in Section 42 of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1988 cannot be used as evidence for prosecution in the form of confession.[6]

7. MADE BY AN ACCUSED

The expression 'accused person' in Section 24 and the expression 'a person accused of any offence' in Section 25 have the same cannotation and describe the person against whom evidence is sought to be led in a criminal proceeding. It does not predicate a formal accusation against him at the time of making the statement sought to be proved, as a condition of its applicability.[7]

Where a Customs Officer making inquiry under Section 107 or Section 108 of the Customs Act, recorded a statement, it was held that the Customs Officer was not a police-officer and, secondly, the person against whom enquiry was made was not an accused person. And therefore, it is not statement made by a person accused of any offence within the meaning of Section 24.[8]

Section 24 refers not only to a person who is an accused at the time when he made a confession, but also to one who becomes an accused subsequently. The section refers to the status of the person, at the time when the confession is being considered by the court and when he is undoubtedly an accused person.[9] When a person states that he has done certain acts which amount to an offence, he accuses himself of committing the offence, and the statement is, therefore, a confession by an "accused person" within the meaning of this section.[10]

The moment a suspicion is entertained by a person that for all practical purposes, he would become an accused, and if he makes self-incriminating statements subsequently and if he is induced by any promise, threat or violence for making the statements, such statements are inadmissible under this section though he becomes an accused at a later stage.[11] When a confession was made before a report was given to the police and when the person confessing was accused of an offence by others by that time, it was held that the confession must be regarded as one made by an accused person.[12] Where a person made a confession during the course of investigation in another case, it was held relevant.[13] Where the statements were recorded under Section 40 of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, and it was contended

---

1. Behera Tanti v. State, AIR 1950 Ori 202 : 51 Cr LJ 1493.
2. Re : Vokkaligare Yengtappe, 1952 Cr LJ 1150 : AIR 1952 Mad 535.
3. Gopal v. The Crown, AIR 1950 HP 18 : 51 Cr LJ 786 following Narayanaswamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47.
4. Kalliani v. State of Kerala, 1961 Ker LT 201.
5. State of Assam v. Upendranath Rajkhowa, 1975 Cr LJ 354 (Gau).
6. Shahid Khan v. Director of Revenue Intelligence, G.O.I., 2001 Cr LJ 3183 (para 48) (AP).
7. State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya, AIR 1960 SC 1125; Punja Mava v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 5.
8. Perey Rustomji Basta v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087; Ramesh Chandra v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940; K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 444.
9. Viran Wali v. State, AIR 1961 J & K 11 relying on State v. Memon, AIR 1959 Bom 534; Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293; Emperor v. Cunna, AIR 1920 Bom 270 (FB); Santhoki Beldar v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Pat 149 (FB); Pakala narayanaswamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; R. v. Bhagwandas, AIR 1941 Bom 50; Smith v. Emperor, AIR 1918 Mad 111.
10. Santhoki Beldar v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Pat 149 : (1932) 12 Pat 241 (FB). See also In re : Ahmad, (1950) Mys 82.
11. Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293 : 1958 Cr LJ 462.
12. In re : Ahmad, AIR 1950 Mys 82; Santoki Beldar v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Pat 149.
13. Public Prosecutor v. Kandi Katla, AIR 1943 Mad 661.

that those statement s were not hit by Section 24 of the Evidence Act, as the maker was not an accused at the time of making the statement, it was held that the contention was not available to him.[14]

8. CONFESSION OF THE CO-ACCUSED

A distinction is made between the effect of a confession as against the maker and as against others. A rule of caution has been adopted by all courts that A should not be convicted on the basis of B's confession without material corroboration.[15] However, confessional statement of a co-accused can be taken into consideration for confirmation of the conclusion as to the participation of the accused in the commission of crime.[16] Where there was reasonable ground to believe that the other accused had conspired together in committing the offence, confession of the one accused could be used against the other accused also.[17]

Where the accused police official stated that the deceased party started firing at the police party which necessitated the opening of fire on them and the first part of his statement was not proved from the evidence on record, the second part of his statement could be utilised as an admission. However, the other police official will not be bound by such admission.[18]

Confession of a co-accused cannot be treated as substantive evidence[19] and made basis of conviction of the accused who made no confessional statement.[20] The extra-judicial confession of the co-accused, without any direct or circumstantial evidence recorded regarding the involvement of the accused in the said event, cannot form the sole basis of conviction of the accused.[21]

Where the confession of the co-accused was rejected by the High Court and he was acquitted, his confession could not be used to corroborate the confession of the accused.[22]

9. INVOLUNTARY CONFESSION

If the facts and the circumstances surrounding the making of a confession appear to cast a doubt on the veracity or voluntariness of the confession, the Court may refuse to act upon the confession even if it is admissible in evidence, e.g. the instant case.[23] Where the accused was allowed three hours time during which period he was kept near the undertrials in the presence of a number of Police Officers, it was held that it was not voluntary.[24] Extra-judicial confession cannot be said to be voluntary when the same was obtained after a prolonged custody of the accused for than 14 days in the police station. Such confession cannot be relied upon without corroboration.[25] Tape recording of the alleged extra-judicial confession made to a total stranger denotes influence and involuntariness.[26] Where the Magistrate failed to ascertain the voluntary character of the confessional statement, it could not form the basis of conviction of the accused.[27] Where the accused was brought to the Court in custody about two months after being granted bail on his surrender in the Court, for recording of his confessional statement, it was held that the action was indicative of asserting authority, if not coercing or forcing a confession and it was not voluntary.[28] Where the accused in custody was not allowed to meet his family or any other relative for a period of three months and he categorically stated that the Recording Officer obtained his signatures on some written papers under threat promise and coercion, the confession could not be said to be voluntary.[29]

---

14. Deputy Director, Enforcement Directorate Madras v. P. Mansoor Md. Ali Jinnah, 1989 Cr LJ 2138.
15. Birey Singh v. State, AIR 1953 All 785.
16. Hari Charan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184.
17. Ammini v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 260 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 (para 22) (SC).
18. Brijlala Pd. Sinha v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 2443 : 1998 Cr LJ 3611.
19. Balbir Singh v. State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 1762 (para 5) (Ori).
20. Maharaj Deen v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 506 (paras 15, 18 and 19) (All). See also Burja Panda v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cr LJ 904 (para 4) (Ori).
21. Raj Kumar v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 3570 (para 11) (Jharkhand).
22. State of T.N. v. Kutty, 2001 Cr LJ 4168 (SC) (para 19) : AIR 2001 SC 2778.
23. Pralhad D. Gajbhiye v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2558 (para 9) (Bom).
24. State v. Thingnam Dhabalo Singh, AIR 1955 Mad 1 : 1955 Cr LJ 139
25. Palani v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 1679 (para 18) (Mad), relying upon Hari Ram v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 961. Also see Nathu v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56 : 1956 Cr LJ 152. Also see State of H.P. v. Raj Kumar, 1994 Cr LJ 894 (para 24) (HP); confession in police custody, Kausar Ali Gazi v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1745 (para 29) (Cal).
26. State of Haryana v. Ved Prakash, 1994 Cr LJ 140 (para 5) : AIR 1994 SC 468.
27. Shivappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1995 SC 980 (paras 5 and 8).
28. Kanti alias Kanta v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC 428 (All).
29. Hardev Singh v. Union of India, 2000 Cr LJ 2585 (para 48) (P&H). See also Shahid Khan v. Director of Revenue Intelligence, G.O.I., 2001 Cr LJ 3183 (para 46) (AP).

10. VOLUNTARY CONFESSION

Where the accused spent four days in judicial custody and was not under the influence of the investigating officer, confession made before the executive magistrate was held to be voluntary.[30] Where the investigating police officer stated in the evidence that the accused made the confession after he 'tackled' the accused, it was held that it cannot be said that any undue pressure was exerted so as to render the confession involuntary.[31] Where the accused admitted: "I have misappropriated securities of the order of Rs. 20,00,000 of the Bharath Insurance Co. Ltd., I have lost this money in speculation", the High Court did not consider it safe to rely upon it, as it considered that, it was made under circumstances which implied an offer of amnesty being granted to him. He made that confession to a chartered accountant who was appointed by the Central Government to investigate into the affairs of the Insurance Co. Before the High Court, it was contended that the accused thought it best to make a statement because, by doing so, he hoped to avoid the discovery of his entire scheme of conspiracy which had made it possible for him to mis-appropriate such large amount. According to the High Court, even if the confession was made for that purpose, it would not be voluntary. The Supreme Court, however, differed from the High Court and held that the confession was voluntary.[32] Where the confession was retracted at a late stage in the Sessions Court, it was held that it is a strong circumstance in favour of the confession being held to be voluntary.[33] Where there was inordinate delay between the willingness of the accused to confess and the actual day of recording, it was held that the voluntary character of the confession under Section 164 Cr. P.C. cannot be doubted.[34] Where one of the persons arrested along with the accused died in the lock-up allegedly due to physical torture but neither the prosecution nor the defence could show how he died in police custody and defence did not ask the Investigating Officer about the result of the inquiry conducted by the Magistrate into the matter, in such circumstances the voluntariness of the confession recorded by the Judicial Magistrate could not be doubted.[35] The statement made by the person summon under Section 40 of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, 1973 cannot be presumed to be always involuntary.[36] Merely because the confession was recorded a day or so before the police remand was to expire, it does not become involuntary.[37]

11. TEMPORAL NATURE—SPIRITUAL EXHORTATION

An accused charged with murder, being a few days short of fourteen, was told by a man who was present who was not a constable, "Now kneel you down, I am going to ask you a very serious question, and I hope you will tell me the truth, in the presence of the Almighty." The accused in consequence made certain statements. It was held that the statements were admissible in evidence.[38] The inducement must be of a temporal kind, i.e. not spiritual or religious. Confessions obtained by spiritual exhortations are admissible in evidence. A mere exhortation to tell the truth is not objectionable.[39] When one makes a statement, consequent on moral exhortation or suggestion to speak the truth in the name of God, if it relates to the charge, it is admissible, unless it is shown that it influenced his mind with respect to the escape from the charge.[40]

Where a priest was charged for contravention of Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, he stated that 'it is written in moral theology that penal laws do not oblige in conscience which means that only after

---

30. Abdul Razak v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 283.
31. Rajib Domb alias Raju Domb v. State, ILR 1963 Cut 567 : 29 Cut LT 531; Thingom Sashikumar and others v. Manipur Admn., (1963) 2 Cr LJ 562; State of Orissa v. Sorji dei, ILR 41 Cut LT 1144; State v. Mitu, ILR 1977 Cut 113 : 1977 CrLJ 1018 (Ori); State v. Shankariya, 1977 Cr LJ 684 (Raj); State of Orissa v. Suruji Dei and another, 1976 Cr LJ 938 (Ori). Also see Kailash v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 142 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 1994 SC 470 (paras 4 and 5).
32. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1821; Nand Lal More v. State, (1965) 1 Cr LJ 393.
33. Findal v. State, 1953 Cr LJ 1900 : AIR 1954 HP 11 : 1984 Cut Cri J 150; State of Orissa v. Chakradhar Sahu, (1983) 2 Cr LJ 532.
34. Kirpa v. State, 1952 Cr LJ 1495 : 1952 HP 68.
35. Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., 2001 Cr LJ 2196 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1760.
36. C. Sampath Kumar v. Enforcement Officer, Enforcement Directorate, Madras, (1997) 8 SCC 358.
37. State of T.N. v. Nalini, 1999 Cr LJ 3124 (para 405) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2640.
38. Wild's case, 1885 Moody CC 452.
39. King-Emperor v. Akhileshwari Prasad, ILR (1925) 4 Pat 646.
40. Chaman Lal v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 1310 (J&K).

catching me I became a sinners it was held that the statement could be said to be pointer to their genuineness, voluntariness and reliability.[41] Where an extra-judicial confession was made to an independent and dis-interested witness who had given evidence, it was held that, that it was voluntary.[42] Where various details were given by the accused which could be only within his personal knowledge, before the customs authority, and when the accused did not complain before the Magistrate, it was held, repelling the contention that he was beaten before he made the statements, that it was voluntary.[43] Where the interrogation was for about two hours in the presence of many persons, regarding the discovery of the handle of a knife, of which the blade was found lying near the dead body, it was held that the disclosure statement was voluntary and it falls within the purview of even Section 27 as the 'fact discovered' was the place from which various articles were produced.[44] Where a police officer read over to the accused the statements which he had taken from others and then told him, "I know the whole thing now", and the accused thereupon made a statement in consequence of which he was arrested and his confession was subsequently recorded before a Magistrate, it was held that the confession recorded under those circumstances was free and voluntary and was perfectly admissible in evidence.[45] A confession otherwise voluntary does not cease to be so simply because the accused aside the confession on his own belief that to confess his guilt would be the only way of saving himself, unless such expectation under which the accused made the confession was shown to have been the result of any inducement, threat or promise.[46] Where the head of a Mutha holds an important position among the people there and if the accused was threatened with sound beating, it was held that it may reasonably be inferred that the confession was extracted by threat from a person who, in the opinion of the accused, had sufficient authority to put him in the imminent fear of his life or at any rate to seriously injure him unless he confessed his crime.[47] When an accused person was given a promise that he would be made an approver, it was held that it was not a voluntary confession.[48] A confession made by an accused on the faith of a promise made by the police-officer making the inquiry that he would get off if he made a disclosure,[49] or would get a pardon,[50] was held inadmissible in evidence. Similarly, a confession made before a Magistrate who had told the accused that if he made a full confession he would take that fact into consideration in awarding punishment, was inadmissible.[51] Where the accused, in making a confession before a Magistrate, admitted the Sahib who told him to tell the truth and he would be released, it was held that the confession was vitiated by inducement.[52] The two accused stubbornly refused to confess. They were taken separately to the senior officer and each confessed. The court presumed that they must have been influenced.[53] Where the accused was promised with immunity from further action, it was held that such confession cannot be acted upon.[54] Where a delinquent officer made a confession to his superior officer who administered an oath to the delinquent, though he was not empowered to do so, it was held by the Supreme Court that such confession was inadmissible under this section.[55] Where an accused made an extra-judicial confession of rape, when he was a sort of prisoner in the house of the prosecutrix and his hands were tied, it was held that it was given under a threat and is not admissible.[56] Where accused was brought tied down by a rape before a Panchayat and the Kotwal threatened him that

---

41. Fr. Maria Pires v. Director of Enforcement, Delhi, 1982 Cr LJ 461.
42. Tanguru Pradhan v. State of Orissa, (1984) 2 Crimes 576.
43. Sri Pad Bhiku Nagavellar v. State of Mysore, 1971 Cr LJ 1636 (Mys).
44. Mohan Lal v. Ajit Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1183.
45. King-Emp. v. Rango, (1901) 3 Bom LR 404.
46. Kesavan Gopalan v. State, AIR 1954 Tri/Co 456 : 55 Cr LJ 1498.
47. Sanatan Badchat v. State, AIR 1953 Ori 149 : 1953 Cr LJ 1008.
48. State v. Babulal and Berumal, AIR 1956 Raj 67 : 1955 Cr LJ 550; Devappa v. State, (1972) 1 Mys LJ 499.
49. Mussammat Nurai v. The Empress, (1881) PR No. 8 of 1882 (Cr).
50. Emperor v. Misri, ILR (1909) 31 All 521 (FB); Emperor v. Khetal, ILR (1923) 45 All 300; Muhammad Shaffi v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1899) PR No. 1 of 1899 (Cr); Emperor v. Cunna, ILR (1920) 22 Bom LR 1247, in which there was a difference of opinion amongst the Judges as to the admissibility of evidence of the accused in virtue of S. 339(2) of the Criminal Procedure Code.
51. Queen-Empress v. Nga Paw Lon, (1884) SJLB 289.
52. Emperor v. Dinanath Sundarji, ILR (1920) 45 Bom 1086 : 23 Bom LR 338.
53. Satbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1294.
54. Devabpa v. State, (1972) 1 Mys LJ 499; relying on Nader Chand Karar v. State of W.B., AIR 1971 SC 1871.
55. Brijbasi Lal Srivasthava v. State of M.P., AIR 1979 SC 1080.
56. 1979 Raj Cri C 85.

if he did not speak the truth he would be handed over to the police, it was held that it was not voluntary but was given under a threat.[57]

In every case the court has to see from the circumstances of the case whether the confession was due to inducement, threat or promise.[58] It has to be seen whether certain words used have or have not had certain effect on the mind of the accused.[59] It is only when a confession is made under an inducement, threat or promise and that too proceeding from a person in authority that it is not relevant under this section. The mere existence of the threat, inducement or promise is not enough, unless, in the opinion of the court, the said threat, inducement or promise shall be sufficient to cause a reasonable belief in the mind of the accused that, by confessing, he would get an advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him. While the opinion is that of the court, the criterion is the reasonable belief of the accused. The section, therefore, makes it clear that it is the duty of the court to place itself in the position of the accused and to form an opinion as to the state of his mind in the circumstances of the case.[60] When once the existence of inducement, threat or promise has been established there is a presumption of its continuance till the accused makes the confession, and the prosecution has to prove that the impression caused in the mind of the accused was fully removed when the accused made the statement. [61]

Every threat, inducement or promise, even though emanating from a person in authority such as customs officer, does not make the confession irrelevant under Section 24.[62] Where the customs officer inquring in connection with smuggling of goods told a person that the law requires such person to tell the truth and explained the consequences of Section 193, Penal Code, it was held such explanations by the customs officer do not constitute threat under this section.[63]

While dealing with an extra-judicial confession, the court has to consider from the point of view of the confessing accused as to how inducement, threat or promise proceeding from the person in authority would operate on his mind.[64]

12. BURDEN OF PROOF

It must be affirmatively proved that the confession was free and voluntary. Bald assertion by the prisoner that he was threatened, tutored, or that inducement was offered to him cannot be accepted as true without further evidence.[65] It is not necessary for the accused to prove positively that the confession was brought about by any inducement, threat or promise, but there must be something to show that there was such inducement, threat or promise, or to point out certain circumstances which arouse suspicion.[66] A judgment convicting the accused on the basis of his confession is no evidence regarding the truth of the confession.[67]

The words 'appears to the court' in Section 24, however, show that positive proof of the fact that there was any inducement, threat, or promise is not necessary. The confession itself, the evidence adduced on behalf of the prosecution and the defence, if any, and all the circumstances of the case have to be taken into consideration. If, upon such consideration, the court feels that the accused made the

---

57. Podyami Kowa v. State of M.P., (1984) 3 Crimes 65.
58. In re : Ahmad, AIR 1950 Mys 82; Jangir Singh v. State, AIR 1952 Pepsu 19.
59. Satbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1294; Mst. Kistoori v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1967 Raj 98 : 1967 Cr LJ 518.
60. Pyare Lal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094; Shobha Param v. State of M.P., AIR 1959 MP 125; In re : Ahamad, AIR 1950 Mys 82.
61. Shoba Param Kachhi v. State of M.P., AIR 1959 MP 125 : 1959 Cr LJ 476; Sparks v. R, (1964) 1 All ER 727 (PC) (It continues even when he acknowledges a caution that he was not obliged to say anything).
62. Perey Rustomji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087; H.P. Admn. v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44; Son's Vallabhdas Liladhar v. Asst. Collector, Customs, AIR 1965 SC 481; Hazari Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1973 SC 62.
63. Percy Rustomji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087; Heera, H Advani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 44; (Statement under section 171A Sea Customs Act).
64. Satbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1294.
65. Hemraj Devilal v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1954 SC 462; Nathu v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56; Vidhyamati v. State, AIR 1951 HP 82; Krishna Nandhan Prasad Verma v. State, 1958 Pat 166; Mst. Bhagan v. State of Pepsu, 1955 Pepsu 33; Nathuram v. State, AIR 1951 HP 1.
66. Krishna v. State, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 929.
67. Birey Singh v. State, AIR 1953 All 785.

confession as a result of any inducement, threat or promise having reference to the charge or, even if the court entertains a reasonable doubt that there was such inducement, threat, or promise, it cannot be satisfied that the confession is free and voluntary; and hence it has to exclude the confession from consideration. But the court cannot exclude a confession on mere conjecture or surmise.[68] The appropriate meaning of the word "appears" is "seems". It imports a lesser degree of probability than proof. The standard of a prudent man is not completely displaced, but the stringent rule of proof is relaxed. Even so, the laxity of proof permitted does not warrant a court's opinion based on pure surmise. A prima facie opinion based on evidence and circumstances may be adopted as the standard laid down.[69] It is not necessary to prove strictly that a confession was brought about by improper inducement. It is quite sufficient, for excluding the confession, if circumstances are placed before the court, which would make it appear that the confession was so induced.[70] It is only when it appears to the court that the confession has been made as a result of some inducement held out by a person in authority that it becomes irrelevant; a mere possibility of there having some inducement is not sufficient.[71] The word 'appears' is not so strong as the expression 'proved'.[72] The word 'appear' imports judicial discretion. It shows that the court has to decide the preliminary question of admissibility, on a consideration of the evidence and surrounding circumstances.[73] The court has to determine the sufficiency of the inducement, threat or promise as affording certain ground, to see whether the ground would appear reasonable for the supposition mentioned in the section, and to judge whether the confession appears to have been caused in consequence of the inducement, threat or promise. A well-grounded conjecture, reasonably based on the circumstances in the evidence, is sufficient to exclude the confession. The mentality of the accused rather than that of the person in authority has to be taken into account by the court in determining the effect of the inducement, threat or promise. It has to consider not merely the actual words, but also the words, coupled with the acts or conduct of such person, which might be construed by the accused, in his position, as amounting to an inducement, threat or promise. A perfectly innocent expression, coupled with the acts and conduct and the surrounding circumstances may amount to the same.[74]

If the accused raises an objection to the admissibility of the confession, there may be a formal decision as to the relevancy. That question may be decided during the trial for the purpose of this section.[75]

The practice of attestation of a confessional statement by certain witnesses was deprecated by the Kerala High Court on the ground that it prejudices the accused to safeguard whose interest the legislature has enacted Sections 24-26 and it has no legal sanction behind it.[76]

Confession made by an accused during the time when there was some restriction on his movement or where he was under some sort of surveillance by a person in authority will not ipso facto vitiate the confession as being involuntary, and such confession is not hit by the provisions of this section.[77]

The threat, to come under this section, must be sufficient to give the accused grounds for supposing that, by making the confession, he would gain an advantage.[78]

When a promise, inducement or threat is held on or made to an accused person by or on behalf of the prosecutor, and, as a result, business books and documents are produced by the accused person, those books and documents stand on the same footing as an oral or written confession which is brought into existence by a promise, inducement or threat, and are inadmissible in evidence against the accused person at his trial.[79]

---

68. Krishnanandan Prasad Verma v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166; Mst. Bhagan v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 Pepsu 33.
69. Pyare Lal Bhargua v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094.
70. Emperor v. Thakur Das Malo, AIR 1943 Cal 625; Raggha v. Emperor, AIR 1925 All 627 : (1925) 23 ALJR 821 (FB); Partap Singh v. Crown, (1925) 6 Lah 415.
71. Hashmat Khan v. The Crown, ILR (1934) 15 Lah 856.
72. Khiro Mandal v. The Emperor, ILR (1929) 57 Cal 649.
73. Emperor v. Narayen, (1907) 9 Bom LR 789, 799 : 32 Bom 111 (FB).
74. Emperor v. Panchkari Dutt, ILR (1914) 52 Cal 67 : AIR 1925 Cal 587; Queen-Empress v. Basvanta, (1990) 2 Bom LR 761 at 765 : ILR 25 Bom 168.
75. In re : Navanith Ammal, AIR 1939 Mad 3.
76. M. Karunakarn v. State, , ILR 1960 Ker 1202; In re : Bottu Satha Lavadan and another person is authority, AIR 1939 Mad 515.
77. Harbansingh v. State, (1968) 71 Bom LR 599.
78. S.N. Mukerjee v. Queen-Empress, (1899) 1 UBR (1897-1901) 147.
79. Rex v. Barker, (1941) 2 KB 381.

An approver's disclosure is in its very nature always the result of an inducement or promise, viz., the inducement to confess upon a promise of pardon; and it is only when it is exhorted as the result of undue duress, such as threats or violence, that this section is applicable and the statement must be ruled out of evidence.[80]

A promise or threat made to the accused will not render a confession made by another, who was present and heard the inducement, irrelevant.[81]

The mere existence of the threat, inducement or promise is not enough, but, in the opinion of the court, the said threat, inducement or promise shall be sufficient to cause a reasonable belief in the mind of the accused that, by confessing, he would get an advantage or avoid any evil of a temporal nature in reference to the proceedings against him; while the opinion is that of the court, the criterion is the reasonable belief of the accused.[82] An unambiguous confession, free from any suspicion suggesting its falsity, is no doubt a valuable piece of evidence, but the court has to be satisfied with its voluntariness and that it was not the result of inducement, threat or promise, or some consideration suggesting that it may not be true, before accepting the same.[83]

Where the accused was not warned that, even in case of confession, he would not be taken as an approver, such an omission was held to be fatal to the admissibility of the confession as it casts great doubt on the voluntary nature of the confession.[84]

This section does not require positive proof as defined in Section 3, of improper inducement. A well-grounded conjecture, reasonably based upon circumstances disclosed in the evidence, is sufficient to exclude a confession.[85]

It is not sufficient to render a confession irrelevant under this section that there may have been added to it a statement which has been improperly induced by threat or promise. In order to make a confession irrelevant it must be shown that the confession itself was improperly induced.[86] It is the duty of the court to inquire very carefully into all the circumstances under which the confession was made, and particularly as to the length of time during which the accused was in custody.[87]

13. HAVING REFERENCE TO THE CHARGE AGAINST THE ACCUSED PERSON

'Charge' means a criminal charge or a charge of an offence in a criminal proceeding. The inducement, threat, or promise, must be with reference to the offence, with which the accused is charged. A confession obtained by an inducement relating to some collateral matter unconnected with the charge will not be excluded from evidence.

Where an accused, having confessed his guilt, is acquitted under one Act, his confession would be admissible in trial for offences under other Acts which too were tied along with that Act.[88]

14. PERSON IN AUTHORITY

This expression does not mean a person having control over the prosecution of the accused.[89] The test would seem to be whether the person has authority to interfere in the matter under inquiry as, for example, a person engaged in the apprehension, detention or prosecution of the accused, or who is

---

80. Ram Nath v. The Crown, ILR (1928) 9 Lah 608.
81. Reg. v. Jacobs, (1849) 4 Cox 54.
82. Pyare Lal Bhargua v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094.
83. Santhosh Kumari (Smt.) v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 1651.
84. Re : Madithati Venkata Reddi, AIR 1951 Mad 331.
85. Mst. Bhukin v. King-Emperor, AIR 1948 Nag 344 : ILR (1948) Nag 147.
86. Emperor v. Narayen, (1907) 9 Bom LR 789, 801 : 32 Bom 111 (FB).
87. Queen-Empress v. Narayan, (1901) 3 Bom LR 122, 124 : 25 Bom 543.
88. State of T.N. v. Nalini, 1999 Cr LJ 3124 (para 85) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2640, overruling Bilal Ahmad Kaloo v. State of A.P., (1997) 7 SCC 431 : 1997 Cr LJ 4091 : 1997 AIR SCW 3574 : AIR SC 3483 (para 5).
89. Reg v. Navorji Dadabhai, (1872) 9 BHCR 358.

empowered to examine him[1] and any concern or interest in it would be sufficient to give him that authority.[2] The belief of an accused that the persons to whom he made a confession were "persons in authority" is not sufficient to bring them within the term.[3]

The following persons are held to be 'person in authority' within the meaning of this section:—

(a) Chief Secretary of the State Government.[4]

(b) Officers of the Department of Customs under the Customs Act.[5]

In Sevanti Lal v. State of Maharashtra,[6] the Supreme Court observed that it is undisputed that the concerned officers of the Department of Customs were "persons in authority" within the meaning of Section 24. In Hazari Singh v. Union of India[7], it was observed at p. 64, citing Soni Vallabhadas v. Asst. Collector of Customs[8] and R.C. Mehta v. State of West Bengal[9] that confessions made to a customs officer have been held by this court not to come within the inhibition of Sections 24 and 25, because they are not police officers, within the meaning of those provisions. These cases cited held that customs officers were not police officers, within the meaning of Section 25 and did not deal with the question whether these were persons in authority. The distinction between "persons in authority" and "Police Officers" is not borne in mind by the Supreme Court in Hazari Singh case. It has to be considered as authority only for the proposition that customs officers and not police officers under Section 25. A person may be a "person in authority" without being a police officer.[10]

A confession made by an accused in the custody of customs officials for purposes of enquiry, in pursuance of an order passed by a Magistrate, would not come within the purview of the Sections 24 and 25 of the Act.[11] Where the statement of the accused was that the confession recorded by the Magistrate was not voluntary and true and it had no actual date and time of occurrence, it was held to be unreliable.[12]

(c) Assistance Sales Tax Officer under the Orissa Sales Tax Act.[13]

(d) Excise Officer.[14]

(e) If a person is interested, or is concerned with the investigation of a case, it would be sufficient to give him that authority. Village Lambardars and Zaildars are part of the machinery for investigation and their duty is to report a cognizable offence and join the investigation of such offences. They are persons in authority.[15]

(f) Panchayat.—Where an inducement to confess a crime proceeded from the members of a panch, the Bombay High Court held that the confession made in virtue of the inducement was not bad, the

---

1. Santokhi Beldar v. King-Emperor, ILR (1932) 12 Pat 241 (FB).
2. Emperor v. Kutub Bux, (1929) 57 Cal 488.
3. Emperor v. Ganesh Chandra Goldar, ILR (1922) 50 Cal 127.
4. Pyarelal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094.
5. Sevanti Lal Karsondas Modi v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 705; Soni Vallabhdas Liladhar v. Assistant Collector, Customs AIR 1965 SC 481; State of Punjab v. Barkat Ram, 1962 SC 276; Laxman Padma Bhagat v. State, AIR 1965 Bom 195 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 616; Illias v. Collector of Customs, AIR 1970 SC 1065; See Contra Hazari Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1973 SC 62; Jai Singh v. State, AIR 1967 Del 14; Badaku Joti Svant v. State of Mysore, AIR 1966 SC 1746.
6. AIR 1979 SC 705.
7. AIR 1973 SC 62.
8. AIR 1965 SC 481.
9. AIR 1970 SC 940. See also Arya Abhushan Bhandar v. Union of India, 1999 AIHC 1302 (para 8) (All), the Court referred to Harbans Singh Sardar Lenasingh v. The State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 1224 : 1972 Cr LJ 759 and Percy Rustomji Basta v. The State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087 : 1971 Cr LJ 933.
10. State of Maharashtra v. P.K. Pathak, AIR 1980 SC 1224.
11. Assistant Collector Central Excise v. C. Fernandes, 1983 SCC (Cri) 109 : (1984) 3 SCC 512.
12. Mumammal v. Inspector of Police, Dindigul, 1996 Cr LJ 163 (paras 10 and 12) (Mad).
13. State of Orissa v. Bhouri Lal, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 835.
14. Harban Singh v. State, (1968) 71 Bom LR 1234.
15. Mst. Bhagan v. State, 1955 Pepsu 33 : 1955 Cr LJ 537; Nannhu Goboriya v. State, AIR 1960 MP 132; Raghunath Pandit v. State of Bihar, 1977 Cr LJ (NOC) 164 (Pat).

member of the panch not being a person in authority.[16] But the Calcutta and Patna High Courts have held that a panch is a person in authority within the meaning of this section. A confession is inadmissible when, in answer to the enquiry of the accused as to whether he would be saved from the consequences if he confessed, the panchayat assured him that he would be let off if he disclosed everything, and the confession was made as the result of such assurance.[17] Where the village panch told the accused that the truth had come out and that he had better say what he knew and the accused thereupon confessed his guilt, it was held that the confession was inadmissible in evidence.[18] Where the extra-judicial confession was alleged to have been made before a Panchayat which failed to obtain the signature of the accused on the panchnama and the Investigating Officer present there at that time failed to arrest him, it was held to unreliable.[19]

A village Magistrate.[20]

Sarpanch of a Grama Panchayat.[21]

Sarpanch or Naib Sarpanch under Orissa Grama Panchayat Act. Member of a Panchayat.[22]

A house surgeon of a hospital ward on whose recommendation the confirmation of a probationary nurse attached to the ward is made.[23]

A police patel of a village.[24]

Mukhiya and Chaukidar, a collecting Panch.[25]

Mukhia, Sarpana and Panch under Bihar Panchayat Raj Act.[26]

(g) An Assistant Registrar of Co-operative Societies making an enquiry under the Co-operative Societies Act can be considered as a person in authority and is not necessarily inadmissible.[27]

(h) An attorney engaged in the investigation of a crime, for the purpose of getting up a prosecution, is a person clothed with authority to offer such an inducement.[28] So is a police officer invested with the powers of an Additional District Magistrate.[29] Similarly, a Sub-Inspector's man, holding out an inducement to the accused that the Sub-Inspector would treat him leniently if they confessed, is a person in authority and the confession so made is inadmissible.[30] Where a confession was made to a tahsildar who was a person of some influence in the village, but had no interest in the prosecution of the accused, other than the interest which every citizen has in the maintenance of law and order, and the confession was made in consequence of questions put, and a promise made by him, it was held that as the tahsildar was not a person empowered to examine the accused or one who could legitimately influence the course of the proceeding, the confession was not excluded by this section.[31]

---

16. Emperor v. Fernand, ILR (1902) 4 Bom LR 785. A mukhia is not a person in authority; Emperor v. Hari Piari, ILR (1926) 49 All 57.
17. Emperor v. Ganesh Chandra Goldar, ILR (1922) 50 Cal 127.
18. Kunja Subudhi v. King Emperor, ILR (1928) 8 Pat 289.
19. Virendra Kumar Yadav v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 231, (paras 32-35 and 37) (Del).
20. Thandray Mudaly v. Emperor, ILR 26 Mad 38.
21. Mohanlal v. State, 1972 Raj LW 437; In re : Sathalavadan, AIR 1939 Mad 515 (President of a Panchayat Vigilance Committee).
22. Mulimayandi v. Emperor, 45 MLJ 845; Emperor v. Mohanlal, ILR 4 All 46.
23. Mst Viran Wali v. State, AIR 1961 J&K 11 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 258; Bhagabaticharan v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Cal 644; Ganga Prasad v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Cal 360; Emperor v. Attur Sing, AIR 1932 Sind 64; Smith v. Emperor, AIR 1918 Mad 111.
24. Nanhu Gobrya v. State, 1960 MP 132 : 1960 Cr LJ 605; Emperor v. Fakira Appaya, AIR 1915 Bom 249.
25. Dukharan Mian v. State of Bihar, 1971 BLJR 641; Ram Din v. Emperor, AIR 1948 All 101; Emperor v. Ganesh Chandra, AIR 1923 Cal 458; Emperor v. Haripiari, AIR 1926 All 737; Kunja Subudhi v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Pat 275.
26. Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18.
27. In re : Narayana Murbii, AIR 1942 Mad 654.
28. The Queen v. Croydon, (1846) 2 Cox 67.
29. Jas Bahadur Thapa v. King-Emperor, AIR 1930 Rangoon 227 : ILR (1929) 8 Ran 52.
30. Bulaqi v. The Crown, (1928) 9 Lah 671.
31. Santokhi Beldar v. King-Emperor, ILR (1932) 12 Pat 241 (FB); Taula v. King-Emperor, AIR 1929 Oudh 272 : ILR (1929) 5 Luck 91 (it was held that a ziladar serving under a big estate was a person in authority.

W, a travelling auditor in the service of the G.I.P. Railway Company, having discovered defalcations in the accounts of the accused, who was booking-clerk of the company, went to him and told him that, "he had better pay the money than go to jail", and added that "it would be better for him to tell the truth", after which the accused was brought before the Traffic Manager in whose presence he signed a receipt for, and admitted having received, a sum of Rs. 826.80. The accused was subsequently put on his trial for criminal breach of trust in respect of this and of other sums. It was held that the words used by W, the travelling auditor, constituted an inducement to the accused to confess, that W was a person in authority, and that the receipt signed by the accused was, therefore, not admissible in evidence on his trial.[32]

(i) A person in authority within the meaning of Section 24 should be one who, by virtue of his position, wields some kind of influence over the accused.[33]

(j) Superior Officer.—The accused, a post-office clerk, under suspicion, fell at his departmental inspector's feet begging to be saved if he disclosed everything, and the inspector replied that he would try his utmost to save him if he told the truth; whereupon the accused said that he would tell anything to the post-master, and the postal inspector said that he would do all he could to get the accused saved. It was held that such inducement held out by the postal investigating officer, who was a person in authority, had the effect of inducing the accused to make a confession of his guilt.[34]

(k) Military Authorities.—Where extra-judicial confession was made before military authorities voluntarily and without any threat or coercion, it could be relied upon and could form the basis of conviction.[35]

The captain of a vessel said to one of his sailors suspected of having stolen a watch—"That unfortunate watch has been found, and if you do not tell me who your partner was, I will commit you to prison as soon as we get to Newcastle—you are a damned villain, and the gallows is painted on your face." It was held that the confession made by the sailor after this threat was not receivable in evidence on his trial for the felony.[36]

It was held that the following persons are Not person in authority:

Officer of Railway Protection Force.[37]

Officer under Prevention of Food-Adulteration Act of 1954.[38]

Gaothia under the abolition of Goathia system in Bihar.[39]

Ram Rakhi not being a police officer, confession made before him admissible.[40]

The accused made a confession of his guilt to the medical officer of his regiment, who told the accused, when he was under his treatment in the hospital, that it would be better for him to tell the truth as to how he came about certain wounds. It was held that the medical officer was not a person in authority in respect of any proceedings which might be contemplated or taken against the accused who made the confession to him; and that all that he represented to the accused was that, on medical grounds, it would be for the accused's benefit if he told the truth as to how he came by the wounds.[41]

Statement made to a person appointed as an investigator under Section 33, of the Insurance Act is not covered by Section 24.[42]

---

32. Reg. v. Navroji Dadabhai, (1872) 9 BHCR 358; Nga Pye v. King-Emperor, (1904) 2 LBR 316.
33. Nannhu Gobrya v. State of M.P., AIR 1960 MP 132.
34. Bhagabaticharan Patra v. Emperor, ILR (1933) 60 Cal 719.
35. State of Maharashtra v. Vinayak Shivajirao Pol, 1998 Cr LJ 306 (Bom). Also see Pakkirasamy v. State of T.N., AIR 1998 SC 107 : 1998 Cr LJ 89.
36. Rex v. Parratt, (1831) 4 C&P 570.
37. Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940.
38. State v. Subash Chand Sharma, (1985) 1 FAC 69.
39. Dhuleswar Behera v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2346 (Ori).
40. Khageswar Khatua v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2374 (para 8) (Ori), held Madan Undu Barik v. The State, (1977) 43 CLT 512 : 1977 Cr LJ NOC 132 (Ori) no longer a good law, following Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, AIR 1991 SC 45 : 1991 Cr LJ 97.
41. Emperor v. Mahamadbuksh, (1906) 8 Bom LR 507.
42. R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1821.

A coffee planter is not a person in authority vis-a-vis a cooly in the estate.[43]

When a father found that his son had committed a crime and he put pressure on the son to disclose the truth, it cannot be stated that the confession so obtained was extorted as the father was not a person in authority to whom it was made.[44]

Though a Police Officer is undoubtedly a person in authority within this section, the cases of confession made to a police officer, or made while in the custody of a police officer, are dealt with specifically in Sections 25 and 26 respectively. In the case of a person in authority, other than a police officer, the confession would be inadmissible only if the conditions laid down in the latter part of Section 24 are satisfied. In the case, however, of a confession to a police officer it is absolutely inadmissible. A confession, made while in the custody of a police officer, is inadmissible, unless it is made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

Confessional statements made by persons who are not in custody are admissible unless they are procured as mentioned in Section 24 or are made to a police officer under Section 25, whereas confessional statements while in custody, except those in the presence of the magistrate under Section 26, are not provable except to the extent permitted by Section 27 of the Act. It is only so much of information which distinctly relates to the facts thereby recovered, and no more, is admissible under Section 27.[45]

15. RETRACTED CONFESSION

It is not the law that once a confession was retracted, the Court should presume that it was tainted and be thrown overboard.[46]

Though a retracted confession which was believed to be true and voluntarily made can form the basis for a conviction, the rule of practice and prudence requires that it should be corroborated by independent evidence.[47] Dealing with the recovery of the smuggled goods by the customs officials, the Supreme Court, held that if the retracted confessions made before customs officers by the accused persons, is corroborated in material particulars by other independent evidence, it is admissible and can be relied on.[48] Retracted confession can legally form the basis of conviction, though as a matter of prudence courts try to look for corroboration from some independent source so as to satisfy their conscience that the confession is true.[49] Where the retracted confession was corroborated by medical and circumstancial evidence, conviction and sentence was sustained.[50] A charge was held to be proved when confession was corroborated by independent evidence of a circumstantial character. In H.W. Roverts v. State of Assam,[51] the Supreme Court held that the circumstantial evidence lent assurance to the genuineness and voluntary nature of the retracted confessions. It is sufficient if there is general corroboration of the important incidents mentioned in the confessions. It is not necessary that a retracted confession should be

---

43. In re : Ahmed, AIR 1950 Mys 82.
44. Biswambar Meher v. State of Maharashtra, 1989 Cr LJ 271.
45. Punjamava v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 5; State of U.P. v. Deo Man Upadhyaya, AIR 1960 SC 1125.
46. State of T.N. v. Kutty, 2001 Cr LJ 4168 (paras 12 and 13) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2778.
47. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66; K.I. Pavunny v. Asstt. Collector (HQ), Central Excise Collectorate, (1997) 3 SCC 721 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 444; Sakharam Shankar Bansode v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2189 (para 4) : AIR 1994 SC 1594.
48. State of Maharashtra v. P.K. Pathak, AIR 1980 SC 1224.
49. Abdul Ghani v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 264; Nika Ram v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 204 (HP); Pyarelal Bhargava v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094; Kandhai S/o. Manfer v. State of Vin. Pra., AIR 1953 Vin Pra 38; Nandkumar v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 702 : (1965) 2 SCR 890; Himath Singh, Badhar Singh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 302; Sarwan Singh, Ratan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; State of Bihar v. Ramchandra Prasad Sharma, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 579; In re : Ahmed, AIR 1950 Mys 82; Serajuddin Ahmed v. State, AIR 1953 Assam 203; Puran v. State of Punjab, AIR 1953 SC 459; Narayana Pillai v. State, AIR 1954 Tri Co 321; Sant Ram v. State, AIR 1953 HP 105; Muthuswamy v. State of Madras, AIR 1954 SC 4; Neelkantan Vasu v. State, AIR 1954 Tri Co; State v. Kanbi Vashram Kanju, AIR 1959 Sau 129; Mathai Mathew v. State, AIR 1952 Tri Co 305; Krishna Nandan Prasad Verma v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166; Arjuna v. Indian Union, AIR 1959 Ori 235; In re : Ramaswamy Konar, AIR 1954 Mad 1006; Mst. Bhagan v. State of Pepsu, AIR 1955 Pepsu 33; Roshan Lal v. Union of India, AIR 1965 HP 1; Ganesh Gogai v. State, AIR 1955 Assam 51.
50. Jillela Madhu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC 320 (AP). Contra : Indrajit Deb v. State of Tripura, 1995 Cr LJ 2715 (paras 17 and 18) (Gau).
51. AIR 1985 SC 823.

corroborated in each material particular.[52] Even if a confession is retracted, it is open to the court, after consideration of the whole evidence in the case, to come to the conclusion that the confession is true, provided that the confession is corroborated in material particulars by credible independent evidence[53]; but it cannot be relied upon unless found to be creditworthy.[54] Where an extra-judicial confession was retracted in a case of dacoity, it was held that, as a matter of caution and prudence, corroboration on material particulars which connected the accused with the crime in question is required before a conviction can be based upon a retracted confession.[55] The material particulars on which corroboration is required are the factum of crime and the identity of the participants in the crime.[56] The rule of prudence usually observed with reference to retracted confession does not require that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession with regard to the participation of the accused person in the crime must be separately and independently corroborated. In the case of the person who has confessed but has resiled from his statement, general corroboration is sufficient. In addition, the court must feel that the reasons given for the retraction in the case of a confession are untrue.[57] The nature and extent of corroboration would depend on the object with which it is required; the object may be to dispel any doubt raised by the retraction, that the confession may be untrue, and the maker may have falsely implicated himself, or it may be to rebut the presumption applicable to an accomplice that he is likely to falsely implicate other persons. The point of contrast between 'general corroboration' and 'corroboration in material particulars' seems to be that the latter expression requires independent evidence which, in some way, reasonably connects or tends to connect the accused with the crime.[58] In Madi Ganga v. State of Orissa[59], it was held that general corroboration of a confession is sufficient to sustain conviction.[60]

The standard of corroboration required for a retracted confession of somewhat different from the standard of corroboration required for the evidence of an accomplice.[61] In Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras,[62] the court pointed out the distinction in the requirement regarding corroboration of retracted confession and the evidence of an accomplice in the following terms:—"Though under Section 133 of the Act a conviction is not illegal merely because it proceeds on the uncorroborated testimony of witnesses, illustration (b) to Section 114 lays down that a court may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars. It is absolutely necessary that what he has deposed must be corroborated in material particulars. Contrasting this with the statement of a person making a confession who stands on a better footing, one need only find out, when there is a retraction, whether the earlier statement, which was the result of remorse, repentance and contribution, was voluntary and true, or not, and it is with that object that corroboration is sought for. The standards of corroboration in the two are quite different. In the case of the person confessing, who has resiled from his statement, general corroboration is sufficient, while an accomplice's evidence should be corroborated in material particulars. In addition, the court must feel that the reasons given for the retraction in the case of a confession are untrue.[63]

The corroboration may be obtained from the facts and circumstances discovered before the confession is made.[64]

When the retracted confession is found to be untrue in many parts and uncorroborated in material particulars, it is not sufficient for a conviction.[65]

---

52. State of U.P. v. Boota Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1770; Pangambam Kalanjoy Singh v. State of Manipur, AIR 1956 SC 9; Bharat v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 950.
53. Nathuram V. Godse v. Emperor, ILR (1956) Punj 499 (FB).
54. Uda alias Suda v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ NOC 28 (Raj) : (2001) 1 Raj Cri C 723.
55. Bandhan Sao v. State, 1960 BLJR 268 : ILR 39 Pat 361; Ahmad Kunju v. State, ILR (1971) 2 Ker 30.
56. Laloo v. State, AIR 1953 Raj 214; Baboo Ram v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 483 (para 12) (All).
57. Abdul Samad v. State, AIR 1959 Ker 46; Hemraj Devilal v. State of Ajmr, AIR 1954 SC 462; Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66; Nandalal More v. State, (1965) 1 Cr LJ 393 (Punj); Arjoon v. State, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 234 (Ori); Kunjan Vasu v. State of Kerala, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 458 (Ker); Mohinder Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 229.
58. In re : Tadipamula Sathyanarayana, AIR 1959 AP 419.
59. AIR 1981 SC 1165.
60. 1978 SCJ 248.
61. Kurungalanga Luxman v. State, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 464; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66.
62. AIR 1958 SC 66.
63. Mohinder Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 229.
64. State v. Ramachandra Bhoi, AIR 1965 Ori 175.
65. Arjuna Lal Misra v. State, AIR 1953 SC 411.

Where the confession was retracted, though it cannot be used against a co-accused, it can be used to a limited extent against the maker, as corroborating the evidence of a witness against him.[66]

Where retraction was made after nearly five years on the ground that confession was made as a result of torture by the customs authorities but there was no satisfactory explanation for belated retraction, retraction was held to be not genuine.[67]

Where corpus delicti is not traceable, the proof of murder depends on the retracted confession, and where the court is satisfied about the improbability of the manner of murder, it is not safe to base a conviction on such confession.[68]

Where accused Nos. 5 and 6 were acquitted of the charge of conspiracy under Section 302, read with Section 120-B of the Penal Code, and accused No. 5, was not charged under Section 302, IPC, read with Section 34, IPC, for the offence of murder for which accused Nos. 1, 6 and 7 were tried, it was held that the retracted confession of accused No. 5 cannot be relied upon against accused No. 6 in view of the fact that accused No. 6 who had been tried along with accused No. 5 was acquitted of the charge of conspiracy to commit murder; and accused No. 5 was not charged for the offence of murder under Section 302 read with Section 34.[69]

In Arjun Lal Mishra v. State[70], the High Court, in revision, upheld B's conviction, but acquitted A, after recording its findings. The conclusion of B's guilt rested solely on his retracted confession, which was not corroborated in material particulars and was devoid of truth in many substantial particulars, according to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court observed that the conviction of B, based solely on the retracted confession, was opposed to law and could not be allowed to stand, as the High Court did not advert to the substantial truth of the story as narrated by the accused, but rested their view on a line of reasoning which was entirely at variance with the confession.

A conviction can be based on a retracted confession, if the confession was voluntary and true. The fact that the maker retracted from the confession during the examination of the accused under Section 313, Cr. P.C., and that the Magistrate who recorded it was not examined, is immaterial.[71]

A retracted confession could be made use of to indicate prima facie involvement of other accused.[72]

When the Court considers taking into consideration a retracted confession of a co-accused against a non-confessing accused under Section 30 of this Act, the proper way is first to marshal the evidence against the accused, excluding the confession altogether from consideration, and then to see whether, if it is believed, a conviction can safely be based on it. If it is acceptable of belief independently of the confession then, of course, it is not necessary to call the confession in aid. But cases may arise where a Judge is not prepared to act on other evidence as it stands even though, if believed, it would be sufficient to sustain a conviction. In such an event the Judge may call in aid the confession, and use it to lend assurance to other evidence and thus fortify himself in believing what, without the aid of the confession, he would not be prepared to accept. Thus it can not be made the foundation of the conviction but can only be used in support of the other evidence.[73]

The Court has to determine, in the first instance, whether a retracted confession is voluntary or has been improperly induced. If, upon weighing all the circumstances, the prisoner's denial and the probabilities, it appears to the judge that the confession has been improperly induced no matter however, true it may be, he is bound to exclude it.[74]

---

66. Paramhansa v. State, AIR 1964 Ori 144.
67. Sule Kareem v. Asstt. Collector of Customs (R&I), 1998 Cr LJ 3052, (para 13-A) (Bom).
68. Ram Chandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381; Birey Singh v. State, AIR 1953 All 785.
69. Vinayak v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1793.
70. AIR 1953 SC 411.
71. Phatik Chandra Gogai v. State of Assam, 1988 Cr LJ 24. Also see Valiyaveetil Ashraf v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 555 (para 26).
72. Mohan Wahi v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2040 (Del).
73. Mohinder Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 229; referring to Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Nathu v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56; Ramparkash v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 1.
74. In re : Tadipamula Sathanarayana, AIR 1959 AP 419.

Where an extra-judicial confession is the sheet anchor of the prosecution, and the accused has denied having made it, the court must see whether there is reliable and unimpeachable evidence in proof of the making of the confession.[75]

A true and voluntary statement cannot be rejected merely because the accused retracted from it at the trial.[76]

A retracted confession of an accused can be taken into consideration along with other evidence for convicting a co-accused.[77]

As the confession is required to be clear, specific and unambiguous, its retraction should also not be ambiguous, vague or imaginary. The person alleging retraction of confession or his earlier inculpatory statement must satisfy the Court that he had withdrawn from that statement at the earliest possible time and such withdrawal from the statement cannot be pleaded to be presumed on imaginary grounds.[78]

16. EXTRA-JUDICIAL CONFESSION

Extra-judicial confession must be addressed to somebody and not the way one goes on shouting in the street that he/she had killed someone and the confession before the assembly of villagers called solely for confronting accused as to whether he had killed a certain person, does not amount to confession/extra-judicial confession.[79] Where the prosecution witness, assuming that the accused had committed patricide, asked him the cause of killing his father whereat he replied that he did it because he used to quarrel, by no stretch of imagination this can be said to be an extra-judicial confession made by the accused.[80] Where the extra-judicial confession did not disclose the name of the victim, it was held that it was an infirm statement and conviction cannot be based on such confession.[81] Where extra-judicial confession was said to be made to the first informer but it found no place in the F.I.R., rejection of the extra-judicial confession was held to be proper.[82]

Where a woman jumped in the well along with her children and, on being rescued, made a voluntary statement to the persons gathered there, it was held such statement is admissible in evidence and can be relied on.[83] Where the witnesses in evidence gave the substance and not the actual words of the extra-judicial confession made to them, it was held that the slight departure by the witness from the statement in the F.I.R. is insignificant and the evidence can be accepted by the court.[84] Where the witness deposed about the extra-judicial confession and he was quite disinterested and independent, and bore no animus against the accused, there could be no justification for disbelieving that evidence when it was corroborated by the evidence regarding recovery of the dead body and ornaments of the deceased at the instance of the accused.[85] Where there was not a suggestion given to the witness to whom extra-judicial confession was made that there was no confession as claimed and it was corroborated by medical evidence, it was held to be reliable.[86]

Regarding extra-judicial confession the evidentiary value depends on the nature of the circumstances, the time when the confession was made and the credibility of the witnesses who speak to

---

75. Jogu Yadaiah v. State of A.P., (1980) 1 AP LJ 313 (DB); Abdul Hye v. State of Assam, (1983) Cr LJ (NOC) 93 (Gau). Inconsistent, uncorroborated retracted extra-judicial confession, Chhittar v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 245 (para 3) : AIR 1994 SC 214.
76. State of Orissa v. Bhuben Chirgun, 1981 Cr LJ 1461 (Ori).
77. Shrishail Nageshi Pare v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1985 SC 866.
78. Taj Mohammad Khan v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 2312 (para 15A) (Kant).
79. Jadumani Khanda v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2701 (paras 6 and 7) (Ori).
80. S.V. Chalke v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3364 (para 7) (Bom).
81. Akanman Bora v. State of Assam, 1988 Cr LJ 573 (Gau). Also see Giddu v. State of West Bengal, 1998 Cr LJ 1798 (paras 9, 10, 11 and 12) (Cal).
82. Udiya v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 516 (Raj).
83. Basanti v. State, 1959 Cr LJ 415 (Ori).
84. Inderdas v. State of Rajasthan, 1985 Cr LJ 1416 (Raj).
85. Buty v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 938.
86. Rangadhar Barik v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 5 (paras 6 and 7) (Ori).

such a confession.[87] Where the witness, before whom the alleged extra-judicial confession was made, did not disclose it to the police or any body else for five days and he suspected that the accused had illicit relations with his wife, it was highly improbable that the accused made confessional statement to him.[88] The conduct of a witness to whom the confession was made, in keeping silent all the time before he swore to an affidavit reflects adversely on his credibility.[89] Where the witness to whom extra-judicial confession was alleged to have been made behaved unnaturally in neither identifying the dead body nor informing the police or the relatives of the deceased regarding the involvement of the accused in the alleged offence and gave inconsistent version as to the substance of the confessional statement, it was held to be unreliable[90] but the extra-judicial confession made by the accused to his sister-in-law when she, seeing him with a gun, asked as to what had happened, was held to be natural and was relied upon and her failure to inform the police immediately was held to be immaterial as she was a rustic woman.[91] However, the extra-judicial confession allegedly made to a relative, a social worker who, though was with the police for two days, lodged a complaint with them after three days, was held to be surrounded by suspicious circumstances.[92]

Where a witness stated that the accused disclosed to him that he killed the victim, but when he tried to phone the police the accused ran away, it was held that the accused would be the last person to make such a voluntary statement to a stranger when his intentions were to run away and no reliance can be placed on such witness.[93] Where a witness deposed for the first time in the police station that the accused made an extra-judicial confession that he committed a mistake in killing his brother and the witness who was a stranger to the accused, never mentioned the extra-judicial confession to any one else, though he met a number of persons on the date of occurrence, it was held that it was unsafe to rely on the evidence of extra-judicial confession, more so when no motive was either alleged or proved against the accused in killing his brother.[94] Where two witnesses mentioned about the making of extra-judicial confession to them by the accused and where there was absence of cordial relationship between the accused and one of the witnesses and the witnesses did not inform the investigation officer about the extra-judicial confession, it was held that as there was no evidence as to the witnesses being in the confidence of the accused, their evidence as to the making of confession cannot be relied on.[95] In the evidence there were verbal differences as to what the accused told the witnesses in his confession, and the accused had no previous association with the witnesses so as to repose confidence in them; it was held that the court would be justified in rejecting the alleged extra-judicial confession.[96] Where the testimony of the witnesses did not incriminate the accused, besides there were other discrepancies in evidence, he was entitled to acquittal.[97]

If the court believes the witness before whom the confession is made and it is satisfied that the confession was voluntary, a conviction can safely be founded on such evidence alone.[98] In proving the extra-judicial confession, the evidence must not lack plausibility but must inspire confidence in the court

---

87. Narayan Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1985 SC 1678; Abdul Munim Khan v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1953 Hyd 145; Heramba Brahma v. State of Assam, AIR 1982 SC 1595 (Confession to an undertrial in jail awaiting trial for dacoity not accepted). Also see Kavita v. State of T.N., AIR 1998 SC 2473 : 1998 Cr LJ 3624.
88. Dwarkadas Gehanmal v. State of Gujarat, (1999) 1 SCC 57.
89. Dharambir v. State, 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 4 (Del). See also State of H.P. v. Diwana, 1995 Cr LJ 3002 (para 21) (HP); Kailash v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3111 (para 8) (Raj).
90. Virendra Kumar Yadav v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 231 (Del).
91. S.G. Gundegowda v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 852 (para 33) (Kant).
92. Balvinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 883 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 607.
93. Jagan Nath v. State of H.P., 1982 Cr LJ 2289 (HP). Also see Mylsami alias Thoppan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 76 (Mad). Witnesses strangers and deposing parrot like, unreliable, Pradipta Kumar Mohanty v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cr LJ 375 (para 4) (Ori); State of Punjab v. Gurdeep Singh, 1999 Cr LJ 4597 (para 26) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3724; confession to not a closely acquainted person and not a helpful person, Sandeep v. State of Haryana, 2001 Cr LJ 1456 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1103.
94. Lakhan Pal v. State of M.P., AIR 1979 SC 1620.
95. Harihar Paik v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 432 (Ori). See also Kheraj Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3113 (para 9) (Raj).
96. State v. Aru Pradhan, 1985 Cr LJ 161 (Ori). See also Niranjan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 248 (para 12) (P&H), relying on Heramba Brahma v. State of Assam, AIR 1982 SC 1593 : 1983 Cr LJ 149.
97. Kanka alias Ouyen Ho v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ NOC 63 (Ori) : (2000) 19 OCR 417; See also Pratap Dehury v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ NOC 78 (Ori) : (2000) 18 OCR 633.
98. State of Rajasthan v. Mangilal, 1981 Cr LJ 852 (Raj); Laxmijani v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 513.

before it is accepted.[1] Where the extra-judicial confession was suspicious, improbable and uncorroborated, the accused were held entitled to acquittal.[2]

Where a witness deposed to the substance and not the actual words of the confession, it can be accepted by a court[3] but where to neither of the two, it is not acceptable.[4] Evidence of oral confessions had to be received with great caution, but when there is nothing in the cross-examination of the witnesses to show that they had any motive for implicating the accused and when they deposed to the actual words uttered by the accused, there is no reason to discard the statements of the witnesses.[5] The exact words of an extra-judicial confession need not be proved in every case. It would be sufficient if the substance of those words spoken to by the accused is proved.[6] However, it was held that the exact words uttered by the accused, while giving the extra-judicial confession, should be proved and it is not safe to rely upon the impressions gathered by the witness from such confessions. Mere general statement that the prisoner confessed is insufficient.[7] If the exact words of the accused were not recorded, it is not safe to rely on such confessions.[8] If the witnesses do not depose to the exact words spoken by the accused while making the extra-judicial confession, such evidence is unworthy of credit.[9] Where the extra-judicial confession was the outcome of the consumption of liquor by both the witness and accused and the witness failed to reproduce the confession in the exact words of the accused or in even the words as nearly as possible, it was excluded from the purview of consideration.[10]

Antecedent recoveries cannot in any way be used to corroborate or to test the truth or otherwise of a confessional statement.[11]

Where there was an extra-judicial confession before a doctor, it was held in the absence of any corroboration by any witness, that the accused was entitled to benefit of doubt.[12]

If a confession is not hit by sections. 24, 25, 26 and 27 of the Evidence Act, and also falls outside the scope of Section 164 Cr. P.C., it would not only be admissible in evidence but, it could be good enough, if believed, to sustain a conviction on any charge.[13] The prosecution witness, who was interrogated by the police on the next of the occurrence, stated the extra-judicial confession made to him by the accused but it was recorded under Section 164 Cr.P.C., after a month. It could not be rejected as a belated version.[14]

Where the accused gave the confessional statement that she gave four axe blows on the head of her deceased husband and the dead body was buried in the house and, later, the dead body was recovered in a decomposed state, and no injuries on the body were visible because the body was highly decomposed, it was held that the confessional statement could not be rejected on the ground that only simple injury was mentioned in the postmortem report, and that she was liable to be convicted.[15]

The evidence of extra-judicial confession, in the very nature of things, is a weak piece of evidence. If the evidence adduced in respect of it lacks plausibility and does not inspire confidence in the court, it

---

1. Moti Gouduni v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2342 (Ori).
2. Surinder Kumar v. State of Punjab, AIR 1999 SC 215 : 1999 Cr LJ 267, at p. 268.
3. Inderdas v. State of Rajasthan, 1985 Cr LJ 1416 (Raj).
4. Ghasiram Lakra v. State of Orissa, 1997 Cr LJ 939 (para 7) (Ori).
5. Raghuvir Singh v. State, AIR 1955 MB 43.
6. Krishnandan Prasad Varma v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166; Mulk Raj v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 902; State of Orissa v. Machindra Majhi, AIR 1964 Ori 100.
7. Public Prosecutor v. Pasala Venkata Reddy, AIR 1945 Mad 202; Sultan v. Emperor, AIR 1934 Sind 119; Des Raj v. Emperor, AIR 1928 Lah 858; Mehar Singh v. State, (1961) 63 Punj LR 742.
8. Sohar Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 Pat 448.
9. Bhanwar Singh v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1054 (Raj); Arjun Sahu v. State of Orissa, 1988 Cr LJ 1086 (Ori).
10. C.K. Reveendran v. State of Kerala, 2000 Cr LJ 497 (para 4) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 369.
11. Abdul Salam v. State, AIR 1954 J&K 1.
12. Aklu Baraik v. State of Assam, 1983 Cr LJ 1578 (Gau); State of Orissa v. Adikanda Swain, 1987 Cr LJ 603 (Ori).
13. Nika Ram v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 204 (HP); Dhuleswar Behera v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2346 (Ori).
14. State of A.P. v. Shaik Mazhar, 2001 Cr LJ 3287 (para 17) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2427.
15. Manguli Devi v. State of Orissa, AIR 1989 SC 483. Contra : Arumugham v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 520 (Mad).

cannot be acted upon.[16] Where the prosecution was based on the testimony of a child eye-witness and there were circumstances raising serious doubts of the child claiming to be an eye witness and also destroying veracity of evidence regarding alleged confession the Supreme Court held acquittal inspite of the alleged confession was proper.[17] Any attempt of the investigating agency to introduce a false story about the removal of the ornaments of the deceased and their recovery from the accused would affect the credibility of the offence regarding the extra-judicial confession alleged to have been made by the accused.[18]

An extra-judicial confession made to one who is not a person in authority, and which is free from any suspicion as to its voluntary character and has also a ring of truth in it, is admissible against the accused and deserves to be acted upon.[19] It is a rule of prudence, particularly in cases of homicide and other grave offences, that it would not be safe to convict an accused person only on the evidence of an extra-judicial confession. The court would have to consider with great caution, whether it was natural for the accused person to have confided in and confessed to the person who is deposing to the confession. The relationship of that person with the accused is most material and vital. The court has to consider what has been confessed to, whether the same is consistent with the facts about the incident as deposed to by the witnesses, and whether the person deposing had any motive or other reason for falsely involving the accused person. If, after such careful scrutiny, the evidence of extra-judicial confession is regarded as acceptable and trustworthy, such evidence cannot be characterised as 'weak type evidence.[20] Where the accused allegedly confessed his guilt to a prosecution witness who was his childhood classmate and neighbour but not friendly or on visiting terms, probability of his making extra-judicial confession to such a witness could not be ruled out.[21] Where the extra-judicial confession was made before the father and brother of the deceased and their evidence was found to be trustworthy, it could not be discarded merely because they were relatives of the deceased.[22] Where extra-judicial confession was allegedly made to a close relative of the accused and his testimony was reliable and truthful and the delay of twenty days in recording his statement was explained by the Investigating Officer, conviction could be based on such extra-judicial confession.[23] Where an accused made two extra-judicial confessions, the first one to his brother-in-law, on the very night of the occurrence and the second one, to the neighbours immediately after his apprehension two days after the incident, it was held that, as the witnesses to whom the confessions were made were reliable and trustworthy having no animus against the accused, the two confessions were quite sufficient to warrant the conviction.[24]

Where the dead body of the victim was not traced, except for a human skeleton with skull and bones at the instance of the accused, there was evidence that the deceased was last seen in the company of the accused and there was recovery of a pair of slippers, a cycle, and some wearing apparel of the deceased at the instance of the accused, it was held that the extra-judicial confession was corroborated by the circumstances leading to the conclusion that the accused committed the murder.[25]

---

16. State of Punjab v. Bhajan Singh, AIR 1975 SC 258 : 1975 Cr LJ 282, followed in Sukhvinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 632 (para 15) (P&H); Jagta v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1545; Ismail Ibrahim v. State, 1975 Cr LJ 1335 (Gau). Weak piece of evidence, can be used for corroboration, Chhinder Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 1616 (para 12) (Raj).
17. State of Delhi v. Vijay Pal, AIR 1980 SC 1621.
18. Jagta v. State of Haryana, AIR 1974 SC 1545.
19. Thimma v. State of Mysore, AIR 1971 SC 1871; State of U.P. v. M.K. Anthony, AIR 1985 SC 48 (Confession of murder of wife and children to a close friend whose evidence found reliable), followed in Riyasat v. State of U.P., 1993 Cr LJ 2834 (para 26) (All); Darshan Lal v. State of J&K, AIR 1975 SC 898; (Confession to uncle and cousin in an Inspector and commandant in BSF who was not person in authroity vis-a-vis the constable who made the confession was held admissible), followed in Arjunan v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 3113 (para 31) (Mad).
20. Prabhakar Narayan v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 246 Bom; Thimma v. State of Mysore, AIR 1971 SC 1871; Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18; Ram Chandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381.
21. State of Maharashtra v. Vilas Pandurang Patil, 1999 Cr LJ 1062, 1067 (Bom).
22. Bisi Chhuria v. State, 1999 Cr LJ 1078, following Kailash v. State of U.P., AIR 1997 SC 2835 (para 13).
23. Ram Khilari v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1999 SC 1002 : 1999 Cr LJ 1450, 1451.
24. Mathur Lohar v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 877 (Cal). See also Mayaram v. State of M.P., 1998 AIHC 368 (paras 14 and 16) (MP).
25. Amar Layek v. State of West Bengal, 1988 Cr LJ 1293 (Cal). See also Balu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3225 (para 9) : AIR 1995 SC 1943.

Where an extra-judicial confession was said to have been made, not immediately after the occurrence, but many days thereafter and, that too, to a person living about 80 to 90 miles away from the residence of the accused, it was held that such extra-judicial confessions could not be relied on, as the circumstances gave rise to suspicion about the truth of the confession.[26]

Extra-judicial confession made before a constable immediately after the occurrence and not in the course of investigation, is admissible in evidence.[27]

Extra-judicial confession made in front of the police is not admissible.[28]

Where an extra-judicial confession was made to chance witnesses immediately after the commission of the crime when asked why the accused were running away, it was held the testimony in respect of the confession could not be disbelieved merely because the witnesses were chance witnesses.[29] Where the accused stated that he was caught by the village people who were chasing the dacoits and was taken to the village on suspicion where he made a confession to the Mukhia, the inculpatory part of his statement about being caught and making confession could not be rejected merely because the exculpatory part of his statement that he was caught on suspicion was found to be false. General denial of his participation in the dacoity could not nullify the admission of independent facts.[30]

Where the evidence was that at the instance of the police, the doctor who was a witness questioned the accused and a confession was made and the accused was arrested later, it was held that the confession was hit by Section 26 and cannot be admissible.[31] The alleged extra-judicial confession, not put to the accused while examining him under Section 313 Cr.P.C., cannot be taken into consideration.[32] Where there was no material on record to prove the crime, the extra-judicial confession by the accused cannot be relied on and the conviction based on it would be illegal.[33]

Extra-judicial confessions are not usually considered with favour but it does not mean that when a confession has come out from a person who has no reason to give the statement falsely, and there are circumstances to support such a statement it should not be disbelieved.[34]

The value of the evidence in respect of an extra-judicial confession would be just like that of any other evidence, depending upon the varacity of the witnesses to whom it was made. An extra-judicial confession, if voluntary, can be relied upon by the court, along with other evidence, in convicting the accused; it is for the court, having regard to the credibility of the witness and his capacity to understand the language in which the accused made the confession, to accept the evidence or not.[35]

In the case of an extra-judicial confession it must pass the tests as to the reproduction of exact words, the reason or motive for the confession, and whether the person selected, is one in whom confidence is reposed by the accused.[36] Where there were no reasons to show as to why and how the accused reposed such a confidence in the Sarpanch as to confess their guilt before him, such a confession was held be improbable.[37]

Where the person charged with conspiracy made an extra-judicial confession, to a widow of another conspirator who was assisting her husband in making spears and other weapons, it was held that it was not acceptable.[38]

Conviction can be based upon the extra-judicial confession without corroboration. Prudence and caution however may require corroboration.[39] Law does not require that the evidence of an extra-judicial

---

26. Nirmalsingh v. State of H.P., 1987 Cr LJ 1644 (HP).
27. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 871, at p. 876 (Raj).
28. Dharani Pradhan v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 2973 (Ori).
29. Malsingh v. State of Rajasthan, 1983 Cr LJ 1411 (Raj).
30. State of Bihar v. Anirudh Thakur, AIR 1998 SC 921.
31. Md. Dwara Rawther Ismail v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 2102 (Ker).
32. Vijay Kumar v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2429 (para 39) (Del). The Court referred to Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1622 : 1984 Cr LJ 1738.
33. Lachman Gouda v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 929 (Ori).
34. Ram Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1967 SC 152.
35. Mulk Raj v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 902.
36. (1985) 2 Cr LC 189 : (1985) 1 Ori LR 638.
37. Jaspal Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1997 SC 332 : 1997 Cr LJ 370.
38. Kanan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1979 SC 1127.
39. Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320; Shiv v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 SC 322; Jagir Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1975 SC 1400.

confession should in all cases be corroborated. When it is proved by an independent witness like a responsible officer who bore no animus against the accused, it can be accepted. In the particular case before the Supreme Court, the extra-judicial confession was corroborated by the recovery of an empty cartridge from the place of occurrence and it was spoken to by a responsible officer.[40] Detailed particulars are not necessary, but some corroboration is required on the main particulars of the affairs while proving the extra-judicial confession. The evidence of the husband that the accused narrated the incident was held to be corroborative piece of evidence in the case.[41] If the statement of an approver about the confession of guilt made to him by the accused, is not corroborated in material particulars, conviction cannot be based on such statement of the approver.[42] Corroboration of the extra-judicial confession, in material particulars is necessary to base the conviction[43] but it can be accepted without corroboration if other evidence inspires confidence.[44] It can be acted upon without corroboration for the purpose of entering a conviction.[45] An extra-judicial confession, if satisfactorily proved to have been voluntarily made, may be the basis for a conviction even in the absence of corroboration[46] but it being a weak piece of evidence, the Court would normally expect sufficient and reliable corroboration to such type of evidence.[47]

Where extra-judicial confession was allegedly made by the accused to his father-in-law through two letters that he had killed his son but the handwriting in those two letters was found to be different from each other and the said letters were brought on record after considerable delay, the genuineness of those letters was doubtful and they could not form the basis of conviction.[48]

Where the accused allegedly surrendered and made extra-judicial confession to Village Administrative Officer who was far away and not to the police station which was nearer to the scene of occurrence, the alleged confession ought to be ignored.[49]

Where extra-judicial confession was made before a person holding a responsible post, evidence of the two witnesses to it was found to be reliable and trustworthy and corroborated, conviction of the accused was proper.[50]

17. EXTRA-JUDICIAL CONFESSION TO STOCK WITNESS

Where extra-judicial confession was made to a stock witness who was casually knowing the accused, it was held to be not acceptable.[51]

18. EVIDENTIARY VALUE OF CONFESSION

There is a clear distinction between the admissibility of an evidence and the weight to be attached to it. A confessional soliloquy is a direct piece of evidence. Before accepting such evidence, it must be established by cogent evidence what the exact words used by the accused were. Even if this is

---

40. Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, A'R 1977 SC 2274. Also see State of Maharashtra v. Vilas Pandurang Patil, 1999 Cr LJ 1062, 1067 (Bom); Jayeshkumar Parshottamdas Valand v. State of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 4260; D.B. Valvi v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 174 (para 10) (Bom).
41. State v. Tomeiren Maringni, 1970 Cr LJ 549 (Manipur).
42. In re : Athayee, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 566 (Mad).
43. Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18; Podyami Joga v. State of M.P., (1964) 1 Cr LJ 455 (MP); Poolin Halder v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 513 (para 18) (Cal).
44. Haribhajan Kour v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 2033 (para 31) (J&K).
45. Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., 2001 Cr LJ 2196 (para 13) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1760.
46. Bisheshar Dhani Ram v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 645 (All).
47. S.V. Chalke v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3364 (para 7) (Bom); voluntary and corroborated extra-judicial confession, trustworthy and reliable, Bagda Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 2129 (paras 9 and 10) (Raj). Contra : uncorroborated and retracted extra-judicial confession, unreliable, Munian v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2165 (paras 9-11) (Mad).
48. Prasanta Kumar Sahu v. State, 1999 Cr LJ 969, at pp. 971 and 972 (Ori).
49. Ravirajan v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 3086 (para 5) (Mad). Also see Ballu v. State of Haryana, 1997 SCC (Cri) 234.
50. Jayeshkumar Parshottamdas Valand v. State of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 4260 (Guj). Extra-judicial confession to uncle. corroborated, conclusion drawn as to guilt of accused, Balu Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 SCC (Cri) 836.
51. Tarseem Kumar v. Delhi Administration, 1995 Cr LJ 470 (para 18) : AIR 1994 SC 2585.

established, prudence and justice require that such evidence cannot be made the sole ground of conviction, but may be used only as a corroborative piece of evidence[52] but where the evidence of the witness before whom extra-judicial confession was made, was found to be discrepant, doubtful, vague and incomplete, it was held to be unreliable.[53] Where it was stated that the accused made a confession to the uncle of the deceased, it was held that it cannot be conceived that the accused would confess in view of the proximate relationship of the uncle with the deceased; and the evidence of the uncle is unworthy of belief.[54] Where the accused, one of the drivers of the truck of the deceased was alleged to have made a confession to one to whom he had no reason to make a confession, and in that statement the accused stated that certain persons had settled the dispute between the accused and his co-accused on the one hand and the deceased on the other, but they murdered the deceased because the deceased was still angry with them, it was held that such a statement cannot be relied on as the accused had no reason to make a confession to that witness.[55] Where the confessional statement showed that the accused stabbed the deceased in her belly and the doctor found the injury on the chest; it was held such confession did not appear to be true; and could not be relied on for convicting the accused.[56]

Where the court has disbelieved a witness, it would be wrong for the court to compare the confession of the accused with the deposition of the witness for knowing the genuineness or otherwise of the confession.[57]

Where there was an omission of a fact in a confession, it was held that it would be illogical to say that there an omission amounts to a contradiction.[58]

A confession can be made even during the trial and the evidence already recorded may be used to corroborate it[59] but confession during investigation is not admissible in evidence.[60]

For the purpose of this section it must be established that a confession is voluntary and also that it is true. As the first one is a sine qua non, if it is found that it is not voluntary, the second one would not arise. For the purpose of establishing its truth, it is necessary to examine the confession and compare it with the rest of the prosecution evidence and the probabilities of the case.[61]

The value of the evidence as to confession depends on the reliability of the witness who gives the evidence.[62] Where the prosecution witness admitted that the accused had confessed his guilt before him and his evidence was corroborated by another prosecution witness, the fact that the accused did not mention this confession before the Magistrate while making judicial confession, was not fatal for forming the basis of conviction[63]; but an involuntary and uncorroborated extra-judicial confession cannot form the basis of conviction.[64] Where confession is voluntary and no infraction or volition of any legally mandated substantive or procedural law is made out, conviction based on it is legal.[65]

Judicial confession would not become bad merely because the articles belonging to the victims were recovered prior to the making of the confession.[66]

---

52. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40.
53. Kamlesh v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 3191 (para 16) (All).
54. Kachhwa v. State of Rajasthan, 1986 Cr LJ 306 (Raj).
55. Balkar Singh v. State of U.P., 1990 Cr LJ 77 (All).
56. Union Territory of Mizoram v. Vanlallawama alias Lallawma, 1977 Cr LJ 1831 (Gau).
57. Birey Singh v. State, AIR 1953 All 785 : 1953 Cr LJ 1817 (All).
58. Birey Singh v. State, AIR 1953 All 785 : 1953 Cr LJ 1817 (All).
59. 1956 Raj LW 435.
60. Balasubramaniam v. State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 423 (Mad).
61. Sarwan Singh Rattan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Shankaria v. State of Raj, AIR 1978 SC 1248; Roop Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1979 Raj LW 314 : 1980 Cr LJ (NOC), 138; State of Orissa v. Dileshwar Bhoi, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 262 ILR 1977 Cut 160; See Kadraka Sitana v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 414 (Ori); (3½ hours time for reflection given by magistrate held confession not admissible); In re : Tadipamula Satyanarayana, AIR 1959 AP 419; Gendra Bhrahm v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 430 (Gau); State of Gujarat v. Subamiya Dosmohmed, 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 70 : 1979 Cri LR (Guj) 366; Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18; Vali Isa Mahmad v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 135; Basanti v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 415 (Ori); Naresh Kumar v. State, 1988 Cr LJ (NOC) 4; Ujir Ali v. State, 1988 Cr LJ (NOC) 50.
62. Kanhu Majhi v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 3729 (para 6) (Ori).
63. Valiyaveetil Ashraf v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 555 (para 19) (Ker).
64. Lakshmi Kirsani v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 2648 (para 9) (Ori).
65. Farid Khan v. State of J.&K., 2000 Cr LJ 2680 (para 3) (J&K).
66. State of T.N. v. Kutty, 2001 Cr LJ 4168 (paras 12 and 14) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2778.

19. NECESSITY FOR CORROBORATION

The rule of prudence does not require that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession, with regard to the participation of the accused person in the crime, must be separately and independently corroborated, nor is it essential that the corroboration must come from the facts and circumstances discovered after the confession was made. If the rule required that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confessional statement must be separately and independently corroborated, then the rule would be meaningless inasmuch as the independent evidence itself would afford sufficient basis for conviction; and it would be unnecessary to call the confession in aid.[67]

Where the circumstances such as recovery of bloodstained clothes or the ornaments of the deceased, and similar circumstances connecting the accused with the crime of murder are conspicuous by their absence, the subsequent conduct of the accused in making an attempt to commit suicide, for which the accused has offered plausible explanation, would not be sufficient corroboration of a confession by the accused.[68]

The extent and the nature of corroboration required, before a Court can act upon a confession will depend upon the circumstances of each case.[69]

The absence of details in the confession is not a reason to treat it as untrue, when there is nothing in the confession which is contrary to the oral evidence.[70]

Law does not presume that such confessions are untrue, but because of the danger of receiving such evidence, Judges thought it better to reject it for the due administration of justice. When hope or fear in respect of the confession were not in question, such statements were admitted as relevant, though with some reluctance and subject to strong warnings as to the weight to be attached to them.[71]

The corroboration must come from an independent source and connect with the crime; it is not enough to corroborate merely that a crime has been committed. The mere fact that the accused had absconded would not be a sufficient corroboration, regarding the participation of the accused in the crime, though it may be relevant under Section 8 of this Act showing his conduct.[72]

Where a BSF constable killed his wife and then told it to his uncle, a counsin of his wife and the commandant; where a woman held her husband in colloboration with her lover who stabbed him to death and then confessed to the Sarpanch and Lambardar of the village[73] and where a man, being unable to afford the medical treatment of his wife, killed her and her two children and then told the fact to a family friend who was trying to find money, in all these cases the Supreme Court upheld conviction solely on the basis of confessions.[74] In a murder case, the accused who was a sepoy in army, made an extra-judicial confession of his guilt in writing voluntarily to his senior officers who were not found to be inimical to him and at his instance head of the deceased was recovered from a well which was within his exclusive knowledge. It was held that variation between minor details in the statement of confession and in evidence did not affect the acceptability of the confession and it could be relied upon for conviction without corroboration.[75]

---

67. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216; Hem Raj Devilal v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1954 SC 462; Noor Muhammed Abdul Samad v. State of Madras, AIR 1959 Ker 46; Subramania Goundan v. State, AIR 1958 SC 66; Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320; Anneppa v. State, 1978 Cr LJ 462 (Ker); *Chandraiahgari Anantharedd*i v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 2109 (paras 15 and 19) (AP).
68. Raghavan v. State of Kerala, 1962 Ker LT 476. No corroboration, Pokar Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 143 (Raj); Naga Reddy v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 2545 (AP).
69. In re : Vasamsetti Appa Rao, AIR 1953 Mad 1004.
70. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66.
71. Reg v. Baldry, 5 Cox CC 523; Ibrahim v. Emperor, AIR 1914 PC 155.
72. In re : Arigachetta Chenniah, ILR 1964 AP 780; referring to Pakala Narayana Swamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354; Sarwan Singh, Ratan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 637; Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216; Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, AIR 1958 SC 66.
73. Maghar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1320; Madi Ganga v. State of Orissa, AIR 1981 SC 1165.
74. State of U.P. v. M.K. Anthony, AIR 1985 SC 48.
75. Vinayak Shivajirao Pol v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 1096 : 1998 Cr LJ 1558 (paras 12, 20, 21 and 22).

20. CONFESSION TO BE TAKEN AS A WHOLE

It is a well accepted rule regarding the use of confessions and admissions that these must be accepted as a whole, or rejected as a whole, and that the court is not competent to accept only the inculpatory part while rejecting the exculpatory part as inherently incredible. A statement that contains a self-exculpatory matter cannot amount to a confession, if the exculpatory matter includes some fact, which, if true, would negative the offence alleged to be confessed to. A confession must either admit in terms the offence or, at any rate, substantially all the facts that constitute the offence.[76]

However, where the exculpatory part of a confessional statement is not only improbable but is contradicted by other evidence, the Court can accept the inculpatory part and, piecing the same with the other evidence, convict the accused.[77] Thus, exculpatory part may be excluded where the evidence or record disproves it[78]; or where it is apparently false.[79] A packet delivered to the post office was opened in the presence of the Post Master by a subordinate who took out a ladies wrist watch and delivered it to the Post Master. The statement of the Post Master was that all this happened in his presence but that "it was done without his consent". The exculpatory portion of the statement was rejected.[80] While giving the confessional statement, the accused stated that the act was committed in self-defence, but that plea was not substantiated; it was held that the exculpatory part of the statement pleading the self-defence can be rejected and the other part can be relied on.[81]

Where an accused was charged for murder, kindnapping and extortion, and the Court has considered it unsafe to act upon the confession for a conviction in respect of murder, there is no reason why the confession insofar as it relates to the two offences of kidnapping and extortion should not be taken into consideration as against the accused, to lend assurance to the conclusion as far as those offences are concerned based on circumstantial evidence.[82]

Reading as a whole the judicial confession showed that the accused had admitted the full length of the role played by him alongwith others in the commission of the crime. It would be of no consequence that he did not say in so many words that he also inflicted one stab injury on the deceased.[83]

Confession to police officer not to be proved.

S. 25. No confession made to a police officer[84] shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence.

---

76. Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, (1953) SCR 94 : AIR 1952 SC 354, followed in Kasim Babamiya Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 AIHC 18 (para 17); Hanumant v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343; Aghnoo Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119; Dohariya v. State, AIR 1956 MB 23 : 1956 Cr LJ 70; Mohammed Pasha v. State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 Hyd 180 : 1956 Cr L.J. 1320; Re : Dangeti Satteya, AIR 1957 AP 213 : 1957 Cr LJ 814; Sant Ram v. State, AIR 1953 HP 105 : 1953 Cr LJ 1665 (HP); Re : Upputholla Sreenivasulu, AIR 1958 AP 37 : 1958 Cr LJ 18; Jagwant Singh v. State, AIR 1966 Raj. 83 : 1966 Cr LJ 451; Narbahadur Darjee v. State, 1965 Assam 89 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 614 (where no other evidence available to verify or check any part of the confession); Budha Majhi v. State, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 487 (Ori); Charan Singh, Hukum Singh v. State, 1961 All WR (sup) 67 : 63 Punj. LR 629; Padmeswar Phukan v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 1595 (Assam); State of Orissa v. Rama Mudulı, 1973 Cr LJ 1326 (Ori); (when it is stated that in exercise of his right of private defence it cannot be rejected); Neelakantan Vasa v. State, 1954 Tri/Co 282 : 1954 Cr LJ 658; Ouseph v. State of Kerala, ILR 1959 Ker 962; Pikabewa v. R. ILR 39 Cal 355; Srinivasa v. R. 1928 Mad 493; R v. Chinnaya, 1940 Mad. WN 169; Abdul v. R. 1940 All 46; (other portion cannot be rejected it would go against the prosecution story); Balmakund v. R. AIR 1931 All 1 (FB); Jagmal v. R. AIR 1948 All 211; Chima Mahariya v. State, 1969 Cr LJ 1291 (MP); Jairam Ojha v. State, 1968 Ori 97; Lokeman Shah v. State of W.B., 2001 Cr LJ 2196 (para 12) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1760.

77. Nishi Kant v. State of Bihar, AIR 1969 SC 422; Hira v. State, AIR 1971 SC 44; Bhagawan v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 1797; Kamala Shanker v. State of Gujarat, (1963) 2, Cr LJ 611 : AIR 1963 Guj 312; Budha Gouda v. State, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 385 : 1965 Ori 170; State v. Ramchandra Bhoi, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 520 : 1965 Ori 175; Bhima v. State, 1956 Ori 177; Parakinkar Chakma v. State of Tripura, 1955 Cr LJ 1292 : 1955 Tripura 19; Koh Jera Jodha v. State, 1954 Cr LJ 1458 (Sau) : 1954 Sau 115; Sultan alias Sullah v. Emperor, 1945 Lah 91; Rajesh Thakur v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 1477 (Cal); Kadraka Sitana v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 414; State v. Gouranga Sahu, 1978 Cr LJ 276

78. Mohan Lal* v. Ajit Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1183; 1978 Cr LJ 1107.

79. Keshoram Bora v. State of Assam, AIR 1978 SC 1096; 1978 Cr LJ 1089. See also Jamuram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1333 (para 34) (Raj).

80. Bhagwan Singh* v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 1797.

81. Kadran Sitara v. State, 1976 Cr LJ 414; Nishikanta v. State of Bihar, AIR 1969 SC 422.

82. Ram Chandra* v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381.

83. State of T.N.* v. Kutty, 2001 Cr LJ 4168 (SC) (para 17) : AIR 2001 SC 2778.

84. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 317
2. Object ... 318
3. Confession ... 318
4. First information report ... 320
5. Accused of an offence ... 321
6. Confession in the presence of a police officer ... 322
7. Confession under TADAA ... 322
8. Confession made to a private individial in the presence of police officers ... 323
9. Police officer ... 323
10. Who are police officers ... 324
    Excise officer (Under the Bihar and Orissa Act) ... 324
11. Who are not police officers ... 325
    (a) Officers of Customs ... 326
    (b) Forest Officer ... 326
12. Section 25 prohibits the use of a confession against the maker and not in his favour ... 327

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section, a confession made to a police officer is inadmissible in evidence except insofar as is provided by Section 27. The principle upon which the rejection of confession made by an accused to a police officer, or while in the custody of such officer (Section 26), is founded, is that a confession thus made or obtained is untrustworthy. The broad ground for not admitting confessions made to a police officer is to avoid the danger of admitting a false confession.[85]

In Queen-Empress v. Babulal, 6 All 509; in his dissent MAHMOOD J. observed: "The rules contained in Sections 25, 26 and 27 of the Evidence Act were not originally treated in British India as, strictly speaking, rules of evidence, but rather as rules governing the action of police officers, and as matters of criminal procedure. The Legislature had in view the malpractices of police officers in extorting confessions from accused persons in order to gain credit by securing convictions, and those malpractices went to the length of positive torture, the Legislature, in laying down such rules, regarded the evidence of police officers as untrustworthy, and the object of the rules was to put a stop to the extortion of confession, by taking away from the police officers the advantage of proving such extorted confession during the trial of accused persons."

Section 162 of the Criminal Procedure Code enacts that no statement made by any person to a police officer in the course of an investigation shall, if taken down in writing be signed by the person making it, nor shall such statement be used as evidence.

The object of this section and Section 26 is to prevent the practice of torture by the police for the purpose of extracting confessions from accused persons. Under this section no confession made to a police officer is admissible against the accused.

Any incriminating statement made by an accused to a police officer is inadmissible in evidence.[86]

In a very early case the Calcutta High Court held: "The reason why the law in Sections 25 and 26 zealously excludes a confession made by an accused, whilst in the custody of a police officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a magistrate, is that there is room for apprehension that a police officer, who is armed with large powers over accused persons, may unwillingly excite terror in their minds and extort false and involuntary confessions, and his duty to investigate criminal cases and to detect offenders and bring them to justice may make him feel tempted to obtain confessions from accused persons by threat, promise, or other improper influence.[87]

---

85. Queen-Empress v. Babu Lal, (1884) 6 All 509, 532 (FB); In re : Zahirabi, AIR 1966 Mys 199. Ibrahim Hussain v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 68.
86. Imperatrix v. Pandharinath, (1881) 6 Bom 34; Queen-Empress v. Nana, (1889) 14 Bom 260 (FB); Queen-Empress v. Mathews, (1884) 10 Cal 1022; Queen-Empress v. Javecharam, (1894) 19 Bom 363; Farid v. King-Emperor, (1906) PR No. 16 of 1906 (Cr); Queen-Empress v. Nga Thet, (1900) 1 UBR (1897-1901) 156; N. Natrajan v. State of T.N., 1996 Cr LJ 1007 (para 10) (Mad).
87. R v. Bepin Behari, 2 Cal WN 71, 74.

The Supreme Court has observed: "As a matter of fact, Sections 25, 26 and 27 differ widely from the English Law. Sections 25 and 26 have been enacted not because the law presumes the statement to be untrue, but, having regard to the tainted nature of the source of evidence, prohibits them from being received in evidence...."[88]

In the first report of the Indian Law Commissioners, it is stated: "The police in the province of Bengal are armed with very extensive powers. They are prohibited from inquiring into cases of a petty nature but complaints in cases of the more serious offences are usually laid before the police darogh, who is authorised to examine the complainant, to issue process of arrest, to summon witnesses, to examine the accused and to forward the case to the Magistrate, or submit a report of his proceedings, according as the evidence may, in his judgment, warrant the one or the other course...Then follow other provisions for preventing any species of compulsion, or maltreatment, with a view to extort a confession or procure information. But we are informed, and this information is corroborated by the evidence we have examined, that, in spite of this qualification as to the character of the confession, confessions are frequently extorted or fabricated.... We are persuaded that any provisions to correct the exercise of this power by the police will be futile; and we accordingly propose to remedy the evil, as far as possible, by the adoption of a rule prohibiting any examination whatever of an accused party by the police, the result of which is to constitute a written document."

In Suman v. State of Tamil Nadu[89] where a person was detained under the Tamil Nadu Prevention of Dangerous Activities of Bootleggers etc. (Act 14 of 1982), it was held that the confessional statement made by the detenu to the police officer can be considered by the detaining authority for making an order of detention. They observed that the proceedings before the detaining authority or the Advisory Board are not of a judicial or quasi-judicial character, nor are they of criminal or quasi-criminal character. Section 25 of the Evidence Act has no application to such proceeding nor is the analogy of that section applicable. It was, however, observed that the weight to be attached to the confession is the matter for the detaining authority.

2. OBJECT

The object of Section 25 is to ensure that the person accused of the offence would not be induced by threat, coercion or force to make a confessional statement and the officers also would make every effort to collect the evidence of the commission of the crime de hors the confession to be extracted from the accused while they are in the custody of the police.[90]

3. CONFESSION

A confession must either admit in terms the offence, or, at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence. No statement that contains self-exculpatory matter can amount to a confession, if the exculpatory statement is of some fact which, if true, would negative the offence alleged to be confessed to.[91]

An admission of a gravely incriminating fact, even a conclusively incriminating fact, is not of itself a confession, e.g., an admission that the accused is the owner of and was in recent possession of the knife or revolver which caused death.[92]

The accused can insist that the entire admission including the exclupatory part must be tendered in evidence.[93]

This section does not exclude all statements by an accused to the police but only confessions. There is a distinction between mere admission and confessions which are statements either directly admitting guilt or suggesting the inference of guilt. The general rule in the section is further subject to the exception which admits statements leading to discovery, whether they amount to confessions or not.

See also Commentary on Sections 17, 18 and 24.

---

88. Deoman v. State, AIR 1960 SC 1125.
89. AIR 1986 Mad 318 (FB).
90. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, AIR 1997 SC 2780 : 1997 Cr LJ 3397.
91. A. Negesia v. Bihar State, AIR 1966 SC 119.
92. Pakala Narayana Swami v. The King Emperor, (1939) 66 IA 66 at p. 81 : 41 Bom LR 428 : 18 Pat 234 : (1941) Ran 789n.
93. A. Nagesia v. Bihar State, AIR 1966 SC 119.

Communication to another is not a necessary ingredient of the concept of confession.[1]

The Supreme Court in Aghnoo Nagesia v. Stateof Bihar[2], held that a confession or admission is evidence against the maker of it unless its admissibility is excluded by some provision of law; that Section 25 does not exclude all statements by an accused to a police officer, but only confessions which are an admission in terms of the offence or at any rate substantially all the facts which constitute the offence. This section does not stand in the way of admitting the statement of an accused to a police officer, if such statement does not amount to a confession. Section 162, Cr PC, should be considered along with Section 25 of this Act while admitting any statement other than a confession, except as provided in Section 27 which provides that a statement leading to the discovery of a fact is admissible. Thus Section 25 protects the accused in respect of a confession made by him to a police officer, whereas Section 162, Cr PC, protects the accused if it is made during the course of investigation. The practice of introducing in evidence a whole confession to a police, under the guise of discovery of fact under Section 27, is deprecated by the Supreme Court in the above case.[3]

A confession to a police officer, whether in the course of investigation or otherwise, and a confession while in police custody, are inadmissible.[4] A confession made to the police in the course of investigating crime A, although it relates to another crime B, is equally inadmissible. The whole spirit of this section is to exclude confessions to the police, and the moment a statement is found to amount to a confession, it does not matter of what crime it is said to be a confession.[5] Where the accused made the confession while preparing the list of recovered articles and the confession was recorded in the recovery list, it was held that such confession, as was made to police, was inadmissible as it would cause irreparable prejudice to the accused.[6] Where a confession was recorded to the effect that the accused was present near the scene of offence, it was held that such confession is not sufficient to discharge the burden on the prosecution and shift it on to the accused and that confession made to a police officer cannot be accepted as substantive evidence to convict him.[7] A confession to a doctor who questioned the accused at the instance of the police officer was held to be inadmissible.[8] A confession to a police officer even in the presence of a Magistrate was held inadmissible.[9] The Privy Council has held that Section 25 covers a confession made to a police officer even before any investigation has started and is not confined to a confession in the course of an investigation.[10] An accused was charged with the offence of belonging to a gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity. During the police enquiry he had made a statement to an Inspector of Police that a bundle of ammunition produced by him was given to him by two other accused who were charged with him as being members of the gang. It was held that, though that statement was self-exculpatory it was inadmissible in evidence under this section as it amounted to an admission of an incriminating circumstances.[11]

For Section 25 to apply, a statement by the accused must amount to a confession.[12]

---

1. Sahoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 40.
2. AIR 1966 SC 119.
3. Hanumant v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343; Palvinder Kaur v. State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354; Ram Lalwani v. State, 1981 Cr LJ 97 (Del).
4. Aghnoo v. State, AIR 1966 SC 119; followed in Khatri Hemraj v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1972 SC 922; Emperor v. Khwaja Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18; Naresh Ch. Nath v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 407 : AIR 1971 Tripura 16; Pershadi v. State, AIR 1945 All 443 : 1955 Cr LJ 1125; (facts leading to discovery of clothe admissible); Jasoda Haldar (Smt.) v. Sailendra Nath, AIR 1957 Cal 372; Banarsi Dass v. State of Punjab, AIR 1981 Cr LJ 1235 (P&H); Padan Pardhan v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 534 (Ori); Punja Mava v. State, AIR 1965 Guj 5. Also see Bullu Das v. State of Bihar, (1998) 8 SCC 130.
5. Seshapani, In re : (1937) Mad 358, 361.
6. Gunda v. State, AIR 1954 All 127.
7. Panlose v. State of Kerala, 1990 Cr LJ 100 (Ker); following State of Gujarat v. Raghunath Vamanrao Bixi, AIR 1985 SC 1092.
8. Mohammad Dwara Rowther Ismail v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 2102 (Ker).
9. Alral v. State of MP, AIR 1954 SC 15.
10. Pakala Narayana Swami v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47.
11. Emperor v. Haji Sher Mahomed, ILR (1921) 46 Bom 958 : 25 Bom LR 214.
12. State v. Memon Mohamud Hussain Ismail, AIR 1959 Bom 534: 1959 Cr LJ 1419; Sankaran Nair Chellappen Nair v. State of Kerala, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 647 : AIR 1965 Ker 248; Dal Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1917 PC 25; Faddi v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 1850; Sital Chandra v. State, AIR 1956 Cal 82 : 1956 Cr LJ 509.

A confession contained in a letter written and signed by the accused and addressed to a police officer was held to be admissible as the letter was not written in presence of the police officer.[13] Where the accused admitted his guilt in his own handwriting before the Investigating Officer who himself supplied him with pen and paper, it was held to be voluntary and was not hit by Section 25.[14] Where the delinquent police constable made confession to the police while in police custody, the disciplinary authority can act upon such confession as rules of evidence do not apply to departmental inquiries.[15]

This section merely forbids the use of a confession made to a police officer and not statement of the accused.[16]

As the material words used in Section 25, of the Act, and Section 162, Cr PC. are the same and the intention of enacting the former is the same as that of the latter, there is no bar on the admissibility of a confessional statement of the accused unless it is shown that it was made to a police officer.[17]

Incriminating statements by the accused to a police officer were held to be not admissible as they are hit by Sections 25 and 26 of the Act.[18] To the extent that the Court made the observation that incriminating statements were not admissible under Section 25, it is submitted that the observation is not correct, the incriminating statement should be a confession of guilt. In that case the accused was said to have stated inter alia that axe with which the murder had been committed was in the house. The observation of the Supreme Court may however be justified on the ground that the statement was in effect a confession of guilt and not a mere incriminating statement. In Kanda Padayachi v. State of T.N.[19] it was explained that an admission of a fact, however, incriminating, but not by itself establishing the guilt of the accused does not amount to a confession. A statement by the accused while in custody of the police, to a doctor that the injury on his body was caused by the murdered person, might be an incriminating fact, but it is admissible and is not barred under Section 26.

P, accused of the murder of a girl, gave to a police officer a knife saying it was the weapon with which he committed the murder. He also said that he threw down the girl's anklets at the scene of the murder and would point them out. On the following day he accompanied the police officer to the place where the girl's body was found, and pointed out the anklets. It was held that such statements, being confessions made to a police officer, whereby no fact was discovered, could not be proved against P.[20] The accused, on his arrest, made a statement in the nature of a confession, which was reduced to writing by one of the Inspectors in whose custody he was, and subsequently signed and acknowledged by him in the presence of the Deputy Commissioner of Police at the police office, the Deputy Commissioner of Police receiving and attesting the statement in his capacity as Magistrate and Justice of the Peace. It was held that the confession was not admissible in evidence.[21] A confession made to a raiding party headed by the Assistant Collector of Customs, in the presence of intelligence officers, was held to be not admissible.[22]

Confessional statement of the co-accused before the customs officials can give rise only to strong suspicion but cannot take place of proof.[23]

4. FIRST INFORMATION REPORT

It was held in Aghnoo's case,[24] that where the accused gave the First Information to the police, the fact of his giving that information is admissible under Section 8. If it is a non-confessional one, it is

---

13. Sita Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1966 SC 1906.
14. Rajan Johnsonbhai Christy v. State of Gujarat, 1997 Cr LJ 3702 (Guj).
15. Kuldeep Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1997 SC 79.
16. Mahanta v. Het Ram, 1954 Punj 27 : 1954 Cr LJ 155; Devi Ram Patt Ram v. State, AIR 1962 Punj 70 : (1962) 1 Cr LJ 186; APK Ramaswamy Reddiar v. Padmanthan, AIR 1966 Mad 392.
17. Himat Singh Badhar Singh v. State, AIR 1965 Guj 302 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 753.
18. Praboo v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1113.
19. AIR 1972 SC 66.
20. Empress of India v. Pancham, (1882) 4 All 198; Emperor v. Hira Gobar, (1919) 21 Bom LR 724.
21. Queen v. Hurribole Chunder Ghose, (1876) 1 Cal 207.
22. J.A. Naidu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 1537.
23. Ashok Kumar Singh v. Union of India, 1999 Cr LJ 1962, 1966 (All).
24. AIR 1966 SC 119.

admissible under Section 21; but a confessional statement cannot be used against the accused under Section 25.[25]

In Khatri & Hemraj v. State of Gujarat[26] the Supreme Court made it clear that such confession can be used for identifying the accused as the maker of the report.[27]

Where the statement of the accused or a part of it amounts to a confession, and another part forms a non-confessional statement, if they are seperable, that part of the non-confessional statement can be taken as evidence forming the first information report.[28]

The above cases were overruled in Aghnoo v. State[29] holding: "We think that the severability test is misleading, and the entire confessional settlement is hit by Section 25; and save and except as provided by Section 27 and save and except the formal part identifying the accused as the maker of the report, no part of it could be tendered in evidence."

It was held that so much of the statement in the F.I.R., which amounts to a confession is not admissible. But the portions in the F.I.R. which do not relate to the crime, as, for instance, which are introductory or are a narration of motive or the opportunity for the crime or leading to the discovery of the fact under Section 27, would be relevant evidence in the case.[30]

But the Allahabad High Court held that narration of fact disclosing the motive for the crime is hit by this section.[31] But M.P. High Court has held that the part of the F.I.R. containing motive and relationship of the accused with the deceased, do not amount to confession. Hence it can be used as evidence.[32]

Where a driver lodged the first information regarding the death of a person hit by his vehicle, it was held that the statement that he had driven the lorry, would be a confession to a police officer, and would be inadmissible in evidence.[33] If the entire F.I.R., contains only a confession pure and simple, it is hit by Section 25; and no part of it is admissible.[34]

5. ACCUSED OF ANY OFFENCE

This expression covers a person accused of an offence at the trial, whether or not he was accused of the offence when he made the confession.[35]

Where a person, immediately after the murder, went to the police station, and lodged the first information report, and he was subsequently accused of the offence and tried for the offence, it was held that the report is not a confessional one but one containing admission of acts by the accused, and can be proved against him.[36]

See also Commentary under this head in Section 24.

---

25. Feddi v. State, AIR 1964 SC 1850; Nisar v. State, AIR 1957 SC 366; Dalsingh v. R, AIR 1917 PC 25; See also, R v. Harnam, ILR 59 Bom 120; Noor Mahamad v. R, AIR 90 IC 148; Mohammada v. R, AIR 1948 Lah 19; State v. Shiv, AIR 1962 Raj 3; Padan Pardhan v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 534 (Ori); Mandesan v. State of Kerala, 1995 Cr LJ 61 (para 6) (Ker).
26. AIR 1972 SC 922.
27. See also In re : Muthian Nadar, 1971 Cr LJ 730 (Mad); Bhuta v. State, 1975 Raj. LW 479.
28. Ram Singh v. State, ILR (1952) 2 Raj 93; Kartar Singh v. State, AIR 1952 Pepsu 98; Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan, ILR (1922) 49 Cal 167; Lachhuman v. State, AIR 1964 Pat 210; State of Rajasthan v. Shiv Singh, AIR 1962 Raj 3.
29. AIR 1966 SC 119.
30. Kartar Singh v. State, AIR 1952 Pepsu 98 : 1952 Cr LJ 1090 (Pepsu); following, Balkhan v. R, AIR 1948 Lah 19; Bharosa Ram Dayal v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Nag 86; Ram Beti v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1512 (para 8) (All).
31. Ram Sajiwan v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 All 447; following Harnam Kishan v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Bom 26; Pakala Narayana Swamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; Padan Pradhan v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 534 (Ori); State v. Balchand, AIR 1960 Raj 101; State of Rajasthan v. Shiva Singh, AIR 1962 Raj 3; Allahdia v. State, 1959 All LJ 340. Contra : Ram Beti v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1512 (para 8) (All).
32. Sukka v. State of M.P., 1998 Cr LJ 3118 (para 3) (MP).
33. Public Prosecutor v. Thulasingam, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 241 (Mad).
34. Badri v. State of U.P., 1973 Cr LJ 1478 (All); State v. Mayadhar Rani, (1971) 1 Cut LR 363 (Cri): 38 Cut LT 725.
A. Nagesia v. State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 119.
Faddi v. State of M.P., AIR 1964 SC 1850; relying on Dalsingh v. Emperor, AIR 1917 PC 25.

6. CONFESSION IN THE PRESENCE OF A POLICE OFFICER

When police were present, it was held that confession could not be deemed to be voluntary.[37] Confession made before a police officer is inadmissible[38] and does not become admissible merely because he is dead.[39] Where the accused was found along with the police, prior to his making a statement under Section 164, Cr PC, and he was in the company of the police while he produced incriminating articles, it was held that it could not be held that the accused was free from police influence and so it was not voluntary.[40] Where a police officer who was present and did not prevent others from offering inducement, it was held that such confession was hit by this section.[41]

7. CONFESSION UNDER TADAA

Under Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act, confession recorded by a police officer who is not below the rank of superintendent of police is admissible in evidence, if the same has been made voluntarily and is truthful.[42]

The Supreme Court[43] laid down the following guidelines so as to ensure that the confession obtained in the pre-indictment interrogation by a police officer not lower in rank than a Superintendent of Police is not tainted with any vice but is in strict conformity of the well-recognised and accepted aesthetic principles and fundamental fairness :

(1) The confession should be recorded in a free atmosphere in the same language in which the person is examined and as narrated by him.

(2) The person from whom a confession has been recorded under Section 15(1) of the TADA Act should be produced before the Chief Metropolitan Magistrate or the Chief Judicial Magistrate to whom the confession is required to be sent under Rule 15(5) along with the original statement of confession, written or recorded on mechanical device without unreasonable delay.

(3) The Chief Metropolitan Magistrate or the Chief Judicial Magistrate should scrupulously record the statement, if any, made by the accused so produced and get his signature or in case of any complaint of torture, the person should be directed to be produced for medical examination before a Medical Officer not lower in rank than of an Assistant Civil Surgeon.

(4) Notwithstanding anything contained in Cr.P.C. no Police Officer below the rank of an Asstt. Commissioner of Police in the Metropolitan cities and elsewhere of a Deputy Superintendent of Police or a Police Officer of equivalent rank, should investigate any offence punishable under TADA Act.

(5) The Police Officer, if he is seeking the custody of any person for pre-indictment or pre-trial interrogation from the judicial custody, must file an affidavit sworn by him explaining the reason not only for such custody but also for the delay, if any, in seeking the police custody.

(6) In case the person taken for interrogation, on receipt of the statutory warning that he is not bound to make a confession and that, if he does so, the said statement may be used against him as evidence, asserts his right to silence, the Police Officer must respect his right of assertion without making any compulsion to give a statement of disclosure.

The Central Govt. may take note of these guidelines and incorporate them by appropriate amendments in the Act and the Rules.

---

37. Para Kinkar v. State of Tripura, AIR 1955 Tripura 19.
38. Anant Kumar v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1499 (paras 3 and 6) (MP); M. Yellappa v. State of Karnataka, 1993 Cr LJ 388 (para 12) (Kant).
39. Amarsingh v. State of M.P., 1996 Cr LJ 1582 (para 15) (MP).
40. Medu Sekh v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 362 (Assam); Hari Ram v. State, 1972 Cr LJ 961 (J&K); State v. Hukam Chand, ILR (1974) 1 Del 419.
41. Punja Mava v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj 5 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 30.
42. Sahib Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 3247 : 1997 Cr LJ 3956. Also see State of Gujarat v. Mohd. Atik, AIR 1998 SC 1686 : 1998 Cr LJ 2251; Gurdeep Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1999 Cr LJ 4573 (paras 26 and 27) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3646; Lal Singh v. State of Gujarat, 2001 Cr LJ 978 (paras 23 and 24) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 746.
43. Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 3139 (paras 268, 269, 270 and 375) (SC).

Plea of inadmissibility of the confessional statement for non-following of the guidelines given in Kartar Singh's case was not accepted in view of the recording the said statement prior to the said decision.[44]

8. CONFESSION MADE TO PRIVATE INDIVIDUALS IN THE PRESENCE OF POLICE OFFICERS

Where the Panchanama was prepared by the police on the day the murder was committed and it was signed not only by the panchas but also purported to have been signed by the accused, it was held that the panchanama was a complete confession of the crime from the beginning to the end and it was highly irregular; as the provisions of the Evidence Act and of the Criminal Procedure Code had not been observed, it can not be admissible in evidence.[45]

An extra-judicial confession made to several witnesses including a village choukidar was held admissible, because the accused was neither in the custody of the choukidar nor was it made to choukidar, or under the influence of the choukidar. Choukidar being a police officer.[46]

9. POLICE OFFICER

This term should not be read in a strict technical sense but according to its more comprehensive and popular meaning. It applies to every police officer and is not restricted to officers in a regular police force.[47]

The Supreme Court observed that: "The test for determining whether a person is a 'police officer' for the purpose of Section 25 of the Evidence Act would be whether the powers of a police officer which are conferred on him or which are exercisable by him because he is deemed to be an officer-in-charge of a police station, establish a direct or substantial relationship with the prohibition enacted by Section 25, that is, the recording of a confession. In other words, the test would be whether the powers are such as would tend to facilitate the obtaining by him of a confession from a suspect or a delinquent. If they do, then it is unnecessary to consider the dominant purpose for which he is appointed or the question as to what other powers he enjoys. These questions may perhaps be relevant for consideration where the powers of a police officer conferred upon him are of a very limited character and are not by themselves sufficient to facilitate the obtaining by him of a confession."[48] It was held that Inspector and Sub-Inspector of Excise are police officers.

Where an officer was invested with powers of officer-in-charge of a police station but did not have the power to submit a report under Section 153, Cr. P.C. It was held that the officer was not a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Act.[49] A senior reserve police officer appointed under the State Reserve Police Force Act, though is a police officer under the Bombay Police Act but he is officer-in-charge of a police station only for the purpose of maintaining law and order and tranquility in the society and power of investigation envisaged in Chapter XII, Cr.P.C. have not been invested with him. Section 25 would not get attracted in regard to the confession made to him.[50]

In Amin Shariff v. Emperor[51] it was held: "It is true that it has nowhere been defined what minimum aggregation of functions will constitute a person a police officer within the meaning of Section 25 of the Act; but the more comprehensive and popular significations of term 'police officer' such as it was in 1861, is not difficult to appreciate from what was said by the Legislature in the Police Act (V of 1861). Powers and duties of police officers under Act V of 1861 or under Act XXV of 1861 or under any other statute, or the different powers which different grades of police officers have under any particular enactment, are mere matters of details as a worked out in order to enable the entire body, taken as a whole to carry out the two essential duties entrusted to them, namely, the prevention and detection of

---

44. Lal Singh v. State of Gujarat, 2001 Cr LJ 978 (para 23) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 746.
45. Narayan Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 1957 SC 737.
46. Sridevi v. State, 1974 Cr LJ 126; Mihir Adhikary v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 1559.
47. Queen v. Hurribole Chuder Ghose, (1876) 1 Cal 207, 215; Maung Wun v. Queen-Empress, (1893) PJ LB 22.
48. Rajaram v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 828.
49. Raj Kumar Kanwal v. Union of India, 1991 SC 45.
50. State of Gujarat v. Anirudhsing, AIR 1997 SC 2780 : 1997 Cr LJ 3397, distinguishing Kartar Singh v. State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 at 719 : 1994 Cr LJ 3139 at pp. 3234 and 3235.
51. AIR 1934 Cal 580 : 61 Cal 607 (FB).

crimes. These two features of the duties which the police have to discharge and especially that of detection of offenders which involves the duty of holding investigations, have always been regarded as making them out for special treatment insofar as confession made to them are concerned.[52]

The Madras High Court in Someshwer H. Shelat, In re.: 1946 Mad 430; held that when an officer was empowered to investigate all offences punishable under an Act and to conduct such investigation, with powers, duties, privileges and liabilities of an officer-in-charge of a police station under the Criminal Procedure Code when investigating a cognizable offence, he would be a police officer within the meaning of this section.[53]

The Powers of an officer-in-charge of a police station are dealt with under Chapter XIV of the Cr. P.C. That Chapter deals with investigation into offences after registering a crime, recording statements of the persons questioned by him, make searches, seize or recover articles connected with an offence, arrest the accused persons in cognizable offences even without obtaining a warrant of arrest from the magistrate, granting bail in non-cognizable cases, sending the accused before a magistrate for remand, and filing a report before a magistrate for purpose of trial of the accused. He can also prevent the commission of offences and detect cases besides exercising the general duty of maintenance of law and order. In the case of persons specially empowered under the Cr. P.C., they may not be burdened with the maintenance of law and order.

It was held by the Gujarat High Court, that the words "Police Officer" are used in Sections 25, 26 and in the proviso to Section 27; they must have the same wide meaning in all those sections, and must cover a person who is authorised to exercise the powers of a police officer; and would not necessarily mean a person who is in-charge of the police station, or who is empowered to make an investigation.[54]

10. WHO ARE POLICE OFFICERS

The following officers are held as: "Police Officers" within the meaning of Section 25.

Excise Officer (Under the Bihar and Orissa Act)[55].—A Central Excise Officer who has the powers of a police officer for investigation but not the power to frame a charge-sheet under Section 173 of the Code of Criminal Procedure is not a police officer for the purpose of this section.[56] Under the Tamil Nadu Prevention of Dangerous Activities of Bootleggers, Drug Offenders, Goondas, Immoral Traffic Offenders, and Slum Grabbers Act, a person who is authorised to detain a person was held to be a police officer. (Act of 1982).[57] Under Tamil Nadu Prevention of Dangerous Activities of Bootleggers, Drug Offenders, Goondas, Immoral Traffic Offenders and Slum Grabbers Act, confession made by the detenu to a police officer constituted a relevant material for subjective satisfaction of the authorities, though the weight to be given it is for the authority to decide.[58]

---

52. See also Queen v. Hurribole Chunder Ghose, ILR (1876) 1 Cal 207; Nanoo v. R, ILR 51 Bom 78 (FB).
53. See also Public Prosecutor v. Parmashivam, AIR 1953 Mad 917; (both the cases deal with an officer of Commercial Tax Department).
54. Punja Maya v. State, AIR 1965 Guj 5; wherein it was held that the observations in Ghunnai v. R, AIR 1934 All 132; are obiter and it dissented from the view expressed in Maharni v. R, AIR 1948 All 7.
55. Raja Ram v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 828; Abdul Rashid v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 3290 (para 1) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2422, reversing the decision of Patna High Court; Rajendra Kumar v. State, AIR 1966 All 42; Public Prosecutor v. A. Annappa, AIR 1969 AP 278; Ahmad Noor Khan v. State, AIR 1972 Gau 7; (Assam Opium Prohibition Act), Public Prosecutor v. Paramasivam, AIR 1953 Mad 917; (Under Opium Act Section 20A, officer is empowered with powers of a officer-in-charge of a police station); Om Prakash v. State, AIR 1951 Punj 387; (Ward rationing officer analogus to that of an excise officer); Nanoo v. R, ILR 51 Bom 78 (FB) overruling, Pereera v. Emperor, (1926) 28 Bom LR 674; Ram Karan Singh v. R, ILR 1935 Nag 13; R v. Dinshaw, AIR 1929 Bom 70; Ibrahim v. R, AIR 1931 Cal 10 : 58 Cal 1260; dissenting from Foorg v. Emperor, AIR 46 Cal 411; Amin Sharuff v. R, AIR 1934 Cal 580 (FB) : ILR 61 Cal 607; Bachoo v. R, AIR 1938 Sind 1 (FB); Emperor v. Dinshaw Driver, 31 Bom LR 49.
56. Badku Joti v. State of Mysore, AIR 1966 SC 1746; See, however, Rajendra Kumar v. State, AIR 1966 All 42; Laxman Padma Bhagat v. State, AIR 1965 Bom 195 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 616; Public Prosecutor v. Annapa, AIR 1969 AP 278; State v. Budhram, AIR 1969 Raj 48.
57. Duraiswamy Mudaliar v. Govt. of T.N., 1985 Cr LJ 1115; overruled on a different point in Suman v. State, AIR 1986 M 318
58. Suman v. State of Tamil Nadu, 1986 Mad 318 (FB) overruling Duraiswamy Mudaliar v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1115 (Mad).

A special officer of the Commercial Tax Department empowered by the principal Government to exercise powers conferred on him by Section 12(3) of the Madras Hoarding and Profiteering Prevention Ordinance to investigate all offences under the Ordinance with all powers, duties, privileges and liabilities of an officer-in-charge of a police station under the Cr. P.C. when investigating a cognizable offence, was held to be a police officer within the meaning of this section.[59]

An officer appointed under the Bombay Sales Tax Act.[60]

Security Officer of H.E.C.[61]

Officers of J.K. Rifles.[62]

Officers under Orissa Home Guard Act (1961).[63]

Police Constable Guarding the Treasury.[64]

Police Patel.[65] See Contra.[66]

Gram Rakshi.[67]

Village Administrative Officer.[68]

11. WHO ARE NOT POLICE OFFICERS

In the undermentioned cases, it was held that the concerned officers were "not Police Officers".

IPS Officer working on an administrative post and not authorised or empowered to conduct investigation.[69]

Officers of Railway Protection Force or under the Railway Property (Unlawful Possession) Act of 1966.[70]

Member of the defence party under Assam Village Defence Organisation Act, 1966.[71]

---

59. In re : Someshwar H. Shelat, AIR 1946 Mad 430; Public Prosecutor v. Paramasivam, AIR 1953 Mad 917.
60. State v. Kaikhushroo Merwan Irani, (1958) (IX) STC 681.
61. Ram Lakhan Pandey v. State of Bihar, 1969 BLJR 707.
62. Lalkawnga v. Union Territory of Mizoram, 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 78.
63. State of Orissa v. Duguba Tubod, 1978 Cr LJ 1566.
64. Ramachandra Singh v. State, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 55 : (1977) 56 Pat 528.
65. Empress v. Rama Birappa, (1878) 3 Bom 12; Queen-Empress v. Bhima, (1892) 17 Bom 485; Amar Singh v. State of Gujrat, 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 84; (Under Bombay Police Act); Vistari Narayan Shebe v. State of Mah., 1978 Cr LJ 891 (Bom), (Maharashtra Village Police Act); State of Mysore v. Ramaji Ramappa Malagi, (1972) 2 Mys. LJ 6 (Under Mysore Police Act); Alluri Ramayya v. State of M.P., 1987 Cr LJ 1172 (Bom); (though he is present in the crowd to whom confession is made it is admissible as the word "to" in Section 25 cannot be read as "in the presence of). Police Patil exercising powers as that of police officer in respect of investigation can be termed as police officer, Vijaysing D. Thakar v. State of Gujarat, 1996 Cr LJ 2932 (para 7) (Guj). See also Ramsingh v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 3763 (para 19) (Bom).
66. In re : Korella Larkhmiah, ILR 1964 AP 905; State v. Barkat Ram, AIR 1962 SC 276; R v. Samipapi, 7 Mad 287; (Section 25 is not applicable to all officers whose duty is to detect and prevent the commission of offences); Additional Public Prosecutor, ILR 1962 AP 1230; Vadithia Sevia.
67. Madan v. State, 1977 Cr LJ (NOC) 132 : 43 Cut LT 512 (Orissa Gram Rakshi Act), held no longer a good law, Khageswar Khatua v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2374 (para 8) (Ori); State v. Shantilata, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 267; Dusasan Bhai v. State of Orissa, 1981 Cr LJ 1452 : 52 Cut LT 126 (DB); Boisakhu Kailor v. State, 60 Cut LT 61; Krup Sindu Mallir v. State, 46 Cut LT 260.
68. Annamalai v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 535 (paras 14 and 15) (Mad).
69. Seethamaniyan v. State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 3038 (para 12) (Ker).
70. Balkishan A. Devidayal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1981 SC 379 : 1980 Cr LJ 1424 : (1980) 4 SCC 600; State of Gujarat v. Abdul Remhan Ismail, 1972 Cr LJ 1101; Darshanlal v. State, AIR 1975 SC 898; Balkishan v. State of Maharashtra, 1975 Cr LJ 1891; Ranjit Singh v. State of M.P., 1974 Cr LJ 719; Badri Vishal v. State of M.P., 1973 MP LJ 82; State of M.P. v. Chandan Singh, 1980 Cr LJ 1024; Sainik Kanaiyalal Kalumal v. State, (1962) 3 Guj LR 739; State of Orissa v. Kapildeo Singh, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 188; State Public Prosecutor v. Sankaran, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 208 : 1983 Mad LW (Cri) 219; State of Punjab v. Barkatram, 1980 Cr LJ 24; Hari Rachu v. State, (1971) 73 Bom LR 891; See also Badaku v. State, AIR 1966 SC 1746; Nanoo v. R, AIR 1927 Bom 4; Amin Shariff v. R, AIR 1934 Cal 580; Public Prosecutor v. Paramasivam, AIR 1953 Mad 917; State of Kerala v. Ramadasan, 1989 Cr LJ (NOC) 110 (Ker); Salim Mohamed Babul Miniyar v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 58 (para 10) (Bom); Santosh Kumar Karmakar v. State of W.B., 2001 Cr LJ 3828 (para 8) (Cal).
71. Akanman Bora v. State of Assam, 1988 Cr LJ 573 (Gau); Ramjan Ali v. State of Assam, 1988 Cr LJ (NOC) 53.

Central Reserve Officer of Central Reserve Police Force.[72]

Constable of Rajasthan Armed Constabulary.[73]

Sub-Divisional Officer.[74]

Officer of the Security Force.[75]

(a) Officers of Customs.—It was held by the Supreme Court that the customs officer is primarily concerned with the checking of smuggling of goods and the due realisation of customs duties, and to determine the action to be taken in the interests of revenue of the country by way of confiscation of goods on which no duty has been paid, by imposing penalties and fine, and is conferred powers of search of persons or places, and of arrest, only for that purpose. The customs officer either under the Land Customs Act of 1924, or under the Sea Customs Act of 1878, is not a police officer; for the purpose of Section 25[76] and a confession recorded by Customs Officer is admissible in evidence.[77]

Inspector of Mines.[78] See Contra.[79]

Prohibition Officer.[80]

Food Inspector under Prevention of Food Adulteration Act.[81]

(b) Forest Officer.—As they are not empowered with powers of a officer-in-charge of a police station and are not competent to file a report under Section 173, Cr P.C.[82]

Officer under Norcotic Drugs Act.[83]

---

72. Jagjit Singh v. State, AIR 1956 Kutch 1 : 1956 Cr LJ 217.
73. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 871 at p. 874 (Raj).
74. Haru v. State of MP, 1980 Cr LJ 762 (MP); (though empowered to search and seize under Essential Commodities Act); Srikant v. R, AIR 1934 Par 256; R v. Samipapi, ILR 7 Mad 287.
75. Darshan Lal v. State, AIR 1975 SC 898; Kapbuaia v. Union Territory of Mizoram, 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 189 (Gau).
76. State of Punjab v. Barkatram, AIR 1962 SC 276 : (1962) 3 SCR 338; overruling Gopal Dass v. State, AIR 1959 Punj 113; Soni Vallabadas v. Assistant Collector, AIR 1965 SC 481; S. Fernandez v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 219; Percy Rustumji v. State, AIR 1971 SC 1087; Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1970 SC 940; Hazari v. Union of India, AIR 1973 SC 62; Balkrishna v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1974 SC 120; Harbansingh v. State, AIR 1972 SC 1224 : 1972 Cr LJ 759; Asst. Collector Customs v. Tilak Raj, AIR 1969 Del 301; Asst. Controller of Customs v. Kedarnath, ILR (1972) 1 Del 775; Barkathali v. Director of Enforcement, AIR 1981 Ker 81; Dy. Collector C.B.O. v. P. Shyab Babu Patro, 40 Cut LT 806; Sevantilal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 705; Illias v. Collector, AIR 1970 SC 1065; Issa Yacub v. State of Mysore, AIR 1961 Mys 7 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 106; (Under Foreign Exchange Regulation Act), M.G. Venugoplan v. E.V. Govindan, 1976 Cr LJ 165; Fr. Mario Pires v. Director of Enforcement, New Delhi, 1982 Cr LJ 461 (Goa); Roshan Bebvi v. Joint Secretary, T.N. 1984 Cr LJ 134 (Mad) (FB); In re : Mayalavahanam, ILR 1947 Mad 788; State v. Papas Kumar Shome, 1985 Cr LJ 871 (Ori); Surjeet Singh Chhabra v. Union of India, AIR 1997 SC 2560; Supdt. of Customs & Central Excise, Nagercoil v. R. Sunder, 1993 Cr LJ 956, at p. 963 (Mad); Banshidhar Maharana v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 1310 (paras 15 and 16) (Pat).
77. Convict Thalak Sher v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 276 (P&H). See also Arya Abhushan Bhandar v. Union of India, 1999 AIHC 1302 (para 8) (All), the Court referred to Percy Rustomji Basta v. The State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 1087 : 1971 Cr LJ 933; Balkrishna Naik v. State of M.P., 2000 Cr LJ 4797 (para 11) (MP); Gulam Husain v. S. Reynolds, Suptd. of Customs, Marmgoa, AIR 2001 SC 2930 (paras 4 and 15) : 2001 Cr LJ 4755.
78. S. Fernandez of State, (1983) 2 FAC 30 (Cal) (Under Dangerous Drugs Act of 1930).
79. State v. B.L. Lohri, AIR 1967 Pat 441; Sachdeo agent of Eklehra Colliery v. State of M.P., 1974 MP LJ 64; following Ramesh Chandra v. State, AIR 1970 SC 940; Illias v. Collector, AIR 1970 SC 1065; State of MP v. Mohammed Abdul Rahman, 1973 Cr LJ 290 (MP).
80. In re : Vadivel, AIR 1952 Mad 299 : 1952 Cr LJ 640 (Mad); Public Prosecutor v. Rangareddy, AIR 1957 And Pra 81 : 1957 Cr LJ 623 (A.P.); In re : Venkata Reddis, AIR 1948 Mad 116; In re : Vasam Seth, AIR 1953 Mad 1004 : 1953 Cr LJ 1877; Srinivasa v. State, 1954 Mad WN 659.
81. State of M.P. v. Mohammad Abdul Rahman, 1973 Cr LJ 290 (MP); State of Punjab v. Barkatram, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 217 (SC); Badaku v. State, AIR 1966 SC 1746 : 1966 Cr LJ 1353 (SC); Ramesh Chandra Mehta v. State of WB, 1970 Cr LJ 863 (SC); Illias v. Collector of Customs, 1970 Cr LJ 998 (SC).
82. Ramesh Chandra v. State of W.B., AIR 1970 SC 940; E.C. Richard v. Forest Range Officer, AIR 1958 Mad 31 : 1958 Cr LJ 52; Kunhiraman v. Spl. Range Officer, ILR 1959 Ker 660 : 1959 Kerala LT 667 : 1959 Mad LJ (Cri) 808; Forest Range Officer v. Aboobacker, 1989 Cr LJ 2038 (Ker); (Under Wild Life Protection Act); Rema Naik v. State, 1965 (1) Cr LJ 315 : AIR 1965 Ori 31; Matia Patel v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ 1897 (para 8) (Ori).
83. Mangal Singh v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 460 (Gu); Union of India v. Altaf Husain, 1998 Cr LJ 2782 (All); Abdul Razak Alias Raju v. Sudip Kumar Dutta, 1989 Cr LJ 2007 (Cal); Kirpal Mohan Tirmani v. B.D. Mishra, 1989 Cr LJ (NOC) 199; (Revenue Intelligence Officer under the Act); R.N. Kaker v. Shabir Fidhusein, 1990 Cr LJ 144 (Bom); Nathubhai Babarbhai Patel v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 536 (para 61) (Bom).

Act—Enforcement Officer investigating the offence under Section 5(1)(aa) of the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act.[84]

Village Kotwal.[85]

Village Choukidar.[86]

Gram Rakhi.[87]

12. SECTION 25 PROHIBITS THE USE OF A CONFESSION AGAINST THE MAKER AND NOT IN HIS FAVOUR

Where the accused stated that he killed his wife on provocation, it was held that the facts relating to provocation can be used in his favour as this section only prohibits use of confession "against" an accused and does not prohibit its use in favour of an accused.[88] It was held by the Privy Council that a statement made to a police officer, confessing the offence, is inadmissible against co-accused but may be used in favour of the maker, as the prohibition under Section 25 is only regarding the use of the statement against the accused.[89] Even if such confession is wholly self-exculpatory; it cannot be used against the co-accused.[90]

This section does not preclude one accused person from proving a confession made to a police officer by another accused person tried jointly with him. Such a confession is not to be received or treated as evidence against the person making it, but simply as evidence on behalf of the other.[91]

A confession might be inadmissible under this section; yet, for other purposes, it would be admissible as an admission, under Section 18, against the person who made it in his character of one setting up an interest in property which is the subject of litigation or judicial enquiry and disposal.[92]

Confession by accused while in custody of police not to be proved against him.

S. 26. No confession made by any person whilst he is in the custody of a police-officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be proved as against such person.

Explanation.*—In this section "Magistrate" does not include the head of a village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St. George or elsewhere, unless such headman is a Magistrate exercising the powers of a Magistrate under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882.[93]

---

84. K T Subramanian v. Dy. Director of Enforcement Directorate, Madras, 1987 Cr LJ 483 (Mad) : (1986) 99 Mad LW 754; relying on Badaku v. State, AIR 1966 SC 1746; Abdul Rajak Haji Md v. Union of India, 1986 Cr LJ 2018 (Punj); Collector of Customs v. Koumal Bhirumal, AIR 1967 Mad 263 : 1967 Cr LJ 1007.
85. Rambhau Bhagwan Dhare v. State of Maharastra, 1979 Mah LJ 603; Srikanth v. R, AIR 1934 Pat 256; Nga Myin v. R, AIR 1924 Rang 245; State of MP v. Premlal, 1987 Cr LJ 204.
86. See Contra Mahto v. State of M.P., 1978 Cr LJ 1149 : 1978 MPLJ 599; Devraj v. State of M.P., 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 115 : (1878) MP LJ 802; Queen-Empress v. Salemuddin Sheik, ILR (1899) 26 Cal 569; King-Emperor v. Pancham, ILR (1933) 8 Luck 410; Emperor v. Deokinandan, (1937) All 85, (FB); Budha Majhi, (1962) Cut 366; In the Punjab a village chaukidar is held to be not a 'police officer' : Khuda Baksh v. The Crown, (1917) Pr. No. 42 of 1917 (Cr); in view Apex Court decision in Raj Kumar Karwal v. Union of India, 1991 Cr LJ 197 (Supra) that only a person conferred with power to investigate under Chap. XII, Cr.P.C. can be said a police officer, Village Chaukar has been held to be not a police officer in Paro Chamar v. State of Bihar (FB), 2000 Cr LJ 4787 (paras 16-20) (Pat), overruling Emperor v. Mt. Jagia, (1938) 39 Cr LJ 428 : AIR 1947 Pat 146 and Punia Goalin v. Emperor, (1947) 48 Cr LJ 412 : AIR 1947 Pat 146 and dissenting from Deokinandan v. Emperor, (1937) 38 Cr LJ 40 : AIR 1936 All 753 (FB); Vistari Narayan Shebe v. State of Maharashtra, 1978 Cr LJ 891 (Bom) and Siddappa v. State of Karnataka, 1991 Cr LJ 458 (Kant).
87. Khageswar Khatua v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2374 (para 8) (Ori).
88. In re : Thandavan, 1973 Cr LJ 1041 (Mad); In re : Rayappa Asari, 1972 Cr LJ 1226 (Mad); Lalkhan v. R, AIR 1948 Lah 43; Hasil v. R, AIR 1942 Lah 37; In re : Motti Thevar, AIR 1952 Mad 586; Hari Shankar v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Del).
89. Waldi Muhammod v. The King, AIR 1949 PC 103; Usman Main v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 747 (Pat); In re : Mottai Thevan, AIR 1952 Mad 586; In re : Rayappa Asari, 1972 Cr LJ 1226; Lalkhan v. R, AIR 1948 Lah 43.
90. Dharma v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 74 : 1966 Cr LJ 441.
91. Imperatrix v. Pitamber Jina, ILR (1877) 2 Bom 61.
92. Queen-Empress v. Tribhovan Manekchand, ILR (1884) 9 Bom 131.
93. See now the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974).

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 328
2. Custody ... 328
3. Police Officer ... 330
4. Confessions ... 330
   (a) Confession under police restraint ... 331
   (b) Confession in the immediate presence of a Magistrate ... 332
5. Extra-judicial confession ... 335

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section was adopted with some verbal alterations from the old Section 149, Cr PC of 1861, which was in the following terms:—"No confession or admission of guilt made by a person, whilst he is in the custody of a police officer, unless it be made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate, shall be used as evidence as against such person."

Under this section no confession made by a person in custody, to any person other than a police officer, shall be admissible, unless made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate. Section 25 excludes confessions to police officers under any circumstances. This section excludes confessions to anyone else, while the person making it is in a position to be influenced by a police officer. The presence of the Magistrate secures the free and voluntary nature of the confession and the confessing person has an opportunity of making a statement uncontrolled by any fear of the police.[1]

Thus, this section is a further extension of the principle laid down in Section 25. Section 25 applies to all confessions made to police officers; this section applies to confessions made to persons other than police officers but made while in police custody.

Section 25 was intended as a full protection to the accused in its widest and most popular signification, by saying that no confession made to a police officer shall be proved as against a person accused of any offence. As the prohibition is absolute, it is submitted that a confession made to a police officer even in the presence of a magistrate would not be admissible. Section 26 will not apply to a case where the confession is made to a police officer.

The Supreme Court observed: "Under the Indian Evidence Act, the Miranda[2] exclusionary rule that custodial interrogations are inherently coercive, finds expression in Section 26, although the Indian provision confines it to confession which is a narrower concept than self-incrimination".[3]

In Pakala Narayana Swamy v. The King Emperor[4] the Privy Council observed that a confession "includes any statement made by (any) person whilst in custody of the police and appears to apply to such statements to whomsoever made, e.g., to fellow prisoner, a doctor or a visitor; such statements are not covered by Section 162."[5]

2. CUSTODY

The word 'custody' is not defined in the Act. But it implies that there must be some limitation upon the liberty of the citizen, either directly or indirectly caused by police, which may include arrest, detention, surveillance or any restraint on his movement.[6] It does not necessarily mean custody after formal arrest; it is sufficient if there is some form of police surveillances, or restriction by the police on the movements of the person concerned.[7] Police custody extends to a case where the accused is deemed

---

1. Hiran Miya, In the matter of (1877) 1 CLR 21.
2. (1966) 384 US 436.
3. Nandini Satpathy v. P.L. Dani, AIR 1978 SC 1025.
4. AIR 1939 PC 47 : 66 IA 66 (B).
5. See also Mahabir v. State, AIR 1972 SC 1331; Nagesia v. State, AIR 1966 SC 119.
6. State of Bihar v. Madanlal Agarwalla, AIR 1967 Pat 63; Jairam Ojha v. State, AIR 1968 Ori 97, In re : Ramachandran, 1960 Cr LJ 616; 1969 Mad 191; Paramahansa v. State, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 680 : AIR 1964 Ori 144, In re : Mannem Edukondalu, AIR 1957 AP 729, Babbu v. State, AIR 1954 All 633.
7. Mahir Adhikary v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 1559 (Cal); Rodhal Mal v. Ramji Das, AIR 1933 Lah 609; Ahamad Kunju v. State, ILR (1971) 2 Ker 30; Akmat Ali v. State, 1957 Tri 48 : 1957 Cr LJ 1457.

to have submitted to the custody of the police officer, by submitting to the interrogation and making statements about discovery and thereby ceases to be a free man.[8] The words "in custody" which are to be found in this and other sections of the Act include surveillance or restriction on the movements of the person concerned, which may be complete as, for instance, in the case of an arrested person, or may be partial.[9]

In considering whether an accused is in police custody when his confession is recorded, the crucial test is whether at the time when the accused makes the confession he is a free man or his movements are controlled by the police either by themselves or through some other agency employed by them, for the purpose of securing the confession. Even a temporary absence of policeman or a police officer would not terminate his custody and the accused shall be deemed to be in the custody of the police even in such circumstances.[10]

As soon as an accused or a suspected person comes into the hands of a police officer, he is, in the absence of a clear and unmistakable evidence to the contrary, no longer at liberty, and is, therefore, in custody within the meaning of this section and Section 27.[11] Where the evidence was that, at the instance of the police, the doctor who was a witness questioned the accused and a confession was made and the accused was arrested later, it was held that the confession was hit by Section 26, and could not be admissible.[12] The mere temporary absence of a policeman from the room in which the confession is recorded does not terminate his custody of the accused, if the policeman has taken effective steps to prevent his escape whether by locking the door of the room or by waiting outside[13], or by leaving him in the custody of another person.[14] Where a village policeman who had arrested the accused left him in charge of certain villagers and went to see the scene of occurrence and, during that interval, the accused confessed his guilt to those villagers, it was held that, notwithstanding the temporary absence of the policeman, the accused being still under police custody, the extra-judicial confession made before the villagers was not admissible in evidence.[15] When once the accused is arrested by the police officer and is in his custody, though temporarily left in charge of a private individual, it does not terminate the police custody. When a police constable took the accused for medical examination and when the accused confessed certain facts to the doctor and the doctor stated that police constables were outside the room, it was held that the confession was inadmissible as it is hit by Section 26 of the Act.[16] An English woman under arrest on a charge of murder was taken in a tonga, from the place where the alleged offence was committed, to the principal town of the district. An European friend drove with her in the tonga and a mounted policeman rode in front. In the course of the journey, the policeman left the tonga and went to a neighbouring village to procure a fresh horse, the tonga meanwhile proceeding slowly along the road for some miles without any escort. In the absence of the policeman, the accused made a communication to her friend with reference to the alleged offence. At the trial it was proposed to ask what the accused had said, on the ground that she was not then in custody, and that this section did not apply. It was held that, notwithstanding the temporary absence of the policeman, the accused was still in custody, and the question could not be allowed.[17]

---

8. Bakshia v. State, AIR 1960 Bom 263; Punja Mava v. State of Gujarath, AIR 1965 Guj 5; State v. Md. Hussain, AIR 1959 Bom 534; Maharani v. Emperor, AIR 1948 All 7.
9. Harbansingh v. State, (1968) 71 Bom LR 599. Also see Bibhachha Baitharu v. State of Orissa, 1998 Cr LJ 1553 (para 7) (Ori).
10. Ram Singh v. State, 1959 All 518 : 1959 Cr LJ 940; (after giving confession he was again handed over to the police custody) State v. Girosia Bachuba, AIR 1954 Sau 39 : 1954 Cr LJ 561; Punja Mava v. State of Gujarat, 1965 Guj 5; A.P. Kuttan Panicker v. State of Kerala, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 669 (Ker); Farman Shah v. State, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 53; State v. Thingnam Dhabalo Singh, 1955 Cr LJ 139 : AIR 1955 Mani 1; Vidyamati v. State, AIR 1951 HP 82 : 1952 Cr LJ 33; Emperor v. Panchkari Dutt, AIR 1925 Cal 587; Sivarajan v. State, ILR 1959 Ker 319; Mobemi Minji v. Union Territory of Arunachal Pradesh, 1982 Cr LJ 39 (NOC).
11. Maung Lay v. King-Emperor, ILR (1923) 1 Ran 609; King-Emperor v. Pancham, ILR (1933) 8 Luck 410.
12. Md. Dwara Rawther Ismail v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 2102.
13. Queen-Empress v. Lakshmya, 1896 Unre Cr C 855.
14. King-Emperor v. Musammat Jagia, ILR (1938) 17 Pat 369 : AIR 1938 Pat 308.
15. King-Emperor v. Pancham, ILR (1933) 8 Luck 410.
16. Raghavan v. State, 1962 Ker LJ 755 : 1964 MLJ (Cri) 29; following Haroon v. State, AIR 1932 Sind 149; R v. Mst Jagia, AIR 1938 Pat 308; Mst. Hassan Pari v. The Emperor, AIR 1941 Peshawar 22; Ram Singh v. State, AIR 1959 All 518.
17. Empress v. Lester, ILR (1895) 20 Bom 165.

The evidence of a police officer and of witnesses as to the pointing out of various places by the accused is really evidence of the confession of his guilt made by the accused while the latter is in the custody of the police officer and is, therefore, a statement inadmissible under Section 25 and this section.[18]

Where the accused was brought hand-cuffed to the police station and a statement was made by the accused to the police at the outpost police station, that he killed the deceased, it was held that the statement was inadmissible as it was made while in police custody.[19] An accused approaching a police officer and making a statement incriminating himself can be said to be in police custody; as custody means submission to custody by words, or action.[20] Where a little before the recovery of the articles, the police took the appellant into custody and interrogated him and then the appellant gave the axe with which the murder had been committed and also stated that his blood-stained clothes and dhoti were in his house and he would produce them, it was held that the statements by the appellant were incriminating statements made to a police officer and were hit by Section 26.[21] Though the accused was in judicial lock-up under the Magistrate's supervision, but with police guard, it was held that it was really a case of police custody.[22] Where an accused made a confession before his father-in-law, a police officer, who arrested him later, it was held that as the confession was while in custody of the police, it was hit by Section 26.[23] Where the accused was arrested by the police, and later he made a statement to the medical officer as to how he had sustained the injuries, it was held that it is inadmissible.[24] While the accused was in the lock-up of the Magistrate under trial, he was sent up by the Magistrate to a hospital for treatment. He was taken from the lock-up to the dispensary by two policemen, who waited outside on the verandah of the hospital. During his examination inside the dispensary by the doctor, the accused made a confession of his guilt to another patient who happened to be there within the hearing of the doctor. It was held that the confession was inadmissible, because the accused, who was in police custody up to his arrival at the hospital, remained in that custody even though the policemen were standing outside on the verandah.[25]

The full Bench of Kerala High Court held that a statement made by an accused to a doctor of a Govt. hospital, though incriminating, is not a confession hit by Section 26 and is therefore admissible.[26] Where the accused, whilst in police custody, made a statement before a doctor that the injury on his person was caused by the murdered person, as the statement does not amount to a confession, it is not barred under this section but can be relied upon as an admission, under Section 21, of the fact that he was in the deceased's room.[27]

3. POLICE OFFICER

This term was held to include police officers of former Indian States.[28]

A jailor is not a police-officer, and a confession made to him may be given in evidence.[29]

For other cases, see commentary under Section 25 under the head 'Police Officer'.

4. CONFESSIONS

A statement made to a police officer by an accused person, while in custody of the police, although intended to be made in self-exculpation and not as a confession, may nevertheless be an admission of an

---

18. Turab v. King-Emperor, ILR (1934) 10 Luck 281 : AIR 1935 Oudh 1.
19. Ramlal Lohar v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 1734 (Gau).
20. State of Bihar v. Madan Lal Agarwalla, 1966 BL JR 133.
21. Prabhoo v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113; State v. Debnu, AIR 1957 HP 52 : 1957 Cr LJ 1254; Jogjit Singh v. State, 1956 Cr LJ 217.
22. Kirpa v. State, AIR 1952 HP 68 : 1952 Cr LJ 1495.
23. Amar Singh v. State, 1980 Cr LJ (NOC) 84 : 1980 Cr LR 154 (Guj).
24. In re : Diraviam, 1985 Cr LJ (NOC) 63 : 1984 Mad LW 163 (Cri).
25. Emperor v. Mallangowda, (1917) 19 Bom LR 783, 42 Bom 1 : AIR 1917 Bom 130.
26. State of Kerala v. Ammimi, 1988 Cr LJ 107 (FB).
27. Kanda Padayachi v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 SC 66.
28. Queen-Empress v. Nagla Kala, ILR (1896) 22 Bom 235.
29. Queen-Empress v. Bhima, ILR (1892) 17 Bom 485, Queen-Empress v. Tatya, ILR (1895) 20 Bom 795.

incriminating circumstances, and, if so, under Sections 25 and 26, it cannot be proved against the accused.[30] If a statement contains an admission of an offence, not only that admission but also every other admission of an incriminating fact contained in the statement is part of the confession.[31] If it is an admission of an incriminating circumstance it cannot be used in evidence either under Section 25 or this section.[32]

But if it does not amount directly or indirectly to an admission of any incriminating circumstance, it is admissible. Where, therefore, the accused was found carrying away a box at night, and when asked by a policeman about the ownership of the box, he stated that it belonged to him, it was held that the statement was admissible against him, in a trial for theft regarding the box.[33] It was held by the Supreme Court[34] that a statement made by an accused in police custody, to a doctor that the injuries on his person were caused by the murdered person amounts only to an admission of facts, though incriminating and its admissibility is not barred under this section.[35]

Where a person proceeded against under Section 109, Cr PC, (for keeping good behaviour) is not prosecuted for any offence, any statement made by him is not a confession; such statements are not covered either by 162, Cr PC or by Section 26 of this Act. There seems to be no other provision of law which renders such statements inadmissible in evidence on the ground that they were made to a police officer.[36]

For other cases see Commentary under Section 24 and 25.

(a) Confession under police restraint.—The prolonged custody, immediately preceding the making of the confession is sufficient unless it is properly explained, to stamp it as voluntary. Though various suggestions were made on behalf of the accused during the cross-examination of the inspector to show inducement, threat or promise of any nature and, they were denied, it would not relieve the prosecution from the duty of positively establishing that the confession was voluntary.[37]

There is a considerable difference between a confession recorded before an accused was placed in the police custody and the one recorded afterwards. In the former case, the contents of the confession may themselves be a reason for placing him in police custody e.g., for pointing out the places of recovering of the articles which he divulges in the confession. If, on the other hand, he is put in the police custody and returns with a readiness to confess, it is obvious that it has been the stimulant. In such circumstances, the magistrate has to give much longer time and take special caution before recording the confession.[38]

An extra-judicial confession was made to a doctor after the accused had been kept in the police station for 3, 4 days and at the instance of the police; it was held that the confession is hit by Section 26.[39]

Where a confession was made before the customs authorities, while the accused was in police custody, it was held that confession was not admissible in evidence. It was further held that though customs authorities have power of arrest under Section 104 of Customs Act, that does not mean that the police officer cannot exercise his power under Cr PC.[40]

---

30. Imperatrix v. Pandharinath, (1881) 6 Bom 34; Anant Kumar v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1499 (paras 3 and 6) (MP); Banshidhar Maharana v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 1310 (paras 15 and 16) (Pat).
31. A. Nagesia v. Bihar State, AIR 1966 SC 119.
32. Queen-Empress v. Javecharam, ILR (1894) 19 Bom 363; Queen-Empress v. Jai Singh, (1900) PR No. 12 of 1900 (Cr); Hakiman v. King-Emperor, (1905) PR No. 20 of 1905 (Cr); Farid v. King-Emperor, (1906) PR No. 16 of 1906 (Cr).
33. Emperor v. Mahmed, ILR (1903) 5 Bom LR 313; distinguishing Imperatrix v. Pandarinath, (1881) 6 Bom 34.
34. Kanda Padayachi v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1972 SC 66.
35. Emperor v. Mohamed, (1903) 5 Bom LR 313; distinguishing Imperatrix v. Pandharinath, ILR (1881) 6 Bom 34.
36. Rex v. Ram Dayal, AIR 1950 All 134, 142.
37. Nathu v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56.
38. Kartar Singh v. State of V.P., AIR 1952 Vin Pra 42 : 1952 Cr LJ 986.
39. Mohamad Dwara Rawther Ismail v. State of Kerala, 1982 Cr LJ 2102 (Ker).
40. 1980 Cr LR (Guj) 252.

(b) Confession in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.—The word 'Magistrate' was held to include Magistrates of former Indian States.[41]

A confession made to a Magistrate while in the custody of the police is admissible.[42] A statement made on oath before a coroner is admissible in evidence.[43]

A confession made while in the custody of the police to an officer who is not a Magistrate, e.g., a Portuguese Administrator[44], is not admissible in evidence. Confession made by the accused in police custody to a Magistrate in England or in a foreign country (e.g. French India), is admissible.[45]

This section contains the expression, "in the immediate presence of the Magistrate". The explanation says that the expression 'Magistrate' does not include the head of a village discharging magisterial functions in the Presidency of Fort St. George or elsewhere, unless such headman is a Magistrate exercising a power of Magistrate under the Cr PC, 1882. So this contemplates that a headman of a village can be empowered with magisterial functions under this section.[46]

Under this section the main consideration is the presence of the Magistrate and the making of the confession in his presence.[47]

A statement of the accused charged with murder, identifying the body discovered as that of the deceased, in the presence of a Magistrate and police officials, does not amount to a confession of a crime and is outside the purview of Section 26. Further Section 26 is not applicable when the statement is made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate even though the person making it might be in police custody.[48]

A confession is admissible without proof when it is made before a Magistrate following the procedure under Section 164, Cr P C and can be looked into even when it goes in favour of the accused[49] but where the Magistrate failed to ask any question to the accused relating to his making the confession voluntarily, it could not be relied upon for conviction. Mere warning is not sufficient.[50] In Nazir Ahmed v. Emperor,[51] it was held that oral evidence by a magistrate of a confession made to him in the course of an investigation which was not recorded following the procedure under Section 164, Cr PC is not admissible and a conviction based on such confession has to be set aside.[52] The Supreme Court in State of U.P. v. Singhara Singh[53] held that where a Second Class Magistrate, not empowered to record confessions under Section 164, Cr PC, records the confession under that section, his oral evidence relating to the confession is not admissible.[54] Where a statement was given under police pressure and recorded by a magistrate under Section 164, Cr PC, it is inadmissible.[55]

Where the Magistrate followed the requisite formalities in recording the confession, the mere fact that the record does not show that he told the accused that he was a Magistrate, is immaterial, and the confession is admissible.[56]

---

41. Queen-Empress v. Nagla Kala, ILR (1896) 22 Bom 235; sup: Queen-Empress v. Sundar Singh, (1890) 12 All 595; Govinda v. King Emperor, (1920) 17 NLR 113.
42. Emperor v. Sidheshwar Nath, (1933) 56 All 730, R v. Moti, AIR 1953 All 792 : 1953 Cr LJ 1829 (All).
43. Emperor v. Ramnath, ILR 50 Bom 111; Emperor v. Md. Hasan, 30 Bom LR 86 (1927).
44. Emperor v. Mhabli, (1924) 26 Bom LR 706.
45. Panchanatham Pillai, In re : (1929) 52 Mad 529.
46. Panchanathan v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Mad 487; Emperor v. Hulasi, AIR 1933 All 286.
47. Jograj v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 534.
48. In re : Chinnasami, AIR 1960 Mad 462 : 1960 Cr LJ 1344; See Chinnaswamy v. State of A.P., AIR 1962 SC 1788 on appeal.
49. Harnath v. State, AIR 1952 Ajmer 49.
50. Maharaj Deen v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 506 (paras 23, 25 and 26) (All).
51. 1936 PC 253 : 63 IA 372.
52. See also In re : Dinanath Ganpat Rai, AIR 1940 Nag 188; Emperor v. Kommoju Brahman, AIR 1940 Pat 163; Bala Majhi v. State of Orissa, AIR 1951 Ori 168 (FB).
53. AIR 1964 SC 358, Tandra Ravi v. State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ 4048 (para 23) (AP).
54. Singhara Singh v. State of U.P., 1961 All LJ 617; (magistrate not specially empowered), Basdeo v. State, 1965 All LJ 77, Basdeo v. State, 1967 Cr LJ 1104
55. State v. Suram Singh, 1976 Cr LJ 96 (J&K)
56. Paramahamsa v. State, AIR 1964 Ori 144.

Where a confession was recorded by a specially empowered Taluk Magistrate and it was corroborated, it was held that mere availability of a judicial magistrate for recording the confession would not, by itself, be sufficient to discard the evidence of the Taluk Magistrate. As the confession did not suffer from any infirmities, it was voluntary.[57]

The question has often arisen in the courts as to whether a confession which was not recorded by a magistrate under Section 164, Cr.P.C. would be admissible under this section as a confession made "in the immediate presence of a magistrate". In Zwinglee Ariel v. State of M P.[58] the Supreme Court held that the alleged statements, made by the accused in that case in the immediate presence of the Magistrate would not be admissible in evidence, as they were not recorded by the magistrate in the manner prescribed by Section 164, Cr.P.C. Purporting to follow this decision it was held in re.: Thothan[59] that a confession recorded by a magistrate empowered to record a confession without conforming to the provision of Section 164 or Section 364, Cr PC is inadmissible in evidence. The Judges went further and held that no confession recorded by a magistrate of any rank is admissible unless it conforms to the provisions of Section 164, Cr.P.C. They came to that conclusion notwithstanding the view expressed in In re : Ramaswami Reddiar v. State,[60] where it was held that a confession before a magistrate holding an inquest but not empowered to record confessions under Section 164, Cr PC is admissible. It is submitted that the above extreme view taken in In re.: Thothan,[61] is not correct. In considering the question of admissibility of a confession made before a magistrate, it is important to note the distinction between various cases of such confession.

Section 26 deals with a confession made by a person in the custody of the police "in the immediate presence of a magistrate". It is to be noted that the expression used is "in the immediate presence of a magistrate" and not "to a magistrate". For instance a confession may be made to a police officer or any other person in the presence of a magistrate and not made to the magistrate. If it is made to a police officer, it would come within Section 25 and will be totally inadmissible even though it is made in the presence of a magistrate and Section 26 would not apply. If it is made to any other person Section 26 would apply and it would be admissible, if made, in the presence of the magistrate. In Pakala Narayana Swamy v. King Emperor,[62] the Privy Council observed that Section 26 would include any statement by a person while in the custody of a police and appears to apply to such statements to whomsoever made e g , to a fellow prisoner, a doctor or a visitor. Confessional statement may also be made to a Magistrate. If the magistrate of first class or of second class is empowered to record a confession under Section 164, Cr PC, then such a confession would be inadmissible, if it is not recorded in view of the decision in Nazir Ahmad's case[63]. The decision in Ariel's case[64] is also a case of a confession to a magistrate. In that case a trap was laid by the police to a person accepting bribe and the police took with them an Additional District Magistrate and a First Class Magistrate. Dealing with a confessional statements made on that occasion the Supreme Court observed: "If these alleged statements are to be regarded as confessions, they will be hit by Section 25 of the Evidence Act, for they were made to Pande, the police officer who was there. If they are sought to be brought in under Section 26 as confessions made in the immediate presence of a magistrate then also they will not be admissible in evidence, in that they were not recorded by the magistrate in the manner prescribed by Section 164, Cr PC". It is to be noted that in this case the magistrate was a First Class Magistrate who had a duty to record under Section 164, Cr PC. It is submitted therefore that the above observation of the Supreme Court with regard to the inadmissibility under Section 26 is to be confined to the cases of confession made before a magistrate who is under a duty to record statements under Section 164, Cr PC in the manner prescribed by that section. The above reasoning would equally apply to a case where the recording of the statement is not in accordance with Section 164, Cr PC as well as to a case where it is not recorded at all. Where the procedure under Section 164, Cr PC is not followed, the recording has to be ignored and the position would be as if there is no

---

57. Abdul Rehman v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1979 SC 1924.
58. AIR 1954 SC 15.
59. AIR 1956 Mad 425.
60. AIR 1953 Mad 138.
61. AIR 1956 Mad 425; See also Noor Mohamed v. State, AIR 1959 Ker 46.
62. 1939 PC 47 : 66 IA at p. 80.
63. 63 I.A. 372 : 1936 253 (2).
64. AIR 1954 SC 15.

record and the confession would be inadmissible. Zwinglee's case has no application where the magistrate has no duty to record under Section 164, Cr PC, and therefore does not record the confession.

A distinction has to be made where there is a mere irregularity in procedure. In State of U.P. v. Antonyhn[65] it was held that where the signature was taken on the statement recorded under Section 164, Cr PC, the statement is not rendered inadmissible.

Yet another case which has to be considered is where a statement is made before a magistrate who is not empowered to record or though empowered, the confession made before him was in the circumstances which do not fall within Section 164, Cr PC. It is submitted that in those cases as there is no question of recording the statement under Section 164, Cr PC, the non-recording the statement or not following the procedure under Section 164, will not be of any consequence and the confession will be admissible under Section 26 as it is made in the presence of a magistrate.

In Miral v. Emperor,[66] it was stated: "It is to be observed that, if this ruling of the Privy Council[67], is to be kept, as clearly it should be kept, in effect, to cases of confessions recorded by Magistrates empowered to record confessions during the course of an investigation, the special provisions of Section 164, Cr PC, do not apply to confessions otherwise made; they would not apply, for instance, to a confession made by an accused person to Third Class Magistrate such as in Noukar Mouledino v. Emperor[68] nor to a Second Class Magistrate, not especially empowered to record confessions; nor also to a confession alleged to have been made, as in this case, to some one who is not a Magistrate (Sher Mohammad). The ruling of their Lordships and the provisions of Section 164 would also not apply to a statement of a confession for which special provision is made in Section 339(2), Cr PC. Such a statement referred to in sub-section (2) of Section 339, Cr PC, should in the nature of things, be a confessional statement, and if it was intended to make such a statement subject to the provisions of Section 164, Cr PC, we must assume the Legislature would have said so."

According to Section 20 of the Coroner's Act the Coroner shall be deemed to be a magistrate for the purpose of Section 26 of the Evidence Act. Therefore, it was held that where a Coroner records a confession made to him at an inquest, he has to follow the procedure under Section 164, Cr PC.[69]

The provisions in the Coroner's Act relating to the duty of the magistrate at the inquest are the same as those relating to the magistrate holding an inquest under Section 176(1), Cr PC, in the matter of recording confessions. The Madras High Court held that a confession recorded by the magistrate, who is not empowered to record a confession at the time of inquest, is admissible.[70]

A confession of a guilt to a Magistrate when he visit the jail and during the interview of the accused, is not inadmissible.[71]

Section 164, Cr PC does not make it obligatory on the part of the Magistrate to record in writing a confession made by the accused, while he is holding an investigation or a preliminary enquiry under Section 159, Cr PC and it can be proved by his oral evidence.[72]

In Criminal cases extra-judicial confessions can be proved against the accused. The only requirement under this section is that the confession is to be made in the immediate presence of a magistrate and it does not say that it should be recorded in writing. It is only if the confession is given to a magistrate during the course of the investigation, that the procedure under Section 164, Cr PC is to be strictly adhered to. And, if that procedure is not followed, it cannot be proved by the oral evidence of the magistrate. Thus, oral evidence can be allowed as regards the confession made to a magistrate, not during the course of investigation, but when the magistrate went and met the accused to trap him while committing the offence, or for some other purpose.[73]

---

65. AIR 1985 SC 48.
66. AIR 1943 Sind 166.
67. AIR 1936 P.C. 253.
68. AIR 1937 Sind 212.
69. Government of Bombay v. Dashrath Ramnivas, AIR 1945 Bom 265 (FB).
70. Ramaswamy v. State, AIR 1943 Mad 138.
71. Rayalugadu v. R., 1931 Mad WN 723.
72. Tangedupalli v. R, AIR 1922 Mad 40.
73. Chhutkannoo v. Rex, AIR 1949 Oudh 84; In re : Nain Mohamed, AIR 1960 Mad 138; In re : Natesan, AIR 1960 Mad 443; In re : Ramachandran, AIR 1960 Mad 191; Arunachala v. R, AIR 1932 Mad 500; Miral v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Sind 166.

Where a confession was made to a Magistrate who followed the procedure under Section 164, Cr PC, it is not necessary in all cases to examine the Magistrate.[74]

A confession recorded by a magistrate under Section 164, Cr PC, after the police had completed investigation and submitted a charge but before the magesterial enquiry has commenced, is admissible in evidence.[75]

Where the magistrate did not follow the precaution as required under Section 164, Cr PC before recording a confession such confession cannot be taken into consideration.[76]

5. EXTRA-JUDICIAL CONFESSION

These are made by the party elsewhere than before a Magistrate or in court. The law in regard to extra-judicial confessions may be stated thus: An extra-judicial confession, if voluntary, can be relied upon by the court, along with other evidence, in convicting the accused.[77] Where the confession was made before the witnesses while the accused was not anywhere near the precints of the police station, nor during the surveillance of the police, though long after it was recorded inside the police station, it was held that bar of Section 26 was not attracted.[78] Where there was difference of a.m. and p.m. in recording the time of extra-judicial confession, it was held to be not proper to jettison an otherwise sturdy piece of evidence of extra-judicial confession on the ground of such a rickety premise.[79] Extra-judicial confession made in police custody is hit by S. 26.[80]

Usually, and as a matter of caution, courts require some material corroboration to an extra-judicial confessional statement.[81]

Though it cannot be laid down, as an inflexible rule of law, that in no case will an extra-judicial confession afford the sole basis for conviction, in cases of homicide and such other similar grave offences, it would not be safe to convict a person on the confession alone unless corroborated by other evidence. This is a rule of prudence rather than of law. The nature and the quality of corroborative evidence must necessarily depend upon the facts of each case.

The extra-judicial confession of an accused cannot be taken into consideration in determining his guilt when it is not put to him in his examination under Section 313 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.

For other cases see Commentary in Section 24.

How much of information received from accused may be proved

S. 27. Provided that, when any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence, in the custody of a police officer, so much of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered, may be proved.

---

74. Madi Ganga v. State of Orissa, AIR 1981 SC 1165; Bisipati Padhan v. State, AIR 1969 Ori 289.
75. B. Rajaram v. State, AIR 1966 All 1927 overruling; Bachchanlal v. State, AIR 1957 All 184 : 1957 Cr LJ 344; Ram Singh v. State, AIR 1959 All 518 : 1959 Cr LJ 940; State v. Ram Autar Chaudhary, AIR 1955 All 138.
76. Noor Uddin v. State, 1965 All 40 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 4; Re : Thothan, AIR 1956 Mad 425 : 1956 Cr LJ 1004; Nazir Ahmed v. R, AIR 1936 PC 253; Shital Singh v. State, 1975 Cr LJ 699 (All) (cannot even be treated as extra-judicial confession) In re : Balan alias Balusami Mudali, (1973) 2 Cr LJ 1311; (not even as an admission) 1972 Mad LJ (Cri) 543; (it should be recorded as far as possible in the first person itself) State v. Surat Singh, 1976 Cr LJ 96 (J&K).
77. Mulk Raj v. State of U.P., AIR 1959 SC 902.
78. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, AIR 1997 SC 1588 (para 20) : 1997 Cr LJ 774 (SC), reversing Cri A No. 255 of 1994, decided on 4-11-1994 (AP).
79. State of A.P. v. Gangula Satya Murthy, AIR 1997 SC 1588 (para 13) : 1997 Cr LJ 774 (SC), reversing Cri A No. 255 of 1994, decided on 4-11-1994 (AP).
80. M.V. Mahesh v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 771 (para 23) (Kant).
81. Ratan Goud v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 336
2. Constitutional validity ... 338
3. Section 27—Art. 14 of the Constitution ... 338
4. When any fact is deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received ... 338
5. Signature or thumb impression of accused on disclosure statement ... 341
6. Signature of accused in seizure memo ... 342
7. Information received on phone ... 342
8. Independent witnesses ... 342
9. Fact discovered—Discovery of a witness ... 342
10. Disclosure statement—admissibility ... 343
11. Inadmissible statements and discovery ... 343
12. No statement ... 343
13. Statement to be recorded ... 344
14. Information must be received from a person accused of an offence ... 344
15. The person must be in the custody of a police officer ... 345
16. Police Officer ... 346
17. Evidentiary value ... 347
18. Section 27 and Sections 7, 8, 9 of the Evidence Act ... 348
19. To what extent the information is admissible ... 349
20. Place of discovery ... 354
21. Leads to discovery ... 355
22. Statement not leading to the discovery of fact ... 357
23. Statement subsequent to discovery ... 357
24. Statement in the case of a number of accused ... 358
25. Police already know ... 361
26. Delay ... 361
27. Whether Section 27 is a proviso to Sections 24, 25, 26 ... 362

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section is founded on the principle that if the confession of the accused is supported by the discovery of a fact, the confession may be presumed to be true, and not to have been extracted. It comes into operation only:

(i) if and when certain facts are deposed to as discovered in consequence of information received from an accused person in police custody; and

(ii) if the information relates distinctly to the fact discovered.

The broad ground for not admitting confessions made to a police officer under inducement, threat or promise is the danger of admitting false confessions; but the necessity for the exclusion disappears in a case provided for by this section when the truth of the confession is guaranteed by the discovery of facts in consequence of the information given.[1]

The object of this section is to admit evidence which is relevant to the matter under inquiry, namely, the guilt of the accused, and not to admit evidence which is not relevant to that matter. The discovery of a material object is of no relevancy to the question whether the accused is guilty of the offence charged against him, unless it is connected with the offence. It is, therefore, the connection of the thing discovered which renders its discovery a relevant fact. The connection between the offence and the thing discovered may be established by evidence other than the statement leading to the discovery but that does not exclude proof of the connection by the statement itself.[2]

The Privy Council held that this section, which is not artistically worded, provides an exception to the prohibition imposed by the preceding section, and enables certain statements made by a person in police custody to be proved.[3] The condition necessary to bring the section into operation is that the discovery of a fact, in consequence of information received from a person accused of any offence who is

---

1. Bulaqi v. The Crown, ILR (1928) 9 Lah 671, 675.
2. Pirgu Singh v. King Emperor, (1946) 25 Pat 279; Ramsingh, (1952) Raj 93; State of U.P. v. Rajnath, 1983 Mad LJ 347 Cri.
3. Pulukuri Kottaya v. R., AIR 1947 PC 67, 84 : 51 CWN 474 : 49 Bom LR 508 : 74 IA 65, approved in State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675 : 1997 (Cri) 1032.

in the custody of a police officer, must be deposed to, and so much of the information as relates to the fact thereby discovered may be proved.[4]

SIR JOHN BEAUMONT, in Polukuri Kottaya v. R,[5] overruling In re.: Athappa Goundan,[6] observed: "The section seems to be based on the view that, if a fact is actually discovered in consequence of information given, some guarantee is afforded thereby that the information was true, and accordingly can be safely allowed to be given in evidence but clearly the extent of the information admissible must depend on the exact nature of the fact discovered, to which such information is required to relate. That ban (imposed by the two preceding sections) was presumably inspired by the fear of the Legislature that a person under police influence might be induced to confess by the exercise of undue pressure. But if all that is required to lift the ban on the inclusion in the confession of information relating to an object subsequently produced, it seems reasonable to suppose that the persuasive powers of the police will prove equal to the occasion, and that in practice the ban will lose its effect".[7]

The principle underlying this section was taken from the amended Section 150, of the Criminal Procedure Code, under the Amended Act, 8 of 1869. When this Evidence Act was enacted in 1872, that Section 150, Cr PC, was transferred to the Evidence Act.

Under this section:

(a) there must be information;

(b) it does not matter whether the information amounts to confession or not;

(c) that person must be in the custody of a police officer;

(d) in consequence of the information a fact must be deposed to as discovered;

(e) in such a case so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved.

Whether a person is in custody or outside, a confession made by him to a police officer or the making of which is procured by inducement, threat or promise, having reference to the charge against him and proceeding from a person in authority, is not provable against him in any proceeding in which he discharged with the commission of an offence. Where in persuance of the statement made by the accused on the specific question by the investigating officer stolen property was discovered, the said statement of the accused could not be said to be volunteered and was inadmissible in evidence.[8]

A confession made by a person whilst he is in the custody of a police officer, to a person other than a police officer, is not provable in a proceeding in which he is charged with the commission of an offence, unless it is made in the immediate presence of a Magistrate.

That part of the information given by a person, whilst in police custody, whether the information is confessional or otherwise, which distinctly relates to the fact thereby discovered but no more, is provable in a proceeding in which he is charged with the commission of an offence.

A statement, whether it amounts to a confession or not, made by a person when he is not in custody, to another person, such latter person not being a police officer, may be proved if it is otherwise relevant.

A statement made by a person to a police officer, in the course of an investigation of an offence under Ch. XIV of the Code of Criminal Procedure, cannot, except to the extent permitted by Section 27 of the Indian Evidence Act, be used for any purpose at any enquiry or trial of any offence under investigation at the time when the statement was made in which he is concerned as a person accused of an offence.[9]

---

4. Queen-Empress v. Babulal, 6 Cal 509; Reg v. Jora Hasji, (1874) 11 Bom HCR 242; Queen-Empress v. Nana, ILR (1889) 14 Bom 260; Queen-Empress v. Coomer Sahib, ILR (1888) 12 Mad 153; Abu Shikdar v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1888) 11 Cal 635.
5. AIR 1947 PC 67.
6. AIR 1937 Mad 618.
7. This decision was followed in Ramkishan v. State, in AIR 1955 SC 104 : 1955 SCR 903; See also Frabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1983 SC 446; R. v. Ganu, ILR (1931) 56 Bom 172; Legal Remembrancer v. Lalitmohan, 49 Cal 167.
8. Meghaji Godadji Thakore v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Cr LJ 730 (Guj).
9. State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya, (1961) 1 SCR 14 at p. 23 : AIR 1960 SC 1125.

Statements of accused persons to the police admitting the commission of the crime cannot be allowed to go in evidence against them under the guise of admissible evidence falling within the scope of this section.[10]

Where the accused allegedly stated that the injuries sustained by him were caused due to dog-bite and the evidence showed that only one of those injuries was attributable to dog-bite, still the statement of the accused could not be used in evidence against him.[11]

2. CONSTITUTIONAL VALIDITY

Article 20(3) of the Constitution states: "No person accused of any offence shall be compelled to be a witness against himself."

The Supreme Court in State of Bombay v. Kathi Kalu Oghad,[12] held that statements admissible under Section 27 of the Evidence Act are not within the prohibition of Art. 20(3) unless compulsion has been used in obtaining the information. The mere fact that the accused was in custody at the time he made the confession did not make it a compelled statement though that fact coupled with others might establish that the statement was compelled. Dealing with the argument that Art. 20(3) only provides that an accused cannot be compelled to be a witness against himself, the Supreme Court observed that the expression "to be a witness" bears the wider meaning of "bearing testimony orally or writing in court or out of court by a person accused of an offence". It would therefore include a statement under Section 27. The decision of the Supreme Court has been treated as setting the law on the question.[13]

3. SECTION 27—ARTICLE 14 OF THE CONSTITUTION

In State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya,[14] the Supreme Court held that Section 27 does not violate Art. 14 of the Constitution. Dealing with the contention that it discriminates between confessions made by persons in custody of a police officer and persons not in custody, the Supreme Court held that the distinction made between the two classes of persons cannot be called arbitrary, artificial or evasive. Persons in custody, and persons not in custody, do not stand on the same footing nor require identical protection.[15]

4. WHEN ANY FACT IS DEPOSED TO AS DISCOVERED IN CONSEQUENCE OF INFORMATION RECEIVED

The 'fact' must be a 'relevant fact' (Section 5). The fact said to have been discovered in consequence of information received from a person accused of an offence, must be of a kind which such information really helps to bring to light and which it would be difficult to find out otherwise before it can be treated as of any substantial probative value.[16] The fact must be the consequence, and the information the cause of its discovery. The information and fact should be connected with each other as cause and effect. If any portion of the information does not satisfy this test, it should be excluded.[17]

---

10. Janomani Nadar v. State, (1954) TC 1211; Narpal Singh v. Haryana, AIR 1977 SC 1066.
11. Shivaji Ganu Naik v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 471, at p. 475 (Bom).
12. AIR 1961 SC 1808 : (1962) 3 SCR 10.
13. Panda v. Union of India, AIR 1963 Punj 198; Ahmed Miyan v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 159; R.K. Dalmia v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1821 : (1963) 1 SCR 253 at 381; State of Gujarat v. Shyam Lal, AIR 1963 Guj 178; Collector of Customs v. Kotumal, AIR 1967 Mad 263 (FB); See also Dhoom Singh v. State, AIR 1957 All 197; Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293; Anam Swain v. State, AIR 1954 Orissa 33; In re : Madugula Iermian, AIR 1957 AP 611 : ILR 1956 AP 173; Jethiya v. State, AIR 1955 Raj 14; In re : Govinda Reddy, AIR 1958 Mys 150 (DB).
14. AIR 1960 SC 1125 : (1961) 1 SCR 14.
15. See also In re : Ramachandra, AIR 1960 Mad 191.
16. Nga Shwe Tat v. Queen-Empress, (1897) 1 UBR (1897-1901) 152. Nexus of recovered articles with crime not established. Dwarkadas Gehanmal v. State of Gujarat, (1998) 1 SCC 57. Also see Shambhu Dayal v. Subhash Chandra, AIR 1998 SC 1732.
17. Sukhan v. The Crown, ILR (1929) 10 Lah 283, 293, (FB) : AIR 1929 Lah 344; King-Emperor v. Ramanujam, ILR (1934) 58 Mad 642, FB; H.P. Administration v. Om Prakash, AIR 1972 SC 975; Fateh Singh Dahyabhai v. State, (1973) 14 Guj LR 696; Avtar Singh v. State of U.P., 1978 Cr LJ 324 (All); State of Hyderabad v. Annantha Reddy, AIR 1953 Hyd 133 : 1953 Cr LJ 746 Hyd; In re : Murugan, AIR 1958 Mad 451 : 1958 Cr LJ 1196 Mad. Gopal v. State of Allahabad, 1977 Cr LJ 358. Stolen articles recovered in persuance of the information given by accused.

It was observed: "It is fallacious to treat the "fact discovered" in this section as equivalent to the object produced; the fact discovered embraces the place from which the object is produced and the knowledge of the accused as to this, and the information given must relate distinctly to this fact".[18] Where the Sessions Judge did not accept the evidence of recovery as showing the connection of accused with the crime, on the ground that there was no evidence to show that the deceased was wearing the ear-rings at the time of the crime, by drawing a distinction between possession and knowledge of the articles, the Supreme Court held that the Sessions Judge was not justified in his conclusion and that the statement of the accused that he had buried the ear-rings was admissible in evidence as it connected the accused with the crime.[19] Where the weapon of offence was recovered on the basis of the statement made by the accused during investigation in another case, the said statement was held admissible in evidence.[20]

In State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya,[21] it was held that the information given by the accused was provable insofar as it distinctly related to the fact thereby discovered, and his statement that he had thrown the Gandasa in the tank was information which distinctly related to the fact thereby discovered, the Gandasa.[22]

In a burglary case the accused in police custody stated to the police that he would show the place where he had hidden the ornaments and that statement led to the discovery of the stolen ornaments. The Supreme Court held that Section 27 allows that part of the statement made by the accused to the police, whether it amounts to a confession or not, which relates distinctly to the facts thereby discovered to be proved; thus, even a confessional statement before the police, which distinctly relates to the discovery of a fact, may be proved under Section 27. In this case the statement was admissible as a whole. The words 'he had hidden them' had nothing to do with the past history of the crime, and were distinctly related to the actual discovery that took place by virtue that statement and would therefore not be inadmissible.[23] Where the police recovered the stolen property from a house on the pointing out of the accused, the fact that the said house belonged to his brother-in-law, would not absolve him from the incriminating evidence proved against him.[24] Recovery cannot be doubted simply because the sketch of the place of recovery was not prepared.[25]

The Supreme Court observed that the phrase 'distinctly' relates 'to the fact thereby discovered', and it is the linchpin of the provision, and it means "clearly, unmistakably, decidedly or indubitably."[26]

In Prabhoo v. State of U.P.,[27] the accused gave out, when interrogated by a police officer, that the axe with which the murder had been committed and his blood stained shirt and dhoti were in the house. The Supreme Court observed: "they were incriminating statements made to a police officer and were hit by Sections 25 and 26 of the Indian Evidence Act. The statement that the axe was one with which the murder had been committed was not a statement which led to any discovery within the meaning of Section 27 of the Evidence Act. Nor was the alleged statement of the appellant that the blood stained shirt and dhoti belonged to him, a statement which led to any discovery within the meaning of Section 27." It was therefore wrong to admit in evidence the alleged statement. The Supreme Court distinguished admissible, Raju v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 4547 (Raj); no discovery, Mangal Singh v. State, 1996 AIHC 2390 (paras 7 and 10) (Del).

---

18. Polukuri Kottaya v. King-Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67.
19. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216; Pershadi v. State of Uttar Pradesh, AIR 1957 SC 211.
20. State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032. Also see Subhash Chandra v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC 59 (MP).
21. 1960 SC 1125.
22. Polukuri Kotayya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67; Paula Nayak v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 788 (Ori): AIR 1963 Ori 93; Rongrao v. State, AIR 1952 Bom 72; Mohd. Sadiq v. State, (1979) 81 Punj LR (D) 56; Public Prosecutor v. India China Lingiah, 1954 Cr LJ 583 : AIR 1954 Mad 433; Fellix-Joannas v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 2479 (para 8) (Kant).
23. Chinnaswamy Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1962 SC 1788; State v. Shanker Prasad, 1952 All 776 : 1952 Cr LJ 1585; State v. Kali, 1952 Cr LJ 267 1951 HP 28; Bhagirath s/o. Param v. State of M.P., 1959 MP 17 : 1959 Cr LJ 48; (the words 'I hid', 'I pledged', 'I sold', 'I gave', 'I have kept' are all admissible if they distinctly relate to the fact discovered). In re : Sheikh Khader Sahib, 51 Cr LJ 445 Mad : AIR 1950 Mad 108; Gendra Brahma v. State of Assam, 1971 Cr LJ 430 (Gau); Bahoran v. State, 1981 All LJ 991; Karam Din v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 338.
24. Pentapati Veerababu v. State of A.P., 1998 Cr LJ 2505 (para 8) (AP).
25. Vishnu v. State (N.C.T. of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ 4006 (para 43) (Del).
26. Mohd. Inayatullah v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 483.
27. AIR 1963 SC 1113 : 1963 (II) SCJ 165.

the decision in State of UP v. Deoman Upadhyaya's case[28] stating that the circumstancial chain in that case did not depend merely on the production of the gandasa but on other circumstances as well. The decision did not proceed merely on the production of a blood-stained weapon.

Information as to the past user, or the past history of the object produced is not related to its discovery in the setting in which it is discovered. Information supplied by a person in custody that "I will produce a knife concealed in the roof of my house" does not lead to the discovery of a knife. It leads to the discovery of the fact that a knife is concealed in the house of the informant to his knowledge; and if the knife is proved to have been used in the commission of the offence, the fact discovered is very relevant. But if to the statement the words be added "with which I stabbed A", these words are inadmissible since they do not relate to the discovery of the knife in the house of the informant.

The difficulty, however great, of proving that a fact discovered on information supplied by the accused is a relevant fact can afford no justification for reading into this section something which is not there, and admitting in evidence a confession barred by Section 26. Except in cases in which the possession or concealment of an object constitutes the gist of the offence charged, it can seldom happen that information relating to the discovery of a fact forms the foundation of the prosecution case. It is only one link in the chain of proof, and the other links must be forged in the manner allowed by law.[29]

Following this Privy Council case the Bombay High Court has held in a Full Bench case that before this section can come into play, there must be a fact discovered and the fact must be discovered in consequence of some information received from an accused person. The section lays down a further qualification that the whole of the statement made by the accused in consequence of which the fact is discovered is not admissible. Only so much of the statement is admissible as relates distinctly to the fact discovered. Therefore, once a relevant fact is discovered by reason of a statement made by the accused to a police officer, the Court must scrutinize the statement in order to find out which portion of that statement bears a distinct relationship to the discovery of the fact. Any relationship to the fact is not sufficient. The relationship must be distinct; it must be unmistakable and unequivocal. When a statement made by an accused person while in custody of a police officer is tendered in evidence under this section on the ground that an article which is concealed and the accused's knowledge of its whereabouts are discovered in consequence of the statement, the words included in the statement with regard to the authorship of the concealment, e.g., "I have concealed", "I have hidden", or "I have kept", are admissible in evidence under this section.[30] It was held that only the portion of the confessional statement made to the panch witnesses that "the accused produced stick from his house" was admissible and the Court deprecated the irregularities committed by the Sessions Judge in the recording of inadmissible evidence.[31]

Normally the section is brought into operation when a person in police custody produces from some place of concealment some object, such as a dead body, weapon or ornaments, said to be connected with the crime, of which the informant is accused. The proviso to Section 26, added by this section, should not be held to nullify the substance of the section.

Where the eye-witnesses categorically stated that the accused-appellant had not given any knife blow on the deceased, mere alleged recovery of a knife at the instance of the accused cannot make him perpetrator of the crime.[32]

In Queen-Empress v. Babulal[33], it was held that under Section 27, information includes statements which falls short of confession, as well as statement which amount to confession.

---

28. (1961) 11 SCJ 334 : 1961 (I) SCR 14.
29. Pulukuri Kottaya v. Emperor, (1946) 49 Bom LR 508: 74 IA 65. See also Udai Bhan v. State of U.P., AIR 1962 SC 1116 and Prabhoo v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 SC 1113. Joseph, ILR (1951) TC 417; Kuruvilla Joseph, ILR 1951 417.
30. State v. Rama Shidarpa, (1951) 54 Bom LR 316 : (1952) Bom 662 (FB), overruling State v. Rangrao Devaru (1951) 53 Bom LR 834.
31. Bashapaka Laxmaiah v.State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ 4066 (para 17) (AP).
32. Deva v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1999 SC 214 : 1999 Cr LJ 265, at p. 266.
33. ILR (1884) 6 All 509.

In Sukhan v. Emperor[34], it was held that the word "statement" is interchangeable with the word 'information'. Mere pointing out a place or a house by the accused cannot amount to information, much less a statement, incriminating or otherwise, admissible under Section 27.[35]

Information is actually the content or substance of a statement, and it may be the same in several statements which may substantially be repetitions. The discovery, for the purpose of Section 27, should be the direct consequence of this or that information. So, where the information is the same, it is immaterial if the statement is repeated.[36]

Where the accused led the police party to a tank and pointed out the place by throwing brickbats, it was held that a statement can also be one by gestures and so is admissible.[37]

This section refers to information, whether received by a police officer or by other person, there being nothing in the language of the section to justify any distinction in respect of the person to whom the information is given.[38]

If it is taken for granted that there is guarantee of truth regarding the information in consequence of which a fact is discovered, there is no reason why it should not also be presumed that such information was voluntarily given, unless it is proved to the contrary that it was obtained by some sort of compulsion.[39]

It was held by the Privy Council that where the statement of the accused leading to the discovery of a fact, is capable of two interpretations, the one which is favourable to the accused as to be adopted.[40]

In State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya,[41] HIDAYATULLAH, J., suggested that it would be admissible to follow the English practice of cautioning of a prisoner in custody by the police officer before the accused makes any statement under Section 27 to the effect that, whatever statement is given by the accused may be used against him. His Lordship made a reference to the rules framed by the King's Bench Division in England for the guidance of the police officers. Even in recent years in R. v. Buchan,[42] it was stated that under the former and also the revised Judges Rules, it was and is permissible to question under caution a person in custody about offences other than those with which a person is charged. Such rules may not have the force of law or are not mandatory, as the court still has discretion to admit the evidence.[43]

Though cautioning of the accused by the police officer prior to giving the statement may cause some handicap in the investigation, it would be a healthy practice to be adopted by the police, because under Section 25 no statement or confession to the police officer is admissible, and Section 27 provides that only so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered may be proved.

5. SIGNATURE OR THUMB IMPRESSION OF ACCUSED ON DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

The absence of signature or thumb impression of the accused on the disclosure statement recorded under Section 27 detracts materially from the authenticity and the reliability of the disclosure statement.[44] The provisions of Section 27 do not require that a voluntary statement must be signed by its maker or that the thumb impression must be affixed to it.[45]

---

34. AIR 1929 Lah 344.
35. Dhaman Hiranand v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Sindh 251; Emperor v. Shiv Putraya Basligaya, AIR 1930 Bom 244.
36. Basanth Kumar v. Collector of Land Customs, (1961) 1 Cr LJ 237 : AIR 1961 Cal 86.
37. Kaju* v. *State, 1985 Cr LJ 367.
38. Queen-Empress* v. *Babu Lal, ILR (1884) 6 All 509, 511 (FB).
39. Jethiya* v. *State, AIR 1955 Raj 147.
40. Pulukuri Kottaih v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67; Pohalya Mothya Valri v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 1949; Jogen Fangso* v. *State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 226 (Gau).
41. AIR 1960 SC 1125.
42. (1964) 1 All ER 502.
43. R v. Smith, (1961) 3 All ER 972.
44. Jackaran Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 AIR SCW 3485 : 1995 Cr LJ 3992 (para 8) : AIR 1995 SC 2345 (paras 6 and 8), distinguished in K.M. Ibrahim v. State of Karnataka, 2000 Cr LJ 197 (para 19) (Kant). Also see Fellix-Joannas v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 2479 (para 10) (Kant); Jaskaran Singh v. State of Punjab, 1997 SCC (Cri) 651. Contra : Bhakua Kampa v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cr LJ 350 (para 17) (Ori).
45. K.M. Ibrahim v. State of Karnataka, 2000 Cr LJ 197 (para 19) (Kant), distinguishing Jackaran Singh v. State of Punjab, 1999 Cr LJ 3992 (para 8) : AIR 1995 SC 2345 : 1995 AIR SCW 3485.

6. SIGNATURE OF ACCUSED IN SEIZURE MEMO

The Investigating Officer is not obliged to obtain the signature of an accused in any statement attributed to him while preparing the seizure memo for the recovery of any article covered by Section 27 of the Evidence Act. But, if any signature has been obtained by him, there is nothing wrong or illegal about it. Hence, it could not be said that the signatures of the accused in seizure memo would vitiate the evidence regarding the recovery.[46]

7. INFORMATION RECEIVED ON PHONE

Information received on phone by the police officer, conveyed in all probabilities by the accused and it being non-confessional, was held to be admissible in evidence as the law is now well-settled that even before his arrest, if any information is given by the accused leading to discovery, it shall be presumed that the accused was constructively in police custody. In the instant case dead bodies were discovered on such information which (discovery) also was held to be admissible.[47]

8. INDEPENDENT WITNESSES

Where the disclosure statement of the accused was proved by the testimony of a natural witness, a brother of the deceased present during investigation when he made the statement, the fact that no independent witnesses were associated with the recoveries, was held to be not sufficient to create doubt in the prosecution version.[48]

9. FACT DISCOVERED—DISCOVERY OF A WITNESS

According to one view, the expression 'any fact' includes discovery of a witness consequent upon the statement given by the accused. That discovery of a witness must relate to the crime or the act of the accused.[49] According to the dissenting opinion in that case, the fact means a concrete or material fact.[50]

In re.: Hanumantha Rao,[51] the majority view was followed by KRISHNARAO J., and the dissenting opinion was followed by UMAMAHESHWRAM J. The minority view is in accordance with the Privy Council in Polukuri Kotayya v. Emperor,[52] where it was held that the word 'fact' refers to a material and concrete fact. SIR JOHN BEAUMONT observed: "Normally, the section is brought into operation when a person in police custody produced from some place of concealment some object, such as a dead body, a weapon or ornaments, said to be connected with the crime of which the informant is accused."

The matter is now concluded by the decision of the Supreme Court where it was held that the testimony of a witness that the accused had pointed out a particular witness is not admissible under Section 27, as it did not lead to the discovery of a fact which is necessarily a material object.[53] Statements made by an accused to police officers, pointing out the places where the offence was committed by others or where he concealed himself thereafter, and the houses to which he went for assistance, whether regarded as information leading to discovery, or as statements made by him as part of his defence, are admissible in evidence as admissions.[54]

---

46. State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, 1999 Cr LJ 2588 (paras 20-30) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1776.
47. State of Rajasthan v. Vinod Malhotra, 1997 Cr LJ 1488 (paras 25 and 26) (Raj).
48. Sanjay v. State (N.C.T. of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ 1231 (para 30) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 979. See also Kishore Kumar v. State of Kerala, 2001 Cr LJ 2137 (para 8) (Ker); State Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi v. Sunil, 2001 Cr LJ 504 : 2000 AIR SCW 4398; Prabhudaya Harijan v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ 2987 (paras 18 and 19) (Ori).
49. Emperor v. Ramanuja, AIR 1935 Mad 528, (according to the majority of the Special Bench).
50. The majority view was followed in Rammurthy v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Mad 290, In re : Rami Reddi, AIR 1941 Mad 238, Public Prosecutor v. Indla China Lingiah, AIR 1954 Mad 433.
51. AIR 1957 AP 456.
52. AIR 1947 PC 67.
53. H.P. Admn v. Omprakash, AIR 1972 SC 975. In re : Karunakaran, 1975 Cr LJ 798 (Mad).
54. Emperor v. Kangal Mali, ILR (1905) 41 Cal 601; Lalji Dusadh v. King-Emperor, (1927) 6 Pat 747 : AIR 1928 Pat 162, Sonaram Mahton v. King-Emperor, (1930) 10 Pat 153 : AIR 1931 Pat 145.

10. DISCLOSURE STATEMENT—ADMISSIBILITY

The disclosure statement recorded during investigation is admissible and the same need not be recorded on a separate paper along with the signature of the accused.[55]

11. INADMISSIBLE STATEMENTS AND DISCOVERY

Whether a confession is admissible or inadmissible, any fact, the knowledge of which has been obtained through it, may still be proved by the prosecution.[56]

The rules regarding confessions and admissions have no application to the discovery of material evidence which has itself probative value.[57]

Thus, where articles connected with an offence are found in consequences of an inadmissible statement, the finding of the articles may be proved, although the making of the statement may not be.[58]

Where the accused was neither an accused of the offence nor was under arrest at the time of making the statement, such statement and recovery in persuance thereof was not admissible in evidence.[59] In a murder case blood-stained clothes were recovered on the statement of the accused but blood-stains were not proved to be of human being. It was held that mere discovery does not relate the accused with offence.[60] Recoveries allegedly made persuant to the involuntary disclosure statements of accused are inadmissible.[61] The statement regarding the fact which was not in the exclusive knowledge of the accused and was self-evident to the police was held to be not admissible.[62]

12. NO STATEMENT

Where there was no statement on the part of the accused, recoveries were held to be useless.[63]

Though the accused did not give information as to the exact place where the incriminating article was placed, still if he leads to the shop of a named person, it is admissible, as the recovery of the article could be effected from a place in that shop.[64]

While in the custody of the police, if the accused produces the object connected with the crime from some place of concealment, Section 27 applies.[65]

Mere pointing of the accused to the police to the place where the dead body of his wife was hidden cannot be treated as statement under this section.[66] Where the accused took out the axe, the weapon of offence, from the wall of the thatched roof and handed it over to the investigating officer, it was held that recovery of the axe alone, or the statement to that effect in absence of information furnished by the accused to the police while in custody would not be admissible under Section 27.[67]

---

55. Bhakua Kampa v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cr LJ 350 (para 17) (Ori).
56. R. v. Warickshall, (1783) 1 Leach 263; R. v. Griffin, (1809) Russ & Ry 151; See also Kuruma v. R, (1955) AC 197 : (1955) 1 All ER 236, (PC); King v. R, (1969) 1 AC 304 : (1968) 2 All ER 610 PC; Cf. R. v. Jones, (1809) Russ & Ry 152; R. v. Jenkins, (1822) Russ & Ry 492, CCR.
57. See R v. Sadler, (1970) 2 All ER 12 at 19 : (1970) 1 WLR 416 at 425 (CA).
58. R. v. Lockhart, (1785) 2 East PC 658; R v. Gould, (1840) 9 C&P 364.
59. Sarabjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 2231 (para 5) (P&H), relying on Pall v. State of Punjab, 1996 (2) RCC 643. See also Karam Singh v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 3446 (para 13) (All).
60. Ganga Singh v. State of U.P., 1998 Cr LJ 3362 (para 14) (All).
61. Chuni Lal v. State of H.P., 1995 Cr LJ 1393 (HP). See also Bhagat Bahadur v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2201 (para 44) (Del).
62. Vijay Kumar v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2429 (para 42) (Del).
63. Bahadul v. Orissa, 1979 Cr LJ 1075 : AIR 1979 SC 1262, (recovery by itself cannot sustain conviction); State of Punjab v. Gurnam Singh, AIR 1984 SC 1799; Bhimappa Jinnappa Naganur v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Cr LJ 1801 (para 8) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 1469; M.S. Sheshappa v. State of Karnataka, 1994 Cr LJ 3372 (para 26) (Kant).
64. State of M.P. v. Murarilal, 1973 Cr LJ 1559.
65. H.P. Administration v. Omprakash, AIR 1972 SC 975.
66. Ravindran v. State of Kerala, 1999 Cr LJ 2364 (para 14) (Ker).
67. Sakal Deep v. U.P. State, 1993 Cr LJ 551 (para 21) (All).

13. STATEMENT TO BE RECORDED

Any statement of the accused to a police officer, leading to the discovery of the fact, must be recorded by the police officer as proof of such statement, and for its admissibility in evidence under Section 27.[68]

In the absence of any statement of accused on record placed before the court, it was held that it could not be said that the statement led to the discovery of the fact.[69] When there was no recorded statement, giving information leading to the discovery of fact, Section 27 is not attracted, but his act leading to the discovery can be taken as evidence of conduct under Section 8.[70]

The police officer, while giving evidence, should reproduce the contents of the statements made by the accused leading to the discovery of a fact under Section 27. He can refresh his memory under Section 160 of the Act. Before attracting the provisions of Section 160 of the Act, he should normally affirm on oath that he does not recollect the fact mentioned in the document. But mere omission to say that will not make the document inadmissible, provided the witness swears that the facts are correctly recorded in the document itself. This applies even to a police officer.[71]

Where on the basis of the disclosure statement made by the accused, incriminating articles belonging to the deceased were found and seized, disclosure statement can be said to be true and also worthy of credence and non-recording of the disclosure statement and non-examination of public witnesses, as regards the said recovery, would be of no consequence.[72] It is not required by law that the disclosure statement should be recorded in the presence of panchas. The statement of the accused leading to discovery is sufficient.[73]

14. INFORMATION MUST BE RECEIVED FROM A PERSON ACCUSED OF AN OFFENCE

Under this section, the person who is making the statement must be a person accused of any offence.

When a statement was made by a person who is a stranger or a prosecution witness, it is not admissible in evidence inspite of the fact that it led to the discovery of a fact.[74] Where a witness deposes as to what the accused purported to have stated before the police it cannot be taken as tantamount to the information of the accused leading to the discovery.[75]

The Supreme Court has held that the expression "accused of any offence" is descriptive of the person against whom evidence, relating to information alleged to be given by him, is made provable by this section. It does not predicate a formal accusation against him at the time of making the statement which is sought to be proved.[76]

The Patna High Court has held that the statement must be of a person who was then an accused. If, at the time when the confession was made, the person making it was not an accused person, the statement would not be admissible. This decision may not be good law after the decision of the Supreme Court in Deomani case supra.[77]

The Bombay High Court has dissented from this view and has held that the words "information received from a person accused of any offence" cannot be read to mean that he must be an accused when he gives the information, but would include a person if he became subsequently an accused person, at the time when that statement is sought to be received in evidence against him. Where a person goes to a

---

68. Phusu Koini v. State of Assam, 1986 Cr LJ 1057 (Gau).
69. Subhas Bhattacharyya v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1807 (Cal); Sambhu Bora v. State of Assam, 1987 Cr LJ 1027 (Gau).
70. Mayachar Sha v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1948 (Ori); Amarlayek v. State of West Bengal, 1988 Cr LJ 1293 (Cal); Bejoy Mondal v. State of W B., 1984 Cr LJ 518 (Cal).
71. Dharma v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 74, following In re : Kalli Seetha Rami Reddi, AIR 1939 Mad 766; Bhagirath v. State, AIR 1959 MP 17; Public Prosecutor v. Venkatrama Naidu, AIR 1943 Mad 542.
72. S.C. Bahri v. State of Bihar, 1994 Cr LJ 3271 (paras 71 and 72) : AIR 1994 SC 2420.
73. Manohar Amrut Satpudke v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 4355 (paras 16 and 17) (Bom).
74. Devi Ram v. State, AIR 1962 Punj 70.
75. Findal v. State, AIR 1954 HP 11.
76. State of U.P. v. Deoman, AIR 1960 SC 1125.
77. Deonandan Dusadh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1928) 7 Pat 411; Jalla v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Lah 278; Chetu v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Lah 69; Devi Ram v. State, AIR 1962 Punj 70; In re : Malladi Ramaiah, AIR 1956 AP 56.

police officer and makes a statement which shows that an offence has been committed by him, he accuses himself and though he is formally not arrested, since he is not free to move wherever he likes after disclosure of the information to the police, he must be deemed to be in custody of the police within this section.[78]

In Md. Dastagiri v. State,[79] also, it was held that it is not necessary that when a statement is made by a person he should be an accused, that it is enough, if he is an accused person when it is sought to be proved in court.

In view of the decision of the Supreme Court in the State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya,[80] the view of the Bombay High Court and of the Madras High Court represents the correct view.

The Supreme Court, in Pohalya Motya Valvi v. State of Maharashtra,[81] held that, where two persons were charged for murder, and the information given by one of them led to the discovery of the weapon of offence, it was capable of two interpretations: (1) he was the person who concealed the weapon, (2) he had the knowledge of the place where it was hidden. Hence, the accused could not be convicted for murder on the basis of such information. A joint statement made by two accused persons leading to discovery is not per se inadmissible in evidence but it is a very weak piece of evidence on which reliance can be placed by the prosecution.[82]

15. THE PERSON MUST BE IN THE CUSTODY OF A POLICE OFFICER

This section does not apply to information given to the police by an accused person who was not in custody at the time it was given.[83]

The submission of a person to the custody of a police officer, within the terms of Section 46(1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, is 'custody' within the meaning of this section.[84]

In State of U.P. v. Deoman,[85] it was held that when a person not in custody approaches the police and gives them statements, he may be deemed to have surrendered himself to the police and may be deemed to be in the 'custody of the police' within the meaning of Section 27, in view of Section 46(1), Cr P.C.[86]

The word 'custody' in this section does not mean physical custody by arrest.[87]

As soon as an accused or suspected person comes into the hands of a police officer, he is, in the absence of clear evidence to the contrary, no longer at liberty, and is therefore in custody within the meaning of Sections 26 and 27.[88] In the case of more suspects, who have not been formally charged with

---

78. Memon Mohmed, (1958) 61 Bom LR 715; Bakshia Mukunda v. State of Bombay, (1959) 62 Bom LR 80 : AIR 1960 Bom 263; see also In re : Sreenivasulu, AIR 1958 AP 37; Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293.
79. AIR 1960 SC 756.
80. AIR 1960 SC 1125.
81. AIR 1979 SC 1949.
82. Meghaji Godadji Thakore v. State of Gujarat, 1993 Cr LJ 730 (para 18) (Guj).
83. Kha Hlaw v. King-Emperor, (1907) 4 LBR 116; King-Emperor v. Nga Aung Ba, (1916) 2 UBR (1914-1916) 114; Eapakuntla Chinna Kashi Reddy v. State of Hyderabad, (1954) Hyd 209. Also see Manoranjan Singh v. State of Delhi, (1998) 3 SCC 523 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 848.
84. Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, (1921) 9 Cal 167 : AIR 1922 Cal 342.
85. AIR 1960 SC 1125.
86. Santhoki v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Pat 149 (SB); Bharosa v. Emperor, AIR 1941 Nag 86; Umed v. State of MP, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 18 : ILR 1979 MP 535; Viran Wali v. State, AIR 1961 J&K 11; Kanhiya v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cr LJ 1652 (Raj); (arrested 30 Mts. after the statement); State v. Mohd. Husain, AIR 1959 Bom 534; In re : Bandi Murugulu, AIR 1963 AP 87 : (1963) 1 Cr LJ 142; Punja Mava v. State, AIR 1965 Guj 5; State of Assam v. Upendranath Raj Khowa, 1975 Cr LJ 354 (Gau); Chhoteylal v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 All 687; Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293; Onkar v. State of MP, 1974 Cr LJ 1200; In re : Man Singh AIR 1959 MP 267.
87. State v. Madanlal, AIR 1967 Pat 63; Chhotelal v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 All 687; In re : Krishna Pillai, ILR 1960 Mad 1082 : (1960) 1 MLJ 307; Kanhiya v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cr LJ 1652 (Raj); Bakshia v. State, AIR 1960 Bom 263; Gurdial Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 609; Jamubia Partap v. Emperor, AIR 1936 Nag 200.
88. Mussammat Aishan Bibi v. The Crown, (1933) 15 Lah 310; Mis. M.F. Rego v. Emperor, AIR 1936 Nag 136; Mt. JJanunia Partap Lohar v. Emperor, AIR 1936 Nag 200.

any offence or arrested under any section of the Criminal Procedure Code, their presence with the police officer under some restraint amounts to 'custody'.[89]

'Custody' connotes some idea of restraint on the movements of a person whether by word or action and does not necessarily mean custody after formal restraint.[90] Even indirect control over the movements of suspects by the police would amount to 'police custody'.[91] An accused is in police custody within the meaning of the section when he is under surveillance of the police and cannot break away from the company of the police or get away. A formal arrest is not necessary.[92] For the purpose of this section, the word 'custody' does not necessarily mean detention or confinement. Submission to custody, by any action or words, is also custody within the meaning of this section.[93] A person who makes a statement to a police officer voluntarily, confessing that he had committed an act which the penal law regards as an offence, submits himself to the custody of the said officer within the meaning of this section.[94]

The Madras High Court has held that the spirit of the language employed in Section 27 of the Evidence Act, appears to imply that where a person submits himself to the custody of a police officer, with the consciousness that, temporarily at least, he is in such custody or under such control, whether formally authorised or not, the information given by him to such officer, leading to the discovery of a relevant fact is within the scope of the section; it is not proper to limit further the meaning of the expression, by imposing condition as to the time of arrest and the existence or absence of a formal magisterial order authorising police custody or interrogation.[95]

This section does not require that the person must be in the custody of the police officer investigating the offence to which the information relates. Whoever may be the police officer who has custody of the accused, if the information leads to the discovery of a relevant fact, that information is clearly admissible under Section 27.[96]

It is not necessary that the police officer should be present while making the statement. Even temporary absence of a police officer would not terminate the custody when the statement was made.[97]

The Court cannot remand a person to police custody to enable the police to secure recovery under Section 27.[98]

Where there was material discrepancy in the evidence of the eye-witness and the investigating officer regarding the time when the police took the accused in custody, the evidence of the investigating officer regarding recovery of weapons at the instance of the accused could not be relied upon.[99]

For other cases regarding the meaning and scope of custody see commentary under Section 26.

16. POLICE OFFICER

See commentary under Section 25.

---

89. Allah Ditta v. The Crown, ILR (1937) 18 Lah 106 : AIR 1937 Lah 620.
90. Hakam v. The Crown, (1940) 21 Lah 242 : AIR 1940 Lah 129.
91. Paramhansa v. State, AIR 1964 Ori 144.
92. Chhoteylal v. State of U.P., AIR 1954 All 687; Umed v. State of M.P., 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 18 : ILR 1979 MP 535; In re : Mannem Edukondalu, AIR 1957 AP 729; Anammed v. Kunju, ILR (1971) 2 Ker 30; Maharani v. Emperor, AIR 1948 All 7; Gurdial Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Lah 609; Onkar v. State of MP, 1974 Cr LJ 1200 (MP); S v. Mohd Husain, AIR 1959 Bom 534; Paramhansa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1964 Ori 144 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 780
93. In re : Man Singh, AIR 1959 MP 267; Santokhi v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Pat 149 (SB); Bharosa v. State, AIR 1941 Nag 86; Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, ILR (1921) 49 Cal 167 : AIR 1922 Cal 342; Jalla v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Lah 278; Maung Lay v. Emperor, AIR 1924 Rang 173.
94. Mirsa Singh, (1935) Patiala 711.
95. In re : Ramachandran, AIR 1960 Mad 191; Rambabu Jadav v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Pat 60; In re : Kambala Kalikamurthi, 1936 MWN (Cri) 159; (accused was in hospital in judicial custody. Police examined him with the permission of the Magistrate.
96. State of Mysore v. Rangaiah, 1966 Cr LJ 848 : (1965) 2 Mys LJ 158.
97. Ram Singh v. State, AIR 1959 All 518; Emperor v. Mst Jagia, AIR 1938 Pat 308; Ram Bharose v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Nag 105.
98. T.N. Jayadeish Devidas v. State of Kerala, 1980 Cr LJ 906.
99. Rammi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4561 (paras 16-19) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3544.

17. EVIDENTIARY VALUE

Recoveries provide important support to the version of the eye-witnesses.[1] Where the eye-witness received injuries and the weapon was recovered at the instance of the accused, the Supreme Court held that the conviction on such evidence was proper.[2]

Recovery of the dead body on the information given by the accused, only raised strong suspicion against the accused.[3]

When the recoveries were made at the instance of the accused, and the memos were attested by police officers and independent search witnesses, and when police officers were alone examined to prove the search, and other independent search witnesses were not examined, it was held that it would not introduce any serious infirmity in the evidence furnished by the recoveries, which at best are only a corroborative piece of evidence.[4] Where there was no suggestion to any of the material witnesses that the disclosure statements were involuntary or the accused made different statements at different stages of interrogation, the place of recovery was not an open place, there was no delay in recovery and no material to show that the incriminating articles were planted at the place of recovery, the disclosure statements were held to be reliable and admissible in evidence[5] but where the Investigating Officer made no efforts to join any independent witness at the time of the alleged recovery, evidence of recovery became suspicious.[6]

Where the statement of the accused accompanying the discovery, is woefully vague to identify the authorship of concealment, the fact of pointing out of the weapon by the accused may at best prove the accused's knowledge as to where the weapon was kept, and by itself cannot prove that he wielded it in committing the offence.[7] Where the Investigating Officer did not state as to what were the information given by the accused, the alleged voluntary statements of the accused could not be taken to be substantive evidence.[8] Where the dead body of the deceased was recovered in persuance of the statement of the accused but the circumstances showed that he had come to know of the place where the dead body was buried from the co-prisoners in the lock-up and he had not stated that he had buried the said dead body, he could not be connected with the offence.[9]

Recovery of a weapon is only a corroborative piece of evidence, and if it is not proved that the weapon was stained with human blood, the evidence of eye-witnesses of reliable character does not stand condemned.[10] The discovery of the weapon with which the accused is alleged to have struck his wife, on the information given by the accused, is a circumstance as incriminating the accused; the absence of blood stains on the weapon does make the discovery inadmissible, as the corroborative piece of evidence relating to blood stains falls to be considered by the court.[11]

Where the knife, not containing blood stains, was recovered at the instance of the accused, but it was not shown to the doctor conducting the postmortem, it was held that no weight could be attached to the recovery, as there was no guarantee that the said knife was used in the offence.[12] Where there was no

---

1. Bhagwan Dass v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1974 SC 1699.
2. Bhagwan Dass v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1974 SC 1699 : 1974 Cr LJ 1168.
3. Bakshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1971 SC 2016 : 1971 Cr LJ 1452.
4. Mst. Dalbir Kaur v. Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 472. Also see Mylsami alias Thoppan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 76 (Mad); Mylsami alias Thoppan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 76 (Mad); absence of independent witness not a ground to discard seizure evidence, State Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi v. Sunil, 2001 Cr LJ 504 (paras 19, 21 and 22) (SC), reversing 1998 Cr LJ 4233 (Del).
5. Anuj v. State of H.P., 2000 Cr LJ 1103 (paras 42 and 43) (HP).
6. Satish Kumar v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 265 (para 33) (Del). See also Islam Molla v. State of W.B., 1996 Cr LJ 724 (paras 11 and 12) (Cal).
7. Dudhnath Pandey v. State of U.P., AIR 1981 SC 911. See also Slim Babamiya Sutar v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 2696 (paras 13 and 14) (Bom).
8. M. Abbas v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 317 (paras 7 and 8) (Kant). See also N. Rajendra Prasad v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 257 (para 16) (Kant).
9. Prem Prakash Mundra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 1189. Mere recovery of crime articles persuant to retracted confession in absence of any attempt to conceal them not sufficient to connect accused with offence, Varghese v. State of Kerala, 1998 SCC (Cri) 890.
10. Shriram v. State, 1973 Cr LJ 1443 (Raj).
11. Public Prosecutor v. Uppana Muthyalu, (1961) 1 An WR 406.
12. Bholanath v. State of Delhi, 1986 Cr LJ 1409 (Delhi).

proof that the seized blood-stained clothes and knife were sealed and remained untampered with till being sent to the chemical analyst, the evidence of recovery was liable to be rejected.[13] Where the blood and hairs of the deceased or injured person were not sent for comparison with the blood stains found on the sword the weapon of the crime and the hairs recovered, the recoveries will not connect the accused with crime.[14]

Where the facts disclosed that the accused was subjected to third degree methods prior to the discovery of the dead body, the discovery becomes worthless.[15]

Where the disclosure statement was made to the interrogating officer, in the presence of disinterested witness, and such officer could not be examined for some reason or other, such statement is admissible when the witnesses were examined, as nowhere has it been laid down that it is obligatory to examine the officer who had interrogated in order to prove the disclosure statement.[16]

Where something (gun in this case) has been discovered from the custody of a person, he must be produced as a witness. His evidence is necessary in this case to substantiate the allegation that the accused borrowed his gun. If not there is no legal evidence to connect the accused with the recovery.[17] It is, however, not necessary to examine the witnesses in whose presence recoveries are effected[18] but when the witnesses turn hostile, the recovery at the instance of the accused is not acceptable.[19]

Mere recovery of certain incriminating articles at the instance of the accused cannot form the basis of conviction.[20] Mere recovery of a blood-stained knife persuant to the statement of the accused after fifteen days of the incident and a few simple injuries found on his person would only raise a strong suspicion and not a conclusive inference of the guilt of the accused.[21] Where a pistol was recovered at the instance of the accused and the opinion of the ballistic expert was that the bullet recovered from the body of the deceased could have been fired from the said pistol, it was held that this circumstance should be taken into consideration while considering the legal implication of the evidence relating to the recovery of the pistol.[22]

18. SECTION 27 & SECTIONS 7, 8, 9 OF THE EVIDENCE ACT

Statements made under Section 27, though not admissible under the section, may be admissible under Sections 7, 8 or 9 of the Act. Where a statement made while in custody of the police and recorded in a Panchanama, indicated that the articles were hidden in a certain place, and it led to the discovery of the same, it was held that it was admissible under Section 27 and was also an admission under Section 8, as it was indicative of the conduct of the accused.[23]

When the police officer asked the accused whether he knew of a certain dacoity, the accused took the officer to a grain-bin and produced the ornament; it was held that even if the statement was not covered by Section 27, the conduct of the accused was covered by Sections 7, 8 & 9 of the Act.[24]

A conjoint and harmonious reading has to be given to Sections 8 and 27 and the conduct of an accused becomes admissible in evidence as far as it leads to the discovery of a distinct fact and not directly incriminating evidence.[25] Where the recovery was made on the place being shown by the

---

13. Ashraf Husain Shah v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 3147 (para 8) (Bom), relying on Deoraj Deju Suvarna v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 3602; articles recovered not immediately sealed, no evidentiary value. Tulshiram Bhanudas Kambale v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 1566 (para 8) (Bom), following State of Maharashtra v. Prabhu Barku Gade, 1995 Cr LJ 1432 (para 12) (Bom); Amarjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1993) 4 Cur Cri R 486 : 1992 Cr LJ 3858 and State v. Motia, AIR 1955 Raj 82 : 1955 Cr LJ 835.
14. Ram Karan v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 3521 (para 32) (Raj).
15. Dhoom Singh v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 431 : AIR 1957 All 197. See also D.D. Suvarna v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 3602 (para 24) (Bom), relying on Shankar Raju Banglorkar v. State of Goa, 1992 Cr LJ 3034.
16. Chani v. State of Punjab, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 699 (Punj).
17. State of U.P. v. Jageshwar, AIR 1983 SC 349.
18. Dalbir Kaur v. Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 472.
19. Pallepu Venkati v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 1458 (para 3) (AP).
20. Rambilas v. State of M.P., 1997 SCC (Cri) 1222.
21. Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2960 (para 9) : 1997 Cr LJ 3567.
22. State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032.
23. Sada Shiva Daulat v. State, 1950 MB 104.
24. Jag Narih v. State, 1965 All LJ 344.
25. Yog Raj v. Romal Singh, 1997 Cr LJ 1958 (para 7) (J&K).

accused, without any statement, it was held that Section 27 was not attracted, but his act on showing the place was evidence of conduct under Section 8.[26] The production of the alleged weapon of offence by the accused himself has to be proved by the contents the seizure memo which fact cannot be proved by the inhibition contained in Section 27 of the Evidence Act.[27]

19. TO WHAT EXTENT THE INFORMATION IS ADMISSIBLE

Such information as relates distinctly to the fact discovered is admissible. It is the first statement alone of the accused to whomsoever it was made, that leads to the discovery of the fact, which is admissible. A later statement of the accused, even if it is repeated by the accused, is not legally admissible, and so no corroboration is required for the later statement of the accused.[28] Where words spoken by the accused do not implicate him with the commission of crime but refer only to the nature of property hidden by them, they are admissible.[29]

The Supreme Court has held that the information would consist of a statement made by the accused to the police officer and the police officer is precluded from proving the information or part thereof unless it comes within the four corners of the section.[30]

When a statement relating to the discovery of certain incriminating articles, hidden at a particular place, made while in custody, includes a statement by the accused with regard to the authorship of the concealment, as for example, 'I have concealed', or 'I have hidden', then the statement of the accused as regards concealment is admissible under Section 27.

The Bombay High Court has observed: "It is not all statements connected with the production or finding of property which are admissible; those only which lead immediately to the discovery of property, and so far as they do lead to such discovery, are properly admissible. Whatever be the nature of the fact discovered, that fact must, in all cases, be itself relevant to the case, and the connection between it and the statement must have been such that the statement constituted the information through which the discovery was made, in order to render the statement admissible. Other statements connected with the one thus made evidence, and so immediately, but not necessarily or directly, connected with the fact discovered, are not to be admitted, as this would rather be an evasion than a fulfilment of the law, which is designed to guard the prisoners, accused of offences against unfair practices on the part of the police.

For instance, a man says: 'You will find a stick at such and such place. I killed Rama with it'. A police-man, in such a case, may be allowed to say that he went to the place indicated, and found the stick; but any statement as to the confession of murder would be inadmissible. If, instead of 'you will find', the prisoner has said, 'I placed a sword or knife in such a spot', when it was found, that, too, though it involves an admission of a particular act on the prisoner's part, is admissible, because it is the information which has directly led to the discovery, and is thus distinctly and independently of any other statement connected with it. But if, besides this, the prisoner has said what induced him to put the knife or sword where it has been found, that part of his statement, as it has not furthered, much less caused, the discovery, is not admissible."[31]

A statement to the police by the accused in custody saying;. "I put a bomb in R's office; I will show it to you" which puts the police in motion and results in finding out the bomb at the place indicated, is admissible in evidence under this section.[32]

The accused was charged, under Section 411 of the Penal Code, with dishonestly receiving stolen property. In the course of the police investigation, the accused was asked by the police where the property was. He replied that he had kept it, and would show it. He said he had buried the property in the fields. He then took the police to the spot where the property was concealed, and, with his own hands,

---

26. Mayachar Shah v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1948 (Ori); Amar Layek v. State of West Bengal, 1988 Cr LJ 1293 (Cal); Bijoy Mondal v. State of W. Bengal, 1984 Cr LJ 518 (Cal)(DB).
27. Yog Raj v. Romal Singh, 1997 Cr LJ 1958 (para 7) (J&K).
28. Aher Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217; In re : Subba Rao, AIR 1949 Mad 710; Noor Muhammed Abdul Samed v. State, 1959 Ker 46.
29. Sanjay v. State (N.C.T. of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ 1231 (para 27) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 979.
30. Ramkishan Mithanlal v. State of Bombay, (1954) 57 Bom LR 600, (1955) SCR 903.
31. Reg. v. Jora Hasji, (1874) 11 BHCR 242, 244, 245; Queen-Empress v. Nana, ILR (1889) 14 Bom 260; (FB); Emperor v. Shivputraya, (1930) 32 Bom LR 574.
32. Emperor v. Namdeo Kaikadi, (1944) 46 Bom LR 546.

disinterred the earthen pot in which the property was kept. He made a second statement, when pointing out the spot, to the effect that he had buried the property there. It was held that the above statements were clearly in the nature of a confession, as they suggested the inference that the accused committed the crime, and, even if not intended by the accused to be a confession of guilt, they were an admission of a criminating circumstance and would form a very important part of the evidence against the accused, as showing that he had not come by the property honestly, and, therefore, properly within the rule of exclusion in regard to confessions made by a person in the custody of the police; but the accused's statement, that he had buried the property in the fields, was admissible in evidence under this section, as it set the police in motion and led to the discovery of the property.[33]

Where the accused gives information to the police in a form which divides such information into several parts, the part admissible under this section can be easily separated. But, where the accused gives his information in the form of a compound statement, the Judge must, before he records it as evidence or leaves it to the jury, divide the sentence into what are really its component parts and only admit that part which has led to the discovery of the particular fact.[34] Under this section, it is only that part which distinctly relates to the discovery, which is admissible; but if any part of the statement distinctly relates to the discovery it will be admissible wholly and the court cannot say that it will excise one part of the statement because it is of a confessional nature. The section makes that part of the statement which is distinctly related to the discovery admissible as a whole, whether it be in the nature of a confession or not.[35]

Where, after certain clothes were taken out of a pond on the information given by the accused, he made another statement that he had removed them from the person of the deceased and thrown them into the pond, it was held that the latter statement did not come within the purview of Section 27 and so was not admissible.[36] Where, after the recovery of blood stained paijama and banian, of the accused kept concealed by the accused, the accused made a statement that they were his clothes, it was held that the statement that those articles belonged to the accused was not admissible in evidence.[37]

Where the accused states to the police, "I will produce the share which I received in such and such a dacoity" the statement is divisible into the following parts:

(1) an admission that there was a dacoity;

(2) an admission that the accused took part in it;

(3) an admission that he got part of the property, and

(4) a statement as to where the property is.

The first three parts are not admissible in evidence, having regard to Section 25, but the fourth part is admissible under this section.[38]

Where the accused stated to the police, that the throat of the deceased was cut with a knife, and the knife was at a particular spot in the kitchen, and the police found the knife at the place indicated, it was held that the first part of the statement, which was the incriminating part, and which did not directly lead to the discovery of the knife, should be excluded under this section but the second part of the statement should be admitted.[39] During the police investigation into a case of dacoity, the accused said in the presence of the Sub-Inspector of Police and panchas: "About three months ago, I had gone along with some others and, after breaking open the Alnawar Bank had stolen the amount therefrom and I will produce the amount that is with me now at my house at Mugatkhan Hubli of the Alnawar Bank Dacoity." After saying so, he took the police and the panchas to his house and produced Rs. 40 in currency notes. A question having arisen, how much of the above statement was admissible in evidence at the trial of the 33. Queen-Empress v. Nana, (1889) 14 Bom 269 (FB). Confession related distinctly to discovery is admissible. N Rajan v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 322 (para 18) (Ker). Statement must precede discovery. Bhuribai v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC 263 (MP).

---

34. State of U.P. v. Deoman, AIR 1960 SC 1125.

35. Chinnaswamy v. State of A.P., AIR 1962 SC 1788. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Jeet Singh, AIR 1999 SC 1293 (para 28) : 1999 Cr LJ 2025 (even inculpatory statements admissible), followed in Masang Kisku v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ 1633, (para 11) (Ori).

36. Jaggar Singh v. Crown, AIR 1952 Pepsu 23.

37. Jamil Ahmad v. State, (1965) 67 Punj LR 1010, relying on, Prabhoom v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113.

38. Emperor v. Ganu Chandra Kashid, (1931) 34 Bom LR 303 : 56 Bom 172 : AIR 1932 Bom 286.

39. Emperor v. Salve, (1933) 36 Bom LR 384.

accused for dacoity, it was held that the only portion of the statement that was admissible in evidence under this section was "I will produce the amount".[40] Where a suspect in the custody of police makes a statement that he committed murder and removed ornaments which he produces later, the first part of the statement does not fall under this section because it is not a statement required to lead up to the production of the property.[41] Where one of the accused made a statement in the presence of the panchas that he and his brothers buried the dead body and he would point out the place and later the dead body was recovered from his field, it was held that the statement in so far as he involved himself, would be admissible, and the other part involving his brothers would not be admissible.[42]

The accused were charged with the theft of some jawar (a kind of grain). During the police investigation, they admitted that they had taken the grain and concealed it in a jar, which they forthwith produced. The identity of the jawar recovered with that stolen was not proved to the satisfaction of the trying Magistrate, except by those admissions, and upon those admissions they were convicted of theft. It was held that, as the accused themselves produced the jawar, it was by their own act, and not from any information given by them, that the discovery took place and this section, therefore, did not apply; and though the fact of the production of the property might be proved, the accompanying confession made to the police was inadmissible in evidence.[43]

The Calcutta High Court has also held that this section is not intended to let in the confession generally, but only such particular part of it as set the person, to whom it was made, in motion, and led to his ascertaining the fact or facts of which he gives evidence.[44]

When the statements made by an accused, whilst in police custody, consist of severable parts, some of which constitute a general confession of guilt, some are imputations of guilt on the accomplices, and some lead to the discovery, such statements, in their entirety, are not admissible under this section.[45] A was tried for the murder of B, whose dead body was recovered from a well. B was wearing certain ornaments but they were not found on his body. A made a statement to the police—"I had removed the ornaments, had pushed the boy into the well and had pledged them with X" The ornaments were recovered from X. It was held that the statement that the accused had pledged the ornaments with X was admissible, but that the rest of the incriminating statements could not be received in evidence.[46] In another case the statement of the accused was: "I had removed the karas and pushed the boy into the well and had pledged the karas with Allahdin". Five Judges of the Lahore High Court held that the only portion "that he had pledged the karas with Allahdin" was admissible.[47] A police officer can depose that the accused went to him and stated that he was lying on the bed wounded, that the sword was also on the bed and the padlock was on the window sill, but the statement that he had severely hacked his wife was not admissible.[48]

The Patna and the Nagpur High Courts have taken the same view.[49]

The Allahabad High Court has held that so much of the information given by the accused to the police-officer, whether amounting to a confession or not, as related distinctly to the facts thereby discovered, might be proved.[50] The accused gave information to the police to the effect that they had stolen a cow and a calf and sold them to a particular person at a particular place. As a result of this information, the cow and calf were discovered. It was held that only the statement that the accused had

---

40. Emperor v. Mareppa Ningappa, (1946) 48 Bom LR 542.
41. Emperor v. Bhika Gober, AIR 1943 Bom 458 : (1943) 45 Bom LR 884 : (1944) Bom 25.
42. Mathurdhana v. State, AIR 1956 Bom 393; State v. Santappa Mother Kasawwa Metri, AIR 1956 Bom 217 : 1956 Cr LJ 487 ("he had hidden the pistol").
43. Queen Empress v. Kamalia, ILR (1886) 10 Bom 595.
44. Adu Shikdar v. Queen-Empress, ILR (1885) 11 Cal 635; Amiruddin Ahmed v. Emperor, ILR 45 Cal 557; Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Bhajoo, (1929) 57 Cal 1062; Naresh Chandra Das v. Emperor, (1942) 1 Cal 436 : AIR 1942 Cal 593.
45. Satish Chandra Seal v. Emperor, (1944) 2 Cal 76 : AIR 1945 Cal 137.
46. Sukhan v. The Crown, ILR (1929) 10 Lah 283 (FB).
47. Sukhan v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 344 (SB) : 1930 Cr LJ 414.
48. Legal Remembrancer v. Lalit Mohan Singh Roy, ILR (1921) 49 Cal 167 : AIR 1922 Cal 342.
49. Lalji Dusadh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1927) 6 Pat 747 : AIR 1928 Pat 162; Sonaram Mahton v. King-Emperor, ILR (1930) 10 Pat 153 : AIR 1931 Pat 145; Bharosa v Crown, ILR (1940) Nag 679 : AIR 1941 Nag 86.
50. Nathu v. State, AIR 1959 All 467.

sold the cow and calf to a certain person could be proved under this section but not the statement that the accused had stolen them.[51]

The digging out and handing over to the police by the accused person, of certain articles from particular spots to which he took the police and witnesses, without the accused person saying anything, does not amount to a "statement", and, therefore, is not admissible in evidence but it is an "act" or "conduct", which is admissible in evidence under Section 8.[52]

Where the accused in the custody of a police officer said to him: "I have buried a gun at such and such a place", it was held that not only the fact of the discovery of the gun but also the statement of the accused that he had buried the gun at that place was admissible in evidence.[53]

In a case where a prosecution witness, while referring to the information given by the accused leading to the recovery of a rifle, also stated that the accused had told him, in the presence of the investigating officer that the accused would point out the rifle, the Mysore High Court held that the latter part of the information amounted to confession and was inadmissible in evidence.[54]

The former Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow had held that this section must be construed strictly, and only so much of such information, whether it amounts to a confession or not, as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered can be proved under it. The section is not intended to let in a confession generally.[55] Under Section 27, only so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered is admissible. The rest of the information has to be excluded.[56] Where the accused stated that he had killed his brother and that he removed the body and buried it in a field, it was held that the first portion that he killed his brother was inadmissible and the latter part that he removed the dead body and buried it in the Kuvawal field was admissible, as the recovery was affected on that information.[57]

In all these cases the exact words of the accused, giving out the information which leads to the discovery, are important, because such portion of the information only is provable under Section 27, against the accused. To give an example, if the accused says that he had kept the ornament inside the bush, it spells out his possession of the object that may be recovered. If, on the other hand, the accused says the object was kept or would be found inside the bush, it would only show that he got the knowledge somehow about the place where the object could be found. The latter type of case would come within the decision in Triambuk v. State of M.P.[58]. What is required under Section 27, and is provable is only such of the information that leads to the discovery of the object. In this view, it is very important for the officer to record the information given by the accused, as far as possible, in the same words spoken to by the accused. It should also be recorded in the first person and should not be paraphrased.[59]

The information which leads to discovery, distinctly of the fact concerned with the case, is admissible though the accused led the police party and pointed out the place. But where the weapon was recovered from accused No. 1 under a seizure memo in which it was recited that the accused No. 1 made a statement that he would show the weapon with which he assaulted the deceased, it was held by the Supreme Court, that the first part in the seizure memo would be inadmissible, because the fact that the accused No. 1, assaulted the deceased was not discovered in pursuance of the information given by accused No. 1; it would be a confessional statement to the police which would be hit by Section 25 of the Act. There must be evidence to connect the weapon with the crime.[60] Where the accused first made a statement that he took the corpse to the bed of the dried up nullah and then took the police to that place, where they found blood stains on the sand, and he made a statement to the effect that the body of the deceased was kept, whereupon the body was found buried, it was held that the first information given by

---

51. Queen-Empress v. Babu Lal, ILR (1884) 6 All 509, (FB); B.B. Singh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1944) 21 Luck 56.
52. Emperor v. Nanua, ILR (1941) All 280 : AIR 1941 All 145.
53. Emperor v. Chokhey, (1937) All 710 : AIR 1937 All 497.
54. Shankar Rao v. State, AIR 1958 Mysore 1.
55. B.B. Singh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1944) 21 Luck 56.
56. Mohd Sadiq v. State, (1979) 81 PLRD 1 (DB).
57. Punjamava v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1965 Guj; Parimal Banerjee v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 220 (Cal) (DB).
58. AIR 1954 SC 39.
59. In re : Athappa Goundan, 1937 Mad 618 (FB); In re : Channa Reddy, AIR 1940 Mad 710. In re : Ramamurthy, AIR 1941 Mad 290; Naresh Chandra Das v. Emperor, AIR 1942 Cal 593, Mangal Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1948 Nag 78.
60. Babboo v. State of M.P., AIR 1979 SC 1042; D.P. Misal v. State of Maharashtra, 1987 Cr LJ 1512 (Bom).

the accused leading to the discovery of blood-stains and some leaves at a particular spot would be admissible, and the latter statement that he kept the body there was not admissible.[61]

The Madras High Court has put a wider construction and held that the whole of the statement which leads to the discovery of a stolen article is admissible and it should not be cut up so as to confine it only to the actual words which the accused may use to express the fact that he had hidden the properties.[62] If it is the accused's statement that connects the fact discovered with the offence and makes it relevant, then, even though the statement amounts to a confession of the offence, it must be admitted because it is that which had led directly to the discovery of the fact.[63]

In a limited class of cases where the gist of the offence is possession, words such as 'I hid', 'pledged', 'I sold', 'I gave', or 'I have kept' are admissible on the ground that the words are distinctly related to the fact discovered, though in some circumstances they may amount to a confession.[64]

Where the accused stated: "I gave the dynamo and the light to V (accused No. 2).....I got back from V the dynamo light.....and the dynamo stolen from my next house, and sold them to the proprietor of the Soda Factory near the Pillayar Temple etc.," It was held that the portion "I gave the dynamo and light to V", was not admissible since the requirements of Section 27 were not satisfied; that the previous history of the dynamo spoken to by accused No. 1, namely, that he got it back from V, or that at an earlier of point of time he stole it from the next house would be inadmissible, as those statements were not relevant for the discovery; and that the only portion 'I sold the dynamo to the proprietor of the Soda Factory near Pillayar Temple, etc., was admissible as that information led to the discovery of the fact, namely, the dynamo.[65]

Any statement by the accused, offering to point out the weapon of offence, excluding the incriminating portion which would be hit by Section 25, is admissible under Section 27.[66]

In a case where the accused lodged the first information report, stating that he murdered his wife due to her bad character, and it was in the nature of a confession it was held that part of it was not admissible and that the second part, leading to the discovery of the body and bloodstained cloths was held admissible.[67] In[68] it was held that the statement relating to the handling over of the key as well as the as box, was held admissible, as that portion distinctly related to the fact discovered, and the other portion that he opened the shop with the key was held inadmissible.

This section is based on the doctrine of confirmation by subsequent facts. That doctrine is that where, in consequence of a confession otherwise inadmissible, search is made and facts are discovered which confirm it in material points, then such discovery is a guarantee that the confession made was true. But what is important to note is that only that portion of the information can be proved which relates distinctly or strictly to the facts discovered.....The expression 'distinctly' means 'clearly', or 'positively'. It therefore follows that where the accused makes a compound statement, it would be the duty of the court to divide it into its component parts and only admit that part which had distinctly led to the discovery of the particular fact, and reject the rest. The view that the entire statement accompanying the discovery was admissible, even though it contained an acknowledgement of guilt, or other incriminatory statements, can no longer be sustained as correct after the pronouncement of the Privy Council.[69]

---

61. Kalu Khan v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 102 : 1957 Cr LJ 530.
62. Sogainmuthu Padayachi v. King-Emperor, ILR (1925) 50 Mad 274.
63. Athappa Goundan v. Emperor, AIR (1937) Mad 695, (FB).
64. Public Prosecutor v. Indla China Lingiah, AIR 1954 Mad 433 : 55 Cr LJ 583; Rama v. State, 1952 Bom 299 (FB); Rangrao Dnyanu Nikam v. State, AIR 1952 Bom 72, ("I have kept that bomb in the eastern wall of a dung pit in a cattle shed of my friend, and I will take it out and give you," was held to be admissible). Chunilal v. Union of India, AIR 1964 HP 27 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 293, (I buried their copper linings in the forest), Chinnaswamy Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1962 SC 1788, (he had hidden the ornament at a place).
65. In re : Vellingiri, AIR 1950 Mad 613 : 1951 Cr LJ 1531.
66. Polukuru Kottaya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67; Proboo v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113, 1972 All WR 192, Dipu v. State of Calcutta, 1977 Cr LJ 1508 (Cal).
67. Gopal v. State, 1977 Cr LJ 358, see also Kunnumal Mohammed v. State of Kerala, AIR 1963 Ker 54.
68. AIR 1962 SC 116.
69. Polukuri Kottaya v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 67; see also Dharma v. State, AIR 1966 Raj 74; Jasoda Haldar (Smt.) v. Sailendra Nath AIR 1957 Cal 372.

Where, though the interrogation by the police took two hours, it was done in the presence of many persons, it was held that it cannot be held that the disclosure was not voluntary. As the fact discovered was the place from which various articles were produced by the accused and as the information given by the accused related to that important fact, it was clearly admissible under Section 27 of the Evidence Act.

Where the confessional statement does not lead to any discovery of incriminating articles, such part of the statement will not be covered by Section 27 and the other part is not admissible, as it is hit by Section 25.[70] The accused, after his arrest and after recovery of stolen property from him, showed a place from where he had stolen the property. It was held that it amounts to a confession without leading to any new discovery of a fact, and, therefore, not admissible.[71]

Discovery is not the same thing as disclosure; where there has been no discovery in consequence of the information given by the accused, such information cannot be proved against the accused.[72]

20. PLACE OF DISCOVERY

The accused, who gave the information leading to the discovery of fact, need not be in exclusive possession of the place where from the recovery was made.[73] Where the information was that the accused concealed the knife in the compound of another, and it was recovered, it added to the weight of inference against the accused.[74]

In order that a 'discovery' may come under the provisions of this section, the place from which the incriminating article was recovered must be a place of concealment, which would be difficult or impossible for the police to discover without some assistance from the accused.[75]

The discovery of a pistol at the instance of the accused, from a place which was a public thoroughfare was held to be not relevant.[76] Recovery of the wearing apparel of the deceased from a public place a burrow pit near the place of murder more than three weeks after the occurrence was held to be irrelevant.[77] The Supreme Court held that, where a weapon was merely taken out by the accused from beneath his cot and handed over to police, without any statement, as it was a place which was also accessible to all, the factum of recovery was barred under Section 27.[78]

---

70. Hari Shanker v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Del).
71. State v. Prakash Singh, AIR 1956 Punj 224 : 1956 Cr LJ 1347.
72. Prabhoo v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113; Sattiah S/o Kisthiah v. Govt, AIR 1951 Hyd 45; Naresh Ch. Nath v. State, AIR 1971 Tripura 16 : 1971 Cr LJ 407; Ramlal Lohar v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 1734 (Gau); Trilochan Joshi v. Union of India, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 109 (Delhi); Harishankar v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Del); Amin Chand v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1034 (Delhi); Mahabir v. State, AIR 1972 SC 1331.
73. State v. Amar Singh, ILR (1961) 11 Raj 154; Sadashiv Bajrang Sutar v. State of Maharashtra, 1982 Cr LJ 2056 (Bom); Kunjan Nadar v. State, 1990 Cr LJ (NOC) 6 (Ker); Ladoo v. State, 1984 (26) Delhi. LT 254.
74. Kunjan Nadar v. State, 1990 Cr LJ (NOC) 6 (Ker); dead body exhumed at instance of accused, Vasudevan v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 3151 (para 8) (Ker).
75. Sadhu Singh v. State, AIR 1967 Punj 14; Amin v. State, AIR 1958 All 293.
76. Dudh Nath Pandey v. U.P., AIR 1981 SC 911. Also see Jaysing v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 1687, 1691 (Bom) and Trimbak v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 239 : 1954 Cr LJ 335 (para 4). Also see S.P. Sohatre v State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 454 (Bom); Sarabjit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 2231, (P&H). Surinder Kumar alias Raju v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 20 (P&H); Jai Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 1689 (Raj). See also Ganpat Kisan v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 792 (para 10) (Bom), following Trimbak v. The State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1954 SC 39 : 1954 Cr LJ 335.
77. Abdul Sattar v. U.T., Chandigarh, AIR 1986 SC 1438; Sudhir Chandra Das v. State 1970 Tripura 8 : 1971 Cr LJ 86, Osan v. State of Punjab, 1978 Punj LR 106 (open place); Jag Narih v. State, 1965 All LJ 344; Ramdas v. State, (1962) 2 Andh LT 115; Mst. Viran Wali v. State, (1961) 1 Cr LJ 258 : 1AIR 961 JK 11; State of Kerala v. Joseph, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 454 (open place like a quarry), Kolimala Bija v. State of Kutch, AIR 1954 Kutch 22 : 1954 Cr LJ 801; (it shows only knowledge of the accused place) 1964 MP 30 : In re : Kalu Singh Moti Singh, AIR 1964 MP 30 : (1964) 1 Cr LJ 198 (open field); Shoba Param Kachi v. State of MP, 1959 MP 125 : 1959 Cr LJ 476; Mst. Bhagan v. State of Pepsu, 1955 Cr LJ 537; Abdul Haqua Ali v. State, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 122; Mayachar v. State of Orissa, 1987 Cr LJ 1948, (recovery may be relevant under Section 8); Abdul Sattar v. Union Territory, 1985 SCR (Cri) 395 : AIR 1986 SC 1438. Kalu v. State, 1974 Cr LJ 839 (J&K) ; Puran Lal v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 3813 (All), Dharni Pradhan v. State 1997 Cr LJ 2973 (Ori); discovery from open place, S.T. Chalke v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3364 (para 8) (Bom).
78. Bahadul v. State of Orissa, AIR 1979 SC 1262 : 1979 Cr LJ 1075. See also Krishan Mohar Singh Dugal v. State of Goa, AIR 1999 SC 3842 (para 2) : 2000 Cr LJ 18 (SC).

It is true that exclusive possession cannot be brought home to an accused, if properties are discovered in open places equally accessible to members of the public, as a result of the information given by him. But the fact, that it was on that particular person's information and his pointing out that the incriminating article was discovered and recovered, would lead to the presumption that he was the person who had secreted it there.[79] It is a fallacious notion that, when recovery of any incriminating article is made from a place which is open or accessible to others it will vitiate the evidence. The crucial question is not whether the place is accessible to others or not but whether it is ordinarily visible to others or not. If it is not, then it is immaterial that the place of concealment is accessible to others.[80] If the property was found to be so hidden away that no ordinary members of the public could know of its existence then the statement leading to its discovery would be admissible.[81]

The accused made statements to the effect: "If I am taken to G (the name of a place), I shall get the four silk sarees.....If I am taken to my native place I shall get one gold ring, etc." Discoveries were accordingly made at both the places. They were identified by the ladies as belonging to the family. The question was, as the articles were the subject of open sale in the market, whether they could be said to be connected with the crime. The court said: "It is a matter of common knowledge that ladies have an uncanny sense of identifying their own belongings, particularly articles of personal use in the family. That apart, the description of the silk sarees in question shows that they were expensive sarees with distinctive designs."[82]

21. LEADS TO DISCOVERY

STRAIGHT, J., drew a distinction between a discovery by the act of the party and one from his information. Where the accused, while giving the knife to the police, stated that he had thrown away certain jewels on the deceased at the scene of offence and he would show them the next morning and later he pointed out the jewels, it was held that as the statements had been made to a police officer, they were inadmissible, as the recovery was made by his own act and it was not from any information given by him that the discovery took place.[83]

However, the Bombay High Court, in Queen-Empress v. Nana,[84] held that, had it not been for the information given by the accused, the property would not have been discovered; that the information set the police in motion, the immediate consequence being that the police asked the accused to show them the spot and accompanied him there, with a view to the discovery of the property, and it was the natural consequence of the information the police had received from the accused; and it is so connected with the final result, namely, the discovery of the property, as a causa causans.[85]

If, in consequence of the disclosure statement of the accused, recovery of guns was effected from a place which could not be known to others, such a statement is admissible.[86] Where the disclosure statement of the accused that the dead body of the deceased child was carried on a motorcycle upto a particular spot led to the recovery of a broken piece of glass from the said spot which was found to be the part of the tail lamp of the motorcycle of the co-accused, allegedly used for the said purpose, the information supplied by the accused would be admissible in evidence.[87]

---

79. In re : Murugan Alias Thannasi, AIR 1958 Mad 451 : 1958 Cr LJ 1196.
80. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Jeet Singh, AIR 1999 SC 1293 (para 26) : 1999 Cr LJ 2025.
81. In re : Murugan, AIR 1958 Mad 451; Public Prosecutor, v Pakkiriswami, AIR 1929 Mad 846; Ram Autar v. Emperor, AIR 1925 All 478; Amrit Sonar v. Emperor, AIR 1919 Pat 330; Sohan Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 91; Mangalya Ragho v. Emperor, Nag 54.
82. Earabhadrappa v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1983 SC 446
83. Queen-Empress v. Pancham, ILR (1882) 4 All 198.
84. ILR (1889) 14 Bom 260.(F.B.) of 5 Judges.
85. See also Ganuchandra v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Bom 286; Rama Shidappa v. State, AIR 1952 Bom 299; Manjunathaiya v. Emperor, AIR 1914 Mad 61; In re : Sogianuthu Padayachi, AIR 1926 Mad 638; Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Chenanashya, 2 Cal WN 257; Isher Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1916 Lah 228; Karam Din v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 338; Nawab Din v. Emperor, AIR 1933 Lah 516; State v. Mohindera Singh, AIR 1953 Pun 81; State v. Lehna Singh, AIR 1953 Pun 101; A.P. Kuttan Panicker v. State of Kerala, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 669 (Ker).
86. Narpal Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1977 SC 1066; recovery of skeleton of wife of accused at his instance. Shambu Gowala v. State of W.B., 2000 Cr LJ 1602 (para 15) (Cal).
87. State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, 2000 Cr LJ 2301 (paras 36, 37-39) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1691.

The person who received information from the accused, and the person who effected the recovery on such information need not be same. It would be sufficient if the information leads to the discovery of the fact.[1] The information given by the accused is admissible provided it leads to the discovery of relevant facts, even if the actual recovery is made by the accused himself in pursuance of that information[2] but admissibility alone would not render the evidence, pertaining to the above information, reliable. The Court would have to see whether or not it was voluntarily stated by the accused.[3] The information given by the accused must lead to discovery of the fact directly; but, discovery of incriminating articles made after making search from place to place, is not attracted by Section 27.[4] Where, at the instance of the witnesses, the accused was arrested and a weapon stained with blood of the blood group of the deceased was recovered, on the information given by the accused, and when the witnesses later did not associate themselves with the recovery, it was held that this did not vitiate the prosecution evidence.[5] Where the evidence was that the victim was last seen with the accused and, on his information, the victim's muffler was recovered from the accused, it was held that the recovery was the most incriminating fact against the accused.[6] Where the complainant indicated the place where the stolen articles could be found, and they were recovered in pursuance of a portion of the statement of the accused made in the presence of independent witnesses who attested the recovery memo, it was held that the fact that the complainant gave an indication did not render the recovery outside the purview of Section 27.[7] Where the victims of brutal assault were found lying on the spot where the accused gave discovery and other accused were found standing, the discovery implicates him in the incident as the person participating in the crime along with others.[8] Recovery on the information given by the accused himself is admissible in evidence under this section.[9] Deposit of recovered arms and ammunition as a result of raid on terrorists at police headquarter because of its large quantity for the purpose of safety, would not vitiate the recovery [10] When the discovery under Section 27 is as regards the authorship of concealment and not of guns and daggers used in a crime, conduct and concealment are incriminating circumstances and their discovery becomes relevant and admissible under Section 27.[11] The disclosure statement could also mean that the accused had knowledge of concealment of the articles recovered and not that he had himself concealed the same and was in their conscious possession.[12]

When the evidence against the accused mainly consists of a confessional statement made when he was arrested in connection with another case, still it cannot be said that the discovery was not in consequence of the information given by the accused. In that case the statement revealed that the revolver was presented to the accused by a named communist and that he had concealed it in the ground near his father-in-law's house, the revolver was recovered on his taking the police to his father-in-law's house. It was held that the description of the revolver given by him indicated that the accused got possession of it and his statement was admissible.[13]

Where incriminating articles were recovered after a gap of 10 to 12 days after the disclosure statement and they were not recovered earlier though the particular place/house was searched twice, the recoveries do not inspire confidence.[14] Where the accused brought the articles from inside his house and handed them over to the Investigating Officer and the witnesses, there being no convincing evidence that the articles were in the exclusive possession of the accused and in absence of any site plan, it was no recovery under Section 27.[15] Where there was no evidence to show that the shots were fired from the

---

1. M.C. Sekharan v. State of Kerala, 1980 Cr LJ 31 (Ker).
2. Ram Richhapal v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 97; State v. W. Lehna Singh, AIR 1953 Punj 101 : 1953 Cr LJ 697 (Punj).
3. Rammi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4561 (para 12) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3544.
4. Sakri Janiani v. State, 1985 59 Cut LT 391.
5. Ishwar Singh v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1986 Cr LJ 1625.
6. Krishna Santra v. State, 1986 Cr LJ 2077 (Cal).
7. 1985 Mad LJ (Cri) 410.
8. Prem v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 1608 (para 11) (Bom). Also see Turuku Budha Karkaria v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 552 (para 8) (Ori); Manji v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 788 (para 5) (Raj).
9. Aravindakshan Nair v. State of Kerala, 2001 Cr LJ 431 (para 6) (Ker).
10. Lal Singh v. State of Gujarat, 2001 Cr LJ 978 (paras 23 and 24) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 746.
11. State of U.P. v. Jageshwar, AIR 1983 SC 349.
12. R.B. Killedar v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 2632 (para 4) (SC).
13. Public Prosecutor v. Nagabhushanam AIR 1943 Mad 661; Sankar Lal v. State, ILR 1962 Cut 542 : 27 Cut LT 159.
14. Kheraj Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3113 (para 10) (Raj).
15. Maharaj Deen v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 506 (para 30) (All) Poisonous substance not shown to be in personal custody or possession of accused, other recoveries not proved, conviction set aside. M.V. Mahesh v. State of Karnataka, 1996 pistols recovered, the recovery was inconsequential.[16] Where the alleged recovery of the crime weapon and cartridges on the basis of the alleged disclosure statement of the accused was unreliable, the accused was entitled to benefit of doubt.[17]

Where on one of the weapons recovered the serologist detected the presence of human blood but on the other he failed to detect any blood due to disintegration of serum, it does not mean that there had been no human blood on the other weapon.[18]

"Missing link" to the chain of circumstances.—Where at the instance of the accused a brass pitcher used for collecting the blood of the children was recovered from his house and same was found to have blood sticking on the outer side whose origin the chemical analyst could not determine as it was disintegrated by that time, it was for the accused to explain how the blood came to be there but he denied the seizure itself. It was held that such a denial was sufficient to provide a "missing link" to the chain of circumstances.[19]

22. STATEMENT NOT LEADING TO DISCOVERY OF FACT

The statement of the accused that he threw the knife, the weapon of offence in the river, has to be disregarded when it did not lead to any discovery of fact.[20] Pointing out by the accused to the vendor from whom he had purchased the knife, the weapon of the offence, cannot come under Section 27 as a witness cannot be said to be discovered if nothing is to be found or recovered from him as a consequence of the information furnished by the accused.[21] In a case of murder, mere recovery of sticks without any marks of bloods cannot constitute incriminating evidence against the accused. It is a common knowledge that in every household in villages sticks are found.[22] Where the accused himself had produced the weapon of offence and this fact was sought to be proved by the contents of the seizure memo in question which could not be proved being barred by Section 27, order refusing to exhibit the said seizure memo was proper.[23]

Where the confessional statement does not lead to any discovery of incriminating articles, such part of the statement will not be covered by Section 27 and the other part is not admissible as it is hit by Section 25.[24] The statement of the accused that he threw the knife, the weapon of offence, in the river has to be disregarded when it did not lead to any discovery of fact.[25]

23. STATEMENT SUBSEQUENT TO DISCOVERY

Where the fact has already been discovered, any statement relating to its discovery would not be admissible in evidence.[26] Mere discovery, on the information given by the accused, is of no legal consequence, if it is not preceded by the informative statement on the part of the accused.[27] Where stolen articles were discovered prior to the arrest of the accused, the subsequent statement of the accused with

---

Cr LJ 771 (paras 22 and 23) (Kant). See also Sukhvinder Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 632 (paras 15 and 16) (P&H).

16. Bhani Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3165 (para 19) (Raj).
17. Jackaran Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 2345 (paras 6 and 8).
18. State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, 1999 Cr LJ 2588 (paras 24, 25 and 27) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1776.
19. State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, 2000 Cr LJ 2301 (para 34) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1691. The Court referred to State of Maharashtra v. Suresh, 2000 (1) SCC 471.
20. State v. Zilla Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 1384; Harishanker v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Delhi); Aminchand v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1034 (Delhi); Rakma v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 69 (Raj), following 1956 Cr LJ 421 (SC).
21. Mohan v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 22 (Mad), relying on Himachal Pradesh Administration v. Shri Om Prakash, 1972 Mad LJ (Cri) 404 : 1972 Cr LJ 606 (SC) : AIR 1972 SC 975. Also see Joseph v. State of Kerala, 1997 Cr LJ 4289 (Ker). Also see Chet Ram v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 1029 (Del).
22. Narayan Kanu Datavale v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 1788 (Bom).
23. Yog Raj v. Romal Singh, 1997 Cr LJ 1958 (J&K).
24. Harishankar v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Del).
25. State v. Zilla Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 1384; Sankar Lal Aggarvalla v. State, 1979 Chand Cri Cases 170 (Punj); Harishankar v. State, 1985 Cr LJ 1700 (Delhi); Aminchand v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1034 (Delhi).
26. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.
27. Devidas v. State of Maharashtra, 1982 Cr LJ 2189 (Bom); State v. Bairagi Charan Mohanty, 1972 (38) Cut LT 754; Maharaj Deen v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 506 (para 29) (All).

regard to concealment of stolen articles was held inadmissible.[28] Where, after certain clothes were taken out of a pond on the information given by the accused, he made another statement that he had removed them from the person of the deceased and thrown them into the pond, it was held that the latter statement did not come within the purview of Section 27, and so was not admissible.[29] No statement relating to a relevant fact is admissible under the section if it is made after the discovery of that fact, or if it does not relate distinctly to the fact discovered.[30]

Where, after the recovery of blood-stained paijama and banian of the accused, which had been concealed by the accused, the accused made a statement that they were his clothes, it was held that the statement that those articles belonged to the accused was not admissible in evidence[31] but where the daughter of the deceased stated that after the recovery of the property from the accused persons, she identified the articles and found them to be belonging to her mother and they were stolen on the day of her murder, it could not be said that the recovery of articles had preceded the making of the disclosure statements.[32] Where, before the accused led the police to the place of murder, for the purpose of discovery of the deadbody, the son of the deceased, found the deadbody before the arrival of the police, it was held that the discovery of the deadbody was not in consequence of the information given by the accused.[33]

The accused, after his arrest and after recovery of stolen property from him showed a place from where he had stolen the property. It was held that it amounted to a confession, without leading to any new discovery of a fact, and therefore, not admissible.[34]

Where recovery of vehicle was made two days after disclosure statement and the police in whose jurisdiction the recovery was made, was also not informed, the recovery was held to be doubtful.[35] Recovery of a wrist watch in persuance of the disclosure made by the accused, there being no mention of any wrist watch missing in the F.I.R., can be given no importance.[36] Where two knives were recovered persuant to the disclosure of the accused of murder of which one had no blood and the other had disintegrated blood and the witness to the recovery was interested in prosecution, the recovery was of no significance.[37]

24. STATEMENT IN THE CASE OF A NUMBER OF ACCUSED

In this section the expression "from a person accused of any offence" has been used. It has given rise to conflicting judicial opinions in regard to the question of admissibility, when there is a joint statement given by several accused leading to the discovery of the fact. One view is that, as the use of the word 'person' is singular, and it has been given significance and designedly used, one cannot consider a joint statement of a number of persons and such statements cannot be said to be an information given by any particular accused out of the several accused.[38]

The evidence that one accused, along with all others, gave information leading to recovery of robbed articles, and the evidence of the receiver of the stolen property that accused 1 to 3 sold him the ring, and that accused 1 to 3 asked him to produce the ring when they came with the police party, do not present

---

28. Queen v. Kamal Fukir, 17 WR (Cri) 50; R. v. Jora Hasji, 11 Bom HCR 242; Narisanto v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Pat 161.
29. Jaggar Singh v. Crown, AIR 1952 Pepsu 23.
30. Re : Motilal, ILR (1959) 38 Pat 151 : AIR 1959 Pat 54.
31. Jamil Ahmad v. State, (1965) 67 Punj LR 1010 relying on; Prabhoo v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113.
32. Sanjay v. State (N.C.T. of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ 1231 (para 31) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 979.
33. Ramlal Lohar v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 1734 (Gau); Trilochan Joshi v. Union of India, 1983 Cr LJ (NOC) 109 (Delhi); Suresh Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1853 (para 15) (Raj).
34. State v. Parkash Singh, AIR 1956 Punj 224 : 1956 Cr LJ 1347.
35. Niranjan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 248 (para 14) (P&H).
36. Niranjan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 248 (para 15) (P&H).
37. Niranjan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 248 (para 16) (P&H).
38. Puttu v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Oudh 235; Ramsingh v. Emperor, AIR 1916 Lah 433 (2); Faqira v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 665; Kudaon v. Emperor, AIR 1925 Nag 407; Bhudha v. Emperor, AIR 1922 Lah 315; Poshaki v. State, AIR 1953 All 526; Narayan v. State, AIR 1953 Hyder 161; In re : Sheik Mahboob, AIR 1942 Mad 532; Urlav Namasudara v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Cal 297; Kolimala Bijal v. State, AIR 1954 Kutch 22; Emperor v. Shiv Putraya, AIR 1930 Bom 244; Oudh Ram v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 1656 (Del); Kanura Yanadi Changaiah v. State of A.P., 1985 Cr LJ 1822 (AP); Prem Bahadur v. State, 1978 Cr LJ 945 (Sikkim); Dhakeswari v. Commissioner of Income Tax, AIR 1955 SC 154 : 1955 Cr LJ 196 (SC); Babu v. State of Allahabad, 1972 Cr LJ 815 (All).

any incriminating material against the accused. It is obligatory upon the investigating officer to state and record who gave the information, when he is dealing with more than one accused, what words were used by him so that a recovery pursuant to the information received may be connected to the person giving the information so as to provide incriminating evidence against that person.[39]

In Ramsingh v. Emperor,[40] it was stated that the information which was given first by one of the accused is to be taken in evidence, if it leads to the discovery of the fact. That was followed in Rangayya v. R.,[41] In re.: Kallameedi.[42]

The decision in Puttu v. Emperor,[43]; was dissented from by the Allahabad High Court in Nathu v. State,[44] relying on Naresh Chandra v. Emperor,[45] and State of M.P. v. Chhotelal Mohanlal,[46] and it was observed. "It is easily conceivable that two or more persons simultaneously or jointly furnish an information and, as a result of that information, a common discovery is made; such a case will, if either of the conditions is satisfied be covered by the section. Each case will, however, have to be judged on its own facts, but the underlying principle seems to be that the information should be such as cannot be said to be already in the possession of the police, that the discovery is made in consequence of that information, and further that the discovery is not rediscovery of something already discovered."

In Naresh Chandra Das v. Emperor,[47] it was held: "When a fact is once discovered, in consequence of information received from some source, any further information subsequently received from any other source cannot be said to be the information whereby the fact is discovered. But, the mere plurality of information received before discovery shall not necessarily take any of these information out of the section. In a suitable case, it is possible to ascribe to more than one accused the information which leads to the discovery."[48]

The other view was stated in an early case, Queen v. Rama Churn Chug,[49] as follows:—"It can hardly have been the intention of the Legislature that, when a fact is discovered in consequence of information received from one of several persons charged with an offence, and when others give like information, that fact should be treated as discovered from the information of them all..... It should be deposed that a particular fact has been discovered from the information of A and B, and this will let in, under Section 27, only so much of the information as relates distinctly to the fact thereby discovered."

In Sulleman v. Emperas,[50] it was held that if two persons give information leading to the discovery of fact, so much of the statement of each accused as relates distinctly to the fact discovered may be proved.

In a later case the Calcutta High Court held that where joint statements of the accused, had not been recorded by the investigating officer, but it transpired that the accused persons made some statements jointly and, on the basis of their statements, dead bodies were recovered which were satisfactorily identified, such evidence would be admissible under Section 27[51]. Where stolen property was recovered from different parts of the residence of the accused on the information of three co-accused, it was held to be nothing unnatural or improbable on the part of the accused in keeping their share of the stolen articles concealed in the residence of one of the accused.[52]

---

39. Md Abdul Hafeez v. State of A.P., AIR 1983 SC 367; See also Lachhman Singh v. State, AIR 1952 SC 167.
40. AIR 1916 Lah 433.
41. 1932 Mad WN 113.
42. AIR 1940 Mad 710.
43. AIR 1945 Oudh 235.
44. 1958 All 467.
45. AIR 1942 Cal 593.
46. AIR 1951 Nag 71.
47. AIR 1942 Cal 593.
48. See also Rangayya v. Emperor, 1931 Mad WN 113; Abdul Kadhar v. Emperor, AIR 1946 Cal 452; Gurubaru v. R., AIR 1949 Ori 67 : 1949(1) Cut 207.
49. (1875) 24 WR (Cri) 36.
50. (1916) 17 Cr LJ 506.
51. Lall alias Chiranjib Bhowmik v. State, (1982) 86 Cal WN 479.
52. Brij Mohan v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 922 (para 11) : AIR 1994 SC 739.

The third view was expressed in Queen Empress v. Babulal[53] STRAIGHT J. observed: "In detailing statements of this kind, which are alleged to have led to discovery, it is of the essence of things that what each prisoner said should be precisely and separately stated. If the evidence was not clear upon this point, and the witness refused to be more explicit, the Judge should have paid no attention to it." This view was similarly expressed in Allabaksh v. Emperor.[54]

The Supreme Court, in Lachhaman Singh v. State,[55] did not express any clear opinion regarding the question but simply observed as follows: "But, as to what should be the rule when there is clear and unimpeachable evidence as to independent and authentic statements of the nature referred to in Section 27, Evidence Act, having been made by several persons, 'either simultaneously or otherwise', all that we wish to say is that, as at present advised, we are inclined to think that some of the cases relied upon by the learned counsel for the appellants have perhaps gone further than is warranted by the language in Section 27, and it may be that on a suitable occasion, in future, those cases may have to be reviewed."

The above observation spells out that, in case of simultaneous information given by several accused, the information given by a particular accused would be admissible, if it is followed up by the police being taken to the actual spot from where the fact was discovered. The following decisions are on the same lines.[56]

In another case, Ramkishan Mithanlal v. State of Bombay,[57] the Supreme Court observed: "The question that really arose for the consideration of the court there was whether the joint statement attributed to the accused 1 and 2 in that case was admissible, without specifying what statement was made by a particular accused, which led to the discovery of the relevant fact, and it was rightly held that a joint statement by more than one accused was not contemplated by Section 27, and evidence of Mistry, the police officer, in that behalf should therefore have been excluded."

In Motilal v. State,[58] it was held that it would be correct to lay down, as a rule of prudence, that the investigating officer should record the statements of the accused persons in precise language as far as possible, one accused after the other, and if it is so done, it can be judged by the court which part of the information led to the discovery of a fact in respect of a particular accused as deposed before it, and whether the evidence is believable and if so against whom. It was further held that because one accused accidentally happens to be the first person to give a statement, it cannot be taken that such statement is the information in consequence of which the discovery may be said to have been made, and that the other statements should not be excluded on the ground that they did not lead to the discovery.

In Section 13 of the General Clauses Act, it is stated that in all Central Acts and Regulations, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context, the words in the singular shall include the plural and vice versa. If that be the position even different statements of different accused, it is submitted, can be taken into account. If such statements of each of the accused are precisely and separately recorded, to the extent possible, in the words spoken to by the accused (as pointed out in Queen Empress v. Babulal,[59] and it would be possible for the court to appreciate to what extent of the statement of one accused can be taken as leading to the discovery of a particular fact. And the different statements of different accused, made in some cases, leading to the discovery of different facts in a given case, can be considered.

In a Madras case, WADSWORTH J. observed: "It seems to us improper to treat as individual statements of two different persons, a composite statement of this kind, which appears to have been made up of information gathered from the two persons, it being impossible to say how much of the statement was made by one of them and how much was made by the other."[60]

---

53. ILR (1884) 6 All 509 (FB).
54. 92 PLR 1902.
55. AIR 1952 SC 167.
56. State of M.P. v. Chhotelal, AIR 1955 Nag 71; Ramchand v. State, AIR 1956 MB 256; Ranchhod v. State, AIR 1956 MB 104.
57. AIR 1955 SC 104.
58. AIR 1959 Pat 54.
59. 6 All 509.
60. In re : Peria Guruswami, AIR 1941 Mad 765 : ILR 1942 Mad 77.

But the Kerala High Court held that if the different statements are all of the same pattern, and refer to the same articles, and the accused have taken the police officer to point out the articles which were hidden by them, those statements would constitute one composite statement about the same article which did not serve to fasten the individual guilt, as there was no knowing on whose information the material facts were discovered.[61] Where the alleged recovery of the clothes of the deceased was made at the instance of both the accused jointly and it could not be said as to which of the accused produced which article and recovery of the ring and wrist watch of the deceased was not preceded any disclosure statement of the accused, the said recoveries were held to be inadmissible in evidence under Section 27.[62]

Where two or three persons jointly made statements leading to the discovery, the fact that their statements appear in case diary in a certain order, is no guarantee that they were made in that order.[63]

Where it was alleged that the recovery of stolen articles was made on the basis of the statement of one of the accused petitioner from the house of a witness who stated that such a statement had been made by the three accused persons including the petitioner which made it doubtful and identification of the accused in the Court was also doubtful, it was held that the statement of the petitioner was not sufficient to uphold conviction of the accused persons.[64]

25. POLICE ALREADY KNOW

Conduct of the accused in first telling the police and then taking them to the place where the weapon of offence was hidden and it is recovered, it amounts to information directly leading to the discovery of the fact, though police already knew the place where it could be found.[65]

The police must not have any prior information before the discovery of the fact at the instance of the accused. It is only if they derive the information from the accused as to the object to be recovered that Section 27 would be attracted.[66]

If the police had already known where the object was hidden, such discovery is inadmissible.[67] A fact already discovered from other sources cannot be discovered afresh, even if relevant information is extracted from the accused.[68]

In a later case, the Supreme Court, in Karan Singh v. State of U.P.[69], held that, where the accused first told the police that he would show the knife and then took them to the place where it had been hidden, his statement leading to the discovery of the blood-stained knife was not inadmissible on the ground that the police already knew the place where the knife could be found.[70]

26. DELAY

The Supreme Court in State of U.P. v. Wazir Chand,[71] held that where there was a long delay between the fatal attack and the arrest of certain accused, following the recovery of certain articles belonging to the deceased, and it was also not clear from the memo of recovery that the articles were recovered on the information given by the accused and the accused was not charged for retaining stolen

---

61. Karuppa Valayan v. State of Kerala, AIR 1960 Ker 238.
62. Chander Pal v. State, 1999 Cr LJ 135 (para 8) (Del). The Court referred to Bhagat Bahadur v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 2201 : 1996 (1) AD (Del) 59.
63. Nathu v. State, AIR 1958 All 467.
64. Trilochan Harijan v. State of Orissa, 1998 Cr LJ 1887 (para 6) (Ori).
65. Karan Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 1385; Proboo v. State, AIR 1963 SC 1113; State v. Kathikalu, AIR 1961 SC 1808.
66. Jaffer Husain v. State, (1969) 2 SCWR 550 : AIR 1970 SC 1934.
67. Aher Raja Khima v. State of Saurashtra, AIR 1956 SC 217; Nathu v. State, AIR 1958 All 467; Krishan Mohar Singh Dugal v. State of Goa, AIR 1999 SC 3842 (para 2).
68. Thimma v. State of Mysore, AIR 1971 SC 1871; Hemraj Derilal v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1954 SC 462; In re : Gunadla, 1959 Cr LJ 947 : AIR 1959 AP 387; M. Karuararan v. State of Kerala, ILR 1960 Ker 1202; Noor Md. v. State, AIR 1959 Ker 46 : 1959 Cr LJ 187; In re : Chenna Reddi, AIR 1940 Mad 710; Gomtu v. State of Himachal Pradesh, 1972 Cr LJ 687 (HP).
69. AIR 1973 SC 1385.
70. Chamanlal v. State of J & K, 1976 Cr LJ 1310 (J&K).
71. AIR 1978 SC 315.

property, the recovery could not be relied upon as suggesting participation of the accused in the fatal attack; that this would be so even if recovery was believed to be at the instance of the accused in question.

Where the recovery of weapon of offence was at the instance of the accused, nine days after his arrest, it was held that the delay was not material.[72] The delay of more than two months for the accused to make up his mind to give information to the police cannot possibly afford a valid reason for rejecting the information upon which ornaments of a peculiar nature were recovered.[73]

Where the accused stated that he threw the deadbody in a canal, and the police could not recover it immediately but sent a telegraphic message to the people supervising the canal and the deadbody was found a few days later, it was held that such statement was admissible.[74] Where articles were recovered on the basis of the statement of the accused, the said circumstances positively inculpating the accused could not be rejected merely because of the belated interrogation of the accused by the Investigating Officer.[75]

Where recovery took place twenty three days after the statement, the informant being still not charged, and was ultimately charged only as an abettor, the Supreme Court upheld the exclusion of the evidence.[76]

27. WHETHER SECTION 27 IS A PROVISO TO SECTIONS 24, 25 AND 26

The question has often arisen whether Section 27 is a proviso to all the preceding Sections 24, 25 and 26, or to Sections 25 and 26, or to Section 26 only. On a literal reading of Section 27 which starts with the expression "provided that" it would appear that it is a proviso only to the immediately preceding section i.e. Section 26. Section 24 deals with confessions generally and under this section a confession which is not voluntary is not admissible. Section 25 deals with a confession made to a police officer. Such a confession is absolutely inadmissible whether it is voluntary or not. Section 26 deals with a confession whilst he is in police custody. Such a confession is also inadmissible unless it is made in the immediate presence of a magistrate. If Section 27 is considered only as a proviso to Section 26 and not to Sections 24 and 25 it would follow that an involuntary confession or a confession to a police officer would be inadmissible even though it leads to a discovery of a fact, Whereas if the confession is made while in the custody of a police officer but not to a police officer Section 27 would apply if the conditions laid down in that section are satisfied.[77] The Privy Council observed at page 80, "Section 27 seems to be intended to be a proviso to Section 26."[78] In Polukuri Kottaiah v. Emperor[79] also the Privy Council observed at page 76 "Section 27 which is not artistically worded provides an exception to the prohibition imposed by the previous section and enables certain statements made by a person in police custody are to be proved. See also discussion in 1976 ASIL pages 234, 235".

However in Ramakishan v. State of Bombay[80] the Supreme Court observed at page 923 "Section 27 is an exception to the rules enacted in Sections 25 and 26 of the Act." The same view was expressed in Chinnaswamy Reddy v. State of A.P.[81], where it is stated that Section 27 is an exception to Sections 25 and 26 and even a confessional statement before the police which distinctly relates to the discovery of a fact may be proved under Section 27. The decision in Delhi Administration v. Balkrishan[82] is also to the 72. Baldeo Singh v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 1087; State of Maharashtra v. Vithal Pandurang Bhagat, 1985 Cr LJ 664 (36 days delay as accused was hospitalised). Contra : unexplained delay of five days, evidence weakened, Ahmad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 274 (para 10) (Bom).

---

73. 1973 W.L.N. 934 (Raj).
74. Harbhajan Singh v. State, (1956) 58 Punj LR 541.
75. State of U.P. v. Babu Ram, 2000 Cr LJ 2457 (para 18) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1735, reversing Cri A Nos. 498, 506 of 1993 and Ref. No. 3 of 1993, dt. 23-4-1994 (All).
76. Chandran v. State of Madras, AIR 1978 SC 1574.
77. Pakala Narayana Swamy v. Emperor, 66 IA 66 : 1939 PC 47 : 66 IA 66.
78. Emperor v. Babulal, 6 All 509, (dissenting opinion of MAHMOOD J., Supt and Remembrancer v. Bhajoo, 34 Cal WN 106 : ILR 57 Cal 1062; Deviram v. State, AIR 1962 Punj 70; Jasoda Haldar (Smt.) v. Sailendranath Samantha, 1957 Cr LJ 707 : AIR 1957 Cal 372; Nagin Soma v. State of Gujarat, (1966) 7 Guj LR 601.
79. 74 IA 65
80. 1955 (1) SCR 903 : AIR 1955 SC 104.
81. AIR 1962 SC 1788 at 1793.
82. AIR 1972 SC 3 at p. 6.

same effect. In Mohd. Inayatullah v. State of Maharashtra,[83] the Supreme Court observed at p. 485 "the expression "provided that" together with the phrase "whether it amounts to a confession or not" shows that the section is in the nature of an exception to the preceding provisions particularly Sections 25 and 26. It is not necessary in this case to consider if this section qualifies to any extent Section 24 also".

In State of U.P. v. Deoman Upadhyaya[84] the Supreme Court observed at page 337 that Section 27 is founded on the principle that even though confession whilst in the custody of a police officer is tainted and inadmissible it may be presumed to be untainted and provable if the information leads to the discovery of a fact insofar as it relates to the fact thereby discovered and that Section 27 is a proviso to Section 26. However while setting out the material propositions emerging from an analysis of Sections 24 to 27 and Section 162, Cr PC, they observed in clause (e) "a statement made by a person to a police officer..... cannot except to the extent permitted by Section 27 of the Indian Evidence Act be used for any purpose". It would therefore appear that even though in the earlier part the Supreme Court stated that Section 27 is a proviso to Section 26, the above observation would indicate that they regarded Section 27 as a proviso to Section 25 also. HIDAYATULLAH J., in his judgment at p. 357 took the view that Section 27 has to be rightly held to be an exception to Sections 24 to 26 and not only to Section 26.

From a review of the above decisions of the Supreme Court, the preponderance of opinion in that court appears to be that Section 27 is an exception to both Sections 25 and 26 and not merely Section 26. It is true that in Pakala Narayanaswamy[85] and in Polukuri Kottaiah,[86] the observations of the Privy Council are to the effect that Section 27 is a proviso to Section 26. But they were not dealing with the question whether Section 27 is an exception to Section 25. The decisions of the Supreme Court holding that Section 27 is an exception to Sections 25 and 26 also cannot be said to be inconsistent with the above decisions of the Privy Council. However it is submitted that the view expressed by HIDAYATULLAH in Deoman Upadhyya's case[87] that Section 27 is an exception also to Section 24 would lead to considerable injustice. In that view even a confession which is not voluntary and which has been caused by inducement, threat or promise would be admissible provided it leads to the discovery of a fact, thus defeating the very purpose of preventing confessions extorted by the police being inadmissible. It is submitted that the view expressed in the undermentioned cases in which it was held that Section 27 qualifies Sections 24 to 26 should not be accepted.[88] If, however, Section 27 is interpreted as being an exception to Sections 25 and 26 only, any confession made in the custody of a police or to a police officer, if involuntary, would be inadmissible under Section 27 even though it leads to discovery. In other words Section 27 and Section 24 have to be read together. It is interesting to note that even in the early case of Durloy v. R[89] JUSTICE RANKIN pointed out the absurdity of holding that Section 27 is an exception to Section 26 only and not to Section 25, though he observed that it was for the Legislature to take the matter in hand. It is submitted that there is no necessity for the Legislature to intervene if as stated above, Section 27 is considered as an exception to Section 25 and 26 but should be read along with Section 24. The same result can be arrived at by taking the view that a person who goes to the police officer and voluntarily makes a statement to him can be said to be in the custody of a "police officer".

See for such cases commentary on the expression 'Police officer' in Section 26.

Confession made after removal of impression caused by inducement, threat or promise, relevant.

S. 28. If such a confession as is referred to in Section 24 is made after the impression caused by any such inducement, threat or promise has, in the opinion of the Court, been fully removed, it is relevant.

---

83. AIR 1976 SC 483.
84. AIR 1960 SC 1125 : (1961) 2 SCJ 334 : 1960 Cr LJ 1504.
85. AIR 1939 PC 47.
86. 74 IA 65.
87. AIR 1960 SC 1125.
88. Murri v. R., 31 All 529 (FB) : AIR 1918 Cal 88; Amiruddin v. R., 45 Cal 557; Durlay v. R., AIR 1932 Cal 297 : 59 Cal 1040; Adhik v. R., AIR 1942 Pat 156; R v. Christian, 1947 Pat 152; Madhura v. R., AIR 1946 Pat 210; Gaya Prasad v. State, AIR 1957 All 459.
89. ILR 59 Cal 1040 : AIR 1932 Cal 297.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section makes it possible for a confession to be relevant provided such confession is made after the impression caused by any inducement, threat or promise has been fully removed. Thus this section forms an exception to Section 24. The proper position of this section therefore should have been immediately after Section 24.[90]

Under this section in order to treat a confession hit by Section 24, as relevant, the court, from the facts and circumstances of each case, has to come to a definite conclusion that the impression caused in the mind of the accused to make a confession by inducement, threat or promise, has been totally removed. The burden is on the prosecution to satisfy the court by clear evidence, that the impression caused by any such inducement, threat or promise has been fully removed from the mind of the accused.

In STEPHEN'S DIGEST (7th Edn., Art-22, p-31) it is observed, "A confession is deemed to be voluntary, if (in the opinion of the judge) it is shown to have been made after the complete removal of the impression produced by any inducement, threat, or promise which would otherwise render it involuntary."

WIGMORE (3rd Edn., Section 853, 854 & 855) observed as follows: "Was the inducement brought to an end?—Here five questions may arise:

(1) Must it be shown clearly that an improper inducement once offered, was brought to an end?

(2) Are there any situations in which this showing will be regarded as impossible, and thus the inducement, once made, vitiates any future confession of that person?

(3) Can the same person who has offered the inducement possibly put an end to it so as to make admissible a confession afterwards made to himself?

(4) Are confessions made subsequently, but to a person different from the one offering the inducement, to be treated as not made under the inducement, or must it be shown to have been negatived by the second person?

(5) What suffices, in general to end inducement?

(1) The first of these questions has always been answered affirmatively; the general principle is universally conceded that the subsequent ending of an improper inducement must be shown, i.e., it is assumed to have continued until the contrary is shown.

(2) There is nothing permanently irrevocable in an improper inducement; whether it has been brought to an end is, as all concede, always open to inquiry.

(3) Yet, it seems never to have been decided specifically whether the same person may put an end to an inducement of his own creating. There is no reason why he cannot.

(4) There is no principle, no reason for assuming that a promise or a threat made by one person will be treated by the accused as equally to be attributed to some other person who has had no share in the other's conduct and shows no power or inclination to corroborate his promise or threat. Nevertheless, the inducement may, on the facts prove to be in effect the second person's as much as the first one's. It should thus be a question to be determined in each case; no general rule can be laid down.

(5) The circumstances which make it clear that the inducement had been entirely negatived must of course vary with the facts of each case. It is, in the words of an English Judge, "merely a question of degree". It is impossible to lay down a general rule, and it is useless to employ individual rulings as precedents.

PHIPSON (13th Edn., P-435, Para 22-26) observes: "If the impression produced by the promise or threat is clearly proved to have been removed, e.g., by lapse[91], by an intervening caution given by some

---

90. R. v. Babulal, ILR 6 All 509.
91. R. v. Smith, (1959) 2 QB 35 : 43 Cr App R 121.

person of superior but not of an equal[1], or inferior, authority to the person holding out the inducement – a confession subsequently made will be admissible[2]. Conversely, if the effect of a caution has worn off, the confession may be rejected.[3]

The effect of a promise is perhaps harder to dissipate than that of a threat.[4]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND 4th Edn., Vol 11, p. 234, para 412 it is stated: "A statement otherwise admissible may not be received if it is influenced by an inducement made to obtain a previous statement; thus, if the threat or promise under which the first statement was made, still persists when the second is made, the second statement will be inadmissible. Only where the time which elapses between the making of the two statements, the circumstances and the giving of any caution are such that it can be said that the original threat or inducement has been dissipated will the second statement be admitted as being voluntary.[5]

The expression "any such inducement, threat or promise, which in the opinion of the court has been fully removed, is very significant while considering the question by the court. In Bhagirath v. State of M.P.[6], it was observed: "The word 'fully' in Section 28 is significant: it means 'thoroughly', 'completely', 'entirely', so as not to leave any trace of the impression created by torture or fear; for, confession forced from the mind by the flattery of hope or by torture or fear comes in so questionable a shape that no credit can be given to it. A free and voluntary confession is presumed to flow from the strongest sense of guilt and therefore, it is admitted as proof of the crime."

In determining whether an inducement has ceased to operate, the nature of such inducement, the time and circumstances under which it was made, the situation of the person making it, will be taken into consideration by the court. The Madhya Pradesh High Court has held that, where once the existence of threat, assault, bearing or improper inducement, has been established, there is a presumption of its continuance, and the prosecution has to prove that the impression caused by the original inducement, beating, assault or threat was fully removed, when the prisoner made the confession.[7]

Where the accused confessed before the panchayat before his arrest, and was taken into custody by the villagers till the next day when police arrived, and later he was produced before a Magistrate who recorded the confession on the fourth day of the offence, it was held that the improper influence of the police had continued and so the confession was inadmissible.[8]

The influence would continue in the mind of the accused for some time, and even the warning given by the Magistrate may not have any effect immediately.[9]

In considering the question whether the impression caused by inducement, threat or promise was fully removed, the court has to see, in all cases, whether the time allowed for reflection was sufficient or not. Unless the court is satisfied that such impression was fully removed he cannot treat such confession as relevant.[10]

Where the accused was in police custody for 12 days, and confession was given after beating and threats by the police, it was held that though he was given time for reflection after such beating, it would not lessen the effect of the influence which had been brought to bear on him.[11]

In a case where a travelling auditor found defalcation by a booking-clerk and told the clerk that it would be better to pay the money back than go to jail, and thereby obtained a letter of confession before the traffic manager, it was held that it would be impossible to hold that the impression had been removed in the short interval between the conversation at the prisoner's house and the signing of the receipt for the mis-appropriated amount.[12]

---

1. R. v. Doherty, (No. 1) 13 Cox 23; (No. 2) 13 Cox 24).
2. R. v. Richards, (1832) 5 C&P 318; R. v. Bate, (1871) 11 Cox 686; Cf. R. v. Rue, 13 Cox 209.
3. R. v. Knight, 20 Cox 711.
4. R. v. Williams, 1968 52 Cr App Report 439.
5. R. v. Smith, (1959) 2 QB 35 : (1959) 2 All ER 193 C-MAC; R. v. Richards, (1832) 5 C&P 318; R. v. Howes, (1834) 6 C&P 404; See also Sparks v. R., (1964) AC 964 : (1964) 1 All ER 727 (PC); R. v. Lingate (1815), PHILLIPPS AND ARNOLD ON EVIDENCE (10th Edn.) 414; R. v. Rosier (1821), PHILLIPPS AND ARNOLD ON EVIDENCE (10th Edition) 414; R. v. Clewes, (1830) 4 C&P 221.
6. AIR 1959 MP 17.
7. Shobha Param v. State of M.P., AIR 1959 MP 125.
8. Emperor v. Ganesh, ILR 50 Cal 127.
9. R. v. Kashinath Dinakar, 8 Bom HCR 126.
10. Vali Isa Mahmed v. State, AIR 1963 Guj 135.
11. Naran Tulsidas v. Kutch Government, AIR 1951 Kutch 27; Shoba Param v. State, AIR 1954 MP 125.
12. R. v. Navroji, 9 Bom HCR 358.

Confession otherwise relevant not to become irrelevant because of promise of secrecy, etc.

S. 29. If such a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under a promise of secrecy, or in consequence of a deception practised on the accused person for the purpose of obtaining it, or when he was drunk, or because it was made in answer to questions which he need not have answered, whatever may have been the form of those questions, or because he was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession, and that evidence of it might be given against him.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 366
"If such confession is otherwise relevant" ... 366
2. Statement made under promise of secrecy ... 366
3. Statement made under deception ... 367
4. Statement overheard ... 367
5. Statement made in sleep ... 367
6. Statement when drunk ... 367
7. Statement made without having been warned ... 368
8. Section 29 & Section 164, Cr.P.C. ... 368
9. Section 164(3) Cr.P.C ... 369
10. Section 29, Section 25 and Section 26 ... 369

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

Under this section, if confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because of certain circumstances referred to in the section. Under Section 24, if the confession is caused by any inducement, threat or promise relating to the charge and proceeds from a person in authority, it would not be relevant. So if there is no such threat, or promise or inducement, it would become relevant. Under Section 25, confession to a police officer is not admissible. If it is not made to a police officer but is made to any other person, it would become relevant. Under Section 26, though the confession is made while in police custody, if it is made in the immediate presence of the magistrate, it would be relevant. Under this section a relevant confession does not become irrelevant merely because it was made under:

(1) a promise of secrecy, or
(2) in consequence of a deception or artifice practised on the accused, or
(3) when he was drunk, or
(4) because it was elicited in answer to a question, or
(5) because no warning was given that he was not bound to say anything and that whatever he might say would be used as evidence against him.

This section applies to criminal cases and is to be read along with Section 24.

"If such confession is otherwise relevant".—These words indicate that before the provision of this section can be invoked, it must appear that the confession in question is admissible under the preceding sections of the Act. If for any of the reasons mentioned in Ss. 24, 26 and 28, the confession is inadmissible, then there is no question of applying the provisions of Section 29 at all. Section 29, therefore, assumes that there is no bar to the admissibility of the confession in question arising from any of the said earlier provisions and it then proceeds to invalidate or negative other possible objections or bars that may be raised against its admissibility.[13]

2. STATEMENT MADE UNDER PROMISE OF SECRECY

A was in custody on a charge of murder. B, a fellow-prisoner, said to him: "I wish you would tell me how you murdered the boy-pray split." A replied: "Will you be upon your oath not to mention what I tell you?" B went upon his oath that he would not tell. A then made a statement. It was held that this was not such an inducement to confess as would render the statement inadmissible.[14] A witness stated that an

---

13. Rangappa Hanumappa, (1954) 56 Bom LR 115 : AIR 1954 Bom 385.
14. Rex v. Shaw, (1834) 6 C&P 372.

accused, charged with felony, asked the witness whether he had better confess, and the witness replied that he had better not confess, but that the accused might say what he had to say to him, for it should go no further. The accused made a statement. It was held that it was receivable in evidence at the trial.[15]

The accused made their confession of guilt to a company officer of their regiment, who stated to the accused that he had already obtained information from another person and promised secrecy if they told the truth. It was held that the Company Officer was not shown to be a person in authority in relation to any proceedings that were to be taken against the accused; and that the alleged deception and inducement were covered by the provisions of this section.[16]

3. STATEMENT MADE UNDER DECEPTION

The accused asked the turnkey of the gaol in which he was locked to put a letter into the post for him, and after his promising to do so, the accused gave a letter addressed to his father, and the turnkey, instead of putting it into the post, transmitted it to the prosecutor. It was held that the letter was admissible in evidence against the accused notwithstanding the manner in which it was obtained.[17] When confession was obtained from the accused, after he was informed that his brother-in-law gave out that the accused was guilty, it was held admissible though the representation might amount to deception which is covered by Section 29.[18]

4. STATEMENT OVERHEARD

In Sahoo v. State of U.P.,[19] the Supreme Court held that a confessional soliloquy, heard by another, is a direct piece of evidence but it can only be used for purpose of corroboration.

Where the police overheard, by means of making a hole in the prison wall, the accused making a confession to a co-prisoner, it was held that the confession was admissible.[20] In a case where the prisoner made a statement in one room without noticing the presence of police in another room. Who overheard the same, it was held to be admissible.[21] The statement of the prisoner was held to be admissible when it was overheard while the prisoner was muttering something to himself, or saying something to his wife or to some person in confidence.[22]

5. STATEMENT MADE IN SLEEP

Statements made by a person in sleep are not receivable in evidence.

BEST, however, quotes a case from MR. ARBUTHNOT'S Reports of Criminal Cases in the Court of Foujdaree Adalut of Mad p. 61; which is as follows: "Five prisoners, D, N, V, T, and C, were tried in 1834 for the wilful murder of one P. The deceased had been found murdered and much mutilated, the head lying on an ant-hill away from the rest of the body. Suspicion fell on one W, with whom he was on bad terms. W's answers, when questioned on the subject, not being satisfactory, he was kept under surveillance, in the house of a neighbour, and in the course of the following night was heard to talk in his expressions to escape him: "D, catch hold of the hands, N cut off the head. T, C and V, catch hold of his legs, come, we may go home after we have deposited the head on the top of an ant-hill." These words having been next morning reported to the authorities. W was taken into custody and taxed with the murder, which he at once confessed, criminating the prisoners, whose names had been mentioned by him in his sleep, and who on being apprehended, likewise confessed their guilt. The prisoners were convicted chiefly on their own confession and left for execution." (11th Edn., p. 514).

6. STATEMENT WHEN DRUNK

A statement made by an accused when he is drunk is receivable in evidence. If a police officer gives an accused liquor in the hope of his saying something and he makes any statement, that statement is not rendered inadmissible in evidence.[23]

---

15. Rex v. Thomas, (1836) 7 C&P 345.
16. Emperor v. Mohammed Buksh, (1906) 8 Bom LR 507.
17. Rex v. Derrington, (1826) 2 C&P 418.
18. Queen v. Ramchuran, 20 WR Cri 33.
19. AIR 1966 SC 40.
20. R. v. Boughton, 70 JP Rep 508, referred in PHIPSON'S EVIDENCE 4th Edn., p. 252.
21. R. v. Sageena, 7 WR Cr 56.
22. R. v. Simons, (1834) 6 C&P 540, PHIPSON 13th Edition, 15-35; 19-07; 22-46; Vol. II, HALSBURY 415, 472.
23. Rex v. Spilsbury, (1836) 7 C&P 187.

7. STATEMENT MADE WITHOUT HAVING BEEN WARNED

In view of S. 29, if the confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because the accused was not warned that he was not bound to make such confession and that evidence of it might be given against him.[24]

8. SECTION 29 & SECTION 164 Cr.P.C.

The question has repeatedly arisen whether in a case where the provisions in Section 164, Cr.P.C., were not complied with in recording a confession of an accused, the confession would still not become irrelevant u/s. 29, if such confession was otherwise relevant.

Section 164 of the Criminal Procedure Code provides the formalities to be undergone by Magistrates in recording confessions. It says, among other things, that the Magistrate shall explain to the person making the confession that he is not bound to make it. But this section says that a confession does not become irrelevant because the accused was not warned that he was not bound to make it. The Bombay High Court has held that the Criminal Procedure Code "is a special enactment applying only to certain statements made in the particular circumstances contemplated by Section 164". It cannot override the general provisions of this section except where these circumstances bring the section into operation.[25]

In Nazir Ahmed v. King Emperor[26] the Privy Council had to deal with a confession before a Magistrate who did not follow the procedure prescribed in Section 164, Cr.P.C. and did not record the confession but gave oral evidence about the confession. The Privy Council held that the oral evidence was inadmissible and in the absence of other convincing evidence the conviction must be set aside.

There is an exhaustive discussion of the question by JUSTICE GAJENDRAGADKAR in Rangappa Hanumappa v. State,[27] in paragraphs 13 to 16 of the said decision, elaborate reasons are given for the conclusion that Section 164 cannot override the plain words of Section 29. The rules which govern the question of admissibility of evidence are laid down by the Evidence Act and, by these rules alone, the question of admissibility must be determined. The mere fact that the procedure prescribed by Section 164(3), Cr.P.C., in regard to giving a warning to the accused, has not been complied with in recording the confession, would not by itself necessarily make the said confession inadmissible. The learned Judges agreed with the same view expressed In re.: Karum Thambi[28], and of JUSTICE BEMETT, JUSTICE RAY in Emperor v. Jamuna Singh[29]; Vellamoonji Goundal v. Emperor[30]; Emperor v. Nanua[31]. Dealing with the decision of the Privy Council in Nazeer Ahmad v. King Emperor[32], they distinguished that case on the ground that the Privy Council did not consider the effect of Section 29 of the Evidence Act. The learned Judges, however, added: "We must, however, hasten to add that, when we hold that the irregularity of procedure in recording the confessions does not necessarily make them invalid, we do not minimise the importance of strictly complying with the provisions of Section 164(3). These provisions have been deliberately and—if we may say so, with respect— wisely made by the Legislature in order to afford a safeguard, in the interest of the accused. This court has, on several occasions, emphasised the importance of strictly adhering to these requirements. We have always held that the act of recording a confession is a very solemn act and the learned Magistrate who records the confession must never allow an element of casualness to creep into the recording of a confession. It is the duty of the recording Magistrate to satisfy himself that it is honestly and voluntarily and is not the result of any coercion, inducement or threat practised on the accused.

It is also his solemn duty to caution him that he is not bound to make a confession and to warn him that if he makes a confession it would be used against him. All that we are holding is that, however important it may be to follow this procedure, its non-observance with regard to giving a warning to the

---

24. State of Mizoram v. Sri Lalrinawma, 2000 Cr LJ 2358 (para 5) (Gau).
25. Emperor v. Ramnath Mahabir, (1925) 28 Bom LR 111, 114 : 50 Bom 111 : AIR 1926 Bom 151.
26. AIR 1936 PC 253 : 63 IA 372.
27. AIR 1954 Bom 385.
28. AIR 1950 Mad 579.
29. AIR 1947 Pat 305.
30. AIR 1932 Mad 431.
31. AIR 1941 All 145.
32. AIR 1936 PC 253.

accused has no direct effect on the admissibility of the confession itself. However, it is not at all unlikely that if the irregularity appears to the court to introduce an element of doubt as to whether the confession was voluntary, the court would not hesitate to reject the confession as being inadmissible, on the ground that it is not voluntary. If, in this case, we had felt the slightest doubt about the voluntary character of the confessions made by the accused, we would ourselves have held that they are not admissible on that ground."

This question is now settled by the Supreme Court in Dagdu v. State of Maharashtra[33]; wherein it was observed: "the failure to comply with Section 164(3), Cr.P.C. or with High Court circulars will not render the confessions inadmissible in evidence. Relevancy and admissibility of evidence have to be determined in accordance with the provisions of the Evidence Act. Section 29 of the Act lays down that, if a confession is otherwise relevant, it does not become irrelevant merely because, inter alia, the accused was not warned that he was not bound to make it, and evidence of it might be given against him. If, therefore, a confession does not violate any one of the conditions operative under Sections 24 to 28 of the Evidence Act, it will be admissible in evidence. But, as in respect of any other admissible evidence, oral or documentary, so in the case of confessional statements, which are otherwise admissible, the court has still to consider whether they can be accepted as true. If the facts and circumstances surrounding the making of a confession appear to cast a doubt on the veracity or voluntariness of the confession, the Court may refuse to act upon the confession, even if it is admissible in evidence. That shows how important it is for the Magistrate who records the confession to satisfy himself, by appropriate questioning of the confessing accused, that the confession is true and voluntary. A strict and faithful compliance with Section 164 of the Code and with the instructions issued by the High Court affords, in a large measure, the guarantee that the confession is voluntary. The failure to observe the safeguards prescribed therein are in practice calculated to impair the evidentiary value of the confessional statements."[34]

Decisions taking the contrary view are no longer good law[35], in view of the above decision of the Supreme Court.

9. SECTION 164(3) Cr. P.C.

In Sections 164, Cr.P.C., Cl. (3) of Sections 164 was introduced by the Amending Act 18/1923. It lays down that a magistrate, before recording a confession, shall warn the person making it, that he is not bound to make a confession and that if he does so it may be used in evidence against him. Section 29 of the Evidence Act, however, was there from the beginning of the Act, 1872. It has to be noted that, at the time of Amending Act of 1923, the Legislature must have been fully aware of the clear and unambiguous words used in this Section 29, which were inconsistent with the spirit of the provisions they were introducing by the Amending Act. The provisions of the Evidence Act deal with the relevancy and admissibility of oral and documentary evidence, whereas the Criminal Procedure Code deals with the procedural matters in the criminal cases. If the Legislature wanted the strict adherance to the provisions under Section 164, it would have made a suitable amendment in Section 29 of this Act.[36]

10. SECTION 29, SECTION 25 AND SECTION 26

When the confession would not be admissible as hit by Section 25, this Section 29 does not apply. Similarly confession would not be admissible if hit by Section 26, and this section will not apply.[37]

The important point for its admissibility, whether it is a Judicial or extra-judicial confession is that it should be otherwise relevant, i.e., it should be proved to be voluntary and true.[38]

---

33. AIR 1977 SC 1579.
34. Public Prosecutor v. Mitta Venkatamma, AIR 1932 Mad 748; Ram Singh v. State, ILR (1952) 2 Raj 93; Jolish Roy v State, 1982 Cr LJ 269 (Ori).
35. Sardar Miya v. R., AIR 1937 Nag 257; Dhula v. State, AIR 1957 Raj 141.
36. Emperor v. Ramnath, AIR 1926 Bom 151; See also Bala Majhi v. State, AIR 1951 Ori 168 (FB); State v. Mitu, 1977 Cr LJ 1018 (Ori); Emperor v. Jamuna Singh, AIR 1947 Pat 30; Vellamoonji Goundan v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Mad 431.
37. In re : Mannem Edukowdalu, AIR 1957 AP 729; Public Prosecutor v. Mitta Venkatamma, AIR 1932 Mad 748; Ram Singh v. State, ILR (1952) 2 Raj 93; Jotish Roy v. State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 269 (Ori)(DB).
38. Subrata v. Dipti, AIR 1974 Cal 61 (SB).

Consideration of proved confession affecting person making it and others jointly under trial for same offence.

S. 30. When more persons than one are being tried jointly for the same offence, and a confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some other of such persons is proved, the Court may take into consideration such confession as against such other person as well as against the person who makes such confession.

Explanation.*—"Offence", as used in this section, includes the abetment of, or attempt to commit, the offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A and B are jointly tried for the murder of C. It is proved that A said—"B and I murdered C". The Court may consider the effect of this confession as against B.

(b) A is on his trial for the murder of C. There is evidence to show that C was murdered by A and B, and that B said—"A and I murdered C".

This statement may not be taken into consideration by the Court against A, as B is not being jointly tried.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 370
2. Scope ... 371
3. Applicability ... 372
4. Section 27 and Section 30 ... 373
5. Section should be construed strictly ... 373
6. Tried jointly ... 373
7. For the same offence ... 375
8. Confession made by one of such persons affecting himself and some others—self-exculpatory statement—not admissible under Section 30 ... 377
9. Attempt to commit or abetment of the same offence [Explanation] ... 377
10. Proved ... 377
11. The court may take into consideration such confession ... 378
12. Corroboration ... 380
13. Retracted confession ... 381

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

The object of this section is that where an accused person unreservedly confesses his own guilt, and at the same time implicates another person who is jointly tried with him for the same offence, his confession may be taken into consideration against such other person as well as against himself, because the admission of his own guilt operates as a sort of sanction, which, to some extent, takes the place of the sanction of an oath and so affords some guarantee that the whole statement is a true one.[1] When a person admits his guilt to the fullest extent, and exposes himself to the pains and penalties provided therefor, there is a guarantee for his truth.[2] But this is a very weak guarantee. For a confession may be true so far as its maker is concerned, but may be false and conducted through malice so far as it affects others.

The Privy Council had held that this section applies to confessions, and not to statements which do not admit the guilt of the confessing party. The section seems to be based on the view that an admission by an accused person of his own guilt affords some sort of sanction in support of the truth of his confession against others as well as himself. But a confession of a co-accused is obviously evidence of a very weak type. It does not come within the definition of "evidence" contained in Section 3. It is not required to be given on oath, nor in the presence of the accused, and it cannot be tested by cross-examination. It is a much weaker type of evidence than the evidence of an approver which is not subject to any of these infirmities.[3]

---

1. Queen Empress v. Jagrup, ILR (1885) 7 All 646, 648.
2. Empress v. Daji Narsu, (1882) 6 Bom 288, 291.
3. Bhuboni Sahu v. King, (1949) 51 Bom LR 955 : 76 IA 147 : AIR 1949 PC 257, followed in Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : 1952 SCR 526; Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184; Chinna Gowda v. State of Mysore, (1963) 2 SCR 517, 528, 529.

The Privy Council observed: "Section 30, however, provides that the court may take the confession into consideration and thereby, no doubt, makes it evidence on which the court may act, but the section does not say that the confession is to amount to proof. Clearly there must be other evidence. The confession is only one element in the consideration of all the facts proved in the case; it can be put into the scale and weighed with the other evidence."

It was further stated that this section applies only to confessions and not to statements which do not admit the guilt of the confessing party.

In Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P.,[4] the Supreme Court observed: "The proper way to approach a case of this kind is, first to marshall the evidence against the accused, excluding the confession altogether from consideration, and see whether, if it is believed, a conviction could safely be based on it. If it is capable of belief independently of the confession, then of course, it is not necessary to call the confession in aid. But cases may arise where the Judge is not prepared to act on the other evidence as it stands even though, if believed, it would be sufficient to sustain a conviction. In such an event the Judge may call in aid the confession and use it to lend assurance to the other evidence and thus fortify himself in believing what, without the aid of the confession, he would not be prepared to accept."[5]

Where more persons than one are jointly tried for the same offence, the confession made by one of them, if admissible in evidence at all, should be taken into consideration against all the accused, and not against the person alone who made it[6]. This section is an exception to the rule that the confession of one person is entirely inadmissible against another. The policy of the law in allowing a confession by one accused to be considered against another who is being jointly tried for the same offence, seems to rest on the recognition of the palpable fact that such a confession cannot fail to make an impression on the Judge's mind, which it was therefore better to control within limits than to ignore altogether.[7]

One of the conditions under the section is that the confession must implicate the author substantially to the same extent as the other accused person against whom it is sought to be taken into consideration. But, on reading the confession as a whole, if it appears that he was really trying to throw the main blame on the other accused, such a confession cannot be used against the other accused. Where there is difference between the confessions of the two accused, such confessional statements cannot be condemned out of hand or in limine as untrue, where some of the differences are immaterial and some others are due to desire of the accused to throw the blame on the other, and the rest of the part stand clearly resolved by other evidence in the case.[8]

2. SCOPE

STRAIGHT J. observed: "The test, which Section 30, Evidence Act, intended should be applied to a statement of one prisoner, proposed to be used in evidence as against another, is to see whether it is sufficient by itself to justify the conviction of the person making it of the offence for which he is being jointly tried with the other person or persons against whom it is tendered. In fact, to use a popular and well understood phrase, the confessing prisoner must tar himself and the person or persons he implicates with one and the same brush".[9]

The policy of the law in allowing a confession by one prisoner to be considered against another who is being jointly tried for the same offence, seems to rest on the recognition of the palpable fact that such a confession cannot fail to make an impression on the Judge's mind, which it was, therefore, better to control within limits than to ignore altogether.

---

4. AIR 1952 SC 159 : 1952 SCR 526.
5. See also Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184 (6).
6. Empress v. Rama Birappa, (1878) 3 Bom 12.
7. Gaganmull, In re : (1924) 20 LW 202, 205 : AIR 1924 Mad 805.
8. Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 216; Rama Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 31; Kuruchiyan Kunhanan v. State of Kerala, 1974 Ker LT 328; Netarpal Jhuna Mal v. State, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 335 : 1964 Punj 397; Munshi Mahesha v. State, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 580; Achuta Kan v. Maheshwar Rai, (1963) 5 Ori JD 65; Chhote Lal v. State of M.P., 1978 Cr LJ 1559 (MP); State v. Manindranath, AIR 1960 Cal 183; State v. Debendara Tiria, (1972) 38 Cut LT 1187; Dildar Ahmad v. State, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 8 (Del); Baldeo Goala v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1516 (Gau); Atta Mohammad v. State, AIR 1952 J&K 36 : 1952 Cr LJ 1579; Ram Chandra Sahu v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 377; Malla Mahmadoo v. State, AIR 1952 J&K 49 : 1953 Cr LJ 150.
9. Empress of India v. Ganraj, 1879 ILR 2 All 444.

In Emperor v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty,[10] it was held that the Legislature did wisely in recognising and taking under its control the impression thus unavoidable, which might actually do more harm if unrecognised.

This section only means that, where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction then, the kind of confession described in Section 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence; that is, only if there is substantive evidence against the accused and there is lingering doubt, then the confession of co-accused may be taken into consideration to clear the doubt if any.[11]

WEST J., in Emperor v. Daji Narsu and Govinda Nath,[12] held that the logic behind incorporating such a provision cannot be ignored as "when a person admits guilt to the fullest extent and exposes himself to the pain and penalties provided for the guilt, there is a guarantee for his truth." The object of the rule is a safeguard for sincerity and for information.[13]

This section was not in the Evidence Act 2 of 1855, nor in the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861.

For the application of this section, the following conditions have to be fulfilled. (1) The statement of the accused must amount to a confession. (2) There must be more than one accused in the trial which would be a joint trial of the accused. (3) They must be tried for the same offence. Here itself it may be noted that the explanation given under the section states that the 'offence' as used in the section includes the abetment of, or attempt to commit, the offence. It means different accused should not be tried for different offences in one trial. (4) The confession must affect the maker himself substantially to the same extent as the other accused. (5) That confession has to be duly proved.

Even if the above conditions are fulfilled it is not obligatory on the part of the Court to take such confession into consideration against the other accused, as it is specifically stated in the section that the Court may take into consideration, such confession, etc.

3. APPLICABILITY

As Section 30 does not, in terms, apply to criminal trials in the tribal areas, it will not be in consonance with the principles of natural justice to rely upon the confession of a co-accused in trials in such areas in the absence of the application of Section 30.[14]

This section is applicable to Sea Customs Act offences in view of Section 171A, of that Act[15].

It was held by the Rajasthan High Court that where the accused made a confession while he was examined under Section 342, Cr.P.C. (Old), (313 Cr. P.C. new) this section does not apply to such a confession.[16]

Where one of the accused pleaded guilty in a warrant case and was convicted, it was held that as the accused was on joint trial, the prosecution can rely on his statement under this section for framing charge against others.[17]

Where the confession was to the effect that he alone killed the victim by assaulting him with a gangia, it was held that this section is not applicable as the confession did not involve others in killing the victim.[18]

Nor is the section applicable, when an accused did not make a statement incriminating himself with the other accused with whom he was tried jointly.[19] Statement of co-accused in another case is not legal evidence against the other accused.[20]

---

10. ILR (1878) 4 Cal 483 (FB).
11. Gopinathan v. State of Kerala, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 92.
12. ILR (1883) 6 Bom 223.
13. Queen v. Noormuhammad, 8 Bom 223.
14. Harendra Mohan Choudhary v. State, ILR (1958) 10 Assam 195.
15. Haroon Haji Abdullah v. State, AIR 1968 SC 832.
16. 1966 RLW 460.
17. Hari Chand v. State, ILR (1974) 2 Delhi 706.
18. Dhuleswar Behera v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2346 Ori.
19. 1978 Cr LJ 1559.
20. Narayanaswamy v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 609.

The disclosure statement of the accused while in police custody leading to discovery cannot be used against the co-accused[21] but the statement made before the custom official, he being not a police officer, is a material piece of evidence and can be used as substantive evidence[22] but the A.P. High Court has held that the confessional statement of the co-accused recorded under S. 108 of the Customs Act, though admissible in evidence, cannot be used as substantive evidence as contemplated under S. 30 of the Evidence Act.[23] Where the accused son only made extra-judicial confession that his mother had given him poison to be mixed in the flour for preparing 'chapatis' for his father and there was no substantive and reliable evidence to bring the charge of murder against the mother of the accused, his mother was acquitted.[24]

4. SECTION 27 AND SECTION 30

A confessional statement made under Section 27, also comes within the meaning of Section 30 and may be taken into consideration against the co-accused.[25]

Dealing with this section and Section 27, the Madras High Court held that "when a confession of one of the accused is the immediate cause of recovery of some fact relevant against such other person, the confession can be used. But when it is not the immediate cause for the discovery, it cannot be used against other persons who are tried jointly for the same offence.[26]

5. SECTION SHOULD BE CONSTRUED STRICTLY

In Balbir Singh v. State of Punjab[27], it was held that judicial opinion is uniform that this section must be very strictly construed; that unless the maker implicates himself substantially to the same extent as the other accused; the confession cannot go in evidence against the other accused.

This section introduces an exception to the general rule that a confession can be used against the maker of it. When a confession was made by one among other accused persons, affecting himself and also others to the same extent of culpability, care and caution has to be taken by the courts before using such confession against other accused. In Babu Singh v. Emperor[28], it was held that the weakness of the guarantee afforded by self-implication and the dangerous and exceptional character of the evidence require that this section would be construed very strictly; if the confession is retracted by the maker, then no reliance can be placed upon such retracted confession so far as the co-accused are concerned.

As this section introduces an entirely new and rather dangerous element in the conduct of criminal trials, it ought to be construed with strictness.[29] In Periaswamy v. R.[30], REILLY J., observed: "It is a very exceptional, indeed an extraordinary provision by which something which is not evidence may be used against an accused person at his trial. Such a provision must be used with the greatest caution and with care to make sure that we do not stretch it one line beyond its necessary intention.[31]

6. TRIED JOINTLY

There should be a joint trial of the accused. The joint trial should be legal. If from any cause the accused who made the confession cannot be legally tried with the accused against whom the confession is to be used, the court should not attach any value to the confession.

---

21. Kamal Kishore v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 2106 (Del).
22. Naresh J. Sukhwani v. Union of India, AIR 1996 SC 522 (para 4).
23. Vanamala Jagadeswaraiah v. Dy. Commr., C. & C.E., Hyderabad, 2001 Cr LJ 1590 (para 21) (AP).
24. Rajendra v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 2700 (All).
25. In re : Athappa Goundan, ILR 1937 Mad 695 (FB) : AIR 1937 Mad 618 (FB); In re : Rami Reddy Pullannagari, AIR 1941 Mad 238; Sankappa Rai v. Emperor, ILR Mad 127.
26. Shankappa Rai v. Emperor, 31 Mad 127.
27. AIR 1957 SC 216 : 1957 Cr LJ 481. See also Rama Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 31 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 315; Netar Pal Jhuna Mal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 Punj 397 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 335.
28. AIR 1936 Oudh 156.
29. According to GLOVER, J., in Queen Empress v. Jaffir Ali, (1873) 19 WR Cr 57; In re : Marudamuthu, AIR 1931 Mad 820.
30. ILR 54 Mad 75.
31. In re : Malayara Seethu, AIR 1955 Mys 27; Sanna Huduga v. Govt. of Mysore, 13 Mys LJ 69.

This section pre-supposes more than one accused being in trial for the same offence. Where two persons were charged with murder the statement by one accused confessing the offence, can be taken into consideration against the other, if the two accused were being tried jointly for the same offence.[32] The Privy Council, in Achhaylal Singh v. Emperor,[33] held that where an accused gave a confessional statement and later died, such statement cannot be admitted under this section against the other accused.[34] But when such accused died during the trial, after his confession had been placed on record before the court; it was held that it can be used against the other accused.[35]

Where the accused who made confessional statement, was discharged and was not facing trial, his statement could not be used against the co-accused.[36] Where a joint trial started and later one of the accused absconded and his case was separated under Section 512 Cr.P.C., it was held that the confession of the accused who took the trial, cannot be used against the absconding accused and Section 30 is not applicable.[37] The statement of the co-accused recorded under Section 67 of N.D. & P.S. Act, 1985 cannot be used against another accused in a different trial.[38]

Where the accused pleads guilty at the trial and is convicted and sentenced, he cannot be said to be jointly tried with his co-accused who pleads not guilty. Similarly, if one of the accused pleads guilty but he is not convicted or sentenced till the conclusion of the trial of his co-accused, he cannot be treated as being jointly tried with his co-accused.[39] A contrary view was expressed saying that the trial cannot come to an end necessarily with the plea of guilty by one accused, unless the accused who pleaded has been convicted.[40] Sometimes evidence is taken in Sessions cases even after the accused pleads 'guilty' and the case is decided upon the whole of the evidence including the accused's plea. The Madras High Court is of the opinion that when such a procedure is adopted, the trial does not terminate with the plea of guilty, and therefore a confession by the person so pleading may be taken into consideration, as against any other person who is being jointly tried with him for the same offence. LORD WILLIAMS J., has observed: "The practice sometimes adopted in India where there is a joint trial, of refusing to accept the plea of guilty and proceeding to try the accused in order that his confession may be taken into consideration against his co-accused under Section 30 is illegal and an abuse of the process of the court ..... Where an accused person has pleaded guilty and the court is prepared to convict on that plea, it is contrary to the spirit of the law to postpone the conviction so that the person who had pleaded guilty may technically be said to be tried jointly for that same offence.[41] The trial in a Sessions Court begins only when the accused pleads not guilty and claims to be tried. Under Section 228, Criminal Procedure Code, if he pleads guilty the court cannot try him but has forthwith to convict him. To defer his conviction only to enable the court to use his confession under this section against his co-accused is wrong.[42] The same view was expressed in England. It was stated that the principle would not apply where a man pleads guilty becomes a witness in the case; in such a case, he should be sentenced then and there, so that there would not be any suspicion that his evidence is coloured by the fact that he hopes to get a lighter sentence.[43]

A distinction has been drawn by the Madras High Court between a trial before a Sessions Court, and one before a Magistrate. In the Sessions Court, the accused's plea of guilty is recorded under Section 228 at the outset of the trial. A prisoner who then pleads guilty and is convicted on the plea cannot be held to be tried jointly with a co-accused against whom the case proceeds under Section 230. Where, therefore, all the accused were jointly tried before a Magistrate, and some of them confessed to the crime and

---

32. Queen Empress v. Jagat Chandra Mali, ILR (1894) 22 Cal 50.
33. AIR 1947 Pat 90.
34. Dengo Kandero v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Sind 94.
35. Ram Saroop v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Cal 39 approved in Haroon v. State, AIR 1968 SC 832. Also see Peoples Union for Civil Liberties (Delhi) v. Central Bureau of Investigation, 1997 Cr LJ 3242 (Del); Naga Reddy v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 2545 (para 23) (AP).
36. Suresh Budharmal Kalani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 3258 (para 6) : 1998 Cr LJ 4592.
37. Asst. Collector of Customs v. Harbanslal, 1980 Cr LJ 818; Anant Dixit v. State, 1984 Cr LJ 1126.
38. Narcotic Control Bureau v. Gani Khan, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 281 (Raj).
39. Queen Empress v. Pahuji, ILR (1894) 19 Bom 195.
40. Queen Empress v. China Pavuchi, ILR (1899) 23 Mad 151, dissenting from Queen Empress v. Lakshmayya, ILR (1899) 22 Mad 491.
41. Md Yusuf v. R., 35 CWN 490 : AIR 1931 Cal 341; R v. Kheoraj, (1908) 30 All 540.
42. Amdu Mian v. Govt., ILR (1937) Nag 315 (FB) at 322, 323 : AIR 1937 Nag 17.
43. R v. Payne, (1950) 1 All ER 102.

implicated their co-accused in a statement made under Section 313, Criminal Procedure Code, and after the evidence for the prosecution was closed pleaded guilty under Section 246, it was held that their statement was admissible in evidence against the other co-accused.[44]

The Nagpur High Court also held that in a warrant case, it is within the discretion of the court to defer the convictions of an accused after the plea was recorded, and his confession can be used against others. The Nagpur High Court has laid down that the cases in which it was held that the confession of a co-accused who pleaded guilty could not be used under this section were those of Sessions trials.[45]

Where a co-accused pleads guilty, and the court has accepted the plea and directed his removal from the dock, and the trial proceeds against the remaining accused alone, a confession by the former is not admissible against the latter.[46]

The appellant, who was charged under Section 411 of the Indian Penal Code with receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, was tried at the same time with the thief, and one P who was charged with receiving stolen property from the same thief, the proceeds of the same theft, but different property. It was held that the appellant and P were not being tried jointly for the same offence but were tried together for distinct offences punishable under the same section, and, therefore, a confession made by P could not be lawfully considered against the appellant.[47]

Where eleven accused were put for trial in one case, ten of them pleaded guilty and they were convicted and sentenced on 22-1-1975. Later, after recording some evidence, as the case was triable as a warrant case, a charge was framed against the remaining sole accused, 17-9-1975. It was held that in a warrant case the trial begins after the charge is framed; that the trial against the other accused came to an end on their conviction on 22-1-1975, and therefore, they were no longer before the court, that, as against the sole 11th accused, Section 30 cannot be applied for relying on the confession of a co-accused.[48]

In warrant cases, though an accused pleads guilty to the charge, he need not be convicted and removed from the dock and he would be deemed to be jointly tried with the other accused.[49]

In warrant cases, it was held that the trial before the Sessions Court starts after the plea of the accused is recorded at the beginning of the trial.[50]

The expression "tried jointly" means "legally tried jointly" and it is not simply trying them as a matter of fact.[51]

For treating a joint trial as a legal joint trial, the accused must be a real one and it should not be an excuse for joinder of charges which otherwise cannot be joined.[52]

When the maker of the confession, while being tried jointly with others, absconds during the trial and his case was separated from others, it was held that such confession can be considered to lend assurance to the conclusion of guilt reached on other evidence against other accused.[53]

7. FOR THE SAME OFFENCE

One of the ingredients of this section is that the accused have to be tried in a joint trial for the same offence; according to the explanation the expression 'offence' includes its abetment and attempt. The expression 'same offence' means an offence coming under the same legal definition, i.e., under the same section of law. Where two accused were charged with offences under Section 302 and 457, Penal Code, and the third accused was charged for an offence under Section 411, Penal Code, it was held that the confession of the third accused cannot be taken into consideration to determine the guilt of the first two

---

44. R v. Basi Reddi, ILR (1913) 38 Mad 302; Fakruddin v. Crown, ILR (1924) 6 Lah 176.
45. Amdumiyau v. R, AIR 1937 Nag 172.
46. Emperor v. Keramat Sardar, ILR (1911) 38 Cal 446.
47. Maya Sigh v. Empress, 1886 PR No. 9 of 1886 (Cr).
48. Swami v. State, AIR 1952 Mad 379; Md Yusuf v. R., 35 CW 490; (1980) Cr LR Guj 234 : AIR 1931 Cal 341.
49. Ramakishan v. R., AIR 1928 Lah 880, In re : Bati Reddy, ILR 38 Mad 302.
50. In re : Bati Reddy, ILR 38 Mad 302 : AIR 1914 Mad 45; Venkatachinna v. R., 43 Mad 511 (FB).
51. Queen Empress v. Jagat Chandra Mali, ILR (1894) 22 Cal 50.
52. Sanyashi v. State, AIR 1937 Cal 269.
53. Ramashish Rai v. State of Bihar, 1989 Cr LJ 836.

accused.[54] The appellant, who was charged under Section 411 of the Indian Penal Code with receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen, was tried at the same time with the thief, and one P who was charged with receiving stolen property from the same thief, the proceeds of the same theft, but different property. It was held that the appellant and P were not being tried jointly for the same offence but were tried together for distinct offences punishable under the same section, and, therefore, a confession made by P could not be lawfully considered against the appellant.[55]

House-breaking and theft, and receiving the property stolen at that theft, are distinct offences, and the confession of one co-accused cannot be taken into consideration as against the other.[56] Where one was charged for rape, and the other was charged for abduction of a girl, and they were tried jointly, it was held that the confession of the accused charged with rape cannot be taken against the other accused.[57]

This section would not be applicable for different offences by different persons, though it happens during the course of the same transaction.[58]

When two persons are accused of an offence under the same definition, and arising out of a single transaction, the confession of the one may be used against the other, though it inculpates himself through acts separable from those ascribed to his accomplice, and capable, therefore, of constituting a separate offence from that of the accomplice.[59] 'Confession' in this section means confession of the very offence for which the accused are being tried.[60] A and B were tried together under Section 239 of the Indian Penal Code on a charge of delivering to another counterfeit coins, knowing the same to be counterfeit at the time they became possessed of them. A confessed that he had got the coins from B and had passed them to several persons at his request. It was held that the confession of A was relevant against B.[61]

Section 234, Cr P.C. (old) refers to the offences of the same kind, which is defined in that section itself, as offences punishable with the same amount of punishment under the same section of the Indian Penal Code or any special or local Code. In Kundan v. Emperor[62]; it was held that the expression 'same offence' in Section 30, cannot be have the same meaning as the expression "offence of the same kind" referred to in Section 234 Cr.P.C. (old).

Decisions are not uniform on the question whether when persons are jointly tried for several offences, the confession of one of them with regard to one offence is admissible against others. One view is that Section 30 deals with a case where several persons are being tried jointly for the same offence. It does not deal with a case of joint trial for a number of offences as the expression "offence" is used in singular.

Where a person was charged along with two others for sodomy and murder and he confessed that all the three committed sodomy but the murder was committed by the other two, it was held that the confession against the other two was not admissible even as regards the offence of sodomy.[63] In the other line of cases it has been held that if a confession implicates the confessor and other accused in one of the offences only and does not implicate himself in the other offence, confession may be taken into consideration against the other accused so far as the former offence is concerned. In Mian Khan v. Emperor[64] where two accused were tried for robbery and murder, confessing each of them had taken part in the robbery but that only the other person committed murder, it was held that the confession was admissible against both on the charge of robbery but not on the charge of murder. In re.: Manikya Padayachi, 1921 Mad 490, where a trial for a major offence of murder included a trial for a minor

---

54. Bhagi v. R., 1950 HP 35; Bhansali Balu v. State, AIR 1951 Kutch 74; Queen Empress v. Nur Mohammad, ILR (1883) 8 Bom 223. See also 5 MLJ, Art. p. 225.
55. Maya Sigh v. Empress, 1886 PR No. 9 of 1886 (Cr).
56. Nga Po Tok v. Emperor, 158 (1912) UBR (1910-1913).
57. Naresh v. R., AIR 1938 Cal 479.
58. Gour v. R, 32 CWN 1044.
59. Empress v. Nur Muhammad, ILR (1883) 8 Bom 223.
60. Periasami Moopan, In re : (1930) 54 Mad 75.
61. Empress v. Nur Muhammed, ILR (1883) 8 Bom 223.
62. AIR 1948 Sind 65.
63. Md. Sabir v. R. AIR 1950 All (1132). Similar view had been taken in Periaswamy v. R., ILR 54 Mad 75 = AIR 1931 Mad 177, Naresh v. R. AIR 1938 Cal 479. In re : Govindu, 1937 Mad 321; In re : Gangavva, AIR 1946 Mad 124; Tikaram v. R., AIR 1939 Nag 309; Syed Hussain v. R., 1937 Mad WN (Cri) 1253.
64. AIR 1923 Lah 293.

offence of hurt, it was held that the confession of a minor offence would be admissible on the implied minor charge and perhaps on the major charge also. This decision was dissented from In re.: Gangavva. While something may be said in favour of the view that in such cases the confession would be binding on the other accused in respect of the minor offence, it is submitted that the view that it would be admissible in respect of the major charge also is not justified.[65]

8. CONFESSION MADE BY ONE OF SUCH PERSONS AFFECTING HIMSELF AND SOME OTHERS—SELF-EXCULPATORY STATEMENT—NOT ADMISSIBLE UNDER SECTION 30

Where the accused made a confession and when it was read as a whole, it appeared that he was really trying to throw the main blame against others and that he was an unwilling spectator of the crime committed by others, it was held that such confessions cannot be used against the other accused.[66]

The Bombay High Court has held that the section is not limited to a case where the confessing accused directly implicates another accused as well as himself, but covers also a case where the confession indirectly affects a co-accused.[67] The Madras High Court has differed on this point and has held that a confession which indirectly affects another accused not named in it, on some circumstantial grounds, cannot be used against him.[68]

Statements made by an accused which implicate his fellows, and exculpate himself, are not regarded as evidence.[69]

9. ATTEMPT TO COMMIT OR ABETMENT OF THE SAME OFFENCE [EXPLANATION]

This Explanation comes into play where the accused making the confession is charged with an offence and his co-accused with an attempt to commit, or abetment of, the same offence.

10. PROVED

According to the Madras and the Allahabad High Courts, the word 'proved' means proved before the case for the prosecution comes to an end i.e., proved either in the course of the prosecution case or proved in some proceeding previous to the trial. Hence a confession made after the close of the prosecution case, when questions under Section 342 of the Code of Criminal Procedure are put to the accused, is not admissible under this section.[70]

---

65. Vide Jainand (Dr.) v. R., AIR 1949 All 291; Emperor v. Sambhu, AIR 1932 All 228.

66. Balbeer Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 126 : 1957 Cr LJ 481; Ram Naik v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 31; State v. Manindranath Das, AIR 1960 Cal 183; State v. Debendra Liria, (1972) 38 Cut LT 1187; (he gave the blow only when co-accused threatened to kill him); (1977) 2 Raj Cri C 226; Dildar Singh v. State, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 8; Baldeo v. State, AIR 1972 SC 464; State v. Mohanlal, AIR 1958 Raj 338 : 1958 Cr LJ 1540 (R); In re : Malayara Seethu, AIR 1955 Mys 27; Jainand v. R., AIR 1949 All 291 (R) : AIR 1952 J&K 36; Atta Mohammad v. State, 1952 Cr LJ 1579 (R); AIR 1950 HP 18; Gopal v. Crown, 51 Cr LJ 786; Ummed Mal v. State of Rajasthan, 1975 Cr LJ 923; Pakala Narayana Swamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47 : Kalu v. State, 1974 Cr LJ 839 (J&K). See also R. v. Ganraj, ILR (1879) 2 All 444; Gul Hassan v. King Emperor, (1910) PR 24 of 1910 (Cri); Balkrishna Naik v.State of M.P., 2000 Cr LJ 4797 (para 12) (MP).

67. Emperor v. Shivabai, (1926) 28 Bom LR 1013, 50 Bom 683.

68. Periyaswami Moopan, In re : ILR (1930) 54 Mad 75.

69. Queen v. Keshub Bhoonia, (1876) 25 WR (Cr) 8; Ah Foong v. Emperor, ILR (1918) 46 Cal 411 : AIR 1919 Cal 696; Goboraya v. Emperor, (1930) 26 NLR 229, (FB) : AIR 1930 Nag 242; Mangal Singh v. Crown, (1936) 17 Lah 547 : AIR 1937 Lah 127; Suresh Budharmal Kalani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 3258 (para 10) : 1998 Cr LJ 4592; statement of exculpatory nature and also retracted subsequently, Mothilal v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 4341 (paras 13 and 16) (Kant).

70. Marudamuthu Padayachi, ILR 1931) 54 Mad 788 : AIR 1931 Mad 820; Emperor v. Mahadeo Prasad, ILR (1923) 45 All 323 : AIR 1923 All 322; Chief Court of Oudh had held likewise: Kunwar Sen v. King-Emperor, (1932) 8 Luck 286 : AIR 1923 Oudh 86; Empress v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, ILR 4 Cal 483 (FB); Malla Mahmadoo v. State, AIR 1952 JK 49 : 1953 Cr LJ 150; Rajanikant Keshav Bhandari v. State; AIR 1967 Goa 21; C.B. Xavier Cochin v. Food Inspector, Mattancherry Muncipality, Mattancherry, AIR 1968 Ker 66; Shripal Gulab Singh Maina v. State of M.P., 1986 MPLJ 83 (DB): (1985) 1 Ori LR 609: 1966 RLW 460; Public Prosecutor v. B. Rama Murti, 1973 Cr LJ 1761 (AP).

The word 'confession' used in the section clearly means such a confession as is required to be proved at the trial as a part of prosecution evidence; it cannot therefore signify any matter which comes on the record at the end of the prosecution evidence.[71]

According to the Bombay High Court, a statement made by a co-accused in the course of a trial, in reply to questions under Section 313, Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 implicating an accused person, is admissible as evidence against the other accused.[72] Similarly, the Lahore High Court has held that a confession, at the close of the prosecution case by one of several accused persons, can be taken into consideration against the other accused, and that this section does not justify a distinction between a confession made by an accused person before the trial and in the course of the trial.[73] Where the statements of the co-accused implicating the other accused were duly proved by the concerned officials and were admissible in evidence, the other accused could be convicted on their basis.[74] Where the statement made by the accused to the police officer involving himself in the crime and also implicating a third person, could not be proved due to being in conflict with Sections 25 and 26, the occasion for utilising that statement against another person does not arise.[75]

11. THE COURT MAY TAKE INTO CONSIDERATION SUCH CONFESSION

The section provides that the court may take the confession into consideration and thereby make it evidence on which the court may act, but it does not say that the confession is tantamount to proof. There must clearly be other evidence. The confession is only one element in the consideration of all the facts proved in the case; it can be put into the scale and weighed with the other evidence. The confession of a co-accused can be used only in support of other evidence and cannot be made the foundation of a conviction.[76]

This section allows a confession made by one of several persons to be taken into consideration as against such other persons as well as against the person making it. It does not permit the confession to be used in favour of some other of the co-accused persons.[77] There is nothing in the section to prevent a court from convicting after taking into consideration the confession of a co-accused. But the High Courts in India have laid down a rule of practice, which has all the reverence of law, that a conviction founded solely on the confession of a co-accused cannot be sustained. The term 'confession' is not restricted to an unretracted confession, as once a confession is proved, it may be taken into consideration. The confession of one co-accused cannot be said to be corroborated by the confession of the other co-accused. Obvious considerations of justice require that a court, before acting upon such statements, should insist upon independent corroboration from other evidence in the case in material particulars, particularly to indentity.[78] This is no technical rule but is one founded on long judicial experience. The court can only treat a confession as lending assurance to other evidence against a co-accused, and a conviction based on the confession of a co-accused alone is bad in law.[79] The Madras High Court has held that it has become a rule of practice, and it is now a rule of law that corroboration is required. One accomplice cannot corroborate another. There is no corresponding provision in English Law.[80]

Confessions of a co-accused can be "taken into consideration" against the other accused, but they are not technically evidence, falling within the definition given in Section 3 of the Act; and they cannot, therefore, alone form the basis of a conviction.[81] It is at best the evidence of an accomplice, and the court

---

71. Mt. Sumitra v. Emperor, AIR 1940 Nag 287.
72. Emperor v. Cooper, ILR 54 Bom. 531.
73. Dayal Singh v. Crown, ILR (1934) 16 Lah 651; Nawab v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Lah 35.
74. Bhana Khalpa Bhai Patel v. Asstt. Collector of Customs, Bulsar, AIR 1998 SC 1487 (para 8).
75. Anant Kumar v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1499 (paras 3 and 6) (MP).
76. Bhubani Sahu v. King, 769 IA 147 : AIR 1949 PC 257.
77. Bagga Singh v. Emperor, (1888) PR No. 39/1898 Cr.
78. Emperor v. Gangappa, (1913) 15 Bom LR 975, ILR 38 Bom 156; Padmanabha, ILR 1959 Cut 581
79. Emperor v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, (1911) 38 Cal 559 (SB); Kashimuddin v. Emperor, (1934) 62 Cal 312; Maung Mya v. King, (1938) Ran 30; Ah Phut v. King, (1940) Ran 104; Rajagopal (1944) Mad 308, (FB); Sharif v. Crown (1943) 25 Lah 463
80. Thyagaraja Bhagavatar, In re : ILR (1946) M 271.
81. Queen Empress v. Khandiabin Pandu, ILR (1890) 15 Bom 66, 67; Venkatasami v. Queen, ILR (1883) 7 Mad 102; Queen-Empress v. Nirmal Das, ILR (1900) 22 All 445. See Banna v. Empress, (1880) PR No. 29 of 1880 (Cr); Nga Po Mya v. Queen-Empress, (1886) SJLB 388; Nathi v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56 : 1956 Cr LJ 152; Haroom Singh v. State, AIR 1968 SC 832 : 1968 Cr LJ 1017; In re : Athayee, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 566; In re : Mustafa Maracair

may presume that an accomplice is unworthy of credit unless he is corroborated in material particulars (Section 114, ill. (b)). Such evidence must be dealt with by the court in the same manner as any other evidence. The weight, however, to be attached to such evidence and the question, whether, taken by itself, it is sufficient in point of law to justify a conviction, is a question for the judge. Unsupported by other evidence, it, however, should be taken as evidence of the weakest possible kind, being simply a statement of a third person not made upon oath or affirmation. If such confession is corroborated by other evidence, it is immaterial whether, in proving the cases at the trial, the confession precedes the other evidence, or the evidence precedes the confession.[82] Such evidence, is not sufficient to support a conviction, even if corroborated by circumstantial evidence, unless the circumstances constituting the corroboration would, if believed to exist, themselves support a conviction.[83] But where the confession leads to the arrest and identification of the other accused, it stands confirmed and should be taken as a substantially true statement.[84]

The confession of a co-accused is on an even lower footing than the evidence of an accomplice and a conviction based on such a confession alone is bad in law. This section provides that such a confession is to be an element in the consideration of all the facts of the case, but it does not do away with the necessity for other evidence. It is the duty of the Judge, when there is no other evidence than the confession of a co-accused, to direct the jury accordingly and tell them to acquit the accused; and his omission to do so is a misdirection which will vitiate a conviction.[85] A confession intended to be used against a co-accused stands on a lower level than an accomplice's evidence because the latter is at least tested by cross-examination whilst the former is not. The confessions of co-accused are not evidence, but if there is other evidence on which a conviction can be based, they can be referred to as lending some assurance to the verdict. It is only when false implication is excluded after close scrutiny that confession of a co-accused can be used to lend assurance to other evidence.[86]

Where the judge is not prepared to act on other evidence as it stands, even though, if believed, it would be sufficient to sustain a conviction, he may call in aid the confession and use it to lend assurance to the other evidence and thus fortify himself in believing what, without the aid of the confession, he would not be prepared to accept.[87]

The Court can, under this section, only take the confession of one of the accused into consideration but it is not in itself substantive evidence.[88]

Though a confession cannot be made the foundation of conviction of the accused, it can be used in support of other evidence.[89] Such a confession cannot be used as substantive evidence. It has only

---

AIR 1951 Mad 787 : 52 Cr LJ 514; In re : Kodur Thimma Reddi, AIR 1957 AP 758 : 1957 Cr LJ 1091; Mohan Singh Balwant Singh v. State, AIR 1965 Punj 291 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 127; Gendra Brahma v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 430 (Gau).

82. Empress v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, (1878) 4 Cal 483, 490, 491, (FB); Emperor v. Sabit Khan, (1919) 21 Bom LR 448, 43 Bom 739; Emperor v. Laxman Jairam, (1936) 38 Bom LR 1122.
83. Empress v. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty, ILR 4 Cal 483, 491 (FB); Sobaraya v. Emperor, (1930) 26 NLR 229 (FB).
84. Ishar Singh v. Crown, ILR (1938) 20 Lah 67.
85. Giddigadu v. Emperor, (1909) 33 Mad 46; Nga San Nyein v. King-Emperor, (1917) 3 UBR (1917-20) 3; Nga Po Kauk v. King-Emperor, (1926) 4 Ran 45; Emperor v. Kalwa, (1926) 48 All 409; Aung Hla v. King-Emperor, (1931) 9 Ran 404; King-Emperor v. Sadasibo Manjihi, (1939) 18 Pat 82.
86. Haroom Haji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832; Nathu v. State of U.P., AIR 1956 SC 56.
87. Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 344; Baburao Bajirao Patil v. State of Maharashtra, (1971) 3 SCC 432; Budh Ram v. State of Haryana, 1985 Cr LR 322 (Guj); Zohaminghiana v. Government of Mizoram, 1984 Cr LJ 1055 (Gau); Indramohan Brahma v. State of Assam; 1982 Cr LJ (NOC) 127 (Gau); Sudhir Chandra Das v. State, AIR 1971 Tri 8 : 1971 Cr LJ 86; Md. Yunus v. Bihar, 1977 Cr LJ 1243; Netarpal Jhuna Mal v. State, AIR 1964 Punj 397 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 335; Nandalal More v. State of Punjab, (1965) 1 Cr LJ 393; Dewan Chand v. State of Orissa, AIR 1965 Ori 66 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 458; Budu Gouda v. State of Orissa, AIR 1965 Ori 170 : (1965) 2 Cr LJ 385; Bharatendranath Battacharya v. Commissioner of Income Tax, West Bengal, AIR 1958 Cal 559; Bhima Shaw v. State, AIR 1956 Ori 177 : 1956 Cr LJ 1208; In re : Malayra Seethu, AIR 1955 Mys 27 : 1965 Cr LJ 372; Pyli Jacob v. State, 1953 Tri Co 466; Bahoran v. State, 1981 All LJ 991 : 1980 Cr LJ (Guj) 234.
88. Haricharan Kurmi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 SC 1184; Ramachandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381; State v. Shakar Sakharam Jadhav, AIR 1957 Bom 226 : 1957 Cr LJ 1107; Public Prosecutor v. Shaik Ibrahim, AIR 1964 AP 548 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 636; Dewan Chand v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 66 : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 458.
89. Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159 : ILR (1977) 1 Cal 267; Uttam Rajaram v. State of Maharashtra, 1978 Cr LJ 935.

corroborative value.[90] Dissenting from its own earlier view in Kalpnath Rai (Supra), the Supreme Court held that a voluntarily and validly made confession by an accused is admissible against the co-accused as substantive evidence.[91]

12. CORROBORATION

The confession of the co-accused should be used as a piece of corroborative evidence and not as a sole basis for conviction.[92]

A conviction can be based on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. The testimony of an accomplice can be used to corroborate another, though it ought not be so used save in exceptional circumstance and for reasons disclosed.[93] Where the accused tried to bribe a Minister for a certain favour but he informed the Anti-Corruption Bureau and filed a complaint, here unlike other normal corruption cases, the complainant, could not be equated with the position of an accomplice and the accused could be convicted even on the uncorroborated testimony of the complainant.[94]

There is no rule of practice that there should be corroboration in every case, but the rule which requires corroboration is one of prudence; the nature and extent of such evidence must necessarily vary with the circumstances of each case; however, certain rules are to be followed:

(1) It is not necessary that there should be independent confirmation of every material circumstance in the sense that the independent evidence in the case should in itself be sufficient to sustain conviction.

(2) The independent evidence must not only make it safe to believe that the crime was committed but must in some way reasonably connect or tend to connect the accused with it, by confirming in some material particular the testimony of the complainant that the accused committed the crime.

(3) The corroboration must come from independent sources and thus, ordinarily, the testimony of one accomplice would not be sufficient to corroborate that of another.

(4) The corroboration need not be direct evidence that accused committed the crime; it is sufficient if it is merely circumstantial evidence of his connection with the crime.[95]

The test is not that, if the confession itself is corroborated by other evidence in certain material particulars, it can supply the missing link and can be made the basis of conviction. The only assistance which can be taken from the confession of the co-accused is to support the other evidence produced against the accused. It may help in accepting or rejecting the testimony of other witnesses. But even if, on accepting the testimony of other witnesses, some link is missing in the chain of the circumstantial evidence against the accused, that link cannot be supplied by the confession.[96]

The mere recovery of a stolen property from the house of the accused would not by itself be a sufficient corroboration to the evidence of the approver to make the accused guilty of the offence of conspiracy and abetment of robbery.[97] Where the accused was convicted of house-breaking by night with intent to commit theft, and the only evidence against him was the confession of a co-accused and the fact that he pointed out the stolen property some months after the commission of the offence, it was held that the mere production of the stolen property by the accused was not a sufficient corroboration of the confession of the other accused.[98]

---

90. Kalpnath Rai v. State, (1997) 8 SCC 732 : AIR 1998 SC 201, dissented in State of T.N. v. Nalini, 1999 Cr LJ 3124 : AIR 1999 SC 2640 wherein Apex Court held such confession as substantive evidence against co-accused.

91. State of T.N. v. Nalini, 1999 Cr LJ 3124 (paras 417, 418, 420 and 423) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2640.

92. Mandagiri Keshava Rao v. State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ 1360 (para 5) (AP).

93. Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Rameswar v. State of Rajasthan, (1953) 3 SCR 377 : AIR 1952 SC 54; Thanuvan Retnakaran v. State, AIR 1955 Tri Co 87 : 1955 Cr LJ 847; In re : Padmaraja, AIR 1951 Mad 746 : 52 Cr LJ 595.

94. C.R. Mehta v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2863 (paras 13 and 30) (Bom).

95. 1959 Ker LR 871 : 1959 Ker LJ 834 following Rameshwar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54; Sidheswar Ganguly v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1958 SC 143.

96. Harender Mohan Choudhary v. State, ILR (1958) 10 Assam 195, relying on Kashmira Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 159; Thingam Sashikumar v. Manipur Administration, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 562.

97. Kilimanni Abu v. State of Kerala, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 557 (Ker).

98. Queen-Empress v. Doasjwa, (1885) 10 Bom 23.

The Madras High Court in In re : Leelaram Gaganmall[1] observed: "Section 30 is a most unsatisfactory section and is a needless tampering with the wholesome rule of the English Law that a confession is only evidence against the person who makes it. The courts of India, in construing it, have laid down that a conviction of an accused based solely on the confession of another accused, cannot stand and there must be independent evidence entirely outside, if the confession before it can be used."

An extra-judicial confession made before a person who was subsequently made an approver cannot be relied upon as the approver is no better than an accomplice and therefore, his testimony or extra-judicial confession would need independent corroboration before it can be acted upon. The evidence of one approver cannot be corroborated by that of another approver. There must be independent corroboration.[2] The confession of one accused can be used as evidence to corroborate the confession of another accused, provided there is sufficient independent evidence of the confession to warrant a conviction.[3]

The corroboration that is required is not only in respect of the commission of the crime but also in respect of the participation of each of the accused in the commission of that crime.[4]

Where the confession of the co-accused is uncorroborated by any of the evidence, it cannot alone be sufficient to sustain a conviction, although it is not a rule of law but of prudence and practice which has acquired all the reverence of law. All the more it should be so in a case where the confessing accused does not implicate himself substantially and fully as he does his co-accused.[5]

13. RETRACTED CONFESSION

There can be no absolute rule that a retracted confession cannot be acted upon unless it is corroborated materially. But, as a matter of prudence and caution, which has sanctified itself into a rule of law, a retracted confession cannot be made solely the basis of conviction unless it is corroborated. It is not necessary that each and every circumstance mentioned in the confession, regarding the complicity of the accused, should be separately and independently corroborated, nor is it essential that the corroboration must come from the facts and circumstances discovered after the confession was made. It would be sufficient if the general trend of the confession is substantiated by some evidence which would tally with what is contained in the confession.[6] It has also been held that a voluntary and true confession made by an accused, though it was subsequently retracted by him, can be taken into consideration against a co-accused; but, as a matter of prudence and practice, the court should not act upon it to sustain a conviction of the co-accused witout full and strong corroboration in material particulars, both as to the crime and as to his connection with that crime. The amount of credibility to be attached to a retracted confession would depend upon the circumstances of each particular case.[7]

In Periyaswami Moopan v. Emperor, REILLY J., observed that "the provision goes no further than where there is evidence against the co-accused sufficient, if believed, to support his conviction, then the kind of confession described in Section 30 may be thrown into the scale as an additional reason for believing that evidence."[8]

A retracted confession must be looked upon with greater concern, unless the reasons given for having made the confession in the first instance (not for retraction as erroneously stated in some cases)

---

1. AIR 1924 Mad 805.
2. State v. Shankar Sakharam Jadhav, 1957 Cr LJ 1107; Premraj v. State of Rajasthan, 1951 Mad 746 : 52 Cr LJ 595; Krishnalal Naskar v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 1305.
3. Brahman Vajeram Raghuram v. State of Kutch, L.S., 1954 Cr LJ 793 : AIR 1954 Kutch 20; Raju v. State of Mysore, 1953 Cr LJ 1352 : AIR 1953 Bom 297; Paru Murgesh Jaikrishna v. Collector of Customs, 1988 Cr LJ 963 (Bom).
4. Bhima Shaw v. State, AIR 1956 Ori 177 : 1956 Cr LJ 1208; Ram Prakash v. State of Punjab, AIR 1959 SC 1: 1959 SCR 1219 : 1959 Cr LJ 90.
5. State v. Mohanlal, AIR 1958 Raj 338; In re : Malayara Seethu, AIR 1955 Mys 27; Jainand v. Rex, AIR 1949 All 291; Ram Bharose v. Rex, AIR 1949 All 132.
6. Subramania Goundan v. State of Madras, (1958) SCR 428 : AIR 1958 SC 66; Pyare Lal v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1963 SC 1094; Abdul Ghani v. State of U.P., AIR 1973 SC 264. But see Puran v. State of Punjab, (I), AIR 1953 SC 459, at p. 462, where it is stated: "It is a settled rule of evidence that unless a retracted confession is corroborated in material particulars, it is not prudent to base a conviction in a criminal case on its strength alone".
7. Ram Prakash v. State of Punjab, 1959 SCR 1219 : 1959 Cr LJ 90 : 1931 Mad 977.
8. See also Rattanlal v. State, AIR 1955 Punj 110 : 1959 Cr LJ 737.

are on the face of them false. Once the confession is proved satisfactorily, any admission made therein must be satisfactorily withdrawn or the making of it explained as having proceeded from fear, duress, promise or the like from some one in authority.[9]

The Bombay High Court has laid down that a retracted confession, if proved to be voluntarily made, can be acted upon along with the other evidence in the case, and there is no rule of law that a retracted confession must be supported by independent reliable evidence corroborating it in material particulars. The use to be made of such a confession is a matter of prudence rather than of law.[10] The retraction of a confession does not cancel the confession, but it puts the court on inquiry as to its value, its voluntary character and the probability of its being true. Hence, although, as a matter of law, corroboration is not necessary at all, as a general rule, a retracted confession requires corroboration of some kind; but the amount of corroboration which the Court will look for depends the on circumstances of each case.[11]

Thus the rule regarding a confession, which is subsequently retracted, are: (1) that a confession is not to be regarded as involuntary merely because it is retracted; (2) as against the maker of the confession the retracted confession may form the basis of a conviction if it is believed to be true and voluntarily made; (3) as against the co-accused, both prudence and caution require the Court not to rely on a retracted confession without independent corroborative evidence. The corroboration should not only confirm the general story of the alleged crime, but must also connect the accused with.[12]

The Allahabad High Court has held that it does not necessarily follow that, because a confession made by an accused person is subsequently retracted and there is little or no evidence on the record to support the confession, therefore the confession is to be rejected. The credibility of such a confession, is, in each case, a matter to be decided by the court according to the circumstances of each particular case, and if the court is of the opinion that such a confession is true, the court is bound to act, as far as the person making it is concerned, upon such belief.[13] It is unable to rely on and act upon a retracted confession unless, upon a consideration of the whole of the evidence in the case, the Court is in a position to come unhesitatingly to the conclusion that the confession was true. It is often very difficult, if not impossible, to come to such a conclusion, unless there is reliable independent evidence to corroborate, to a material extent and in material particulars, the statements contained in the withdrawn confessional statements. It seems, therefore, to be unsafe, in the majority of cases, to found a conviction on retracted confessions which are not corroborated by credible independent evidence.[14] A retracted confession may be taken into consideration, that is, used as evidence, not only as against the person making it, but as against persons tried jointly with the confessing accused for the same offence. As regards the person making it, a retracted confession may, even without any corroborative evidence, form the basis of a conviction. As regards the other co-accused, although corroborative evidence may be necessary, it is not necessary that such corroborative evidence should by itself be sufficient to support a conviction and a conviction based on the unsupported evidence afforded by the confession of a co-accused would not be unlawful.[15] The retracted confession of a co-accused can undoubtedly be used or taken into consideration under this section as against the other accused, but it, like the evidence of an approver, is not sufficient for conviction unless it is corroborated in material particulars. The evidence of an approver, coupled with the retracted confession of a co-accused, is not sufficient for conviction of an accused person if there is no other reliable evidence in corroboration as regards the identity of that accused person.[16]

The same is the view of the Madras High Court. It holds that it cannot be laid down as an absolute rule of law that a confession made and subsequently retracted by an accused cannot be accepted as evidence of his guilt without independent corroborative evidence. The weight to be given to such a confession must depend upon the circumstances under which it was originally given and the

---

9. Haroon Haji v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 832.
10. Queen-Empress v. Gharya, (1894) 19 Bom 728; Queen-Empress v. Gangia, ILR (1898) 23 Bom 316; Queen-Empress v. Basvanta, (1900) 2 Bom LR 761: ILR 25 Bom 168; Emperor v. Bhagwandas Bisesar, (1940) 42 Bom LR 938 : ILR 1941 Bom 27; Emperor v. Bhimappa Saibanna, (1945) 47 Bom LR 648.
11. Emperor v. Krishna Babaji, (1933) : 35 Bom LR 331.
12. Emperor v. Bhagwan Das Bissesar, (1940) 42 Bom LR 938 : ILR 1941 Bom 27 : AIR 1941 Bom 27.
13. Queen-Empress v. Maiku Lal, ILR (1897) 20 All 133; Emperor v. Manohar, (1946) All 111 : AIR 1946 All 15.
14. Queen-Empress v. Mahabir, (1895) 18 All 78, 81; Queen-Empress v. Rangi, ILR (1887) 10 Mad 295, 313.
15. Emperor v. Kehri, ILR (1907) 29 All 434; Ataya v. Crown, (1910) PR No. 5 of 1911 (Cr); Nga Aung Thein v. Crown, (1901) 1 LBR 133.
16. Emperor v. Nazir, ILR (1932) 55 All 91; Emperor v. Shambhu, ILR (1931) 54 All 350.

circumstances under which it was retracted, including the reasons given by the accused for this retraction.[17] If the reasons given by the accused person for having made a confession, which he subsequently withdraws, are, on the face of them, false, that confession may be acted upon as it stands, and without any further corroboration.[18] A retracted confession can be used under this section where the court is satisfied that the confession was made voluntarily in the first instance and that it is true.[19] A retracted confession is of little value against a co-accused and the fullest corroboration is necessary. But, when there is considerable circumstantial evidence as to the guilt of the co-accused, the court is entitled to use the confession to remove any doubts that might linger in the mind.[20]

The Calcutta High Court has ruled that it is not safe to convict an accused on his retracted confession standing by itself uncorroborated,[21] and that to place any reliance on a retracted confession against a co-accused would be most unsafe.[22] A retracted confession should carry practically no weight as against a person other than the maker; it is not made on oath, it is not tested by cross-examination, and its truth is denied by the maker itself, who has thus lied on one or other of the occasions. The very fullest corroboration would be necessary in such a case, for more than would be demanded for the sworn testimony of an accomplice on oath.[23]

The Patna High Court has ruled that a retracted confession is admissible in evidence but should have no weight attached to it unless it is corroborated in material particulars, or the tribunal comes to the conclusion that the statement as a whole is a truthful statement. In either of these cases the retracted statement must be given full weight and may be used against a co-accused.[24]

The former Nagpur High Court has held that, when it is possible to come to the conclusion that a retracted self-inculpatory confession cannot be otherwise than true, it may be taken into consideration in connection with evidence appearing in the case against the person making it, as also against another person therein implicated, though it should be used with caution.[25] Subsequently, it has held that a retracted confession, if believed to be true, may form the basis of a conviction, but, as a rule of caution, it is unsafe to base a conviction even of the maker on a retracted confession alone, without some independent corroboration. The confession must be corroborated in material particulars, so as to satisfy the court that the confession, even though retracted, may be acted upon.[26]

The former Chief Court of Oudh at Lucknow had held that the statement of an approver, or the retracted confession of an accused, cannot be made the basis of conviction unless it is corroborated sufficiently by material evidence against the co-accused.[27] But a court is at liberty to base a conviction on the retracted confession of an accused person if it thinks that the confession has a ring of truth about it.[28] Where the accused retracts his confession, no reliance can be placed upon such a retracted confession so far as the co-accused are concerned.[29]

The Assam High Court has held that, where there is a retracted confession, the corroboration required is on two points: (1) as to the factum of the crime; and (2) as to the identity of the person accused of the crime.[30]

The Rajasthan High Court has held that, in the absence of corroboration in material particulars, it is not safe to convict an accused on his retracted confession alone, unless, from the peculiar circumstances in which it was made, and judging from the reasons, alleged or apparent, of the retraction, there remains a high degree of certainty that the confession, notwithstanding its having been resiled from, is genuine.

---

17. Queen-Empress v. Raman, ILR (1897) 21 Mad 83, 88.
18. Kesava Pillai, ILR (1929) 53 Mad 160; Rajagopal In re : (1944) Mad 308.
19. Syamo Maha Patro, In re : ILR (1932) 55 Mad 903 (FB).
20. Munayya In re : ILR (1938) Mad 348.
21. Queen-Empress v. Jadub Das, (1899) 27 Cal 295; Kali Jeeban Bhattacharya v. Emperor, ILR (1936) 63 Cal 1053.
22. Emperor v. Lalit Mohan Chuckerbutty, ILR (1911) 38 Cal 559 (SB).
23. Yassin v. King Emperor, ILR (1901) 28 Cal 689.
24. Sheonarain Singh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1928) 8 Pat 262; Kunja Subudhi v. King-Emperor, ILR (1928) 8 Pat 289; King-Emperor v. Mangru Kisan, ILR (1937) 16 Pat 612.
25. Abdul Gafoor v. Crown, ILR (1941) Nag 169; Kashimuddin v. Emperor, ILR (1934) 62 Cal 312, dissented from.
26. Bhukin v. King-Emperor, ILR (1948) Nag 147.
27. King-Emperor v. Maqbu Ahmad Khan, ILR (1931) 7 Luck 511.
28. Imamuddin v. King-Emperor, ILR (1934) 10 Luck 131; Sheoratan v. King-Emperor, ILR (1934) 10 Luck 150.
29. Baboo Singh v. King-Emperor, ILR (1935) 11 Luck 662; Sheoratan v. King-Emperor, ILR (1934) 10 Luck 150.
30. Serajuddin v. State, ILR (1952) 4 Ass 305; State v. Bidhu Balmek Swapan, ILR (1951) 3 Ass 415.

But it is not necessary that the confession must be corroborated by other evidence in every particular; it is sufficient if it is corroborated in material particulars.[31]

The Andhra High Court has held that, as a rule of prudence, a retracted confession should not be made the basis of a conviction unless it is substantially corroborated by independent evidence.[32]

It was held by the Kerala High Court that a retracted confession can form the basis of conviction if corroborated by a confession of one or the other of the accused and can be used against other accused when conspiracy on their part is proved.[33]

To sum up, the following important principles are to be observed before a court uses the confession of an accused and, particularly, a retracted confession:

(1) The provisions of the Evidence Act do not prevent the court from taking into consideration confession of an accused against his co-accused.

(2) A confession is not to be regarded as involuntary merely because it has been retracted, by the maker, at the trial.

(3) The confession must implicate the maker substantially and to the same extent as the other accused person against whom it is sought to be taken into consideration.

(4) If it appears, on a reading of the whole confession, to be exculpatory, it can not be used as a confession particularly against the other accused, even though it contains grave incriminating statements.

(5) Before using the retracted confession, it should be proved as voluntary and true.

(6) Though there is no rule of law requiring a retracted confession to be supported by corroboration on material particulars, as a matter of prudence and practice, the court would not ordinarily act upon it to convict a co-accused without the strongest and fullest corroboration on material particulars.[34]

(7) Such corroboration should not only relate to the factum of the crime but also as to the connection of the co-accused with the trial.

(8) It is only when the court is not in a position to come to a conclusion on the evidence adduced, that it can call such confession in aid to lend assurance to the other evidence.

(9) It shall not be used as the foundation of a conviction nor to support, as a corroborative piece of evidence, to the evidence of accomplices or approvers.

It has been held that though a retracted confession is admissible, it can only be used to support the other evidence of the witness, but can neither be made the foundation of a conviction nor to support the evidence of other accomplices or approvers.[35] Where the appellant was charged with murder, the Supreme Court held that it retracted judicial confession of another accused could not be used against the appellant as the appellant who was tried along with other accused had been acquitted by the High Court under the charge of conspiracy to murder and the other accused was not charged for the offence of murder. But they relied on the evidence of the approver and the retracted confession of the appellant which was corroborated by the recovery of a blood stained razor and medical evidence and held that there was sufficient evidence to prove the guilt of the appellant in respecting the charge for murder.[36]

---

31. Krishna, (1951) 1 Raj 929; Laloo, (1952) Raj 602, 1956 Raj LW 435.

32. Subbiah, (1955) Andhra 633; ILR 1964 AP 905. See also Netar Pal v. State, 1964 Punj 39; Chanchal Singh v. State, ILR 1957 Cut 651.

33. State of Kerala v. Ammini, 1988 Cr LJ 107 (FB).

34. Budha Majhi v. State of Orissa, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 487; Netar Pal Jhuna Mal v. State, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 335 : AIR 1964 Punj 397 (R); Ramachandra Sahu v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 377, M/s. Vali Mohomed Gulham Hussain Sonavela and Co v. C T A. Pillai, Addl. Collector of Customs, (1961) 1 Cr LJ 229 : AIR 1961 Bom 48; Rup Devi v. Himachal Pradesh, 1955 Cr LJ 679 : AIR 1955 HP 15; State of Maharashtra v. P K Pathak, AIR 1980 SC 122 : 1980 Cr LJ 923; Hamza v. State of Kerala, 1978 Ker LT 963; Jogendranath v. State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1309, Barendra Kumar Singha v. State of Assam, 1978 Cr LJ (NOC) 90 : 1970 Ker LT 110; Thaba v. State, (1967) 2 Cr LJ 1023.

35. Mahammad Hussain v. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45.

36. Vinayak v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1793.

It is one thing to say that a confession of a co-accused can be used to corroborate other evidence, but it is entirely a different thing to say that other evidence can be used to corroborate the confession of the accused. The confession can only be used to help to satisfy a court that the other evidence is true.[37]

The court cannot start with the confession of a co-accused; it must begin with the other evidence in the prosecution and after it has formed its opinion as to its quality and effect, then only it can turn to the confession in order to reserve assurance to the conclusion of guilty which the judicial mind is about to reach on the said other evidence.[38] In the absence of sufficient evidence against the other accused to sustain their conviction, the confession of a co-accused cannot be taken into consideration.[39] A retracted confession cannot be used to fill up a gap in the prosecution evidence.[40]

The value to be attached to a confession will depend upon the facts of each case, more particularly on the fact whether the co-accused has an opportunity to rebut the same.[41]

If once the court is satisfied that a retracted confession was in fact made voluntarily and was trustworthy, it can be used not only against its maker but also against the co-accused.[42]

A retracted confession can be taken into consideration to indicate prima facie involvement of others.[43]

A retracted confession is a weak evidence, and so cannot be made the sole basis of conviction when there is no other satisfactory evidence.[44]

Where a confession is retracted long after the commencement of the trial, on the advice of the counsel, the delay is of no significance, provided it is voluntary and true.[45]

Admissions not conclusive proof, but may estop.

S. 31. Admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted but they may operate as estoppels under the provisions hereinafter contained.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 385
2. Admission in criminal cases ... 387
3. Admission made during the conduct of the suit ... 388
4. Admission contained in a document ... 388
5. The whole of the admission should be considered ... 388

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section declares that admissions are not conclusive proof of the matters admitted, but that they may operate as estoppels. 'Admission' is defined in Section 17, supra, 'estoppel' in Section 115, infra. Unless admissions are contractual or unless they constitute an estoppel they are not conclusive[46], but are open to rebuttal or explanation. Admissions, whether written or oral, which do not operate by way of estoppel, constitute a kind of evidence, which may be rebutted, against their makers and those claiming under them, as between them and others. A party is not bound by his own representations, where they have not been acted upon by the opposite party. If treated as admission not acted upon, the party who

---

37. Gunadhar Das v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 618 : 1952 Cr LJ 1343; Bhuboni Sahu v. King, AIR 1949 PC 257.
38. State of Orissa v. Gouranga Sahu, 1978 Cr LJ 276.
39. Haricharan v. State, AIR 1964 SC 1184 : (1964) 2 Cr LJ 344; In re : Balan, 1973 Cr LJ 1311 (SC).
40. State of Rajasthan v. Chhuttmlal, 1970 Cr LJ 1206 (Raj): 1970 SCC (Cri) 320; Hamza v. State, 1978 Ker LT 963; Tej Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 52 (Ori).
41. Jana v. Mohd. Akbar Alai, 1976 Cr LJ 1947.
42. Kuljeet Singh v. State, ILR (1979) 2 Delhi 571.
43. Mohan Wahi v. State, 1982 Cr LJ 2040 (Del).
44. Haroon Hari v. State, AIR 1968 SC 832; Md. Hussain v. Dalip Singhji, AIR 1970 SC 45 : ILR (1977) 1 Cal 413; Ananta Dixit v. State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 1126 (Ori).
45. Ranjit Singh v. State of Himachal Pradesh, AIR 1952 HP 81 : 1952 Cr LJ 1720 (HP).
46. Dr. N. Ganesh v. Sucheta, ILR 1969 Bom 1024.

made them may prove that they were not true or mistaken. A mere admission is conclusive only where it has been acted on by the party to whom it was made. An estoppel, i.e., a representation acted on by the other party, by creating a substantive right, does oblige the estopped party to make good his representation, in other words, it is conclusive. The maker of the admission would be precluded from going back on it and speaking the truth on the principle of estoppel if the person to whom it is made has acted on its faith.[47]

Admissions are not conclusive proof of the facts admitted and may be explained or shown to be wrong. But they may raise an estoppel and shift the burden of proof on to the person making them or his representative in interest. Unless shown or explained to be wrong they are an effcatious proof of the facts admitted.[48] An admission is the best evidence that an opposite party can rely on and though not conclusive is decisive of the matter unless successfully withdrawn or proved erroneous.[49]

An admission shifts the onus on the party admitting on the principle that what a party himself admits may reasonably be presumed to be true. Admissions are not conclusive and unless they constitute estoppel. The maker is at liberty to prove that they are mistaken or untrue. Where an admission was made by a young Hindu widow lonely and dependent on the husband's relatives who were interested in foisting an adoption on her, the Supreme Court attached little weight to it.[50]

The rule of estoppel binds only the party and his successors in interest and not strangers. Where a plaintiff filed a suit regarding certain property that he was entitled by inheritance from his natural father and the defence was that that plaintiff is not an heir to his natural father as he had gone in adoption basing on certain admissions made by the plaintiff in certain documents to which defendant was not a party, it was held that there is no estoppel as the defendant was not a party to those documents and the plaintiff could prove that the statements are untrue.[51]

For the application of the doctrine of estoppel mainly three conditions have to be fulfilled, firstly, there must be a representation either oral or written by a person to another person. Secondly, the other person must have acted upon the said representation taking the admissions as true. Thirdly, he should suffer some prejudice by believing the representation or must have acted in detriment to his interest by reason of the representation.[52]

An estoppel differs from an admission, for it cannot generally be taken advantage of by strangers. It binds only parties and privies. An estoppel is generally said to be only a rule of evidence, for an action cannot be founded upon it. As a defence it has been held to have the effect of rule of substantive law.

What a party himself admits to be true, may reasonably be presumed to be true.[53]

The expression 'conclusive proof' is defined in Section 4, and when a fact is declared to be conclusive proof of another, a court cannot allow evidence to be given for the purpose of disproving the fact conclusively proved. All that this section provides is that an admission, unless it operates as an estoppel, is not conclusive. What a party himself admits to be true may reasonably be presumed to be so. The person against whom it is proved is at liberty to show that it was mistaken or untrue. An admission does not estop the party who makes it; he is still at liberty to disprove it by evidence so far as regards his

---

47. Narayan Neelakutti v. Krishnan Veki, AIR 1955 TC 199; Bhattacharjee v. Sentinel Assurance Co. Ltd, AIR 1955 Cal 594.

48. Avadh Kishore v. Ram Gopal, AIR 1979 SC 861.

49. Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100 : (1960) 1 SCR 773.

50. Kishorilal v. Chaltibai, AIR 1959 SC 504 : 1959 Supp (1) SCR 698. See also Salah Bin Ahmed v. Abdullah Bin Ewaz Hamidan, AIR 1956 Hyder 43; Union of India v. Maqsood Ahmed, AIR 1963 Bom 110; Abadi v. Mumtazuddin, 1934 All 662; Dukharamnath v. C.C. Corporation Ltd., AIR 1940 Oudh 35; Md. Sadiq Ali Khan v. Fakhr Jahan, AIR 1932 PC 13; Jamilunnissa v. Shukh Md. Zia, AIR 1937 All 547; Md. Moizuddin v. Nalini, AIR 1937 Cal 284; Dulana Moliko v. Bhagabat Biso, AIR 1967 Ori 110; Narayan v. Sucheta, AIR 1970 Bom 312; Income-tax Officer v. Shambhoo Dayal Omprakash and Company, AIR 1968 All 203; Ramaswami Iyer v. Subramania Pillai, 1962 Ker LJ 929; Narayan Neelakutty v. Krishnan Venkey, AIR 1955 TC 199; Bhattacharjee v. Sentinel Assurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1955 Cal 594 : ILR 1978 Bom 1454; Manoharan Chetti v. Coommara Swamy Naidu, AIR 1980 Mad 212 : ILR 1973 Cut 96 : (1975) 1 Cut WR 3.

51. Chandrakumar v. Choudhuri Narpat, 11 Cal WN 321; See also Nagubai v. Shama Rao, AIR 1956 SC 593; Radhanath v. Krishna, 40 Cal WN 722.

52. See commentaries on Sections 115 to 117 which deal with Estoppel.

53. Pratap Kishore v. Gyamandranath, AIR 1951 Ori 313; Airva v. Vonkey, AIR 1951 TC 209.

own interest. The rule that admissions are not conclusive is applicable to mistakes in respect of legal liability as well as to those in respect of fact.

A passport issued under Rule 31, of Indian Permit System Rules of 1949, might not be conclusive evidence but is prima facie evidence of the holder's nationality. A heavy onus lies on the petitioner to disprove the fact.[54] Admission by a person that he is the only son of S is not conclusive proof of the fact admitted.[55]

The maker of the admission can show that it is untrue or made under mistake of fact or underthreat, promise or inducement.[56]

The Privy Council observed: "It sometimes happens that persons make statements which serve their purpose or proceed upon ignorance of the true position; and it is not their statements but there relations with the estate, which should be taken into consideration in determining the issue."[57]

Admissions operating as estoppels are not the only kind of admissions that will either be relevant to or conclude the matter in issue. Two other kinds of admissions equally, if not more, effective, are:

(1) admissions contained in the pleadings in a case which would circumscribe the issues and avoid the necessity of proof, and

(2) admissions made by the parties to a suit on earlier occasions either in prior proceedings in a court of law, or in statements made out of court.

An admission by a party in his pleading can be considered against him. What a party in his pleading can be reasonably be presumed to be so unless the presumption is satisfactorily rebutted by other evidence.[58]

Admissions by a plaintiff in previous suit is binding on him in a later proceeding.[59]

Where in a suit by a son challenging the alienation by the father, of joint family property on the ground of absence of legal necessity, a statement was made by his elder brother B, in a previous suit admitting the genuineness of the sale deed, it was held that the admission of the elder brother was not binding as it was made in his individual capacity and prior to the power of attorney executed by the son in favour of his brother.[60] Where in a suit for declaration and rendition of account, the trial Court decreed the suit on the basis of unequivocal admissions made by the respondent in the written statement in the earlier proceedings but the appellate Court without pointing out any circumstance took the view that the admissions were made under constraint and compelling circumstances, it was held that the admissions in the written statement in the earlier proceedings, though not conclusive, in the absence of any reasonable and acceptable explanation, is a telling evidence heavily loaded against the respondent and the finding of the trial Court based on the evidence on issues was in extenso justified.[61]

2. ADMISSION IN CRIMINAL CASES

Where a compromise entered into in a previous criminal case (which was not legally possible to enter) in respect of the allegations constituting offences which were not compoundable no evidence having been recorded in that case, it was held that the contents of the compromise petition did not constitute an admission and did not operate as estoppel as the petition was wholly illegal and inadmissible.[62]

---

54. Yakub Molla v. Union of India, (1958) 62 Cal WN 589.
55. Bhaskar v. Rambha, AIR 1974 Ori 74; A.K. Basak v. Sailendra Nath Paul, 69 Cal WN 593.
56. Narayan v. Sucheta, AIR 1970 Bom 312; Income-tax Officer v. Shambudayal, AIR 1968 All 203; Ramaswami Iyer v. Subramonia Pillai, 1962 Ker LJ 929; Bhattacharjee v. Sentinel Assurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1955 Cal 594.
57. Venkatapathiraju v. Venkatanarasimha, AIR 1936 PC 264; Harkishan v. Partap, AIR 1938 PC 189.
58. Jhunkaribahu alias Katrabali W/o. Laxmi Prasad v. Phoolchand, AIR 1958 MP 261; Jawaharbeg Umraobeg Musalman v. Abdul Aziz Bhondumiya Musalman, AIR 1956 Nag 257; Lal Singh Didar Singh v. Guru Granth Sahib, AIR 1951 Pepsu 101.
59. Shanti Sarup v. Radha Swami Satsams Sabha Dayal Bagh, AIR 1969 All 248; Roshanlal v. Union of India, AIR 1968 Punj 51; Mohammad Seraj v. Adibar Rehaman Shaikh, AIR 1968 Cal 550; Gulabbhai Vallabhbhai Desai v. H.A. Khan Collector of Daman, AIR 1970 Goa 59 (In a writ proceeding).
60. Dhani Ram v. Mangtu, AIR 1953 Bilaspur 18.
61. Sitaramcharya v. Gururajacharya, AIR 1997 SC 806 : (1997) 2 SCC 548.
62. Jagnarain v. Ram, AIR 1979 All 71.

In a criminal proceeding between A and B, B admitted A's title to land in dispute and thereby caused A to give him some land. In a subsequent suit by A for declaration of title and possession of the land, it was held B was estopped from denying A's title thereto by his previous admission.[63]

3. ADMISSION MADE DURING THE CONDUCT OF THE SUIT

A plaintiff is not bound by an admission on a point of law, nor precluded from asserting the contrary in order to obtain the relief, to which, upon a true construction of the law, he may appear to be entitled. But, if the admission is duly proved and if the person against whom it is proved does not satisfy the court that it was mistaken or untrue, there is nothing in this Act, and there is no general principle or rule of law to prevent the court from deciding the case in accordance with it.[64]

4. ADMISSIONS CONTAINED IN A DOCUMENT

An admission contained in a registered deed of adoption formerly executed by a party with an endorsement showing that the executant was fully aware of the contents of the deed and was executed with due deliberation and full understanding is conclusive unless it is explained satisfactorily. The admission of an adoption in a deed amounts to an admission both of the fact and of the validity of the adoption and shifts the burden of proving the contrary to the party which made that admission.[65]

A recital as to delivery of possession by the donor in a gift deed is not conclusive and is rebuttable as to the factum of delivery of possession pursuant to the gift deed.[66]

Though a document containing an admission, is secured at a late stage it can still be used against its maker.[67]

Where a mortgagee admitted payment of money in the mortgage deed still it is open to the mortgagee to contend that the admission is not conclusive and some money had been paid towards a deed other than the mortgage deed in the suit.[68]

The provisions of this section are not restricted to admissions made at any particular time or place, but are wide enough to include admissions made in pleadings. Where an admission was made by the predecessor in title and the successor in interest confirmed it, he became bound by it.[69]

5. THE WHOLE OF THE ADMISSION SHOULD BE CONSIDERED

The law does not permit an admission to be truncated and taken piece-meal and it should be read as a whole or reject as a whole.[70]

BEST ON EVIDENCE (9th Edn., p. 568) stated that the law rejects what a man has stated on his own behalf, and admits what he has stated against himself, but where a document or statement is partly favourable and partly unfavourable to a party, the whole of it is admissible..... While the whole statement must be received the credit due to each part must be determined by the jury, who may believe the self-serving and disbelieve the self-harming portion of it, or vice versa. The above principle was approved by the Supreme Court.[71]

---

63. Mangal Das Chaudhury v. Bhageran Sao, AIR 1953 Pat 318.
64. Maung Mya v. Ma Tha Ya, (1899) 2 UBR (1897-1901) 377; Malgaonkar v. Jagmohan, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 97; Jetmull Bhojraj v. State of Bihar, AIR 1967 Pat 287, see Section 17 for other cases.
65. Bhola v. Man Matin, AIR 1965 All 258; Sooratha v. Kanaka, AIR 1920 Mad 648; Govinda v. Chimabai, AIR 1968 Mys 309.
66. Johara v. Suberia, AIR 1964 Mad 373.
67. Neminath Appayya v. Jambodrao, AIR 1966 Mys 154.
68. Soraisem Kamini Singh v. Chongtham Iboyaima Singh, AIR 1954 Mani 11.
69. Avadh Kishore Das v. Ram Gopal, AIR 1979 SC 861.
70. Hanumant v. State of M P., AIR 1952 SC 343; Jasoda Haldar (Smt.) v. Sailendra Nath Samantha, AIR 1957 Cal 372.
71. Hanumant v. State of M P., AIR 1952 SC 343; Palvinder Kaur v. State, AIR 1952 SC 354; Dadarao v. State, AIR 1974 SC 388; Mohd. Koya v. Muthu Koya, AIR 1979 SC 154. (For a full discussion on admissions see commentary on Sections 17 to 23).

STATEMENTS BY PERSONS WHO CANNOT BE CALLED AS WITNESSES

Cases in which statement of relevant fact by person who is dead or cannot be found, etc., is relevant

S. 32. Statements, written or verbal, of relevant facts made by a person who is dead, or who cannot be found, or who has become incapable of giving evidence, or whose attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay or expense which under the circumstances of the case, appears to the Court unreasonable, are themselves relevant facts in the following cases:—

When it relates to cause of death,

(1) When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which the cause of that person's death comes into question.

Such statements are relevant whether the person who made them was or was not, at the time when they were made, under expectation of death, and whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of his death comes into question.

or is made in course of business,

(2) When the statement was made by such person in the ordinary course of business, and in particular when it consists of any entry or memorandum made by him in books kept in the ordinary course of business, or in the discharge of professional duty; or of an acknowledgement written or signed by him of the receipt of money, goods, securities or property of any kind; or of a document used in commerce written or signed by him; or of the date of a letter or other document usually dated, written or signed by him.

or against interest of maker;

(3) When the statement is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when, if true, it would expose him or would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages.

or gives opinion as to public right or custom, or matters of general interest, or relates to existence of relationship;

(4) When the statement gives the opinion of any such person, as to the existence of any public right or custom or matter of public or general interest, of the existence of which, if it existed, he would have been likely to be aware, and when such statement was made before any controversy as to such right, custom or matter has arisen.

(5) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption between persons as to whose relationship by blood, marriage or adoption the person making the statement had special means of knowledge, and when the statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

or is made in will or deed relating to family affairs;

(6) When the statement relates to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption between persons deceased, and is made in any will or deed relating to the affairs of the family to which any such deceased person belonged, or in any family pedigree, or upon any tombstone, family portrait or other thing on which such statements are usually made, and when such statement was made before the question in dispute was raised.

or in document relating to transaction mentioned in Section 13, clause (a);

(7) When the statement is contained in any deed, will or other document which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in Section 13, clause (a).

or is made by several persons and expresses feelings relevant to matter in question.

(8) When the statement was made by a number of persons, and expressed feelings or impressions on their part relevant to the matter in question.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question is, whether A was murdered by B; or

A dies of injuries received in a transaction in the course of which she was ravished. The question, is whether she was ravished by B; or

The question is, whether A was killed by B under such circumstances that a suit would lie against B by A's widow.

Statements made by A as to the cause of his or her death, referring respectively to the murder, the rape and the actionable wrong under consideration are relevant facts.

(b) The question is as to the date of A's birth.

An entry in the diary of a deceased surgeon regularly kept in the course of business, stating that on a given day he attended A's mother and delivered her of a son, is a relevant fact.

(c) The question is, whether A was in Calcutta on a given day.

A statement in the diary of a deceased solicitor, regularly kept in the course of business, that on a given day the solicitor attended A at a place mentioned, in Calcutta, for the purpose of conferring with him upon specified business, is a relevant fact.

(d) The question is, whether a ship sailed from Bombay harbour on a given day.

A letter written by a deceased member of a merchant's firm, by which she was chartered to their correspondents in London, to whom the cargo was consigned, stating that the ship sailed on a given day from Bombay harbour, is a relevant fact.

(e) The question is, whether rent was paid to A for certain land.

A letter from A's deceased agent to A saying that he had received the rent on A's account and held it at A's orders, is a relevant fact.

(f) The question is, whether A and B were legally married.

The statement of a deceased clergyman that he married them under such circumstances that the celebration would be a crime, is relevant.

(g) The question is, whether A, a person who cannot be found, wrote a letter on a certain day.

The fact that a letter written by him is dated on that day is relevant.

(h) The question is, what was the cause of the wreck of a ship.

A protest made by the captain, whose attendance cannot be procured, is a relevant fact.

(i) The question is, whether a given road is a public way.

A statement by A, a deceased headman of the village, that the road was public, is a relevant fact.

(j) The question is, what was the price of grain on a certain day in a particular market.

A statement of the price, made by a deceased banya in the ordinary course of his business, is a relevant fact.

(k) The question is, whether A, who is dead, was the father of B.

A statement by A that B was his son, is a relevant fact.

(l) The question is, what was the date of the birth of A.

A letter from A's deceased father to a friend, announcing the birth of A on a given day, is a relevant fact.

(m) The question is, whether, and when, A and B were married.

An entry in a memorandum book by C, the deceased father of B, of his daughter's marriage with A on a given date, is a relevant fact.

(n) A sues B for a libel expressed in a painted caricature exposed in a shop window. The question is as to the similarity of the caricature and its libellous character. The remarks of a crowd of spectators on these points may be proved.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 391
2. Statements written or verbal of the relevant fact—Statement ... 393
3. Verbal ... 394
4. Written ... 395
5. Language of Dying Declaration ... 396
6. "Statement of a person as to the cause of his death or to any circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death" [Sub-section (1)] ... 396
   (a) Who is dead ... 396
   (b) As to the cause of death ... 397
   (c) Expectation of death ... 398
7. Fitness of the Declarant ... 399
8. "Any circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death" ... 401
9. Proximity between Time of Statement and Death ... 403
10. Delay in recording dying declaration ... 405
11. Procedure of recording dying declaration ... 405
12. Proof of dying declaration ... 406
13. Corroboration ... 407
14. Relevancy and admissibility ... 410
15. Weight to be attached ... 411
16. Sole basis of conviction ... 417
17. Dying declaration—Medical evidence ... 418
18. Plurality of declarations ... 419
19. Dying declaration should be precise ... 420
20. Dying declaration should be complete ... 421
21. Whether part of dying declaration can be used ... 421
22. Recording of dying declaration by Magistrate ... 421
23. Dying declaration—recorded by investigating officer/police officer ... 422
24. Dying declaration recorded by duty doctor ... 424
25. Non-production of the scribe of dying declaration ... 424
26. Tutored Dying Declaration ... 425
27. F.I.R. ... 425
28. Statement made in course of business [Sub-section (2)] ... 425
29. In the course of business ... 426
30. Difference between Section 32(2), Cl. (2)and Section 34 ... 426
31. In the discharge of professional duty ... 428
32. Proof ... 428
33. Declarations against interest of maker [Sub-section (3)] ... 429
34. Statement against the interest of maker ... 429
35. Statement exposing declarant to criminal prosecution of suit for damages ... 431
36. Statement giving opinion as to a public right or Custom or matter of general interest [Sub-section (4)] ... 431
37. Before any controversy has arisen ... 433
38. Statement relating to existence of relationship [Sub-section (6)] ... 434
39. Parent and child ... 434
40. Marriage ... 435
    Age ... 435
41. Pedigree ... 436
42. Horoscope ... 438
43. Entries kept by purohit ... 438
44. Special means of knowledge ... 438
    Before the dispute was raised ... 440
45. Statement made in a will or deed relating to family affairs [Sub-section (6)] ... 440
46. Difference between Clause (5) and (6) ... 440
47. Document relating to transaction creating a Right or Custom [Sub-section (7)] ... 441
48. Statement of several persons, expressing feelings relevant to matter in question [Sub-section (8)] ... 442

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This and the following section are exceptions to the general rule that hearsay evidence is not admissible. Hearsay evidence is excluded on the ground that it is always desirable in the interest of justice to get the person, whose statement is relied upon, into court for his examination in the regular way, in order that many possible sources of inaccuracy and untrustworthiness can be best brought to light and exposed, if they exist, by the test of cross-examination. Section 60 lays down that oral evidence must be direct.

The phrase 'hearsay evidence' is not used in the Act; because it is inaccurate and vague. It is a fundamental rule of evidence under the English Common Law that hearsay evidence is inadmissible.[1]

---

1. Subramaniam v. Public Prosecutor, (1956) 1 WLR 965, 970.

Uncertainty exists as to what evidence does and does not fall under hearsay rule.

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), pages 630-631, para 25-02, the following statements of STEPHEN, PHIPSON and CROSS relating to hearsay rule and 'hearsay' as defined in Civil Evidence Act, 1995 are given:

(a) STEPHEN[2] "A statement oral or written made otherwise than by a witness in giving evidence and a statement contained or recorded in any book, document or record whatever, proof of which is not admitted on other grounds, are deemed to be irrelevant for the purpose of proving the truth of the matter stated."

(b) PHIPSON[3] "Oral or written statements made by persons who are not parties and who are not called as witnesses are inadmissible to prove the truth of the matters stated."

Contrary to STEPHEN'S definition this formulation only excludes as hearsay statements by persons other than the parties and witnesses. Accordingly when a confession is related by someone rather than the maker it is not to be regarded as an exception to the hearsay rule. Equally, whether or not what witness X said to witness Y is inadmissible on some other ground it is not excluded in this definition by the hearsay rule. Modern authority is to the contrary.[4]

(c) CROSS "An assertion other than one made by a person while giving oral evidence in the proceedings is inadmissible as evidence of any fact asserted."[5]

(d) Civil Evidence Act, 1995, S. 2 (1)(a) : " 'Hearsay' means a statement made otherwise than by a person while giving oral evidence in the proceedings which is tendered as evidence of the matters stated."

At page 635 (PHIPSON) it is stated: "Although the exact scope of the rule is a matter of controversy, it is clear that the effect of the rule is to prohibit certain oral and written statements of persons other than the witness who is giving evidence being related to the court as evidence of the truth of that which was asserted in the statement and notwithstanding the fact that no better evidence of the facts stated is to be obtained."[6]

In HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, Page 39 it is stated: "Hearsay evidence in its legal sense is evidence given by a testifying witness of a statement made on some other occasion, when it is intended as evidence of the truth of what was asserted. It is essential to appreciate that evidence is only hearsay when tendered to prove the truth of the facts asserted, not when tendered simply to show that the statement was made. Hearsay may be first hand, when a witness says what he heard someone else say, or second hand (or even more distant) when he relates to what he was told that someone else said. It may be oral or documentary, of fact or of opinion."

The exceptions to the hearsay evidence have been directed by necessity. This rule excluding hearsay evidence is relaxed so far as the statements contained in Sections 32 and 33 are concerned. The general ground of admissibility of the evidence referred to in these sections is that no better evidence could be produced.

Before such evidence is let in, the court must arrive at a finding on evidence formally and regularly taken and recorded that one or other of the grounds specified in the section exists. The admission of such deposition in evidence without such finding is illegal.[7]

Sections 32 and 33 deal with different circumstances in which the evidence is relevant. Section 32 inter alia makes relevant the statements given by a deceased person as to the cause of his death or as to any circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, when the cause of death comes into

---

2. Digest of the Law of Evidence, Art. 15.
3. 7th and subsequent editions.
4. R v. McLean, (1968) 52 Cr App R 80. Note, too, that evidence of recent complaint is not evidence of the truth of the facts stated in the complaint.
5. CROSS and TAPPER, Evidence (8th ed.), p. 564. This formulation is significantly different from that put forward in earlier editions: cf. 3rd ed., p. 387. In the 6th edition, this definition was the same except that it began with the words "a statement" instead of "an assertion". In the 5th edition the last word was "asserted" rather than "stated". These cumulative changes reflect changes in the law of "implied assertions".
6. See Myers v. D.P.P., (1965) AC 1001, 1024.
7. Satish Chandra Seal v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Cal 137 : ILR (1944) 2 Cal 76.

question, whereas Section 33 makes evidence given by a witness relevant, when the witness is dead or cannot be found etc. Thus the two sections cover distinct fields. Under Section 33, evidence of a witness who is dead or not found can be admitted only if the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right to cross-examine. Under Section 32, the statement of the deceased would become relevant subject to one of the four conditions mentioned in the main section and further, it must come within one of the eight clauses mentioned in the section. Section 32 is not controlled by Section 33.[8]

Under this section, written or verbal statements of relevant facts made by a person:

(a) who is dead;

(b) who cannot be found;

(c) who has become incapable of giving evidence; or

(d) whose attendance cannot be procured without unreasonable delay or expense; are relevant under the following circumstances:—

(1) When it relates to the cause of his death.

(2) When it is made in the course of business, such as an entry in books, or acknowledgement or the receipt of any property, or date of a document.

(3) When it is against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it, or when it would have exposed him to a criminal prosecution or to a suit for damages.

(4) When it gives opinion as to a public right or custom or matters of general interest and it was made before any controversy as to such right or custom had arisen.

(5) When it relates to the existence of any relationship between persons as to whose relationship the maker had special means of knowledge, and it was made before the question in dispute arose.

(6) When it relates to the existence of any relationship between persons deceased and is made in any will or deed or family pedigree, or upon any tombstone or family portrait, and was made before the question in dispute arose.

(7) When it is contained in any deed, will, or other document.

(8) When it is made by a number of persons and expresses feelings relevant to the matter in question.

Section 30 does not limit the operation of this section, but Section 118 does.

2. STATEMENTS WRITTEN OR VERBAL OF THE RELEVANT FACT—STATEMENT

The word 'statement' means that which is stated, though it is not defined in the Act.[9]

The element of communication to another person is not necessary before "something that is stated" can be treated as a statement.[10]

A dying declaration is not a statement which requires to be in writing. Oral evidence as to the statement made by the injured person who happens to die subsequently would prove the declaration. If the declaration is recorded, the record would be merely a note made by the witness and would not be substantive evidence.[11]

A statement made by the deceased, pointing out the person causing his death, at the identification parade held by the police, is admissible as his dying declaration.[12]

---

8. Shyamnand Das v. Ramakanta, ILR (1904) 32 Cal 6; Sulaiman v. King, AIR 1941 Rang 301.
9. Bhogilal Chunilal Pandya v. State of Bombay, AIR 1959 SC 356.
10. Shanti Devi v. State, ILR (1979) 2 Del 183.
11. Vallabh v. State, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 540 (Guj).
12. Emperor v. Mahadeo Dewoo, (1945) 47 Bom LR 992.

3. VERBAL

'Verbal' means by words. It is not necessary that the words should be spoken. The words of another person may be adopted by a witness by a nod or a shake of the head.[13]

If the significance of the signs made by a deceased person in response to questions put to her shortly before her death is established satisfactorily to the mind of the court, then such questions, taken with her assent or dissent to them, clearly proved, constitute a verbal statement as to the cause of her death.[14]

In a trial upon a charge of murder, it appeared that the deceased, shortly before her death, was questioned by various persons as to the circumstances in which the injuries had been inflicted on her; that she was at that time unable to speak, but was conscious and able to make signs. Evidence was offered by the prosecution, and admitted by the Sessions Judge, to prove the questions put to the deceased, and the signs made by her in answer to such questions. It was held that the questions and the signs taken together right properly be regarded as 'verbal statements' made by the person as to the cause of her death, within the meaning of this section, and were, therefore, admissible in evidence under this section.[15] Where, on an enquiry as to what happened to him, the declarant, being unable to speak, indicated by gestures that his brothers had administered poison, his gestures amounted to verbal statements within Section 32 and were, therefore, admissible.[16]

The questions put to the injured person who is unable to speak and the signs made by him in reply, taken together, amount to "verbal statements" within the meaning of this section.[17]

Where a woman, whose throat had been cut, made, in answer to questions put to her by the Sub-Inspector, certain gestures, from which the latter inferred that she accused her husband of the assault, it was held that the gestures were admissible in evidence, but that the opinion of witnesses as to the meaning of the gestures was not admissible.[18] As the interpretation of the gesture is for the court alone to decide; the opinion of the witnesses as to the meaning of such gestures is not evidence. If the answers are given by gestures, the court should know what those gestures were. The interpretation of those answers by gestures would ultimately be a matter for the court and not for the investigating Sub-Inspector.[19]

The opinion of a doctor that in view of the injury caused, the person making the dying declaration could not speak is not conclusive of the ability to talk especially if it is at variance with the opinion of the doctor conducting the post mortem.[20]

Where the dying declaration is oral, the exact words stated by the deceased to the witnesses are of utmost importance. If the witnesses improve upon their statement by varying their versions, that evidence becomes unreliable, and the alleged dying declaration has to be eshewed.[21]

Where a person stated that the accused had caused her the injuries, though it appeared that her answer was not in response to any leading question, it was held such evidence amounted to a dying declaration and, though not reduced to writing, could not be rejected.[22] Even where a dying declaration made to the doctor has not been recorded in the form of questions and answers and in the words of the 13. Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, ILR (1885) 7 All 385, 397 (FB).

---

14. Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, ILR (1885) 7 All 385 (FB); Emperor v. Sadhu Charan Das, AIR 1923 Cal 409 : (1921) 49 Cal 600; Chandrika Ram Kahar v. King-Emperor, AIR 1922 Pat 535 : (1922) 1 Pat 401; Ranga v. Crown, AIR 1924 Lah 581 : (1924) 5 Lah 305; Emperor v. Motiram Raisingh, AIR 1936 Bom 372 : (1936) 38 Bom LR 818 : (1937) Bom 68.
15. Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, ILR (1885) 7 All 385 (FB); Chandrasekara v. King, AIR 1937 Cal 220.
16. Gajendrakar v. State of Orissa, 1973 Cr LJ 1058 (Ori); Alexander Perera Chandarasekara v. King, AIR 1937 PC 24 : 38 Cr LJ 281 (PC); Alexander Perera Chandarashekar v. King, AIR 1937 PC 24 : 1956 Cr LJ 1240; Vaghari Madhakana v. State, AIR 1956 Sau 83; Pandian K. Nadar v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3883 (para 23) (Bom).
17. Sudama v. King-Emperor, AIR (1949) Nag 301.
18. Chandrika Ram Kahar v. King-Emperor, AIR 1922 Pat 535 : ILR (1922) 1 Pat 401; Chandrasekara v. King, AIR 1937 Cal 220 : 39 Bom LR 359.
19. Shirinath Durgaprasad v. State, AIR 1957 Bom 223.
20. Sanappa Vamanappa v. State of Mysore, AIR 1979 SC 1831.
21. Kunnummal Mohammad v. State of Kerala, AIR 1963 Ker 54; Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22; Ramnath v. State of M P, AIR 1953 SC 420.
22. Sital Chandra v. State, AIR 1956 Cal 82.

declarant, the dying declaration can be treated as oral testimony by the deceased as to the cause of his death and the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, and thus becomes a relevant fact when the cause of death of the deceased is in question.[23]

When only two relatives were present when the deceased was attacked and the deceased shouted the names of the assailants, the evidence of the relatives cannot be discarded simply because that was not recorded and such statements can be taken as oral dying declarations.[24] In a case of murder the deceased made oral dying declaration to interested witnesses. The father of the deceased who lodged the F.I.R. after admitting him to hospital, mentioned about the dying declaration and also gave necessary details. There was no possibility of implication. The doctor did not categorically state in his evidence that the deceased was not in a fit condition to make dying declaration. The conviction on its basis was upheld.[25] Where the deceased made oral dying declaration to her father of which there was no other witness, the evidence of dying declaration of her father could not be discarded for non-examination of any witness in support.[26] The statement made by the deceased to her father 2-3 days prior to her death that she would not be allowed to leave her in-laws' house till the demand of scooter was met, would be admissible under Section 32(1).[27] Where the oral statement given by the deceased before death to the witness found place at the earliest in the Fard Beyan of that witness and it described the manner of assault, weapon and the persons assaulting and was corroborated by other evidence, the same could be used as dying declaration for corroborating other evidence.[28] Where the deceased, the victim of burning, gave wrong name of the father of the accused in her statement attached to FIR but on being confronted by the I.O. she made a clarificatory statement about the correct name of his father, such clarificatory statement, being intertwined the burning episode, fell within the ambit of Section 32(1).[29]

Where the deceased was sleeping when he was fired on his abdomen at night and was crying in agony, he could not have correctly identified the assailant and calling out the name of accused as assailant to his relatives could be a case of mistaken identity and such uncorroborated dying declaration could not be relied upon.[30] Where there were infirmities in the oral dying declaration regarding the state of the deceased to make the declaration, the witnesses to whom it was made disclosed it to the police after two days of the death of the deceased without giving any explanation for the delay and there was no corroboration.[31]

When the oral dying declaration was heard by more than one person, it was held that the witnesses need not repeat the same words, but they may state it in similar words.[32]

A dying declaration in the form of questions and answers and, so far as practicable in the words of the maker of the declaration, stands on a much higher footing.[33]

4. WRITTEN

The statement of a deceased person in a document, that a particular document is the copy of the original, is admissible under this section as a relevant fact and also as an admission under Section 21 of the Act.[34]

Letters written by the deceased wife disclosing circumstances under which she committed suicide are admissible under Section 32(1).[35]

---

23. Mamchand v. State, ILR (1971) 2 Delhi 689.
24. Anantamohanto v. State of Orissa, AIR 1979 SC 1433.
25. Vishram v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 304, at p. 306 (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 250, affirming the judgment of M.P. High Court.
26. Lakhan Lal v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2699 (para 16) (Del).
27. Mahesh Kumar v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 4417 (para 28) (All).
28. Qaiyum Mian v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 1756 (para 17) (Pat).
29. Patel Hiralal Joitaram v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2001 SC 2944 (para 31).
30. Pyarelal v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 958 (para 10) (MP).
31. Ramsai v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 138 (para 4) : AIR 1994 SC 464.
32. Amba Shanker Dave v. State, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 541.
33. Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22; Nilamani Dehuri v. State, ILR 1964 Cut 841.
34. Seethaya v. Subramanya Somayajulu, AIR 1929 PC 115.
35. Ram Kumar v. State of M.P., 1998 Cr LJ 952 (para 12) (MP). See also Mithailal v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3580 (paras 14 and 16) (Bom).

5. LANGUAGE OF DYING DECLARATION

Dying declaration recorded in the language of the declarant acquires added strength and reliability.[36] Dying declaration would not vitiate merely because it was recorded in a different language than one in which narrated by the declarant.[37] Where the Spl. Magistrate asked the questions to the deceased in Sindhi and they were replied in Sindhi and then translated to a constable into Hindi who in turn recorded them in Marathi and the Magistrate disowned the endorsement that the declaration was explained to the maker in Hindi and not in Sindhi, conviction could not be based solely on such a dying declaration.[38] Where the dying declaration was given in Punjabi language but was recorded in Urdu, it was held that though Punjabi language was used in the Subordinate Courts, as the police used always record the statements in Urdu, the recording of the dying declaration in Urdu could not be a ground for saying that the statement did not correctly reproduce what was stated by the declarant.[39] Where the dying declaration made by the deceased in a local dialect was recorded in Hindi and not verbatim, but it contained a true and correct record of the statement of the declarant, it was held that it did not lose its evidentiary value.[40]

6. "STATEMENT OF A PERSON AS TO THE CAUSE OF HIS DEATH OR TO ANY CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE TRANSACTION WHICH RESULTED IN HIS DEATH" [SUB-SECTION (1)]

Section 32 is an exception to the rule of hearsay and makes admissible, the statement of a person who dies, whether the death is homicide or a suicide, provided the statement relates to the cause of death or deals with circumstances leading to the death.[41] Statement about anything which nexus with his death, is admissible as dying declaration as the words 'statements as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death' expands the scope of admissibility.[42]

(a) Who is Dead.—If the person making a dying declaration chances to live, his statement is inadmissible as a dying declaration under this section, but it might be relied on under the provisions of Section 157, to corroborate his testimony when examined[43] or is relevant and admissible as res gestae under Section 6 of the Evidence Act.[44] When the person making a dying declaration survives, the court cannot take note of the declaration.[45]

Where the police recorded a statement of the victim while he was being treated in the hospital, and that statement was treated as a first information report and later the declarant survived, then such statement could be useful only to corroborate or contradict the declarant's testimony in court. If the declarant dies, then that statement would become substantive evidence under Section 32(1), as a declaration as to the cause of the death or as part of his conduct, under Section 8.[46]

A statement of a person made in another proceedings is not admissible under Section 32, unless it is shown that the person is either dead or otherwise not available, as contemplated in Section 32. If that person is alive, he has to be examined in court to prove his statement, in which case it would be

---

36. Najjam Juroqui v. State, 1992 Cr LJ 2574 (Cal).
37. State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032. See also Ramesh v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 3780 (para 13) (Bom).
38. Deepak Baliram Bajaj v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3269 (paras 18-21) (Bom).
39. Bakhshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 904.
40. Kachhwa v. State of Rajasthan, 1986 Cr LJ 306 (Raj).
41. Sharad Budhichand Shardha v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1622; P. Bikshapathi v. State of A.P., (1988) 2 An LT 946 : 1989 Cr LJ 1186; In re : Venkata Subba Reddy, AIR 1931 Mad 689 : ILR (1931) 54 Mad 93; Rigo v. Emperor, (1933) 29 NLR 251; Kans Raj v. State of Punjab, 2000 Cr LJ 2993 (para 11) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2324.
42. Patel Hiralal Joitaram v. State of Gujarat, AIR 2001 SC 2944 (para 28).
43. Emperor v. Rama Sattu, (1902) 4 Bom LR 434. See also Ram Prasad v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 2889 (paras 15 and 17) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1969; Heera Lal v. State of U.P., 2001 Cr LJ 2849 (para 28) (All).
44. III Addl. Sessions Judge, Guntur v. G.V. Rao, 1996 Cr LJ 703 (para 12) (AP).
45. Moti Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 900 : (1964) 1 Cr LJ 727; Tahsildar Singh v. State, AIR 1958 All 255.
46. Vallon Kochol v. State, AIR 1956 Tra/Co 207; Sunil Kumar v. State of M.P., AIR 1997 SC 940 : 1997 Cr LJ 1183.

admissible under Section 157 of the Evidence Act.[47] Where a person making a dying declaration was alive and he said nothing about his dying declaration in his statement under Section 313, Cr.P.C., the said dying declaration has got no value.[48] Where the declarant survives, the dying declaration was not admissible but it could be used to corroborate or contradict his subsequent version[49] and not as substantive evidence.[50] Where the maker of a dying declaration survives, it can be used, not as a piece of substantive piece of evidence, but only to corroborate or contradict him.[51]

Although a dying declaration is not substantive evidence, it can be relied upon to contradict the veracity of a witness.[52]

The statement of the deceased would be admissible if it is made with the apprehension of impending death. If the declarant survives, it is not admissible in evidence.[53]

Where the prosecution claimed that the injured was alive for three to four days but did not produce any medical evidence, it was held that the dying declaration could not sustain conviction.[54]

(b) As to the cause of death.—When the victim is not proved to have died as a result of the injuries received in the incident, his dying declaration cannot be said to be the statement as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death[55] and such a statement does not fall within the ambit of dying declaration within the meaning of Section 32 of the Evidence Act.[56]

Where the victim received a grievous injury to the intestines on 26-4-1976, and his statement about the assault was recorded by the Executive Magistrate, and subsequently he was discharged from the hospital, but later, because of some complications, the victim was admitted in the hospital and it was found that the injury had become dangerous, and finally he died on 5-7-1977, it was held that the statement of the victim amounted to a dying declaration as to the cause of his death.[57]

Where, in a dying declaration, a lady stated that she was burnt to death by her husband and even though she was dying her husband should not be tortured, it was held that the dying declaration was admissible as to the cause of her death, and it could not be converted into one exculpative of the husband.[58]

An information lodged by a person who died subsequently, relating to the cause of his death, is admissible in evidence under this clause[59] and cannot be discredited.[60]

The statement may be oral or written. It is relevant whatever may be the nature of the proceeding in which the cause of the death of the person who made the statement comes into question. If a complaint is made in writing by a person, expressing apprehension of death at the hands of a person and he dies sometime thereafter, is admissible in evidence under this clause, when the person whose conduct is the source of the apprehension is charged with the offence of murder of the person who made the complaint. The deceased had submitted a written complaint against her husband, to the Commissioner of Police, which stated that she was afraid she would be killed by her husband. It was held that the statement

---

47. Maqsoodan v. State of U.P., AIR 1983 SC 126; Khardah & Co. Ltd. v. Their Workmen, AIR 1964 SC 719; Raj Bali Singh v. Deputy Director of Consolidation, AIR 1972 All 291; Pra Bhakarlal v. Shamlal Guiablal, (1972) 1 Mys LJ 472; Naresh Rai v. State of Bihar, 1994 Cri LJ 978 (para 19) (Pat).
48. Qaiyum Mian v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 1756 (para 18) (Pat).
49. Phundi v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 1881 (para 2) (MP).
50. Gentela Vijayavardhan Rao v. State of A.P., AIR 1996 SC 2791 (para 17), reversing Cri A No. 620 of 1995, Dt. 2-11-1995 (AP).
51. Gunamdhi Sundara v. State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 1215 (Ori); Siddu Daryav Valia v. State of M.P., 1978 MPLJ 820 : 1978 Cr LJ 255 (NOC).
52. Nanakchand v. State of U.P., (1970) 1 SCC 368.
53. In re : Mannem Edukondalu, AIR 1957 AP 729.
54. Jaspal Singh v. Kerala, 1979 Cr LJ 1386.
55. Motisingh v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 900.
56. Uppagala Sathish Kumar v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 3906 (para 10) (AP).
57. Dasrath v. State, 1985 All LJ 1358.
58. Vasant Narayan Pawar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1980 SC 1270.
59. Emperor v. Mohammad Shaikh, ILR (1942) 2 Cal 144. Also see G.S. Walia v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 2524 (SC) : AIR 1998 SC 2857; Veerawati v. The State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 294 (All).
60. Muruganandam v. The State, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 297 (Mad).

showing apprehension of death on account of the conduct of the husband was admissible under this clause.[61] Writings of the deceased in her diary about the cause of her suicide, have the evidentiary value that of a dying declaration.[62]

Omission, in a dying declaration, of the motive of the accused to kill the deceased does not affect its veracity, insofar as it relates to the cause of death.[63]

A statement made by a person, since deceased, as to the cause of the death of another, is inadmissible in evidence. The statement of one dead person is not a relevant fact with respect to the question about the death of another person.[64]

(c) Expectation of death.—A dying declaration need not have been made in expectation of death.[65]

English Law admits as dying declaration only such statements of material facts concerning the cause and circumstances of homicide, as are made by the victim under the fixed and solemn belief that his death is inevitable and near at hand. The solemnity of the occasion on which the statements are made is deemed to supply the sanction of oath. The approach of death is deemed to produce a state of mind in which the statements of the dying person are to be taken free from ordinary motive. The law in India does not make the admissibility of a dying declaration dependent upon the persons having a consciousness of the approach of death; even if the person did not apprehend that he would die, a statement made by him about the circumstances of his death would be admissible under Section 32 of the Evidence Act.[66]

The Law in England is stated by PHIPSON as follows in P. 867 of 15th Edn., (2000), Para 35-63: "The deceased must be proved, to the satisfaction of the judge, to have been, at the time of making the declaration, in actual danger of death, and to have abandoned all hope of recovery. These principles were set out in R. v. Perry,[67] where LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J., delivering the judgment of the Court of Criminal Appeal, said that the judge might have to consider whether "the death of the deceased was imminent at the time declaration was made, and to determine from the language used by the deceased, whether the statement was made at a time when the deceased had 'a settled hopeless expectation of death' "(meaning)" that the deceased had abandoned all hope of living." If these conditions occur, it is immaterial that he lingered for several days, or even weeks, or that he subsequently entertained hope of survival. There must be a "settled hopeless expectation of death",[68] and not qualified by any prospect of recovery, however slight, as well as a brief, not, indeed, in an instant or immediate death; but in an imminent and impending, as distinguished from a deferred, one.

The declarant's mental condition may be inferred from his own statements at the time and including those whose admissibility is in question, his conduct, as in taking leave of his friends, giving directions for his funeral, etc., the questions of medical or other attendants expressed to him; the serious nature of the injury received and other attendant circumstances.

Where liasion between the accused and the wife of the deceased is the alleged motive of murder, the statement of the deceased, as reproduced by the witness, to the effect that the accused had approached the deceased for the release of the latter's wife from marriage is admissible under Section 32(1), though

---

61. Allijan Munshi v. State, AIR 1960 Bom 290 : (1959) 61 Bom LR 1620; Mohinder Singh v. State of Punjab 1971 Cr LJ 1764 (Punj).
62. Ramesh Kumar v. State of Chhattisgarh, 2001 Cr LJ 4724 (para 22) (SC).
63. State of Rajasthan v. Jawan Singh, 1971 Cr LJ 1656 (Raj); Abdul Sattar v. State of Mysore, AIR 1956 SC 168
64. Ratan Gond v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 SC 18; Emperor v. Kunwarpal Singh, AIR 1948 All 122
65. Tehansingh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1347; Rajindrakumar v. State, AIR 1960 Punj 310; Chinnavalayan v. State of Madras, (1959) 1 Mad LJ 246; In re : Kalusingh, AIR 1964 MP 30; Allijan v. State, AIR 1960 Bom 290, Tindan v. State, AIR 1965 HP 11; Emperor v. Akbarali, AIR 1933 Bom 479; R. v. Premananda, AIR 1925 Cal 876; Pakalanarayana Swamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47; Enayakthan v. Emperor, 1935 Lah; State of Orissa v. Kaushlya Devi, AIR 1965 Ori 38; State of Bihar v. Suraj Deo Rai, ILR (1972) 51 Pat 205; Bharat v. State of Rajasthan, 1981 Cr LJ 1474; Dinkar Bandhu Desmukh v. State, AIR 1970 Bom 438.
66. State v. Kanchan Singh, AIR 1954 All 153. Also see Surjeet Kaur v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1886 (para 9) (MP); Sant Gopal v. State of U.P., 1995 Cr LJ 312, (para 35) (All); Kishan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 4070 (para 18) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3062; Kans Raj v. State of Punjab, 2000 Cr LJ 2993 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2324.
67. (1909) 2 KB 697.
68. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, p. 865, para 35-60, 15th Edn. (2000).

the statement was not made before the murder, and the deceased was not near his death when he made the statement, as Section 32(1), is not subject to these limitations.[69]

The section only requires that there must be a statement made by a person about the cause of his death, for its admissibility. And it need not disclose all the surrounding circumstances.[70]

But such details, which fall outside the ambit of this are not strictly within the permissible limits laid down by this sub-section and unless absolutely necessary to make a statement coherent or complete, should not be included in the statement.[71]

However, it was held in Lukka v. State[72] that, to exclude from the evidence, the statements made by the deceased person as to the incidents which occurred during the course of the transaction which resulted in his death, other than those relating to the cause of his death, would be to import a limitation to the words used in the section which their natural meaning does not warrant.

7. FITNESS OF THE DECLARANT

Where one dying declaration was recorded by the doctors when the capacity of the deceased to remember was not impaired and the same was corroborated by circumstantial and medical evidence and the other was recorded by the Magistrate when his memory was impaired and he could not tell the name of the accused, relying on the second dying declaration was held to be not proper.[73] Certificate from the doctor and particularly his endorsement that the patient is not only conscious but is in a fit condition to record dying declaration is a must, without which the dying declaration may be rendered heavily suspect[74] but where the dying declaration was recorded by the duty doctor when the deceased was in a serious condition and there was no chance of tutoring, the fitness certificate by the hospital incharge was not necessary.[75] Endorsement by the doctor regarding the fitness of the declarant to make statement on the application, instead of on the declaration, itself does not render the dying declaration suspicious in any manner.[76] Where the consciousness state and good mental condition of the declarant was certified by the doctor and he gave answers to questions in a coherent manner, its veracity could not be affected by the reason of certain infirmities in it.[77] Mere presence of hundred per cent burn injuries of second degree and third degree on the person of the deceased was held to be not sufficient to presume that the deceased was not physically and mentally fit to give statement.[78] Where two doctors examined the deceased proving her to be fit to make statement and she survived also for twelve days, her statement could not be rejected merely because of serious burn injuries on her person.[79] Where there was no medical evidence to indicate that the victim of assault was not in a position to make dying declaration and he survived for half an hour also after the assault and he knew the assailants, his giving the assailants' names to his family member at the first opportunity could be relied upon.[80]

Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Police Officer after obtaining fitness certificate from the doctor and endorsement was also obtained after recording the declaration, it could not be disbelieved merely on the ground that the Magistrate had not recorded it, more so when the same was corroborated by the doctor as well as the Magistrate.[81] Where the evidence of the doctor and the bed head ticket verified the fit condition of the patient, inability to get his sign or thumb impression was explained and there was no interpolation and the fardbeyan recorded earlier corroborated the same, merely non-inclusion of the names of certain accused persons would not vitiate the dying declaration.[82]

---

69. Findan v. State, AIR 1954 HP 11.
70. State v. Govinda Pillai, AIR 1952 Tr/Co 449.
71. Balhshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 904: 1958 SCR 409, 415.
72. AIR 1955 Tra & Co. 104.
73. State of M.P. v. Nisar Ahmad, 1997 Cr LJ 3055 (MP).
74. Vithal Sadashiv Gaikwad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2035 (para 6) (Bom).
75. State of Rajasthan v. Ganesh Das, 1995 Cr LJ 25 (paras 16 and 17) (Raj).
76. Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, 1999 Cr LJ 4055 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2571.
77. Nawab Ali Jhinnu v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 2191 (para 7) : AIR 1994 SC 1607.
78. Hans Raj v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1004 (para 25) (Raj), following Suresh v. State of M.P., 1981 Cr LJ 775 : AIR 1987 SC 860.
79. Om Prakash v. State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 138 (paras 7 and 8).
80. Prakash v. State of M.P., AIR 1993 SC 65.
81. Surinder Paul v. State of Punjab, 1997 Cr LJ 1745 (P&H).
82. Chandeshwar Singh v. State of Bihar, 1999 Cr LJ 3085 (paras 13 and 16) (Pat).

Where a headconstable recorded the statement of a gunshot victim when he was in a fit condition for the purpose of registering a case and the victim died before the services of any Magistrate could be available for recording his dying declaration, it was held that the statement recorded by the headconstable could be relied upon as dying declaration.[83] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate in the hospital in the presence of the doctor who certified as to the fitness of the deceased and the same was corroborated by the testimony of the witnesses, conviction of the accused could be made on the basis of such dying declaration.[84] Where the medical evidence showed that the deceased was in a position to speak for about 10-15 minutes of the assault on her, the view taken by the High Court regarding the deceased being not in a position to make dying declaration was not tenable.[85] Where the evidence showed that the declarant was in a fit condition to make statement and no attempt was made to cross-examine the doctor to show that she was not able to speak clearly, her declaration could not be faulted.[86] Where the doctors said that the deceased was in a fit state of mind, it could not be said that he was not in a fit state of mind merely because his general condition was poor or that the degree of burns was high.[87] Mere fact that the victim was seriously injured would not mean that he was unconscious and rule out the possibility of making a dying declaration.[88] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate who had put substantial questions regarding the circumstances leading to her death and the answers given by her indicated that she was absolutely in a fit state of mind, mere omission to mention by the doctor that she was in a fit state of mind was immaterial.[89]

Where the doctor deposed that, when the deceased was admitted to hospital he was "not in speaking condition", recording of the alleged dying declaration was disbelieved.[90] The dying declaration recorded by the Police Constable in the presence of the doctor but without obtaining any certificate from him as to her capacity to make correct statement, was held to be wholly insufficient to base conviction[91] but where the doctor deposed that the police recorded that the statement of the deceased in his presence which the police affirmed, and she was in a fit condition to make statement, it was held to be truthful and inspired

---

83. Bhagirath v. State of Haryana, 1997 Cr LJ 81 (SC) : AIR 1997 SC 234 (para 27). Also see Jai Prakash v. State of Haryana, 1999 Cr LJ 837, at p. 838 (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3361 and Paras Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1999 SC 644 : 1999 Cr LJ 1122, at pp. 8 and 9; Babu Ram v. State of Punjab, (1998) 9 SCC 495 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1043.

84. Nagulonchа Krishna v. State of A.P., 1997 Cr LJ 2834 (AP). Three dying declarations in a fit state of mind and properly recorded. Navakoti Veera Raghavulu v. State of A.P., AIR 1997 SC 727 : 1997 Cr LJ 841.

85. State of M.P. v. Dhirendra Kumar, AIR 1997 SC 318, Criminal Appeal No. 210 of 1982 decided on 18-11-1982 (MP) reversed. Contra : see State of Orissa v. Parasuram Naik, AIR 1997 SC 3569 : 1997 Cr LJ 4404.

86. Jai Prakash v. State of Haryana, 1999 Cr LJ 837, at p. 838 (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3361.

87. Rameshkumar Moraji Marwadi v. State of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 2697 (para 16) (Guj). The Court referred to Padmaben Shamalbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (1991) 1 SCC 744 (para 10) (SC). 100% superfecial burn, patient fully conscious, veracity can't be doubtful, Vithal Sadashiv Gaikwad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2035 (para 5) (Bom).

88. Rokad Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 494 (para 6) (MP). Also see Bashir Shah v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 2526 (Raj); Ram Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 2513 (para 12) (Raj). Contra : Deceased suffering a number of injuries, inability to make dying declaration inferred, Mohar Singh v. State of Rajasthan, (1998) 8 SCC 654.

89. Kodam Gangaram v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 2181 (paras 4 and 5) (AP). See also Pandian K. Nadar v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3883 (para 20) (Bom); Koli Chunilal Savji v. State of Gujarat, 1999 Cr LJ 4582 (paras 7 and 8) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3695. Contra : Paparambaka Rosamma v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4321 (para 8) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3455, reversing Cri A No. 662 of 1996, Dt. 6-3-1997 (AP).

90. Swaminathan v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2379 (para 46) (Mad). Also see Chehraji Chhagnaji Koli v. State of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 2573 (para 22) (Guj). Two dying declarations, no endorsement by the doctor about the fitness of deceased, can't be relied upon, Kishori Das v. State of W.B., 1997 Cr LJ 315 (Cal). The Court referred to Jagga Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Cal Cr LJ (SC) 18 : AIR 1995 SC 135 and Maniram v State of M.P., 1994 Cal Cri LR 118 : 1994 Cr LJ 946; Irappa v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 1806 (paras 8 and 10) (Kant); Ram Singh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 372 (Del); Sita Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 287 (Raj); Akbar Ashraf Khan v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 3575 (para 11) (Bom); State of Bihar v. Satya Narayan Mishra, 2000 Cr LJ 714 (para 16) (Pat); State of U.P. v. Dambar, 2000 Cr LJ 4690 (para 29) (All); Dhanjibhai Pethabhai v. State of Gujarat, 2001 Cr LJ 1587 (para 4) (Guj); Arvind Singh v. State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 2556 (paras 18-20) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2124; possibility of tutoring also, Gokul Singh v. State of M.P., 2000 Cr LJ 1283 (paras 12 and 13) (MP). Whether the deceased was in a medically fit condition to make dying declaration, doubtful, other discrepancies, not acceptable, Ramesh Bhagwan Manjrekar v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 796 (Bom), conviction can't be based on such dying declaration, State of Karnataka v. Shankar, 2000 Cr LJ 1917 (para 1) (Kant). Also see Rod Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1440 (MP); such evidence can't be used against accused, Kodadi Srinivasa Lingam v State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ 602 (para 21) (AP).

91. State of Karnataka v. Aslam, 2000 Cr LJ 1167 (paras 2 and 3) (Kant). See also Laxmi v. Om Prakash, 2001 Cr LJ 3302 (paras 22, 26 and 27) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2383.

confidence[1] and it was held to be truthful also where the doctor, certifying the mental state of the deceased when the police recorded the statement, was not examined where the deceased was found not only conscious but also fit to make statement.[2] Where the medical certificate only stated that the deceased was physically fit to make statement and did refer to her mental condition at the relevant time though she had been a mental patient, conviction could not be based solely on it.[3] Where neither the doctor was present when the statement was recorded nor did the Executive Magistrate recording it ascertain as to the mental condition of the patient to make statement, such a dying declaration did not inspire confidence.[4]

The certificate of the doctor as to the mental state of the declarant is not sufficient and the Magistrate himself must ascertain the declarant's mental state. In the instant case, the Magistrate failed to do so whereas the declarant was not giving coherent and consistent statements in response to his questions which also were not recorded. The dying declaration was held to be unreliable.[5] The dying declaration recorded by the Tahsildar without ascertaining from the doctor about the mental fitness of the deceased to make it and also not in question and answer form, was held to be unreliable.[6] It is not necessary that the Magistrate should put a formal direct question to the injured at the time of making the dying declaration as to the state of mind of the injured but prudence requires to take such a precaution. However, failure to do so is not fatal, moreso when the dying declaration was corroborated by medical evidence.[7]

Where 24 hours before recording the dying declaration, the declarant was certified to be unfit to make statement and evidence showed that her condition was worsening and the doctor, attesting the dying declaration did not certify that she was in a fit condition to make statement, such a document could not be relied upon.[8]

Mental and physical condition of the declarant has got to be proved by positive evidence. Mere producing a medical certificate is not sufficient. It should be substantiated by the doctor.[9]

8. "ANY CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE TRANSACTION WHICH RESULTED IN HIS DEATH"

In Pakala Narayana Swamy v. Emperor[10]; the Privy Council considered the meaning of the expression "Circumstances of the transaction" occurring in Section 32(1). LORD ATKIN observed: "Their Lordships are of opinion that the natural meaning of the word "cause" does not convey any of these limitations. The statement may be made before the cause of death had arisen or before the deceased has any reason to anticipate being killed. The circumstances must be circumstances of the transaction; general expressions indicating fear or suspicion, whether of a particular individual or otherwise, and not directly related to the occasion of the death, will not be admissible. But statements made by the deceased that he was proceeding to the spot, where he was in fact killed, or as to his reasons for so proceeding, or that he was going to meet a particular person, or that he had been invited by such person to meet him would, each of them, be circumstances of the transaction, and would be so whether the person was unknown, or was not the person accused. Such a statement might indeed be exculpatory of the person accused. 'Circumstances of the transaction' is a phrase that no doubt conveys some limitations. It is not as broad as the analogous use in 'circumstantial evidence' which includes evidence of all relevant facts. It is, on the other hand, narrower than res gestae. Circumstances must have some proximate relation to the actual occurrence; though, as far instance, in a case of prolonged poisoning, they may be related to dates at a considerable distance from the date of the actual fatal dose. It will be observed that 'the circumstances' are of the transaction which resulted in the death of the declarant. It is not necessary that there should be a known transaction, other than that by which the death of the declarant has ultimately

---

1. Ramesh v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 3780 (para 16) (Bom).
2. Shaikh Hamid Shaikh Mehtab v. The State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ NOC 23 (Bom) : (2001) 5 Bom CR 391.
3. Uka Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 1821 (paras 10 and 11) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1814, reversing 1998 Cr LJ 725 (Raj).
4. Ramesh v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 3780 (para 13) (Bom).
5. Krishna Chandra v. State, 1966 Cr LJ 1507 (paras 8, 12 and 16) (All). See also Dilip v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1911 (para 6) (Bom); Laxmi v. Om Prakash, 2001 Cr LJ 3302 (paras 1 and 28) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2383.
6. Venkappa K. Chowdari v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 15 (para 7) (Kant).
7. Mandala Bhadraiah v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1275 (para 7) (AP).
8. Fatima Kom Mastansab Nadaf v. State of Kerala, 1999 Cr LJ 1175, at p. 1177 (Kant).
9. Adevappa Nagappa Anagolkar v. State of Kerala, 1998 Cr LJ 584, at p. 586 (Kant).
10. 1939 PC 42 : 66 IA 66.

been caused, for the condition of the admissibility of the evidence is that, 'the cause of the declarant's death comes into question'. In the present case, the cause of the deceased's death comes into question. The transaction is one in which the deceased was murdered on 21st March or 22nd March, and his body was found in a trunk proved to be brought on behalf of the accused. The statement made by the deceased on 20th or 21st March that he was setting out to the place where the accused lived, and met a person, the wife of the accused, who lived in the accused's house, appears clearly to be a statement as to some of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death. The statement was rightly admitted."[11]

The words "as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death", are wide enough to include the motive of the alleged crime. The statement may be made before the cause of death has arisen, or before the deceased has any reason to anticipate being killed. The circumstances must be the circumstances of the transaction; general expressions indicating fear or suspicion, whether of a particular individual or otherwise, and not directly related to the occasion of the death, will not be admissible.[12]

The expression means only such facts or series of facts which have direct or organic relation to the death. The circumstances must have some proximate relation to the actual occurrence. Any statement made by the deceased long before the incident of murder will not be admissible.[13] Where the statement of the prosecutrix was recorded by the police 11 day after she was raped and she committed suicide after more than five and a half months, her statement, not being in the series of circumstances which resulted in her death, could not be treated as a dying declaration.[14] Where the injuries suffered by the deceased by the gunshot at the hands of the accused developed toxaemia which caused his death, it was held that the trial Court erred in holding that, as the death was not due the injuries caused by the accused, the dying declaration was inadmissible in evidence.[15]

There need not necessarily be a direct nexus between "circumstances" and "death". It is enough if the words spoken by the deceased refer to any circumstance which has connection with any of the transactions which ended up in the victim's death.[16]

Where the declaration of the deceased is also the evidence of his conduct, which supplies a very important circumstantial link in the chain of circumstances of the case, and the witnesses found it difficult to correctly reproduce the words which they heard the deceased uttering after he had been shot, all that they can be expected to say are the words very similar to the words of the deceased, and such witnesses can be relied on.[17]

Where the statement disclosed the circumstances under which the deceased was seriously injured, ultimately resulting in the death, it is admissible.[18]

Section 32 refers to two kinds of statements:—

(1) When the statement is made by a person as to the cause of his death; or

(2) When the statement is made by a person as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death.

The expression "any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death" is wider in scope than the expression "the cause of his death". The words "resulted in his death" do not mean "caused his death".[19]

Where the statement of the deceased was that while he was going to the accused to release his cow which the accused had confined, and that there was a quarrel during the course of which the deceased

---

11. See also Gokul Chandra v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 306.
12. State v. Ajit Singh, ILR (1976) 2 Punj 362 : 1975 Punj LJ (Cri) 261; Pakalanarayana Swamy v. Emperor, 1939 PC 47; Ratnakaran v. State, AIR 1955 Tra & Co. 87; Chinnavalayan v. State of Madras, (1959) 1 MLJ 246; Golaka Behari v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Cal 51; Emperor v. Faiz, AIR 1916 Lah 106; Ranjit Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 HP 81; Findan v. State, AIR 1954 HP 11; Shiv Kumar v. State of U.P., 1966 Cri App R (SC) 281.
13. Omkar v. State of M.P., 1974 Cr LJ 1200; Pakalanarayana Swamy v. Emperor, AIR 1939 PC 47.
14. Sudhakar v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 3490 (para 11) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2602.
15. Bhagirath v. State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 234 : 1997 Cr LJ 81.
16. Rattan Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1997 SC 768 (paras 13 and 15) : 1997 Cr LJ 833 (SC).
17. Premnarayan v. State, AIR 1957 All 177.
18. Dukhidevi v. State, AIR 1965 Ori 33.
19. State v. Ramprasad Singh, AIR 1953 Pat 354; Chinnavalayan v. State of Madras, (1959) 1 MLJ 246.

had sustained an injury from the accused resulting in his death, it was held to be admissible, as it related to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death[20] but where there was possibility of the accused having fired in self-defence, the dying declaration, fixing him as the sole author of the fatal injury, would not be a corroborative factor for establishing the charge of murder against him.[21]

Where a house-wife died of drowning in a well, it was held that her father's evidence that she had told him earlier that she was subjected to cruelty by her husband and in-laws, was admissible under Section 32.[22] Where the alleged statement was made to the witnesses, some months prior to the murder, about the intention of the deceased to conceal a will and disinherit the accused, (but the statement was not made in the presence of the accused) and the prosecution wanted to rely on it for the motive aspect of the accused, it was held that, as the statement did not relate to the cause of the death or as to the circumstances resulting in his death, it was inadmissible.[23]

Where it was alleged that the accused had attempted to seduce a girl who had waited her mother to come back by night when her mother left for another village, as the accused had attempted to have sexual intercourse on a previous occasion, it was held that such statement of the girl was inadmissible as it did not relate the circumstances under which the girl met with her death.[24] Where the injury allegedly caused by the husband to his wife was not shown to have proximate connection with her death, the evidence of the relatives of the deceased-wife made on behalf of her dying declaration was held to be hearsay and not relevant under this section.[25]

When motive was tried to be inferred by the prosecution from the statement made by the deceased, it was held that such statement was not admissible, since general expressions indicating suspicion or fear, not directly related to the cause of death, are not admissible.[26]

The Bombay High Court has held that the wide words used in the clause show that it is intended to cover statements other than 'dying declarations'. The words 'as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death' cover also other statements made by a deceased person.[27]

A brief statement ("save me, a person has stabbed me") made to relatives half an hour before death, was followed by a detailed version in the presence of the medical officer; the Supreme Court attached value to the statement.[28]

Where, in a dying declaration, the deceased stated that the accused had assaulted him "on account of enmity caused by my acting as a wizard", it was held that the statement made by the deceased was a statement "as to the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death", so as to be admissible under this clause.[29]

9. PROXIMITY BETWEEN TIME OF STATEMENT AND DEATH

The problem of proximity was for the first time raised before the Supreme Court in Sharad v. Maharashtra[30]. A married woman had been writing to her parents and other relative about her critical condition at the hands of her in-laws. She lost her life some four months later. Her letters were sought to be proved as a dying declaration. The court held that the statements were not so remote in time as to lose their proximity with the cause of death. FAZAL ALI J. conducted a vast survey of authorities and stated the following propositions:

---

20. Sathischandra Saha v. State, AIR 1954 Cal 379.
21. Harish Kumar v. State of M.P., 1996 Cr LJ 3511 (para 20) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 3433, reversing Cri A No. 533 of 1983, Dt. 25-8-1986 (MP).
22. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 1830 : 1997 Cr LJ 1640.
23. Venkatasubba Reddy v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Mad 689.
24. Venkata Gadu v. Emperor, 1938 Mad Cr C 58.
25. Imran Khan v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 17 (paras 20 and 22) (MP).
26. In re : Baggam Appalanarasaiah, AIR 1941 Mad 101; Public Prosecutor v. Munigan, AIR 1941 Mad 359.
27. Shivabhai v. Emperor, (1926) 50 Bom 683, 28 Bom LR 1013; Autar Singh v. The Crown, (1923) 4 Lah 451, which lays down that this clause covers only 'dying declarations', is not correctly decided, and is dissented from in Inayat Khan v. The Crown, (1934) 16 Lah 589; Tahal Singh v. Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1347.
28. Habib Usaman v. Gujarat, AIR 1979 SC 1181; Jayaraj v. Tamil Nadu, AIR 1976 SC 1519.
29. King-Emperor v. Somra Bhuian, (1937) 16 Pat 593.
30. AIR 1984 SC 1622. Also see Najjam Faraghi v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1998 SC 682 (para 9) : 1998 Cr LJ 866.

1. A declaration will be relevant whether death is homicide or suicide, provided it relates to the cause of death or exhibits circumstances leading to death.

2. The test of proximity cannot be literally issued and practically reduced to a cut and dried formula of universal application. Distance of time would depend on or vary with the circumstances of each case. For example, where death is a logical consequence of a continuous drama long in process and in a way a finale to the story, the statement regarding each step directly connected with the end of the drama would be admissible because the entire statement would have to be read as an organic whole and not torn from the context. Where death takes place within a short time of the marriage, or the distance of time is not spread over more than three to four months, the statement may be admissible.

The Supreme Court held that there were two possibilities namely it may be a case of suicide or murder. The expression "cause of death" applies to both. Where there are two possibilities open, the accused is entitled to benefit of doubt and could not be convicted on the statement amounting to dying declaration.[31]

There must be some proximate relation to the occurrence, if a statement is to be admitted as a dying declaration. General expressions indicating fear or suspicion not directly to the occasion of death are not admissible.[32]

Statement soon after the incident in which a person received injuries was held admissible, where medical evidence showed that the injuries were at least contributory cause of his death.[33]

For a statement to be attracted under Section 32(1), it is not necessary that the death should have a nexus in terms of fixed time, with the statement, nor that the victim who made the statement should essentially be in apprehension of immediate death. The conditions are that the statement should relate to the circumstances surrounding the event which ultimately led to death. There should be nexus between the circumstances stated by the victim and his death. In the instant case, the victim made two dying declarations to independent persons and died three months after the incident of firing due to toxaemia, still the declarations were held to be admissible.[34]

In a decision of the Supreme Court JUSTICE MOHAN summed up the principles governing dying declaration as decided by the decisions of the Supreme Court as follows:[35]

(i) There is neither rule of law nor of prudence that dying declaration cannot be acted upon without corroboration.[36]

(ii) If the court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and voluntary it can base conviction on it, without corroboration.[37]

(iii) The court has to scrutinise the dying declaration carefully and must ensure that the declaration is not the result of tutoring, prompting or imagination. The deceased had opportunity to observe and identify the assailants and was in a fit state to make the declaration.[38]

(iv) Where dying declaration is suspicious it should not be acted upon without corroborative evidence.[39]

(v) Where the deceased was unconscious and could never make any dying declaration, the evidence with regard to it is to be rejected.[40]

---

31. See for a discussion of this case 1984 (20) ASIL pages 103 to 107.
32. Shiv Kumar v. State of U.P., 1966 Cr App R (SC) 281.
33. Jageshwar Singh v. State of Bihar, 1968 Cr App R (SC) 73. Also see Sooraj v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 1155 (para 12) (Ker).
34. Vijay Singh v. State of M.P., 2000 Cr LJ 650 (paras 19A and 20) (MP).
35. Pamben v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 1817 : 1992 Cr LJ 2919 : (1992) 2 An WR (SC) 60 at pages 64 and 65. Followed in Surjeet Kaur v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1886 (para 7) (MP) and Vithal Sadashiv Gaikwad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2035 (para 15) (Bom).
36. Munnu Raja v. State of U.P., (1976) 2 SCR 764 : AIR 1976 SC 2199.
37. State of U.P. v. Ram Sagar Yadav, AIR 1985 SC 416; Ramavati Devi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 164.
38. Rama Chandra Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, AIR 1976 SC 1994.
39. Rasheed Beg v. State of Madhya Pradesh, (1974) 4 SCC 264 : AIR 1974 SC 332.
40. Kake Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1982 SC 1021.

(vi) A dying declaration which suffers from infirmity cannot form the basis of conviction.[41]

(vii) Merely because a dying declaration does not contain the details as to the occurrence, it is not to be rejected.[42]

(viii) Equally, merely because it is a brief statement, it is not to be discarded. On the contrary, the shortness of the statement itself guarantees truth.[43]

(ix) Normally the court in order to satisfy whether deceased was in a fit mental condition to make the dying declaration has to look to the medical opinion. But where the eye-witness has said that the deceased was in a fit and conscious state to make this dying declaration, the medical opinion cannot prevail.[44]

(x) Where the prosecution version differs from the version as given in the dying declaration, the said declaration cannot be acted upon."[45]

The principle "memo moriturus proesumitur mentiri" (a dying person would not normally tell a lie) which governs the credibility of dying declaration, does require serious examination.[46]

10. DELAY IN RECORDING DYING DECLARATION

Where delay in recording the dying declaration was explained by the prosecution, it was admissible.[47] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate five hours after the incident, it was held to be no inordinate delay and, as there was no possibility of tutoring, the dying declaration was to not vitiated.[48]

11. PROCEDURE OF RECORDING DYING DECLARATION

Where there was no certification by the scribe of the dying declaration that whatever he had scribed was the correct statement of the deceased, the doctor had made no certification that the deceased was in a fit state to give statement, no attempt was made to get the statement recorded by a Magistrate, it was not recorded in the language of the deceased, the manner of recording was also doubtful, it was recorded in violation of Police Rules and the senior doctor though present was not taken into confidence by the police before recording the statement, such a dying declaration could not be relied upon to sustain conviction.[49] Ordinarily, whenever an injured person is in precarious condition, the investigating officer should requisition the services of a Magistrate for recording the dying declaration. In fact, the investigating officers are naturally interested in the success of investigation and the practice of investigating officer himself recording a dying declaration during the course of investigation ought not to be encouraged.[50] Where the Magistrate took all the necessary precautions before recording the dying declaration and the same was corroborated with the evidence of the other prosecution witnesses, the fact that the deceased had sustained 90% burns was no ground to doubt her testimony.[51] Where the Magistrate, though obtained a certificate from the doctor as to the deceased being in a fit state of mind to make statement before and after recording her statement, asked her no question as to whether she was in a fit condition of mind to make statement, the statement so recorded could not be discarded merely for such failure.[52] On the other hand where the Spl. Executive Magistrate had satisfied himself that the

---

41. Ram Manorath v. State of U.P., 1981 SCC 581 (Cr).
42. State of Maharashtra v. Krishnamurthi Laxmipati Naidu, AIR 1981 SC 617.
43. Surajdeo Oza v. State of Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1505.
44. Nanahau Ram v. State, AIR 1988 SC 912.
45. State of U.P. v. Madan Mohan, AIR 1989 SC 1519.
46. Vithal Sadashiv Gaikwad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2035 (para 16) (Bom).
47. G S Walia v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 2524 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 1998 SC 2857.
48. Koli Chunilal Savji v. State of Gujarat, 1999 Cr LJ 4582 (para 8) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3695.
49. Rajendra Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 2126. Dying declaration recorded in violation of Rajasthan Police Rules, unreliable, Kalawati v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 691 (paras 26 and 27) (Raj). Also see Bashir Shah v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 2526 (para 28) (Raj). Dying declaration not recorded as per Punjab Police Rules, uncorroborated, benfefit of doubt, State of H.P. v. Rakesh Kumar, 1999 Cr LJ 564, at p 575 (HP). Contra : Raj Kumar v. State of Punjab, 2000 Cr LJ 3218 (paras 22, 23 and 29) (P&H).
50. Munnu Raja v. State of M.P., AIR 1976 SC 2199 : 1976 Cr LJ 1718.
51. Kodam Gangaram v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 2181 (para 6) (AP). See also Ramphal v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ NOC 54 (Raj) : (2001) 1 Raj Cri C 55.
52. G.R. Ghyare v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3414 (para 7) (SC).

declarant was in a perfectly fit condition to make statement which was supported by the Police Officer, it was held to be not vitiated by interpolations or apparent inconsistencies and be relied upon inspite of the absence of the doctor's fitness certificate.[53] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate but it was neither signed by deceased nor contained date and time of its recording and no explanation was given that the declarant was not in a position to sign, order of acquittal was held to be proper.[54] Only intimations about the injuries and the incident to the concerned Magistrate and the police without taking any required precautions cannot be treated as dying declarations.[55] Generally dying declaration ought to be recorded in question answer form but if it is not elaborate and consists of only a few sentences and is in the actual words of the maker, the mere fact that is not in question answer form cannot be a ground against its acceptability or reliability.[56] Dying declaration should preferably be in question and answer form, but the same is not laid down as a universal rule.[57]

12. PROOF OF DYING DECLARATION

A dying declaration may be written or oral. It may be proved by the evidence of a witness who heard it being made. It cannot be treated as a deposition unless made in the presence of the accused and before a Magistrate[58] but once the defence admits the document, no formal proof is necessary and it can be read in evidence for all purposes though its author is not examined before the Court.[59] It was held that the written record of a dying declaration, not taken down in the presence of the accused, is admissible when it is proved by a witness that the statements contained therein were, in his presence recorded by a Magistrate, and read over to the deceased who admitted their correctness.[60] Where each and every sentence of the maker was translated by the S.D.M., there was no need of dying declaration so recorded to recount it before its maker and ask for its correctness.[61]

Where the declarant mentioned the name of the accused in the presence of the doctor who gave him preliminary treatment and the doctor's evidence was found to be very clear and unshaken in any manner in the cross-examination, the dying declaration was held to be reliable.[62]

The dying declaration was considered to be unreliable where the declarant was resting while he was assaulted and the other deceased was at a distance of three furlongs from him, besides the witnesses to whom the dying declaration was alleged to have been made, categorically denied the same, it was held that no dying declaration was made.[63]

If original dying declaration is proved to have been lost, prosecution is entitled to give secondary evidence.[64]

When a dying declaration is recorded by a Magistrate, who is not a committing Magistrate, it must be proved by calling the Magistrate as a witness.[65] The writing cannot be admitted to prove the statement made. It may be used to refresh the witness' memory.[66] Where two interpretations of the statement recorded as a dying declaration were possible, the Supreme Court did not interfere with the meaning put by the High Court.[67] A dying declaration is not the proof of the truth of its contents but only of the fact

---

53. Pandian K. Nadar v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3883 (para 19) (Bom).
54. State of U.P. v. Shishupal Singh, 1994 Cr LJ 617 : AIR 1994 SC 129. Contra : Ajay Kumar v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC 238 (MP).
55. Vakati Lavakishore v. State of A.P., 1997 Cr LJ 285 (AP).
56. Ram Bihari Yadava v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1850 : 1998 Cr LJ 2515 (para 9).
57. Rabi Chandra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 1738 : 1980 Cr LJ 1257. Also see State of Rajasthan v. Bhup Singh, (1997) 10 SCC 675 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 1032; Syed Shaik Shavali v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ NOC (AP) : (1993) 2 All Cri LR 301; Surjeet Kaur v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1886 (para 11) (MP).
58. In the matter of the petition of Samiruddin, (1881) 8 Cal 211; followed in Saratchandra Kar v. Emperor, (1924) 52 Cal 446; See however, Abdul Jalil v. The Empress, (1886) PR No. 13 of 1886 (Cr).
59. Kodadi Srinivasa Lingam v. State of A.P., 2001 Cr LJ 602 (para 19) (AP).
60. Emperor v. Balaram Das, (1921) 49 Cal 358.
61. Ram Dhar v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 292 (Del).
62. Nisar Ahmad Fajmohmed Kaji v. State of Gujarat, (1998) 9 SCC 23 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 967.
63. State of Karnataka v. Narayan Babu Sanadi, AIR 1999 SC 848 (para 4) : 1999 Cr LJ 589.
64. Aher Rama Gova v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1979 SC 1567.
65. Reg v. Fata Adaji, (1874) 11 BHE 247, 248; contra. Karuppan Samban, (1915) 31 IC 359, 16 Cr LJ 759.
66. Krishnama Naicken, In re : (1930) 54 Mad 678.
67. Vithal Somenath Kore v. Maharashtra, AIR 1978 SC 519; State of H.P. v. Wazir Ad., AIR 1978 SC 315.

stated.[68] If it is truthful it can be the sole basis of conviction.[69] When it is not properly proved, it cannot be used to corroborate other evidence.[70]

The statement made by a deceased person as to the cause of his death, or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, is admissible in evidence, notwithstanding the fact that there is no record of the questions put to the deceased and the answers given by the deceased in his own words to each of those questions. Whether that statement should be acted upon, whether that statement has evidential value, whether that statement is reliable, these are all considerations which do not go to the question of admissibility but to probative value.[71]

Where the only serious injury was in the abdomen not sufficient to make a person unconscious, a statement made within one hour of the assault was accepted as a dying declaration.[72]

The first information report is admissible as substantive evidence when the maker died before the matter came before the court.[73]

The first information report is recorded by a police officer who may also be the investigating officer. Since F.I.R. is not a confession, the police officer is not disqualified from giving evidence. Even so, the Supreme Court has pointed out that, as a matter of caution, the practice of dying declarations being recorded by the investigating officer himself should not be encouraged.[74] Where a declaration was recorded by the investigating officer alone without anybody's signature upon it and without specifying the time, the Supreme Court rejected it.[75]

No particular procedure has been prescribed by any provision of law, for recording such a declaration and it is also not necessary to give any warning before a dying declaration is recorded. Even a layman is competent to record a dying declaration and prove the same in the usual manner, like other facts and documents. When a Magistrate who is not specially empowered to record statements under Section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, takes down a statement which subsequently turns out to be a dying declaration, there is nothing in law to prohibit the Magistrate from proving in the ordinary manner the statement made to him by the deceased person.[76]

A statement recorded by a doctor alone cannot be rejected particularly where the life was fast ebbing and there was no time to call a police officer or a Magistrate.[77]

Where the Magistrate stated that he had dictated the statement of the deceased to the Police Officer who denied the recording of the statement, it was held that the recording of the dying declaration was not proved.[78]

13. CORROBORATION

A conviction based upon an uncorroborated dying declaration is legal.[79]

There is neither any rule of law nor of prudence that a dying declaration requires to be corroborated by other evidence.[80] Where the dying declaration was true and reliable, corroboration was not necessary.[81]

---

68. Abhimanya Biswas v. Abdul, AIR 1981 Cal 444.
69. State of Assam v. M. Ahmed, AIR 1983 SC 274.
70. Banka Naiko v. Orissa, AIR 1976 SC 2013.
71. State v. Parsottam Bhikhabai, (1957) 60 Bom LR 153 (FB).
72. Suraj Deo v. State of Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1505.
73. Lalaram, (1953) MB 343.
74. Dalip Singh v. Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1173; Munna Raja v. M.P., AIR 1976 SC 2199; Ramawati v. Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 274; K. Ramachandran v. Public Prosecutor, AIR 1976 SC 1994.
75. State (Delhi Admn.) v. Laxman Kumar, AIR 1986 SC 250.
76. State v. Ouseph, (1955) TC 39.
77. A.M.A. Rehman v. Gujarat, AIR 1976 SC 1782.
78. Gulam Hussain v. State of Delhi, 2000 Cr LJ 3949 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2480.
79. Emperor v. Kunwarpal Singh, (1948) All 122; State v. Kanchan Singh, (1955) 1 All 642; Ulahannan v. State, 1954 TC 1308; Lumba v. State, (1952) 2 Raj 298; Kori v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 50.
80. Harbans Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 439; Amba Shanker Dave v. State of Rajasthan, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 541; Tapinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1970 SC 1566; Tara Chand Sutar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1962 SC 130 : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 196; Gopa Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 2987 (Raj).
81. S.K. Katkar v. State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 3579 (para 15) (Bom). See also Gopali Devi v. State (Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ NOC 158 (Del) : (2001) 89 DLT 9.

Corroboration would not always be necessary if the dying declaration is complete in its accusation, and there is nothing to show that the maker of the statement had anything further to add. Where the dying declaration of the deceased, recorded at a police station, was a complete statement but, on account of the sudden collapse of the deceased, his thumb impression to the statement was taken only after his death, it was held that the declaration was admissible without corroboration.[82] Corroboration for dying declaration becomes necessary only when it suffers from any infirmity.[83]

The Supreme Court has held that

1. it could not be laid down as an absolute rule of law or even as a rule of prudence which has ripened into a rule of law, that a dying declaration cannot form the sole basis of conviction unless it is corroborated.
2. each case must be determined on its own facts keeping in view the circumstances in which the dying declaration was made.
3. it cannot be laid down as a general proposition that a dying declaration is a weaker kind of evidence than other pieces of evidence.
4. a dying declaration stands on the same footing as any other piece of evidence and has to be judged in the light of surrounding circumstances and with reference to the principles governing the weighing of evidence.
5. a dying declaration recorded by a competent Magistrate in a proper manner in the form of questions and answers and in the words of the maker as far as practicable-stands on a much higher footing than a dying declaration which depends on oral testimony which may suffer from all the infirmities of human memory and character.
6. it order to test the reliability of a dying declaration, the Court has to keep in view, the circumstances like the opportunity of the dying man for observation, (e.g.), whether there was sufficient light if the crime was committed at night, whether the capacity of the man to remember the facts stated had not been impaired at the time of making the statement; that the statement has been consistent throughout if he had several opportunities of making dying declaration apart from the official record of it; and that the statement had been made at the earliest opportunity and was not the result of tutoring by interested parties.[84]

A dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate can be the foundation of conviction.[85]

While great solemnity and sanctity is attached to the words of a dying man, because a person on the verge of the death is not likely to tell lies or to concoct a case so as to implicate an innocent person, yet the court has to be on guard against the statement of the deceased being a result of either tutoring, prompting or a product of his imagination. The court must be satisfied that the deceased was in a fit state of mind to make the statement, after the deceased had a clear opportunity to observe and identify his assailants, and he was making the statement without any influence or rancour. Once the court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and voluntary, it can be sufficient to found the conviction even without any further corroboration. In order to test the reliability of a dying declaration, the court has to keep in view the circumstances like the opportunity of the dying man for observation, e.g., whether there was sufficient light, the crime was committed at night; whether the capacity of the man to remember the facts stated had not been impaired at the time he was making the statement by circumstances beyond his control; the statement has been consistent throughout if he had several opportunities of making a dying declaration apart from the official record of it; and the statement had been made at the earliest opportunity and was not the result of tutoring by interested parties.[86]

---

82. Muniappan v. State of Madras, AIR 1962 SC 1252.

83. State of Maharashtra v. Mehtabi, (1998) 8 SCC 618 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1085.

84. Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, (1958) SCR 552 : AIR 1958 SC 22. Also see Baijnath v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1691 (All), dying declaration cannot be placed in the same category as evidence of an accomplice or a confession.

85. Hanumappa Bhimppa Huklannavar v. State of Mysore, 1966 CAR 381; Surinder Kumar v. State of Haryana, AIR 1992 SC 2037. When there is no infirmity in recording it and it inspires confidence.

86. K R Reddy v. Public Prosecutor, AIR 1976 SC 1994; Pretam Singh v. State of U.P., 1985 Cr LJ 10; Kore v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 509; Sathyanarayan v. State, 1977 Cr LJ 1626; 1975 Cr LJ 285 : Siddaiah v. State of Karnataka, ILR 1975 Kant 355; Rajaram v. State of U.P., 1978 Cr LJ 196; Sudhirkumar Shukla v. State, 1990 Cr LJ 119, Ramkumar v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 Raj 60; Vinayaka Datta v. State, AIR 1970 Goa 96; Lumba v. State, AIR 1952 Raj 155; Sumer Singh v. State, (1982) 2 Cr LJ 672; Kumaran v. State, 1958 Ker LT 1055, Kunhooty v. State, AIR 1960 Ker 120, Kori v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 509; In Bagepalli Chengappa, AIR 1958 AP 203; State of Karnataka v. Bapu

If the accused was not the real assailant, it is unlikely that a father would, in his dying moment, try falsely to implicate his own son; that this circumstance is a sufficient guarantee of the truth of the dying declaration made by the deceased; if the truthfulness of a dying declaration is accepted, it can always form the basis of the conviction of the accused.[87]

Although a dying declaration should be carefully scrutinised, if the court is satisfied that the dying declaration is true and is free from any effort to prompt the deceased to make a statement, and it is coherent and consistent, there is no legal impediment to founding the conviction on such a dying declaration even if there is no corroboration.[88]

The contrary view expressed in Ramnath Madhoprasad v. State of M.P.[89] must be taken not to have been accepted by the subsequent cases of the Supreme Court.[90]

This case is discussed at page 59 of 1985 (21) A.S.I.L. 59. The commentator points out that the test suggested by the Supreme Court can only be with respect to the question whether the deceased made the statement or whether it is a fabrication. He submits that with regard to the question whether the persons named as culprits in the declaration were really responsible for the death of the declarant, the court should always seek corroboration except in rare cases. He cites the following observations of SIR JAMES STEPHEN in his HISTORY OF CRIMINAL LAW.

In 1985 Annual Survey of Indian Law, pages: 59 & 60 it is observed: "In State of U.P. v. Ram Sagar Yadav[91], the Supreme Court pointed out a practical approach to the question of corroboration of a dying declaration. The primary effort of the court is to find out whether the dying declaration is true. If it is so no question of corroboration arises. It is only if the circumstances surrounding the dying declaration are not clear or convincing that the court may, for its assurance, look for corroboration of the dying declaration."

It is submitted that with respect to dying declarations there are two questions, (i) whether the deceased really made the statement or it was a fabrication and (ii) whether the persons named in the dying declaration as the culprits really were responsible for the death of the declarant. The test suggested above is only with respect to the first question. As regards the second except in rare cases the court always looks for corroboration. It is well to remember the warning administered by SIR JAMES STEPHEN himself in his HISTORY OF CRIMINAL LAW (HISTORY OF CRIMINAL LAW IN ENGLAND, Vol. I).

> "The rule (regarding dying declarations) is in many ways remarkable. It has worked, I am informed, ill in India, into which it has been introduced with many other parts of the English law of evidence. I have heard that in the Punjab the effect of it is that a person mortally wounded frequently makes a statement bringing all his hereditary enemies on to the scene at the time of his receiving the wound, thus using his last opportunity to do them an injury. A remark made on the policy of the rule by a native of Madras shows how differently such matters are viewed in different parts of the world.

Pujari, ILR 1985 Kant 2257; Nathu Singh v. State of U.P., 1985 All LJ 831; Venkatakrishnaiah v. State, (1985) 1 An WR 354; State of Gujarat v. Bai Kokila Janakray, (1984) 3 Crimes 26; Kahnu Majhi v. State of Orissa, (1984) 2 Crimes 137; State of U.P. v. Ramsagar Yadav, AIR 1985 SC 416; Nilamani Bhahuru v. State, ILR 1964 Cut 841; Tirukanni Pampayya v. State of Mysore, AIR 1965 SC 939.

87. Vithal Somnath More v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1978 SC 519; Jaswant Singh v. State (Delhi Adm.), AIR 1979 SC 190.

88. Kusa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 559; Munna Raja v. State of M.P., AIR 1976 SC 2199; Baina Pali Enkana v. State, (1975) 41 Cut LT 1371; Manik Malakar v. State of Assam, 1976 Cr LJ 1921; Balkense v. State of Rajasthan, 1976 Cr LJ 828; Kushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 11; Tarachand v. State, AIR 1962 SC 130; State of Rajasthan v. Mangilal, 1981 Cr LJ 852; Md. Axizeezuddin v. State of A.P., 1985 Cr LJ 336; Asa Tharagil v. State of Kerala, 1981 Cr LJ 1165; State of Orissa v. Pitabasnaik, 1982 Cr LJ 1163; State of Assam v. Mafizuddin Ahamed, AIR 1983 SC 274; State of Punjab v. Savitridevi, AIR 1983 Punj & Har 305 (FB); Budhia Singh v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 1020; Thippaswamy v. State of Karnataka, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 211 : 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 301; Lallubhai Devchand Shah v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1972 SC 1776; In re : Guruswamy, ILR 1940 Mad 138 (FB); Kursind v. The Crown, ILR 1942 (23) Lah 619.

89. AIR 1953 SC 420.

90. ILR (1979) 2 Del 118 : Ashok Kumar v. State, 1979 Cr LJ 1477; ILR (1977) 2 Kant 1276 : Bomma v. State of Karnataka, 1979 Cr LJ (NOC) 229; Thurukanni Pompaiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1965 SC 939; In re : Narayana Swamy, 1973 Cr LJ 1295; Venkata Krishnaiah v. State, (1985) 1 An WR 354; State of U.P. v. Ramsagar Yadav, AIR 1985 SC 416.

91. AIR 1985 SC 416. Also see Kishan Bahadur v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1418 (para 6) (AP); Shanti Behal v. State (Delhi Admn.), 1994 Cr LJ 2043 (Del).

'Such evidence' he said, 'ought never to be admitted in any case': What motive for telling the truth can any man possibly have when he is at the point of death (Id. at 448-49)."

Where the deceased in his dying declaration, attributed all the injuries sustained by him to a particular weapon other than the one alleged to have been used by the accused, and there was no mention in it of any other weapon having been used by the accused, it was held that conviction could not be based solely on such dying declaration.[1]

Where there was clear discrepancy between the names of the accused mentioned in the dying declaration and those mentioned by the witnesses, it is unsafe to place complete trust on the dying declaration.[2] Dying declaration, not corroborated in material particulars by independent witnesses cannot be relied upon.[3]

The mere fact that the accused person named in the dying declaration is absconding cannot be taken as corroboration. A flaw in the dying declaration cannot be made up by seeking corroboration from the fact of absconding.[4]

14. RELEVANCY AND ADMISSIBILITY

A dying declaration made by a person who is dead as to the cause of his death or as to any of the circumstances of the transaction which resulted in his death, in cases in which cause of his death comes in question, is relevant under Section 32 and is also admissible in evidence. Though dying declaration is indirect evidence being a specie of hearsay, yet it is an exception to the rule against admissibility of hearsay evidence. Indeed, it is substantive evidence and like any other substantive evidence requires no corroboration for forming basis of conviction of an accused. But then the question as to how much weight can be attached to a dying declaration is a question of fact and has to be determined on the facts of each case.[5] Where the dying declaration of the deceased with 100% burns was recorded by the Investigating Officer in the presence of the doctor and a witness in view of imminent likelihood of her death, when she was in good state of mind, the same, though uncorroborated and not recorded by a Magistrate, was held admissible and sufficient to base conviction.[6] Where the deceased stated in the dying declarations that the accused molested her and after such incident she immolated herself, the dying declaration was a relevant fact and was admissible in evidence. The "death" may be suicidal or homicidal.[7] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate in the very words of the deceased, no interested person was present there and the Magistrate and the doctor deposed that the deceased was fully conscious and in a fit condition to speak which was certified by the doctor and the deceased affixed her thumb impression thereon, it being short, recorded straight forward and not in question-answer form and mere presence of her a few friends and relatives would not render it inadmissible.[8] Dying declaration would not be inadmissible merely because it was not recorded by the Magistrate.[9] The statements of the deceased regarding being subjected to cruelty and harassment and demand of dowry, made earlier by her to her father, real sister and to neighbours of her sister, were held to be admissible under Section 32.[10]

Where the dying declaration was recorded by a police official, the original of which was not found on the record and the official who recorded it was not examined, it was held to be inadmissible. Entry in case diary as to the said original dying declaration could not be taken as evidence.[11] Where the dying declaration stated that the accused had caused injuries to the deceased, the medical report stated that the

---

1. Md. Ekramul v. State of Bihar, AIR 1973 SC 1395.
2. Deorao v. State of Maharashtra, (1968) 2 SCWR 94.
3. Sagir Khan v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 1705, 1712 (Raj).
4. Hanumappa v. State of Mysore, 1966 Cr App R (SC) 381.
5. Ram Bihari Yadava v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1850 : 1998 Cr LJ 2515 (para 6).
6. Balbir Singh v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 1079 (J&K).
7. Deepak v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 767 (MP).
8. Sant Gopal v. State of U.P., 1995 Cr LJ 312 (All).
9. M.S. Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 689 (para 17) (AP).
10. Chandrawati v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 975 (paras 44-46) (Del). The Court referred to Sharad Birdhichand Sarda v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1622 : 1984 Cr LJ 1738 and Wazirchand v. State of Haryana, AIR 1989 SC 378 : 1989 Cr LJ 809.
11. Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1850 : 1998 Cr LJ 2515 (para 7) cause of his death was non-healing of the wound on his thigh and there was no evidence regarding any thigh injury caused by the accused, the dying declaration was held to be inadmissible in evidence.[12]

15. WEIGHT TO BE ATTACHED

The maxim is : "A man will not meet his Maker with a lie in his mouth." A dying declaration made by the victim in a fit mental condition and on the verge of death has a special sanctity; at the solemn moment, a person is most unlikely to make an untrue statement, the shadow of impending death is itself the guarantee of the truth of his declaration as to the causes or circumstances leading to his death; a dying declaration is almost sacrosanct.[13]

In order to test the reliability of a dying declaration, the court has to keep in view the circumstances like the opportunity which a person on the point of death had for observation, whether his capacity to remember the facts stated by him, had not been impaired at the time he was making the statement, that the statement was made at the earliest opportunity, and was not the result of tutoring by interested parties. The dying declaration stands on the same footing as any other piece of evidence and has to be judged in the light of surrounding circumstances and with reference to the principles governing the weight to be attached to evidence.[14]

It was however held in State v. Motilal[15] that a dying declaration cannot be contradicted by extraneous evidence of witnesses and it has to stand by itself or not at all. It is difficult to reconcile this decision with Kushal Rao's case and other decisions of the Supreme Court.

Where a dying declaration is amply corroborated, not only by the eye-witnesses but also by the circumstantial evidence and by the medical evidence regarding the situs of the injuries, the dying declaration is to be accepted.[16]

Where death of the deceased had occurred due to multiple injuries and he failed to explain the contusion found in the lower part of his chest in his dying declaration, it was held to be no ground to discredit it as the contusion was not of a serious nature.[17] Where in a murder case the sequence of injuries stated in the dying declaration was the same as that of the injury report, it could not be said that the dying declaration was prepared with the connivance of the doctor.[18]

Where there was no inconsistency in the evidence, regarding the oral dying declaration, conviction based on the dying declaration is unassailable[19] and the same will be the consequence of voluntary and

---

12. Laba Behera v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 244 (Ori), relying on 1964 (1) Cr LJ 727 (SC).
13. Arjun Kushwah v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 2538 (para 9) (MP). See also Uka Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 1821 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1814.
14. Kushal Rao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22 : 1958 Cr LJ 106; approving the decision of the Full Bench of the Madras High Court rendered by SIR LIONEL LEACH C.J., In re : Guruswamy Tewar, AIR 1940 Mad 196 (FB). Also see Kalawati v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 691 (paras 29 and 30) (Raj).
15. AIR 1968 All 83.
16. Ghuphekan v. State of U.P., AIR 1972 SC 1172. Dying declaration corroborated, no fitness certificate and not being in question and answer form inconsequential, accepted as genuine and true, Jai Prakash v. State of Haryana, (1998) 7 SCC 284 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1581; Pradeep Kumar v. State of H.P., 2001 Cr LJ 1517 (paras 28, 29, 33 and 34) (HP), distinguishing State of Gujarat v. Mohan Bhai Raghbhai Patel, 1990 Cr LJ 1462 : AIR 1990 SC 1379.
17. Baijnath v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1691 (All). Dying declarations recorded by the Police Officer, Magistrate and Medical Officer consistent and corroborated with each other, no motive to implicate the accused-husband falsely, testimony of interested witness unnatural and unreliable, conviction on the basis of such dying declarations proper, Prakash v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 668 (Raj), distinguishing Mohar Singh v. State of Punjab, 1981 Cr LJ 998 : AIR 1981 SC 1578 and Chameli v. State of Rajasthan, 1987 Raj Cri C 154. The Court referred to Betal Singh v. State of M.P., (1996) 4 SCC 203 and Charipalli Shankarrao v. Public Prosecutor, High Court of A.P., 1995 Supp (4) SCC 24 : AIR 1995 SC 777. Dying declarations consistent, conduct of accused prior and subsequent to occurrence unnatural, conviction proper, Rajendra Kumar v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1120 (All). Also see Rawel Singh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 1195 (Del); Kumbhar Dhirajlal Mohanlal v. State of Gujarat, 1997 Cr LJ 769 (SC) : AIR 1997 SC 1531. Two dying declaration natural, consistent and reliable, corroborated by evidence of eye-witnesses and expert evidence, conviction proper, Batto v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 1201 (Del). Certain facts mentioned in F.I.R. lodged by informant omitted in dying declaration, no ground to discredit it, Baijnath v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1691 (All).
18. Baijnath v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1691 (All). Dying declaration corroborated by medical evidence and other evidence, admissible, absence of motive and non-examination of one witness immaterial, Meharban v. State of M.P., 1997 Cr LJ 766 (SC) : AIR 1997 SC 1528 (para 7).
19. Appu v. State of Kerala, 1990 Cr LJ 36 (Ker).

consistent statements reduced in writing, corroborated by independent witness and presence of motive of the crime.[20]

A dying declaration cannot be ignored when crucial facts are found in it, merely on the ground that it does not include any statement as to how the accused had received the injuries. The crux of the whole matter is as to who had stabbed the deceased and why, and if the answer is found in the dying declaration, it has to be accepted.[21] Where the evidence of the eye-witnesses and other corroborative evidence established the guilt of the accused persons, the dying declaration could not be discarded merely because it had discrepancy as to the number of persons participating in the commission of crime.[22]

When the deponent, while making the dying declaration, was in severe bodily pain, his natural impulse would be to tell the Magistrate without wasting his breath on the details, as to who had stabbed him. The very brevity of the dying declaration in the circumstances of the case, far from being a suspicious circumstance, is an index of its being true and more so when the substratum of the dying declaration is fully consistent with the ocular account given by the witnesses.[23]

If the fact of the declaration is established, and it also gives the name of the assailant and the witnesses, its brevity does not matter.[24] Otherwise reliable dying declaration cannot be thrown merely because there was overwriting in it to make the originally written blurred names clear.[25] Where the dying declaration gave details of the role played by the accused and the presence of the prosecution witnesses, the same could not be discarded.[26]

Where a person gave a dying declaration a short time before his death while he was lying in a precarious condition shortly after the assault, such a dying declaration could not be discarded merely on the ground that it did not give a precise description of all the ingredients of the offence and of the manner in which the injuries were inflicted.[27] Great weight must naturally and necessarily be attached to a dying declaration recorded very shortly after the occurrence. Merely because some friends and relatives happened to be with the deceased before the statement was recorded, the statement cannot be thrown out as a tutored one.[28]

The mere fact that in a dying declaration a number of persons are named as culprits does not make it less credible. There is no distinction between a dying declaration in which one person is named and that in which a number of persons are named.[29]

It may be that in certain situations, the very wealth of the detail in a statement attributed to a dying man arouses suspicion; on the other hand, the circumstance that a statement contains a wealth of details cannot necessarily lead to the inference that the statement is a fabricated one.[30]

Where the names of the accused who had instigated the assault were clearly mentioned in the F.I.R., which was lodged within an hour of the occurrence, and the informant proved the dying declaration, it was held that non-mention of the name of the accused in the dying declaration would not entitle the accused to any benefit of doubt.[31] Where the injured witness consistently mentioned the names of accused persons in her earlier deposition as well as the dying declaration, the mere fact that she could not be confronted by the defence witness was no ground to discard it.[32]

---

20. Ramesh v. State of M.P., 1996 Cr LJ 2656 (paras 19-22) (MP).
21. State of Maharashtra v. Krishnamurthy, AIR 1981 SC 617.
22. III Addl. Sessions Judge, Guntur v. G.V. Rao, 1996 Cr LJ 703 (paras 11 and 12) (AP).
23. Jayaraj v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1976 SC 1519.
24. Surajdee Ojha v. Bihar, AIR 1979 SC 1505; Surat Singh v. Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 705. (short statement, name of the witness mentioned); Rabi Chandra v. Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 1738; (should preferably in the form of questions and answers).
25. Prayagsinha Bharatsinha v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 1327 (para 19) (Bom).
26. Narayan Behara v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 86 (Ori).
27. Dalbir Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 1328.
28. Habib Usaman v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1979 SC 1181.
29. Harbans Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1962 SC 439 overruling AIR 1941 Lah 368.
30. Tehalsingh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1347.
31. Tirathram v. State of U.P., AIR 1979 SC 1440.
32. Ram Vilas v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3251 (para 5) (SC).

The dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate can be the foundation of the guilt of the accused.[33] The otherwise reliable dying declaration made before the Magistrate could not be disbelieved on account of non-examination of the doctor on the crucial question of the fitness of the declarant or failure to put the leading questions to her with regard to the demand of dowry.[34]

Where it was stated in a dying declaration that she caught fire while preparing tea and was not burnt by her husband or in-laws, and it was recorded by a responsible judicial officer, and the deceased was not under any fear or pressure at the time of making the statement, acquittal of the husband and in-laws on the basis of the dying declaration was held to be proper[35]; but the statement that the victim's clothes caught fire while refilling kerosene in the stove is falsified by the fact that the absence of kerosene would put off the ignition of the stove.[36]

A dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate in the hospital; though the certificate of fitness of the declarant was not obtained from the doctor and signature or thumb impression of the deceased was not taken, it was held that the declaration could be accepted.[37] When the dying declaration is recorded by a competent Magistrate in the form of questions and answers, as far as practicable in the words of the deceased person, it stands on a higher footing than dying declaration which depends upon oral testimony which may suffer from all the infirmities of human memory and human character.[38]

There is no requirement of the law that the dying declaration must necessarily be made to a Magistrate. What evidentiary value or weight has to be attached must necessarily depend on the facts and circumstances of each case; in a proper case, it may be permissible to convict a person solely on the basis of the dying declaration.[39]

The fact that the language used in a dying declaration is chaste, while that used in the F.I.R., has some words which are spoken by villagers, is not of much significance because there is nothing abnormal or unusual in the same person using colloquial language while talking to one person and using refined language while talking to another.[40]

Evidence of the witness about dying declaration cannot be disbelieve only because the F.I.R. has no mention about it. The evidence of witnesses has to be tested on its own strength or weakness.[41] The deceased made a statement which was recorded and signed by the deceased and the villagers. It showed that he recognised the two accused, and his wife and son also identified those two accused. Though the written dying declaration was not mentioned in the F.I.R., which stated that he made some oral statement, it was held that it could not be said that the written dying declaration was brought into existence subsequently and the delay by the police in recording the statement of the scribe of the dying declaration did not render the prosecution case unreliable.[42]

Where the deceased made the dying declaration soon after the incident, and it was found that the injured was fully conscious and composed, it was held that, in the absence of any evidence of tutoring or false implication of the accused, it can safely be acted upon.[43] Where the deceased woman told everybody immediately after the incident that the accused had set her on fire and the dying declaration was recorded by a Judicial Magistrate when she was in a fit condition to make the statement, discrepancy

---

33. Hanumappa Bhimappa v. State of Mysore, 1966 CAR 381 (SC). See also Rafat Mian v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 3039 (para 11) (All).
34. Gurbachan Singh v. State of Haryana, 1996 Cr LJ 3051 (paras 13-15) (P&H). See also Jaswant Kaur v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 3073 (paras 8, 10 and 11) (P&H).
35. Kishanlal Seethi v. Jaganath, AIR 1990 SC 1357.
36. Pawan Kumar v. State of Haryana, 2001 Cr LJ 1679 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 1324
37. Madhu Bala (Smt.) v. State, 1990 Cr LJ 790. See also Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, 1999 Cr LJ 4055 (para 6) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2571.
38. Kumarchandra Mohan Singh v. State, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 461; ILR 1963 Cut 443; Kushalrao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22; Jagabandhu Jail v. State, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 569 (Ori); Aamad v. State of Gujarat, 1999 Cr LJ 2823 (paras 17 and 18)(Guj).
39. Ramavathidevi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 164.
40. Bharati v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 839.
41. State of M.P. v. Dhirendra Kumar, AIR 1997 SC 318. Also see State of Haryana v. Jinder Singh, (1997) 4 SCC 180 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 532.
42. Nanahauram v. State of M.P., AIR 1988 SC 912.
43. Waikhan Angamba Singh v. State of Manipur, 1982 Cr LJ 1346 (Gau).

in dying declaration regarding the exact spot where she was set ablaze neither affected its credibility nor the identity of the accused was blurred.[44] Where the dying declarations made before the doctor and the Investigating Officer were found to be reliable and consistent and there was nothing to disprove them, besides the declarant was in full senses and able to speak clearly, the order of conviction of the accused was upheld.[45] Where the deceased voluntarily stated that his own son had injured him and the medical evidence established that he was conscious and capable of making statement, the same was held to be truthful and reliable as a father would not speak falsely against his son and there was no question of tutoring or prompting.[46]

Where no requisition was sent to the Judicial Magistrate without disclosing any reasons for the same and the dying declaration of the victim of burn was recorded by the Executive Magistrate without finding out the mental condition of the deceased and no mental fitness certificate of the doctor was appended to the declaration either, such dying declaration was not reliable.[47] Where the dying declaration stated that the accused inflicted two stab injuries to the deceased which was inconsistent with the medical evidence stating categorically that there was only one stab injury, the dying declaration was not reliable.[48] Where the deceased made oral statements before a Head Constable who obtained the thumb impression of the deceased on a blank paper and later on filled it up and it was received by the Magistrate only on the next day, of course before the death of the deceased, such a document was held to be not reliable.[49] Where the medical evidence supported by post-mortem report and the fact of serious nature of injury showed that the deceased could not have been conscious for more than half an hour after receiving the said injury, possibility of the deceased making dying declaration nine hours after receiving the injury was highly improbable.[50] Where an integral part of the dying declaration is false inasmuch as, an accused person has been falsely named therein, it cannot be accepted against a co-accused.[51] When, in the statement of the deceased to the police under Section 161, Cr. P.C., he simply named the accused as his assailant, without giving the name of his father or the place of residence of the accused, it was held that, though it was treated as a dying declaration, it would be difficult to say that it was the accused and none else that committed the murder, in the absence of other convincing evidence.[52] Where the report given by the deceased was not written in the original words uttered by him, and there was unexplained delay in lodging the report, it was held that no reliance can be placed on such a dying declaration.[53] Where the dying declaration was given with a detailed account of the occurrence, though the declarant was in a serious condition, and it was not attested by the wife of the deceased or the doctor who were present there, it was held that it cannot be relied on.[54] Where the facts contained in a dying declaration raise a suspicion in the mind of the court, it cannot be relied on for any purpose and has to be excluded from consideration.[55] Where the autopsy report stated that the deceased had sustained 100% burns over her body and both the thumbs were burnt and the medical evidence was that the thumb mark of the declarant on the dying declaration had clear ridges and curves, in view of such inconsistent evidence, the accused was held to be rightly given the benefit of doubt.[56] Where the dying declarations were inconsistent in material particulars, they could not form the basis of conviction.[57] Where the dying declaration was

---

44. Vajrala Paripurnachary v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1998 SC 2680, at page 2681 : 1998 Cr LJ 4031.

45. Mange Ram v. State Delhi Administration, 1998 Cr LJ 2269 (SC).

46. Bellana Kannam Naidu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1146 (para 7) (AP).

47. Lingaiah v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1242 (AP).

48. State of Kerala v. N. Moideenkutty Haji, 1994 Cr LJ 1250 (para 8) (Ker). Also see Shrawan Kumar v. State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 314 (Raj).

49. Subramanian v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 3540 (Mad). Dying declaration not properly recorded, infirmities, not reliable. State of Punjab v. Sita Devi, 1997 Cr LJ 2210 (P&H). Discrepancies, not inspiring confidence, can't be relied upon. State of Maharashtra v. Ahmad Gulam Nabi Shaikh, 1997 Cr LJ 2377 (Bom).

50. Mohammed Indris v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 1079 (Raj).

51. State of Maharashtra v. Uttam Karbhari Dhage, 1997 Cr LJ 2513 (Bom), relying on Thurukanni Pompiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1965 SC 939 : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 31.

52. Sudhir Kumar Shukla v. State, 1990 Cr LJ 119 (All). See also Yazali Venkataratnam v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 3240 (paras 9 and 10) (AP); Kale Mian v. State of Bihar, 1997 Cr LJ 1848 (para 9) (Pat).

53. Md. Ilahi v. State of U.P., 1990 Cr LJ 850.

54. Mohan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1981 SC 1578.

55. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 554.

56. State of Punjab v. Gian Kaur, 1998 Cr LJ 2061 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 1998 SC 2809. See also Gajanansingh v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2921 (paras 13-16) (Bom).

57. Abdul Hameed v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 872 (para 17) (All).

neither reduced to writing, nor the exact words of the deceased were reproduced by the witness, it was held that it could not be relied upon.[58] Where the ASI neither recorded the dying declaration in the rozanamcha in the PCR van nor did he inform of it to the control room on the police station, his uncorroborated testimony as to the dying declaration could not be relied upon.[59] Where the author of the dying declaration was disputed and no evidence was led to prove the mental state of the declarant to give statement besides there being omissions and material contradictions in the statement of the witnesses before whom it was made, the dying declaration could not be relied upon.[60]

Where the contents of the dying declaration read with the other prosecution witnesses, is sufficient as to the identity of the accused it cannot be rejected merely because the witnesses were not cross-examined or suggestions were made to them that there were other persons with the same names.[61] When the doctor is not questioned in the cross-examination as to the condition of the deceased at the time of his giving the declaration, the dying declaration cannot be attacked on the ground that the deceased was not in a position to speak [62] Where there was mention of one shot, in the dying declaration, and the autopsy report mentioned two injuries one inward and another in the outward direction, it was held that the declaration could not be falsified on the ground that the victim must have sustained the two wounds by two separate shots.[63] Where the declaration contained the cause of death and gave the name of the accused, and it was corroborated by two eye-witnesses, it was held that it can be relied upon, though the parentage of the accused was not given in the dying declaration.[64]

It is no objection to the admissibility of a dying declaration that it was made in answer to leading questions or was obtained by earnest and pressing solicitations.[65]

Absence of names of eye-witnesses would not by itself introduce an infirmity in the dying declaration.[66]

Where the prosecution version about the occurrence was different from the version given in the dying declaration, there was no mention of the names of the eye-witnesses and of some of the accused in the dying declaration, the prosecution did not explain the injuries on the person of one of the accused, and the presence of the eye-witnesses at the place of occurrence was found to be doubtful, it was held that the acquittal was proper.[67] Where the serious injuries on the accused, and the victim of alleged rape and murder having been found naked with her undergarments in the room of the accused, probabilised the defence version that they had love affair and some unknown person came and assaulted the victim and that they had consented intercourse, the oral dying declaration made to her brother, inspired no confidence.[68] When the conviction by the High Court was based solely on the dying declaration, which showed some suspicious features, the Supreme Court held that the accused was entitled to be acquitted as the dying declaration could not be relied on.[69] Where there was no clear and cogent evidence to show that the accused had caused the injuries to the deceased, the statement of one of the deceased was not recorded by the Magistrate even though he was alive for nine days after the occurrence, and the injuries on the person of the accused were not explained, it was held that the acquittal of the accused was proper.[70] Where the F.I.R. showed that it was a case of accidential death, as a result of burn injuries, and the sole evidence of the mother of the deceased as to the oral dying declaration was found to be

---

58. Purushotham v. Sheo Prasad, 1972 All LJ 744, following Kushalrao v. State of Bombay, AIR 1958 SC 22.
59. Laxmi v. Om Prakash, 2001 Cr LJ 3302 (para 16) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2383.
60. Amar Singh v. State of M.P., 1996 Cr LJ 1582 (paras 16-18, 20 and 22) (MP).
61. Waikhan Angamba Singh v. State of Manipur, 1982 Cr LJ 1346 (Gau).
62. Budhia Singh v. State of Orissa, 1983 Cr LJ 1020.
63. Brij Raj Singh v. State, 1983 Cr LJ 1916.
64. Preetam Singh v. State of U.P., 1985 Cr LJ 10.
65. Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, (1885) 7 All 385, 398, FB; Chandrasekara v. King, (1937) AC 220 : 39 Bom LR 359, PC. But see contra Majan Mia v. State, AIR 1970 Assam 121where it is stated that a dying declaration may be open to objection if leading questions are put to the declarant for the purpose of eliciting information.
66. Rabichandra v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 1738.
67. State of U.P. v. Madanmohan, AIR 1989 SC 1519.
68. Ronal Kiprono Ramkant v. State of Haryana, 2001 Cr LJ 3942 (paras 5, 7-10) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2488.
69. Kake Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1982 SC 1021.
70. State of Assam v. Bhelu Shekh, AIR 1989 SC 1097.

unreliable, it was held that the accused must be acquitted as there was no other legal evidence on which to found a conviction.[71]

Where the dying declaration is a long document narrating a large number of incidents which happened before the actual assault, such long statements, being more in the nature of first information report than a recital of the cause of death or circumstances resulting in death, are likely to give the impression of their being not genuine or not having been made unaided and without prompting. However, on the facts, the Supreme Court found that the dying declaration, though in the form of F.I.R. was unprompted and voluntary.[72]

Where there are suspicious circumstances and infirmities in the evidence, with regard to the dying declaration, it cannot be accepted for the purpose of conviction.[73]

Where the history of the patient recorded in the Medico Legal Register showed no clear statement that the information recorded was supplied by the deceased, the information was not recorded in question and answer form, it was held that the history recorded in the case paper of the Register cannot be treated as dying declaration, and has to be excluded from consideration.[74] Where the attending doctor neither deposed to having talked to the deceased nor did he depose to the deceased having made any disclosure or declaration to him, it could be said that merely his statement as to it could not be said to be a dying declaration.[75] Where a person lodged an F.I.R., but did not mention about the alleged dying declaration made to him, and the doctor before whom the declaration was alleged to have been made was not examined, it was held that the dying declaration was doubtful and cannot be considered.[76] Where the declaration was at variance with other evidence and was also not mentioned in the F.I.R., the Court held that it was not safe to convict on the basis of the declaration.[77]

Where the declarant allegedly knew the assailant from before, he was expected to have named him with certainty.[78]

A boy of twelve years, who was injured, was fast losing consciousness. Two dying declarations were produced which showed the presence of persons who bore enmity to the accused. The evidence was rejected.[79] Where, from the place of incident to hospital, the deceased was surrounded by his well-wishers, friends and relatives and it was likely that they availed every opportunity to tutor and brain-wash the decease before the arrival of the Magistrate, no reliance could be placed on such a dying declaration.[80] Where the dying declaration recorded by the Tehsildar and the Executive Magistrate without obtaining mental fitness certificate from the doctor and not in question and answer form, its wordings and the language were the same as that of the F.I.R. which created doubt about its truthfulness besides it was not corroborated, the said dying declaration could not be relied upon.[81] The dying declaration of a victim who had sustained brain injury impairing his brain function could not be riled upon[82]; so also where the declarant was stated to have suffered injuries severely damaging her spinal column of neck , larynx, trachea and oesophagus, rendering it not possible for her to speak.[83]

Where the deceased wife who had committed suicide due to harassment, torture and assault and demand for more dowry by her husband and the in-laws, absolved her husband and his relatives by stating in her dying declaration that she received the burn injuries while she was cooking food on a

---

71. Baldev Raj v. State of H.P., AIR 1980 SC 436.
72. Basksish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 904.
73. Purnachandra Singh v. State of Orissa, 1985 Cr LJ 248. Discrepancies and variation in dying declarations recorded by Executive Magistrate and doctor, evidence of having been tutored or faculties impaired, conviction not proper. Dada Machindra Chaudhar v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 4009 (Bom).
74. State v. Asaram Mahadu, 1978 Cr LJ 1017 (Bom).
75. Laxmi v. Om Prakash, 2001 Cr LJ 3302 (para 17) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2383.
76. Sambhubora v. State of Assam, 1987 Cr LJ 1027 (Gau).
77. Bhaiyan v. M.P., AIR 1978 SC 36.
78. Bholaprasad v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 9 SCC 353 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1035.
79. Rasheed Beg v. M.P., AIR 1974 SC 332.
80. State of U.P. v. Raj Bahadur, 1993 Cr LJ 86 (para 36) (All).
81. Pamni Bai v. State of M.P., 1996 Cr LJ 2769 (para 19) (MP).
82. State of Rajasthan v. Teja Ram, 1999 Cr LJ 2588 (para 11) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 1776.
83. State v. Hari Narayan Mahto, 2000 Cr LJ 5009 (paras 27 and 28) (Pat).

kerosene stove, but her letters to her relatives disclosed incessant cruelty and physical violence to her which drove her to commit suicide, it was held that her dying declaration could not be said to be destructive of this evidence because the said declaration was an act of a terrified, helpless and submissive Hindu wife.[84]

The Court cannot ignore the statement of the parents of the deceased/declarant that the deceased was not mentally sound. If the Court has even a slight doubt about the mental soundness of the author of the dying declaration, it would be unsafe to base a conviction on such a statement, albeit its inadmissibility under Section 32 of the Evidence Act.[85]

16. SOLE BASIS OF CONVICTION

Once dying declaration is found to be true and voluntary, it can be the sole basis of conviction and needs no corroboration. Such a statement is admissible not only against the person actually causing death but also against other persons participating in causing the declarant's death.[86] Where one dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate and the other by the medical officer and both were consistent in material particulars, such dying declarations can be the sole basis of conviction. The declaration having been not recorded in question-answer form was no ground to discredit it.[87] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the doctor, treating the declarant the victim of burning and was attested by another doctor and they positively stated that she was conscious at the time of giving the statement, no inference of her inability to speak on the ground of 80% burn could be drawn and the dying declaration could form the basis of conviction.[88]

While recording a dying declaration only five questions were put to the deceased and the first three related to his name, his father's name and his place of residence. There was not even a complete answer to the question as to who had assaulted him. There was nothing in it to fasten the guilt on the accused. Hence, they could not be convicted on this basis.[89]

---

84. State of Maharashtra v. Vasant Shankar Mhasane, 1993 Cr LJ 1134 (para 18) (Bom).

85. Dandu Lakshmi Reddy v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4287 (para 22) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3255.

86. Sant Gopal v. State of U.P., 1995 Cr LJ 312 (paras 33 to 36) (All). See also State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, 1996 Cr LJ 2003 (paras 11-14) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 3035, reversing Criminal Appeal No. 116 of 1986, Dt. 13-5-1988 (Raj); Jai Karan v. State of (N.C.T. Delhi), 1999 Cr LJ 4529 (paras 10, 19 and 20) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3512, reversing Cri A No. 91 of 1994, Dt. 19-11-1997 (Del); Prabhudaya Harijan v. State of Orissa, 2001 Cr LJ 2987 (para 16) (Ori).

87. Virendra Singh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 3098 (Del). No Magistrate available, recorded by I.O., consistent and coherent, fit mental condition, corroborated, can be the sole basis of conviction, not being in question-answer form immaterial, Hasti Devi v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 2787 (Raj); Malik Ram Bhoi v. State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 984 (para 6) (Ori), dying declaration in question and answer form, corroborated. Also see Rajendra Singh v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 2668 (All). The Court referred to Tehal Singh v. State of Punjab, 1979 SCC (Cri) 722 : AIR 1979 SC 1347; Padmaben Shamalbhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, (1991) 1 JT (SC) 205 : 1991 AIR SCW 464 : 1991 SCC (Cri) 275 and Ganpat Mahadev Mane v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 SCC (Cri) 491 : AIR 1993 SC 1180 : 1993 Cr LJ 298 : (1993) 6 JT (SC) 177. To the same effect Ram Dhar v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 292 (Del) and Vakati Lavakishore v. State of A.P., 1997 Cr LJ 285 (AP). Dying declaration recorded by Magistrate, deceased mentally fit, cogent and direct answers to questions, can be relied upon to base conviction, Baijnath v. State of U.P., 1997 Cr LJ 1691 (All). Two dying declarations, consistent, conviction can be based upon them, Kartar Singh v. State of Haryana, 1997 Cr LJ 4376 (P&H). Also see State of Maharashtra v. Rajendra Garbad Patil, 1994 Cr LJ 145 (para 14) : AIR 1994 SC 475; Bhag Singh v. State of H.P., 1994 Cr LJ 1398 (HP); Ajab Singh v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 1102 (SC); Dying declaration made within about two hours, clear, consistent with other evidence, Bhola Turha v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1515 : 1998 Cr LJ 1102. Also see Shabbir Mohmad Syed v. State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 4416 (SC), also corroborated by medical evidence, followed in State v. Surya Prasad, 2001 Cr LJ 2481 (para 11) (All). For conviction on lone dying declaration, see Pallapolu Narasimha Rao v. State of A.P., 1997 Cr LJ 4448 (AP); Gopal v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 240 (para 2) (SC).

88. Kamlesh Rani v. State of Haryana, 1988 Cr LJ 1251 (paras 3 and 4) (SC) : AIR 1998 SC 1534.

89. State of Orissa v. Simanchal Gouda, 1997 Cr LJ 1816 (Ori). The Court referred to Gangotri Singh v. State of U.P., (1992) 2 JT (SC) 417 : 1992 Cr LJ 1290; Govardhan Raoji Ghayare v. State of Maharashtra, (1993) 5 JT (SC) 87 : 1993 Cr LJ 3414; Meesala Ramkrishnan v. State of A.P., (1994) 3 JT (SC) 232 and State of Rajasthan v. Kishore, (1996) 2 JT (SC) 595 : 1996 Cr LJ 2003. Dying declaration not inspiring confidence, can't form basis for conviction, Jagga Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 135, reversing the decision of Punj & Har. High Court (paras 3-7). Two dying declarations, accused running away immediately after incident, defence witness unreliable, corroborated by medical evidence, true, can be made basis of conviction, Krishan Kumar v. State of Haryana, (1998) 8 SCC 586 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1544. Dying declarations contradictory and suffering from infirmities, uncorroborated, involuntary, suicide theory not completely ruled out, conviction solely on the basis of such dying declaration improper, In re :

17. DYING DECLARATION—MEDICAL EVIDENCE

The fact that the dying declaration is produced only during the trial is immaterial, if it is corroborated by the evidence of prosecution witnesses and the evidence of the doctor.[90]

Where the Magistrate verified from the doctor that the injured was in his senses and fit to give a statement, and he then recorded the statement, and that statement was corroborated by the evidence of the doctor and the post-mortem report, it was held that the dying declaration was authentic and was given by a person who was in a fit condition to give a statement.[91] Where the post-mortem report was brought on record by the Head Clerk as the doctor who conducted the post-mortem had died, it was held that the said report was admissible under this section.[92]

Where the doctor found that life was ebbing fast, and there was no time to call the police or a Magistrate, it was held that the doctor was justified in recording the statement (dying declaration); indeed he was duty-bound to do so, and as the doctor was a disinterested and respectable witness, the trial judge was unjustified in rejecting the evidence of the medical officer.[93] Even though the deceased had serious burn injuries the dying declaration made to a doctor has to be acted upon as she survivel 12 days after the declaration. It cannot be said that she was not in a position to make the declaration.[94]

The eye-witness gave evidence about the statement made by the deceased, but the doctor's evidence was that it was improbable that the deceased would have been in a position, either to walk or speak, so as to make a dying declaration. The evidence of the witnesses suffered from material contradictions as also that of the eye-witness. Therefore, it was held that their evidence regarding the dying declaration could not be relied on, in view of the doctor's evidence.[95] Where the dying declaration was recorded by a doctor, and his testimony was that the deceased was capable of deposing and was in his senses at the time of recording of the statement, it was held that a conviction, based on that evidence could not be interfered with.[96] Where the victim was in a gasping condition and his pulse was not palpable and the blood pressure unrecordable, but the doctor certified him to be in good condition, his statement was accepted.[97]

Where there was evidence regarding the dying declaration of the deceased to the eye-witnesses, immediately after the occurrence, and the doctor who examined him first and the doctor who conducted the postmortem, differed as to whether the injured was in a shock immediately after the occurrence, the Supreme Court held that the opinion of the doctor was not conclusive on the question of ability of the deceased to talk immediately after the occurrence.[98] Where the dying declaration showed that it was a coherent and consistent statement made by the deceased, and it gave out clearly the motive for the occurrence and also the names of the four assailants, it was held that the doctor's opinion to the contrary need not be taken into consideration, and the deceased was fully conscious and was not suffering from any confusion or hallucination.[99]

Basith, 1997 Cr LJ 3232 (Mad). Three dying declarations, glaringly different and inconsistent in material particulars, unsafe to conviction their sole basis, Kalyan Balasaheb Barungale v. State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 1859 (para 12) (Bom), relying on Kamla v. State of Punjab, (1993) 1 SCC 1 : 1993 Cr LJ 68 and Paniben v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 1817 : 1997 Cr LJ 2919.

90. Babu v. State of U.P., AIR 1980 SC 443.
91. Nirmal Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1972 SC 945.
92. Shyam Narayan Singh v. State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 772 (para 39) (Pat).
93. Rehman v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1976 SC 1782. See also P. Babu v. State of A.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3547 (paras 6, 7 and 8) (SC).
94. Om Prakash v. State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 138.
95. Bhagwan Das v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 589.
96. Suresh v. State of M.P. AIR 1987 SC 860.
97. State of Haryana v. Harpal Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1530, Somappa Vamanappa v. State of Mysore, 1979 Cr LJ 1358.
98. Vemanappa Madar v. State of Mysore, AIR 1979 SC 1831; Ravi Chander v. State of Punjab, (1998) 9 SCC 303 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1004.
99. Dayaram Singh v. State of M.P., 1981 Cr LJ 580 (MP).

Merely because a dying declaration is not accompanied by a medical opinion that the deceased, when he made the statement, was in a fit state of mind, it does not affect its reliability.[1]

18. PLURALITY OF DECLARATIONS

If there are more than one dying declarations, they should be read as one and differences in them on material aspects with reasonable explanation may be taken at par with omissions covered by the explanation to S. 161 of the Cr.P.C. and may be considered as a matter of fact in each case on its own strength.[2] It is not the number of dying declarations which will weigh with the Court. Plurality of apparently consistent dying declarations themselves are not sufficient to pursuade the Court to act thereon.[3]

Where there were three dying declarations of a woman, corroborated by other circumstances, the Supreme Court held that the dying declarations are the groaning utterances of the dying woman in the grip of dreadful agony, and cannot be judged by the standards of fullness of particulars which witnesses may give in other situations; that if they are basically credible, even if there are some short-falls or there are some unrealistic and unnatural facts, the declarations cannot be discredited. When they are corroborated by other circumstances, the declarations are sufficient to bring home the offence.[4]

The first dying declaration was a short version of the occurrence given by the injured under great pain and agony, after arrival at the hospital. Later he gave a second declaration. The Supreme Court held that the contents of the first dying declaration were true, and the second declaration and the details therein might not have been given by the victim, and it cannot detract from the truthfulness of the first declaration.[5]

Where there was consistence story in all the three dying declarations, one made to the witness, the second one in the F.I.R. and the third made to Naib Tahsildar stating that it was the accused who poured kerosene and set fire to the deceased, it was held that minor contradictions would not affect the acceptability of the dying declarations.[6] Where the divergent statements, made by the deceased in her multiple dying declarations, are capable of being fully and totally reconciled, the Court need not reject them merely because prima facie they read differently.[7] Where there was no infirmity in the three dying declarations recorded respectively by the doctor, the police constable attested by the doctor and the Executive Magistrate endorsed by the doctor that she was in a fit condition of giving the statement, the conviction was upheld. The fact that the third dying declaration was not recorded in question and answer form was held to be immaterial[8] and the mere fact that the concerned doctor who gave the certificate was not examined, does not detract the reliability of the statement of the Magistrate.[9] Where the circumstances clearly showed that the first dying declaration was recorded when the deceased was not a free person which was not considered as voluntary and true and convincing reasons were given, the second dying declaration could not be regarded as untrue merely because it was contrary to the first.[10]

---

1. Md. Azisuddin v. State of A.P., 1985 Cr LJ 336.
2. Radhey Shyam v. State of U.P., 1993 Cr LJ 3709 (paras 20 and 21) (All).
3. Laxmi v. Om Prakash, 2001 Cr LJ 3302 (paras 1 and 30) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2383.
4. Somnath v. State of Haryana, AIR 1980 SC 1226. See also Prakash Shobharam v. State of Gujarat, 2000 Cr LJ 2559 (paras 11 and 13) (Guj).
5. Surat Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 705. Also see Sreerama Murthy v. State of A.P., AIR 1998 SC 3040.
6. Hari v. State, ILR 1978 MP 873; following Godhu v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1974 SC 2188. Also see Ajit Singh v. State of Punjab, 1998 Cr LJ 3460, at p. 3464 (P&H); Vithal Sadashiv Gaikwad v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2035 (para 9) (Bom); Rajendra Kumar v. State of U.P., 1998 Cr LJ 3293 (SC) : AIR 1998 SC 2896; Bathala Subbarayudu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 446 (AP); Mangat Ram v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 3454 (para 18) (Del); M.S. Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 689 (AP); Chinnamma v. State of Kerala, 1995 Cr LJ 1711 (paras 10-12) (Ker). Contra : three dying declarations, inconsistent, uncorroborated, acquittal, Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court v. J. Nirmala, 1997 Cr LJ 1420 (AP).
7. Siddesha v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 38 (paras 2 and 3) (Kant).
8. Ganpat Mahadeo Mane v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 298 (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 1180, followed in Imran Khan v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 17 (para 30) (MP).
9. Rajendra Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 1560 (para 21) (Raj), relying on Suresh v. State of M.P., (1987) 2 SCC 32; Subramanayam v. State of Andhra Pradesh, (1993) 2 SCC 684 and Ganpat Mahadev Mane v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 298 : AIR 1993 SC 1180 : 1992 AIR SCW 3442.
10. Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, 1999 Cr LJ 4055 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2571.

Where there was glaring inconsistency in the four dying declarations made by the deceased, conviction based on one of the dying declarations was liable to be set aside.[11] Inconsistent dying declarations cannot be accepted in the absence of any corroboration.[12] The Court cannot sideline material divergence relating to the very occasion of the crime in the two dying declarations. In the instant case, the deceased gave different versions in the two dying declarations as to what she was doing at the relevant point of time.[13] In case of there being more than one inconsistent dying declarations made by the accused, it is not necessary for the High Court to compare them to assess the extent of incrimination.[14]

Where there are two dying declarations, there is no rule of law that the earlier one is to be preferred. Where the former is before a police constable and the latter is before a magistrate, the later has to be preferred. Dying declaration properly made before a magistrate who has satisfied himself that the declaration was made in a fit state of mind is sufficient to sustain a conviction without corroboration.[15]

When there is more than one dying declaration, the first dying declaration in point of time is to be preferred.[16] Where there is more than one dying declaration, the later declaration may not be a free and voluntary statement but may be a tutored and inspired one. The crucial test in all cases of plurality of dying declaration is whether the deceased's version is proved to be false in respect of the integral portion of the case. The test whether he has given a true version is not to be judged with reference to any one dying declaration, but in the light of several declarations made by him. It is only in extreme cases that the court can safely convict, relying upon the first dying declaration, provided there is convincing and adequate corroborative evidence.[17] Where the deceased made two dying declarations of which the former was duly recorded by a doctor in the presence two other doctors and the latter, recorded by another person was attested by the Sarpanch but not proved by a competent witness and was introduced by the police inspector in his cross-examination, the latter was not relied upon. The accused were convicted on the basis of former.[18]

19. DYING DECLARATION SHOULD BE PRECISE

Dying declaration should be short, concise and to the point. Questions and answers elicited should be written. It should not be in the mechanical cyclostyled form.[19] It is not the requirement of law that the person making the dying declaration should made an elaborate and exhaustive statement so as to cover each and every aspect of the incident and narrate the whole history of the case. Detailed statement covering the minutest details could not be expected from the declarant who is under a severe stress and agony.[20] The mere fact that the dying declaration did not contain the detailed version of the occurrence was no ground to disbelieve it.[21]

---

11. Kamla v. State of Punjab, 1993 Cr LJ 68 (para 8) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 374, relying on Khushal Rao v. State of Bombay, 1958 SCR 552 : 1958 Cr LJ 106. Also see Govind Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2598 (paras 9, 10 and 12) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2457; State of Gujarat v. Khumansingh Karsan Singh, AIR 1994 SC 1641 (paras 2 and 3).
12. Chakiri Saidulu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 3782 (para 18) (AP). See also Kishan Lal v. State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 4070 (paras 16 and 17) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3062, reversing 1998 Cr LJ 452 (Raj).
13. Dandu Lakshmi Reddy v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4287 (para 16) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3255, reversing Cri A No. 115 of 1996, Dt. 26-3-1997 (AP).
14. Chakiri Saidulu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 3782 (para 17) (AP).
15. Mohanlal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 839; Paniben (Smt.) v. State of Gujarat, (1992) 2 An WR (SC) 60 at p. 65; State of Karnataka v. Bapu Pujari, ILR 1985 Kant 2257.
16. Mohanlal v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 839; Paniben (Smt.) v. State of Gujarat, (1992) 2 An WR (SC) 60 at p. 65; State of Karnataka v. Bapu Pujari, ILR 1985 Kant 2257.
17. In re : Narayana Swamy, 1973 Cr LJ 1295; Moba Singh v. State, 1975 Raj LW 354.
18. Harbans Lal v. State of Haryana, 1993 Cr LJ 75 (para 10) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 819.
19. Adevappa Nagappa Anagolkar v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 584, at p. 586 (Kant).
20. Charipalli Shankararao v. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court, AIR 1995 SC 777 (paras 9-11). See also Laljit Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 2000 SC 3594 (para 5) : 2001 Cr LJ 143.
21. Ramesh v. State (Delhi Administration), 1996 Cr LJ 309 (Del), relying on Surat Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 705 : 1977 Cr LJ 347.

20. DYING DECLARATION SHOULD BE COMPLETE

Where the doctor put all necessary questions to the deceased, but the last question as to "what more he wanted to say" could not be answered as the injured became semi-conscious, it was held that the last question was in the nature of formality and the dying declaration was not incomplete.[22] Where the dying declaration made it clear about the accusation against the accused, and there was nothing to show that the maker of the statement had anything further to add, but before taking the thumb impression of the deceased he suddenly collapsed, but his thumb impression was taken after his death in the presence of the witness, it was held that it was not an incomplete statement.[23]

It was held by the Supreme Court that, even though the dying declaration was incomplete by reason of deceased not being able to answer further questions because of his then condition, the statements insofar as they implicated the accused, were quite categoric in character; and definitely indicated that it was the accused who had shot the deceased.[24]

Where the SHO who recorded the dying declaration did not certify that the declarant was in a fit mental condition to make such a statement and the deceased allegedly only gave minor details like stengun number including butt number etc., it was held that such a document could not be accepted as a true dying declaration.[25] Where the declarant did not disclose the full names and addresses of the assailants but only disclosed the first names similar to that of the alleged accused, such an incomplete dying declaration was not proper.[26]

21. WHETHER PART OF DYING DECLARATION CAN BE USED

The Supreme Court, on evidence, found that a particular statement that the deceased was forcibly dragged inside the room by the accused was neither corroborated nor proved. It was held that such a statement is separable from the other part of the statement that the accused had shot at him and caused fatal injuries which was corroborated by the evidence, and so, that part can be admitted; that it is not correct to hold that if a part of the dying declaration has not been proved to be correct, it must necessrily result in the rejection of the whole of the dying declaration.[27]

22. RECORDING OF DYING DECLARATION BY MAGISTRATE

The person who records a dying declaration must be satisfied that the dying man is making a conscious and voluntary statement with normal understanding.[28]

In the case of dying declaration, the recording by a Magistrate in the exact words stated by the deceased is of great importance. Any suggestion that the deceased had said something by mistake cannot be entertained.[29]

It is always desirable that the dying declaration is recorded in the words of the injured, but simply because the very words uttered by the injured are not reproduced, it is no reason to reject it, if the court is otherwise satisfied that what was recorded, correctly reproduces what was stated by the injured.[30]

Where the Magistrate recorded the dying declaration after being satisfied as to the identity of the maker as well as her fitness to make the statement, and signature of the trainee nurse was got on the statement due to non-availability of the doctor, the concurrent finding as to its admissibility was

---

22. Kusa v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 559.
23. Maniappan v. State of Madras, AIR 1962 SC 1252.
24. Abdul Sattar v. State of Mysore, AIR 1956 SC 168. Also see Shashidharsingh v. State of M.P., 1998 Cr LJ 2676 (para 24) (MP).
25. Paramjit Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1997 SC 1614.
26. Kajal Sarkar v. State of Assam, 1993 Cr LJ 3869 (paras 14 and 17) (Gau).
27. Godhu v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 2188; Namo Bora v. State of Assam, ILR 1980 Gau 229; Lakaram Surajmal v. State, AIR 1953 MB 249; Nandakumar Natha v. State of Maharashtra, 1988 Cr LJ 1313 (Bom).
28. Lallubhai Devchand Shah v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1972 SC 1776; Bodum Bhaskar Rao v. State of A.P., 1985 Crl LJ 32.
29. Ramnath v. State of M.P., AIR 1953 SC 420.
30. Hariram v. State, AIR 1965 Raj 130; Bakshish Singh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 904.

upheld.[31] The dying declaration, recorded the Magistrate in his own handwriting and in accordance with law after obtaining the fitness certificate from the duty doctor, could not be rejected merely on the ground that it was not recorded in question and answer form.[32] Where the dying declaration was recorded by S.D.M., an I.A.S. Officer, in absence of the relatives of the deceased, the mere fact that her relatives were agitating for recording her statement cannot lead to the inference that the Magistrate had recorded it under pressure and as desired by the agitators.[33]

The dying declaration recorded by an Executive Magistrate not enjoying the power of a Metropolitan Magistrate or Judicial Magistrate is admissible in evidence.[34]

23. DYING DECLARATION—RECORDED BY INVESTIGATING OFFICER/POLICE OFFICER

Where the investigating officer himself recorded the statement of the victim who was in a precarious condition, while making the statement, without requisitioning the services of the Magistrate, the Supreme Court held that such a practice of recording by the investigating officer was bad and should not be encouraged.[35]

Where the investigating officer had plenty of time and facility to procure the services of a Magistrate for recording a dying declaration, the dying declaration recorded by the investigating officer should be excluded from consideration[36] but the dying declaration recorded by the Police Officer could not be challenged on the ground that it was recorded by the Investigating Officer as the investigation had not commenced by then.[37]

Where the Head Constable attempted to procure the services of a Magistrate but the Magistrate was not available, the Head Constable was held to be competent to record the dying declaration in such circumstances.[38] The dying declaration recorded by a police officer, when the deceased was in a critical condition and no other person was available in the village to record, it is admissible under Section 32. In view of the exception provided in sub-Section 2 of Section 162 Cr.P.C. 1973, it is better to leave such a dying declaration out of consideration until and unless the prosecution satisfies the court as to why it was not recorded by a Magistrate or by a doctor.[39]

The dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer, not in conformity with law, was held to be not reliable.[40]

The investigating officer recorded a dying declaration of a bride who had been burnt, but the non-availability of the Magistrate and the doctor was not explained. The declaration was not signed by the declarant, although she was literate, and it was not proved that she was incapaciated to sign by reason of the burn injuries, none of the relatives were present at the time of the statement. The declaration was not recorded in the form of questions and answers. In view of the above circumstance the declaration was held to be not acceptable.[41] Where the dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer did not mention that the deceased was mentally fit to make statement, it was not in question and answer form and did not disclose the exact statement made, it was held to be unreliable.[42]

---

31. Ram Bihari Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 1850 : 1998 Cr LJ 2515 (para 11).
32. Rajendra Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 1560 (para 16) (Raj); distinguishing Rabi Chandra Pradhan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1980 SC 1738 : (1980) 1 SCC 240 : 1980 Cr LJ 1257. The Court referred to Padmaben Shambhai Patel v. State of Gujarat, 1991 Cri LR (SC) 162.
33. Harjit Kaur v. State of Punjab, 1999 Cr LJ 4055 (para 5) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2571.
34. State of U.P. v. Nawab Singh, 1996 Cr LJ 934 (para 18) (All).
35. Munna Raja v. State of M.P., AIR 1976 SC 2199; State of Punjab v. Amarbir Singh, AIR 1988 SC 2013.
36. Jagadishlal Malhotra v. State, 1984 Cr LJ (NOC) 53 : 1983 Chand Cr C 558. See also Public Prosecutor, H.C. of A.P. v. Pothula Narsimha Rao, 1993 Cr LJ 2789 (para 5) (AP).
37. Gulam Hussain v. State of Delhi, 2000 Cr LJ 3949 (para 7) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 2480.
38. Chanpalli Shankararao v. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court, AIR 1995 SC 777 (para 8), relying on Ramawati Devi v. State of Bihar, AIR 1983 SC 164.
39. Dalip Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1173; Dillirao v. State of Bihar, 1986 Cr LJ 1483.
40. Hariappan v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 4286 (para 18) (Kant).
41. State (Delhi Admn.) v. Lakshmankumar, AIR 1986 SC 250.
42. Mohd. Zakir v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 2837 (para 10) (Raj).

The dying declaration of a wife, recorded in the hospital by a police officer though bearing her signature or thumb impression, was held to be not reliable.[43] However, where it was attested by the doctor in the Government Hospital as made in his presence, it was held admissible[44]; so also where the dying declaration recorded by the Head Constable in question and answer form, after obtaining fitness certificate from the doctor, reproduced statements given by the deceased clearly and correctly.[45]

The Investigating Officer at a police-station, where the deceased was alleged to have sustained burn injuries, on information by wireless message went to the deceased in a hospital 92 k.m. away and recorded a statement of the deceased and on that basis he registered the F.I.R. The Supreme Court held that no fault could be-found with the investigating officer for not getting the dying declaration recorded by a Magistrate.[46] Strict scrutiny of the dying declaration recorded by the Investigating Officer is necessary and, if it is found truthful, conviction can be based upon it.[47]

The deceased made the dying declaration about his being beaten by a policeman in a police-station, while he was in the exclusive custody of the policemen. No one else had access to him. It was held that such statements not only excluded the possibility of his being tutored but also excluded the possibility that he was assaulted by any one else. Therefore, it was held, it was safe to accept the dying declaration.[48]

Where the injured gave a statement which it was recorded by the police, and the injured signed on it and died immediately thereafter, it was held that such a statement might be treated as a dying declaration, and it was admissible when duly proved; such a declaration which was treated as an F.I.R. was not hit by Section 162(2), Cr.P.C.[49]

Where the dying declaration was recorded in a narrative form, and the words used by the deceased were put within inverted commas, its authenticity or veracity would not be doubted merely because the investigating officer had stated new facts as to how he came to the spot prior to the recording of the dying declaration.[50]

Merely because a head-constable recorded a dying declaration, it cannot be said to be unsafe to rely upon it. Though desirable, it is not an indispensable requirement that it should be recorded by a Magistrate.[51]

The report made by a deceased at a police-station, being a dying declaration, can be made before or during investigation. Section 161, Cr.P.C. is not applicable. If the person does not give all minor details, that would not affect the validity or the merits of the dying declaration.[52]

Where, after making the statement before the police, the victim succumbed to his injuries, his statement could be treated as a dying declaration and would be admissible under Section 32(1), and would be protected by Section 162(2), Cr. P.C.[53]

Where a declaration recorded by a police-officer was found to be natural, coherent, truthful, narrating the incident without embellishment, and the declarant explicitly identified the accused, it was

---

43. Urgen Sherpa v. State of Sikkim, 1985 Cr LJ 1988. Dying declaration recorded by Head Constable without associating any independent witness, not satisfactorily explained, acquittal proper. State of H.P. v. Vinod Kumar, 1995 Cr LJ 3134 (paras 18 and 25) (HP); police recording dying declaration before declarant was declared fit to make statement, declarant remained alive for two weeks, no effort to get it recorded by Magistrate, not credible. Gulab Singh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 3180 (Del).
44. Kachhwa v. State of Rajasthan, 1986 Cr LJ 306. See also Venkappa K. Chowdari v. State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 15 (paras 8 and 9) (Kant).
45. Ismail v. State of Karnataka, 2000 Cr LJ 1994 (para 5) (Kant). See also Mohd. Islam v. State (NCT of Delhi), 2001 Cr LJ 4317 (paras 16 and 19) (Del).
46. State of Punjab v. Amarjit Singh, AIR 1988 SC 2013.
47. Babura v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2696 (para 10) (Raj).
48. State of U.P. v. Ramsagar Yadav, AIR 1985 SC 416.
49. Tapinder Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1970 SC 1566; Kochol v. State, AIR 1956 Tra/Co 207; Pratap Chandra Patnaik v. State, ILR 1974 Cut 1325; Kuttan Pillai alias Kuttappan v. State of Kerala, 1960 Ker LJ 1273 : 1960 KLT 829; Lakhan Lal v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2699 (paras 18 and 19 (Del).
50. Prem Kumar v. State, 1989 Cr LJ 1106 (Del).
51. Vinayak Datta v. State, AIR 1970 Goa 96.
52. State of U.P. v. Moti Lal, AIR 1968 All 83.
53. Haroj Ali v. State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 1745 (Gau).

held that a conviction could be based on such declaration[54] and otherwise reliable dying declaration cannot be rejected merely because some corrections in it were not initialled by the police officer recording it[55] but where the dying declaration was allegedly recorded by the police as the statement of the injured person, but it was neither submitted in the Court nor its copy was supplied to the accused, rather it was produced for the first time in the Court by the police while giving evidence, it could be rejected.[56]

24. DYING DECLARATION RECORDED BY DUTY DOCTOR

Where no relation of the deceased was present and hence there was no question of tutoring, the condition of hers being serious, recording of her dying declaration by the duty doctor was held to be proper and in the circumstances of the case even fitness certificate of the hospital incharge was not necessary.[57] Where the dying declaration was recorded by the doctor, the witnesses attested it and identified the signature of the doctor, mere non-examination or non-identification of his signature does not render it inadmissible.[58] Where the deceased narrated to the duty doctor at the time of her admission in the hospital as to how she received burn injuries and the doctor recorded it, it was held to be admissible as dying declaration.[59] Evidence of the doctor could not be discarded merely because the deceased had suffered 100% burn injuries and her general condition was poor, when she was mentally fit to make dying declaration as was stated by the doctor.[60] Where the doctor recorded the dying declaration of the deceased after waiting for the police for long as the condition of the victim was deteriorating fast and later on the police recorded the dying declaration containing further details which could not be said to be improvement, conviction on the basis of such a dying declaration was held to be proper.[61] The dying declaration recorded by the doctors in the hospitals was amply corroborated from the case history recorded by them and also by the testimony of the doctors conducting post-mortem, it could be said to be intrinsically sound and in accord with probabilities.[62] Where the dying declaration, recorded by the doctor in the medical case papers barely an hour after the incident was corroborated by two other dying declarations subsequently made, no capital can be made out by her stating that she was burnt by her father-in-law when in fact she meant her uncle-in-law.[63]

Where the doctor recording the dying declaration explained that due to extensive burn injuries, the thumb impression of the deceased could not be taken but his statement was not got attested either by the I.O. or any of the medical staff or relations of the deceased, the dying declaration was held to be unreliable.[64] Where the dying declaration recorded by the doctor suffered from infirmities and was uncorroborated, it could not form the basis of conviction.[65]

25. NON-PRODUCTION OF THE SCRIBE OF DYING DECLARATION

Where it was alleged that the dying declaration was reduced into writing but its scribe was neither examined nor cross-examined and the prosecution failed to explain the cause of his non-production, the same was discarded.[66]

---

54. Om Prakash v. State, ILR (1979) 1 Del 752.
55. Prayagsinha Bharatsinha v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 1327 (para 19) (Bom).
56. Chakiri Saidulu v. State of A.P., 1994 Cr LJ 3782 (para 7) (AP).
57. State of Rajasthan v. Ganesh Das, 1995 Cr LJ 25 (paras 16 and 17) (Raj).
58. M.S. Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 689 (para 9) (AP).
59. Lakhan Lal v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2699 (para 17) (Del).
60. Chandrawati v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 975 (para 15) (Del).
61. Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1995 Cr LJ 3630 (para 6) (SC).
62. Chandrawati v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 975 (paras 26 and 42) (Del). See also Udayakar Sahu v. State of Orissa, 1996 Cr LJ 3379 (para 8) (Ori).
63. Narayan Pandhari v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2174 (para 10-A) (Bom).
64. Niru Nanhar Beck v. State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 2412 (para 8) (Ori).
65. Niru Nanhar Beck v. State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 2412 (paras 9 and 10) (Ori).
66. Govind Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2598 (para 14) (SC). Contra : M.S. Satyanarayana v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 689 (para 9) (AP).

26. TUTORED DYING DECLARATION

The first dying declaration, not containing the names of all the accused, was recorded by the police immediately after the deceased gained consciousness and the second dying declaration was recorded by the Magistrate half an hour later and names of all the accused were mentioned in it. As there was no evidence to show that anyone was allowed to go near the deceased, the further details in the second dying declaration could not be treated as improvement over the first one.[67] Inference of the dying declaration being tutored cannot be drawn by the mere presence of her relatives prior to the recording of her statement.[68] Where there was possibility of improvement in the dying declaration, the accused was given benefit of doubt.[69]

27. F.I.R.

Where it was proved that the F.I.R. giving details of the incident was lodged by the deceased, it could also be used as dying declaration.[70] Where the statement of the victim of burn-injuries was recorded by the Police Officer in the presence of two independent witnesses after the incident as F.I.R., her version was natural and voluntary and fitness certificate was obtained from the duty doctor, the statement was admissible under Section 32 as dying declaration.[71]

Where the dying declaration was recorded by the Sub-Inspector in the nature of F.I.R. but there was no attestation from the doctor about the mental fitness of the deceased and her thumb impression or signature was also not taken, it was held to be highly doubtful.[72]

The dying declaration recorded in the form of the F.I.R. of the victim cannot be equated with a dying declaration in the form of statement recorded under Section 161, Cr.P.C.[73]

However the Supreme Court has subsequently held that that the statement given by the injured to the Investigating Officer and also the F.I.R. lodged by him, is not admissible as dying declaration under Section 32 of the Evidence Act.[74]

28. STATEMENT MADE IN COURSE OF BUSINESS [SUB-SECTION (2)]

This clause contemplates a statement by a person whose duty it was to make such a statement or whose business was such that statement of the kind were to be expected in the ordinary course of things.[75]

"The considerations which have induced the courts to recognize this exception appear to be principally that, in the absence of all suspicion of sinister motives, a fair presumption arises that entries made in the ordinary routine of business are correct, since the process of invention implying trouble, it is easier to state what is true than what is false; that such entries usually form a link in a chain of circumstances, which mutually corroborate each other; that false entries would be likely to bring clerks into disgrace with their employers; that, as most entries made in the course of business are subject to the inspection of several persons, an error would be exposed to speedy discovery; and that, as the facts to

---

67. Pratapaneni Ravi Kumar v. State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 1997 SC 2810 : 1997 Cr LJ 3505 (SC), reversing Cri A No. 933 of 1989, decided on 15-3-1990 (AP). Also see Sarwan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1997 SCC (Cri) 844; no relative present, no chance of tutoring, Rukma v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 596 (para 10) (Raj); Noorsab v. State of Karnataka, 2001 Cr LJ 425 (para 10) (Kant). The three dying declarations consistent, no possibility of tutoring, conviction proper, Ram Dhar v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 292 (Del).
68. Sarangdhar Rajaram Tembhikar v. State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 525 (para 9) (Bom).
69. Santosh Kumar v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 1998 Cr LJ 3081 (paras 16 and 17) (MP).
70. Pancham Yadav v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 848 (All).
71. Rajendra Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 1560 (paras 9-11) (Raj). See also Narayan Pandhari v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2174 (para 12) (Bom); Ismail v. State of Karnataka, 2000 Cr LJ 1994 (para 4) (Kant).
72. Maniram v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 946 (para 3) : AIR 1994 SC 840.
73. Narayan Pandhari v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2174 (para 13) (Bom), relying on Munna Raja v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1976 SC 2199 : 1976 Cr LJ 1718; State of Punjab v. Amarjit Singh, AIR 1988 SC 2013 : 1989 Cr LJ 95 (para 23) and State of Uttar Pradesh v. Chetram, AIR 1989 SC 1543 : 1989 Cr LJ 1785 (para 17) and explaining Balak Ram v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 2165 : 1974 Cr LJ 1486.
74. Sukhar v. State of U.P., AIR 1999 SC 3883 (para 2).
75. Soney Lal Jha v. Darabdeo Narain Singh, ILR (1935) 14 Pat 461 (FB); approving Ningawa v. Bharmappa, ILR (1897) 23 Bom 63, on the interpretation of this clause, but differing on the interpretation of clause 3.

which they relate are generally known but to few persons, a relaxation of the strict rules of evidence in favour of such entries may often prove convenient, if not necessary, for the due investigation of truth".[76]

29. IN THE COURSE OF BUSINESS

This clause provides that a written statement of a relevant fact made by a person who is dead, is itself a relevant fact, when the statement was made by such person in 'the ordinary course of business'. The expression 'course of business' occurs in more than one place in the Act: See Sections 16, 34, 47, 114.

The phrase 'in the ordinary course of business' is apparently used to indicate the current routine of business which was usually followed by the person whose declaration, it is sought to introduce. The rule laid down in this clause extends only to statements made during the course, not of any particular transaction of an exceptional kind, such as the execution of a deed of mortgage, but of business or professional employment in which the declarant was ordinarily or habitually engaged. The particulars set out in this clause, though not exhaustive, may fairly be taken as indicating the nature of the statements made in the course of business. The expression 'in the ordinary course of business' must mean 'in the ordinary course of a professional avocation'.[77]

The business referred to may be of a temporary character. See illustrations (b), (c), (d) and (g).[78]

The words 'in the ordinary course of business' in Section 32(2) should be given a broad and liberal connotation. An important event in the history of a family, communicated by either the husband to his wife, or by an elder to a younger, one, even in the ordinary course of conversation, at a time when there was no controversy about it, may well be held to be a statement made in the ordinary course of business.[79]

Entries in account books should, in order to be relevant, be regularly kept in the course of business.[80]

Where accounts are kept in loose sheets of paper, they do not have the probative force of a book of account regularly kept in the course of business.[81]

A book of accounts may be said to be regularly kept, although the book is not entered up from day to day or from hour to hour as the transactions take place.[82]

30. DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SECTION 32, CL. (2) AND SECTION 34

The plaintiff relied on entries in the handwriting of her deceased husband, kept in the ordinary course of his business. It was held that entries in accounts, relevant only under Section 34, are not alone sufficient to charge any person with liability; corroboration is required. But where accounts are relevant under this clause also, they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible only under Section 34, require corroboration. Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both sections, and where this is so, the necessity of corroboration prescribed by Section 34, does not arise. Though accounts which are relevant under this clause do not, as a matter of law, require corroboration, the Judge is not bound to act on them without corroboration; that is a matter on which he must exercise his own judicial discretion, as a judge of fact.[83]

Clause (2) does not make the account books conclusive proof of the facts stated therein. Under Section 34, a liability cannot be fastened on any person merely because in the account books of the opposite party, there are certain entries adverse to him. Taking Section 32(2) and Section 34 together, it

---

76. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 697, p. 446.
77. Ningawa v. Bharmappa, ILR (1897) 23 Bom 63, 67.
78. Sheonandan Singh v. Jeonandan Dusadh, (1908) 13 CWN 71.
79. Devi Singh v, Phulma, AIR 1961 HP 10.
80. Alinas Chandra v. Pratul Chandra, ILR 55 Cal 1070.
81. Ganesh Prasad Raj v. Narendra Nath Sen, AIR 1953 SC 431.
82. Deputy Commissioner of Bara Banki v. Munshi Ram Parshad, (1899) 26 IA 254 : ILR 27 Cal 118, overruling Munchershaw Bezonji v. The New Dhurumsey S&W Company, ILR (1880) 4 Bom 576; Chandrashwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Bisheshwar Pratap Narain Singh, ILR (1926) 5 Pat 777.
83. Rampyrabai v. Balaji Shridhar, ILR (1904) 28 Bom 294 : 6 Bom LR 50; J.N Eranna Rao v. V D H Subbayya Setty & Co., AIR 1960 AP 331.

is clear that, even if the account books may be treated as relevant it is discretionary for the court to require additional proof of any particular entry.[84]

The material difference as between any entry relevant under Section 34 and one relevant under Section 32(2) is that, in the former case, the person who made the entry may be available as a witness, while in the latter case he is not.

Entries of payment made by a creditor in the ledger (samadaskat book) belonging to a debtor fall within this clause, and although they are admissions in his own favour, they are not excluded by Section 21.[85] In a limited company, the books and papers kept in the usual course of business are the best evidence and they can be admitted under Section 32(2), when the writer is dead or is not available etc.[86]

It is not necessary or useful to attempt an exact definition, "of a book". A collection of sheets is implied in the conception of "a book". It connotes an intention that it should serve as a permanent record. Beyond these two ideas, it is not necessary that it should consist of a particular number of sheets or that it should be bound in a particular way.[87]

However where there were loose sheets of almanac with blanks left at several places, it was held by the Supreme Court, that there was a possibility of entries or sheets being substituted or interpolated at different places; the entries cannot be said to have been made in regular course of business and cannot have the necessary probative value of a book of account.[88]

Where the account books were written from rough notes not from day to day, but once in a month, and the rough notes were not preserved and the cash balance was written in two parts every day, it was held that the practice adopted is not to make the account books any the less regular or not contemporaneous, and it did not show that the books were not kept in the regular course of business.[89]

Where the question was whether a building was constructed before or after 1-4-1947, in a proceeding for fixation of fair rent under the Rent Control Act, it was held that the counterfoils of the rent receipts made in the ordinary course of business by the landlord are admissible under Section 32(2).[90] Panjis are maintained by Panjikars who are professional genealogists and they systematically maintain pedigree tables in the community of Naitha Brahmins. They go from place to place and periodically ascertain the genealogies of their clients and enter them in Panjis (Palm leaf manuscripts of genealogy) and add them such fresh additions as occur in the family from time to time; they are considered important in this community in connection with questions of marriage (who may marry whom) and relationship and caste. They are admissible u/Section 32(2).[91] Where a husband had written to his wife making reference to a settlement, and asked her to do certain acts in pursuance of the settlement, such as telling his uncle that he would execute a mortgage deed in his favour, when the letters were filed to prove a family settlement, it was held that the letters were relevant u/Section 32(2), of the Act.[92]

The record, prepared by a Magistrate, of proceedings at an identification parade conducted by him cannot be regarded as a statement made by him in the ordinary course of business, and so, such a document cannot be admitted under Section 32(2) and treated as a substantive piece of evidence; the proceedings of the parade can only be proved by the oral deposition of the Magistrate who held them or, perhaps, by the deposition of some other person in authority who was present when the parade was held.[93]

---

84. Kachrulal v. Nandlal, (1955) Nag 618.
85. Jethibai v. Putlibai, (1912) 34 Bom LR 1020.
86. Lodna Colliery Co. Ltd. v. Bholanath Rai, AIR 1954 Cal 233.
87. Ambalavana Pillai v. Gowri Ammal, AIR 1936 Mad 871.
88. Ganesh Prasad Ray v. Narendra Nath Sen, AIR 1953 SC 431.
89. Kutch Bhabhanbai v. Kanji Ravji, AIR 1950 Kutch 90. See contra : Kanbidhanji v. Kandidhanji Ratna, AIR 1950 Cut 47.
90. P K. Rukmini Bai v. Venkateshwara Silk House, Bangalore, AIR 1972 Mys 143.
91. Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain, AIR 1954 SC 601.
92. Ramamurthy v. Subba Rao, AIR 1937 Mad 19.
93. Roshan Bahari v. State, ILR 1956 Punj 140.

31. IN THE DISCHARGE OF PROFESSIONAL DUTY

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE[1], states: "Declarations, oral or written, made by deceased persons, in the ordinary course of duty, as to facts within their personal knowledge, contemporaneously with the facts stated and without motive to misrepresent, are admissible in proof of their contents.

The grounds of reception are: (1) death; and (2) the presumption of truth which arises from the mechanical and generally disinterested nature of entries made in the ordinary course of duty, and from their constant liability, if false, to be detected by the declarant's superiors".

"The declarations must have been made contemporaneously with the facts recorded, which term, however, is not to be construed in the strict sense applicable to declarations that are a part of the res gestae; or in the loose one applicable to entries in public registers, or memoranda admitted to refresh the memory of a witness. The entry should be made at or near the time of the act—a record in the evening of an act done the same morning has been received; so, perhaps, might one be which was made the next day; while an interval of two days has sufficed to exclude."[2]

While under the English Law the declaration must be contemporaneous with the fact recorded and further the declarant must have personal knowledge of the fact, under this clause these conditions are not necessary though it may affect the weight to be attached.

A register of marriages kept by a Kazi, since deceased, who celebrated the marriage, in which register was entered the amount of the dower, was held to be admissible and relevant, as evidence of the sum fixed, being an entry in a book kept in the discharge of duty, within this clause.[3] Entries in the Draft Record of Rights are entries maintained in the normal course of business.[4] Entries in the Revenue Records, regarding the ownership and possession of lands are admissible under Section 32(2).[5] If a book is maintained by a Chowkidar, for noting about the death of the person within his jurisdiction, whether he made the entries himself or got the entries written by another as he was empowered to do so under clause (b) of rule 126 of the Police Manual, Chowkidar and the writer are dead, the entry is admissible in evidence.[6] Where there was a post-mortem report of a civil surgeon, since deceased, it was held that the post-mortem report prepared by the surgeon was admissible under Section 32(2) as being a statement made by a deceased person in the discharge of his professional duty.[7] Where a commissioner made an enquiry and submitted his report and later died, it was held that the report was admissible u/s. 32(2), as it was made in the performance of his official duty.[8]

32. PROOF

Section 32(2), deals only with relevancy of evidence and not the procedure for its proof. Before a relevant statement is admitted, its authorship must be established in the ordinary way.[9]

The primary evidence of a statement in a letter that of the writer, would be the writer, but if his whereabouts are not known, the statement could be proved by several modes of proof of handwriting laid down in the Act. Before admitting it under Section 32(2) it must be proved that such statement was written by the person alleged.[10]

---

1. 15th Edn. (2000), Page 844 (para 35-21).
2. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), p. 846, (para 35-24).
3. Zakeri Begum v. Sakina Begum, (1892) 19 IA 157 : ILR 19 Cal 689.
4. Roy and Co. v. Nani Bala Dey (Smt.), AIR 1979 Cal 50.
5. Sri Bimeshwara Swamy Temple v. Krishnamurthy, AIR 1973 SC 1299.
6. ILR 1964 Cut 829; Padmalal Mishra v. Fuladei (Smt.), 31 Cut LT 632: relying on; Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain, AIR 1954 SC 601; Ramamurthy v. Subba Rao, AIR 1937 Mad 19.
7. Ram Balak Singh v. State, AIR 1964 Pat 62; Mohan Singh v. King-Emperor, AIR 1925 All 413; In re : Govindu, 1969 Cr LJ 1157; Chhedilal v. Shakuran, AIR 1967 All 269. See also Ram Balak Singh v. State, AIR 1964 Pat 62. Where the medical officer was not easily available for examination. Injury report and post-mortem report in the handwriting of the doctor preparing it, proved, admissible, Lakhu Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 3638 (Raj).
8. Lakshmi Narayan Arjun Das v. State Bank of India, AIR 1969 Pat 385.
9. Nagaraja Rao v. Koothappan, AIR 1941 Mad 602.
10. Pratapsinh Ved v. State, AIR 1955 Sau 68.

Proof of authorship of the entries, can be done by calling a witness who saw the deceased making the entry or who is conversant with the handwriting of the deceased.[11]

The entries should have been made by the deceased person himself. Entries made by another person at his instance are not admissible under this section.[12]

Entries in registers prepared by an Amin who is dead, are admissible for proving the nature of the tenancy.[13]

33. DECLARATIONS AGAINST INTEREST OF MAKER [SUB-SECTION (3)]

This clause comprises three classes of declarations against interest viz; where they affect the declarant's (1) pecuniary interest; (2) proprietary interest; and (3) personal liberty or property, by tending to charge him with a crime or to subject him to payment of damages.

34. STATEMENT AGAINST THE INTEREST OF MAKER

A statement of a deceased person, in order to be admissible under this clause, must be a statement of a relevant fact and must be against the proprietary or pecuniary interest of the person making it.[14]

This clause makes a declaration against interest admissible in evidence. The principle upon which such statements are regarded as admissible in evidence, is that a person is not, in the ordinary course of affairs, likely to make a statement which is to his own detriment, unless it is true.[15]

The clause is based upon the knowledge of human nature. Self-interest induces a man to be cautious in saying anything against himself. When one makes a declaration in disparagement of one's own rights or interests, it is generally true, and because it is so, the law has deemed it safe to admit evidence of such a declaration. Illustrations (e) and (f) apply to this clause.

The form of the declaration is immaterial; it may be verbal or written, in a deed or a will, or in any other document.

Declarations against interest should, to be admissible, have been against interest at the time they were made, and it is no answer that they might possibly turn out to be so subsequently.[16] The interest that is predicated in Section 32(3), must be one which relates to the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making it. It is the present pecuniary or proprietary interest of the person making the statement that must be affected by the statement and should not be one of some future contingency that may be affected by the statement, in order that the same may be admissible.[17]

Before a statement can be admissible under this clause it must be shown that the person making it knew that it was against his pecuniary or proprietary interest. In most cases such knowledge would have to be inferred from the surrounding circumstances.[18] Where the statement of a person was received under Section 32(3), on the ground that it might have exposed that person to a suit for damages; but there was no person whatever for thinking that he knew that he was exposing himself to a suit for damages: the statement ought not to have been admitted in evidence.[19]

Where the question was whether a certain transaction was benami, the contention was that the question could not be examined on the basis of statements made several years after the date of the transaction. The Supreme Court repelled that contention and held that as the statements made, were against the proprietary interest of the maker, they were admissible under Section 32(3) and also under Section 21.[20] The statement of a person that he is separated from a joint family of which he was a coparcener, and that he has no further interest in the joint family property or claim to any assets left by

---

11. Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain, AIR 1954 SC 601.
12. Mussamat Naina Keor v. Gobardhan Singh, (1916) 2 PLJ 42.
13. Abinad Chandra Majhi v. Pratul Chandra Ghose, (1928) 55 Cal 1070.
14. Soney Lal Jha v. Darabdeo Narain Singh, ILR (1935) 14 Pat 461 (FB).
15. Dal Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bhahadur Singh, (1929) 32 Bom LR 487 : 57 IA 14 : AIR 1930 PC 79.
16. Ex parte EDWARDS: In re : Tollemache, (1884) 14 QBD 415.
17. Arjunshukla v. Juteshi Shukla, AIR 1954 Orissa 52.
18. Ram Rati Kuer v. Dwarika Prasad, AIR 1967 SC 1134 : (1967) 2 SCJ 789.
19. Savitri Devi (Smt.) v. Ram Ran Bijoy Prasad Singh, AIR 1950 PC 1.
20. Bhim Singh v. Kan Singh, AIR 1980 SC 727.

his father, would be a statement made against the interest of such a person. And after such a person is dead, it would be relevant under Section 32(3).[21] Where a statement was made in a gift-deed by a Hindu widow that the properties mentioned therein were already gifted away by her father-in-law and by her husband, it was held that the statement attracted the provisions of Section 32(3) and (7), as they are against her proprietary interest.[22] Where A, in a mortgage deed executed by him, admitted that B was the adopted son of his deceased brother C, it was held that such a statement, being against his pecuniary interest, as he would lose his share in the property of C, if B was the adopted son of C, was admissible under Section 32(3).[23] The documents showing the transfer of property by B as guardian of A and describing A as his adopted son, are admissible, as such statements were against his own proprietary interest.[24] A statement of the deceased, in a compromise petition in a previous suit in which she had challenged the adoption by her husband of a boy 11 years old, was held to be admissible, as she had given up her stand challenging the adoption, in the compromise, and as it affected her pecuniary and proprietary interest in the properties, and she would become only a maintenance holder.[25] A statement in a sale deed by the vendor, since deceased, that he had received the consideration for the sale, is against his own pecuniary interest and is good evidence in support of passing of consideration.[26] An affidavit containing an admission against the interests of the deponent is admissible under Section 32(3).[27] A statement by a landlord who was dead, that there was a tenant on the land, was a statement against his proprietary interest and was held admissible under this clause.[28]

When a particular statement that her husband was separated from the joint family, was made by a widow; it was held that the statement was made consciously, knowing what she was stating and also knowing that the effect of her statement would be against her proprietary interest in the family property.[29]

Statements by deceased members of a family as witnesses in prior litigation are admissible as evidence of conduct under Section 8 but not to prove a family arrangement because they are not statements made against their interests, as required under Section 32(3).[30] A statement made by a deceased person, in his will, that he had spent a certain amount in effecting repairs to his house was held to be not admissible in evidence as it was not a statement made against his pecuniary or proprietary interest.[31]

A Hindu widow purported to adopt her brother's grandson, fifty-four years after the death of her husband, in pursuance of a power to adopt conferred on her by her husband. The widow obtained mutation of the name of the adopted boy in place of her own in revenue registers. In her evidence in the mutation proceedings, she stated that she had her husband's authority to adopt. In a suit by the reversioners, against the adopted boy to recover the property, it was held that the evidence of the widow in the mutation proceedings was not admissible under this clause or under Section 33.[32] However a statement of a dead person, in an adoption deed relating to an authority to adopt was held admissible u/Section 32(3), being a statement against the interest of the dead person making it.[33]

Though a recital of boundary in a document between third parties, is not ordinarily admissible to prove possession of title as against a person who is not a party to the document, it could be admitted under Section 32(3), when the executant of the document is dead and when it was made against the

---

21. Bhagwati Prasad v. Rameshwari Kuer, AIR 1952 SC 72 : 1951 SCR 603; Gopinath Deb v. Jagannath Baral, AIR 1969 Ori 18; Ningavva v. Bharamappa, ILR 23 Bom 63; Appala Narasimham v. Udalama, AIR 1959 AP 407; Rangayyan v. Innasimuthu Mudali, AIR 1956 Mad 226; Kantilal Purushotam v. Narsibhai, ILR 1972 Guj 790.
22. Makkapati Purnananda Sastri v. Chintalapati Purnananda, AIR 1961 AP 435.
23. Harihar Mohapatra v. Nabakishore Rajguru Mohapatra, AIR 1963 Ori 45.
24. Jagabandhu Senapati v. Bhagut, AIR 1974 Ori 120.
25. Savitri Dei v. Baskhar Bhuyan, AIR 1972 Ori 148; following K.V. Subbaraju v. C. Subbaraju, AIR 1968 SC 947.
26. Ushamani Dei v. Gangadharba Barik, AIR 1977 (NOC) 301 : ILR (1977) 2 Cut 157; Harekrushna Samantaray v. Krushna Chandra Raut, ILR 1974 Cut 33; Gulam Ali v. Sulthan Khan, AIR 1967 Ori 55.
27. Saligram v. Takurjee, AIR 1955 Ajmer 28.
28. Abdul Azib Molla v. Ebrahim Molla, ILR (1904) 31 Cal 965.
29. Ram Rati Kuer v. Dwarika Prasad Singh, AIR 1967 SC 1134.
30. Madho Das v. Mukund Ram, AIR 1955 SC 481.
31. Narhari v. Ambabai, (1919) 22 Bom LR 57 : ILR 44 Bom 192.
32. Bal Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bhadur Singh, (1929) 32 Bom LR 487 : 57 IA 14 : 52 All 1.
33. Andhi Kuer (Smt.) v. Rajeshwar Singh, AIR 1972 Pat 325.

proprietary interest of the person making it.[34] The recitals as to boundaries in documents not inter partes are admissible in evidence under Sections 11, 13, 32(3), and 32(7) of the Evidence Act.[35] The plaintiff sued in 1893 to recover possession of certain land. The defendants denied the plaintiff's title. The plaintiff tendered in evidence a registered mortgage-deed of adjacent land executed in 1877, which set forth the boundaries of the land comprised in the mortgage, and as one of such boundaries, referred to the land in question as then belonging to the plaintiff. At the date of the deed, there was no litigation existing between the present litigants, and at the date of the present suit, the mortgagor was dead. It was held that the statement in the deed was admissible under this clause as a statement against the pecuniary or proprietary interest of the mortgagor.[36]

A Full Bench of the Patna High Court has dissented from this view. It has held that a statement of boundaries in a document of title between third parties, who are dead at the time the statement is sought to be put in evidence, unless it is shown that at the time the statement was made, it was contrary to the interest of the maker, and that at the time it was sought to be used, it was a statement of a relevant fact.[37]

35. STATEMENT EXPOSING DECLARANT TO CRIMINAL PROSECUTION OR SUIT FOR DAMAGES

A statement of a deceased person, which if true, would expose the maker to a criminal prosecution or suit for damages is relevant.[38]

The confession of an accused person implicating himself and an accomplice in a crime and who is since dead, is admissible under this clause and is not excluded by ill. (b) to Section 30.[39]

A letter from the co-respondent to the petitioner in a divorce suit, admitting adultery with the respondent, was held to be admissible in evidence as it would expose the co-respondent to a criminal prosecution.[40]

Where a member of a gang committing dacoity was caught by the villagers, and he disclosed the names of his companions before he died, it was held that the statement of the deceased implicating himself as well as his companions was admissible u/Section 32(3), and could be used against other accomplices named by him.[41]

Where an accused was charged with breach of trust, a statement by a deceased person to a witness that the accused gave him a document, that he wanted to know the contents of the document so as to find out in what way they would be useful to him, would expose him to the prosecution for abetting the criminal breach of trust or himself misappropriating the documents, and so is admissible.[42]

36. STATEMENT GIVING OPINION AS TO A PUBLIC RIGHT OR CUSTOM OR MATTER OF GENERAL INTEREST [SUB-SECTION (4)]

Clause 4 of Section 32 says that the statement of relevant facts made by persons who are dead, are admissible, provided such statements give the opinion of such persons, regarding the existence of any public right or custom, or a matter of public or general interest.

The admissibility of declarations of deceased persons in cases of public right or custom, or matters of public or general interest, is allowed, as these rights or customs are generally of ancient and obscure

---

34. 1979 Punj LJ 376; Thyagarajan Chetty v. Narayana Thevan, AIR 1940 Mad 450; Ningawa v. Bhar mappa, ILR (1897) 23 Bom 63; Tikaram v. Motilal, AIR 1930 All 299; Abdul Rahim Kazi v. Jonab Ali Sikdar, AIR 1923 Cal 299 : 68 IC 329.
35. V.A. Amiappa Nainar (died) v. Annamali Chettiar (died), AIR 1972 Mad 154.
36. Ningawa v. Bharamappa, ILR (1897) 23 Bom 63.
37. Soney Lal Jha v. Darabdeo Narain Singh, (1935) 14 Pat 461, (FB); Subudhi Padhan v. Raghu Bhuyan, AIR 1962 Orissa 40; Chandreswar v. Ramachandra, AIR 1973 Pat 215; Bhuriya v. Ramakali, AIR 1971 Punj 9.
38. T.S. John v. State of Kerala, 1984 Cr LJ 753 (Ker).
39. Nga Po Yin v. King-Emperor, (1906) UBR (Evi) (1904-06) 3.
40. Cockman v. Cockman, ILR (1933) 56 All 570.
41. Narpat v. State, (1961) 1 Cr LJ 591 (All).
42. Mohal Lal Mulchand v. Mehta Kanaiya Lal Pranshanker, AIR 1950 Kutch 52.

origin, and may be acted upon only at distant intervals of time; direct proof of evidence is not, therefore, demanded.[43]

The principle on which the exception of reputation regarding public rights rests is that the reputation can hardly exist without the concurrence of many parties interested to investigate the subject, and such concurrence is presumptive evidence of the existence of an ancient right, of which direct proof cannot be given in most cases.[44]

The admissibility of the deceased persons in such cases is sanctioned because in local matters, in which the community are interested, all persons living in the neighbourhood are likely to be conversant; because, common rights and liabilities being naturally talked of in public, what is dropped in conversation respecting them may be presumed to be ture; because conflicting interests would lead to contradiction from others if the statements were false; and thus a trustworthy reputation may arise from the concurrence of many parties unconnected with each other, who are all interested in investigating the subjects.[45]

"Declarations made by deceased persons, of competent knowledge, ante litem motam, are admissible in proof of ancient rights of a public or general nature.

Evidence of this description is frequently included under the general term reputation; and is admissible for or against the Crown, as well as ordinary party.

The grounds of admission are (1) death; (2) necessity, ancient facts being generally incapable of direct proof; and (3) the guarantee of truth afforded by the public nature of the rights, which tends to preclude individual bias and lessen the danger of misstatements by exposing them to constant contradiction."[46]

TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed, Sections 546, 611) states: "The origin of the right claimed is usually of so ancient a date, and the rights themselves are of so undefined and general a character, that direct proof of their existence and nature can seldom be obtained, and ought not be required; in matters in which the community are interested, all persons must be deemed conversant; as common rights are naturally talked of in public, and as the nature of such rights excludes the probability of individual bias, what is dropped in conversation respecting them may be presumed to be true; the general interest which belongs to the subject would lead to immediate contradiction from others, if the statements proved were false; reputation can hardly exist without the concurrence of many parties unconnected with each other; who are all alike interested in investigating the subject; such concurrence furnishes strong presumptive evidence of truth; and it is this prevailing current of assertion which is resorted to as evidence, for to this every member of the community is supposed to be privy, and to contribute his share..... A distinction has to be drawn under English law between the meaning of the terms public and general, the former being applied to that which concerns every member of the State, while the latter is limited to a lessor, though still a considerable portion of the community, as for example, to the person living in a particular district or neighbourhood. In matters strictly public, reputation from any one has been held receivable, while in matters of general interest the testimony of persons wholly unconnected with the place has been regarded as inadmissible. So far as admissibility is concerned, the Indian Act makes to distinction..... The Indian Evidence Act here follows the English law. It appears that competent knowledge in the declarant is an essential pre-requisite to the admission of his testimony; and although all the Queen's subjects are presumed to have that knowledge in some degree where the matter is of public concernment, yet, in other matters, which are not strictly public, though they are interesting to many persons, some particular evidence of such knowledge is generally required."

In HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, p. 59, Para 80 it is stated "public right" imports a right exercisable by every member of the community, for example, a right of highway or of fishery in tidal rivers, or a right of way. A general right is one which affects some considerable section of the community, for example, a right of common, or the right to elect the churchwardens of a parish."

The right must have been one of whose existence the declarant should be aware. If the declaration is made otherwise than upon the declarant's own knowledge, it will be rejected.

---

43. R v. Bedfordshire, (1855) 4 E & B 535.
44. Wright v. Tatham, (1838) 5 Cl & F 670.
45. Per LORD CAMPBELL, C.J., in R v. Bedfordshire, (1855) 4 E & B, 535.
46. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), Page 848 (para 35-28).

The recitals in the document are admissible under this section. The history dealing with the founding of a temple is a matter of general interest and when a statement about it is made by a deceased person at a time when there was no controversy on this question, that statement would clearly come within the scope of this clause.[47] Where the question as to who is the founder of a religious endowment is in dispute, a recital in a deed executed by a Mahant, who was for some time connected with the management of the religious endowment, mentioning the founder of the endowment, was held admissible under Section 32(4), as such statement was ante litem motam.[48] Where there was an assertion of a private right negativing a public right, a statement made by the great grandson's son of the original grantee in inam proceedings was relied on. It was held that such statements must be given great weight as one made ante litem motam, although it is in the interest of the maker then.[49]

In a suit filed by a Zamindar to recover certain forest tracts from the Government, on the ground they were included within the limits of his Zamindari, both the parties relied on Ayakut accounts containing certain statements of boundaries showing the inclusion of some disputed tracts in the Zamindari limits or in the limits of Government villages. It was held that those accounts were made for revenue purposes to show the source of revenue in each village, giving the limits of the villagers to which they are referred; they were admissible as evidence of reputation provided they were produced from proper custody and sufficiently proved to be genuine.[50]

This clause is inapplicable to a document purporting to deal with the rights of a private individual as against the public, in which the interests of the individual form the subject-matter of the statement.[51] A map prepared by a person, who is dead, in a previous case not inter partes, showing the limits of a particular district, is not admissible as it is not a matter of public right or public or general interest within the meaning of this clause.[52] Section 32(4) applies only when it is a public right or custom, or is a matter of general interest. When a document does not show what exactly were the rights or the customary privileges of the community in regard to a certain temple, it was held that the document was not admissible.[53]

The recitals relating to the boundaries of plots covered by a document do not constitute the opinion of the executant of the deed and are not admissible.[54]

37. BEFORE ANY CONTROVERSY HAS ARISEN

"Declarations made after the commencement of the situation from which the controversy springs, are admissible, if made before any dispute has in fact arisen; while those made after a dispute has arisen are inadmissible, although the dispute was unknown to the declarant, for that is a collateral issue which might be impossible to prove, or was fraudulently commenced with a view to excluding the declarations, or involved different parties or related to different property or claims.

On the other hand, declarations as to the right will be received although made for the express purpose of preventing disputes, or after a claim has been asserted but finally abandoned; or after the existence of non-contentious legal proceedings involving the same right or after the existence of contentious legal proceedings involving different rights or even the same right, if only collaterally and not directly involved."[55]

The declarations should have been made ante litem motam, i.e., before the beginning of any controversy, and not simply before the commencement of any suit involving the same subject-matter.

---

47. K.C.M. Harichandan v. Commissioner of Endowments, ILR (1961) Cut 109.
48. Raghunath Misra v. Nityanand Sahu, ILR 1963 Cut 257; ILR 1962 Cut 109; Natabar Parichha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1952 Ori 75.
49. Mazhar Ali Saheb v. Gulam Murtujah Saheb, AIR 1958 AP 8; Rajkumar Lukhoisana Singh v. Ayekpam Angosingh, AIR 1958 Mani 7; (declarations post litem motam are inadmissible).
50. Siva Subramaniya v. Secretary of State for India, ILR 9 Mad 285.
51. Heiniger v. Droz, (1900) 3 Bom LR 1 : ILR 25 Bom 433.
52. Kesho Prasad v. Bhagjogna Kuer, (1937) 39 Bom LR 731 : ILR 16 Pat 258, (PC); Illustration (i) exemplifies this clause.
53. Mothilal v. Baba Baldeo, AIR 1952 Vin Pra 36.
54. Ram Sharan v. Narayan Chandra, AIR 1954 Cal 125.
55. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE 15th Edn. (2000) para 35-32, page 850.

The operation of bias is thus excluded.[56] Such declarations of persons must have been made ante litem motam and such persons must have been dead, or not found to give evidence, as contemplated u/s. 32, then only they are admissible.[57]

To render a statement as having been made post litem motam the same thing must be in controversy both before and after it is made.[58]

38. STATEMENT RELATING TO EXISTENCE OF RELATIONSHIP [SUB-SECTION (5)]

Under clause (5), a statement relating to the existence of any relationship between the persons alive or dead, is declared as relevant. But that person making the statement must have special means of knowledge.

Four conditions are to be satisfied for the application of clause (5) of Section 32.

(1) The statement must relate to the existence of any relationship by blood, marriage or adoption.

(2) The person making the statement must have special means of knowledge about the relationship.

(3) The statement must have been made before the question in dispute was raised.

(4) One of the four conditions namely, that a person who is dead, etc., is contained in the main provisions of Section 32.[59]

The language in Section 32(5), unrestricted as it is by any condition, embraces every statement as to relationship made by a person having special means of knowledge of it, and it is immaterial whether it was made in a judicial proceeding or otherwise.[60]

Evidence of general reputation is inadmissible as proof of relationship; it is necessary to put forward evidence of the kind described in Section 32(5), (6) & (7) and Section 50, to prove the existence of relationship between persons deceased, whenever the question is in issue.[61]

39. PARENT AND CHILD

Where a person brought a suit for declaration that he was the adopted son of one Sardar and is entitled to succeed to the Sardarship, evidence of documents from the official sources, wherein the Sardar who was dismissed, and other members gave statements to the officials, as to the adoption of the plaintiff by the dismissed Sardar, was filed. It was held by the Privy Council that as those statements were made in connection with a matter of local interest, viz., the appointment of a new Sardar, they carried great weight and could not be rejected as mere self-assertion.[62]

Where a mortgage was executed by A & B wherein it was admitted by A that B was the adopted son of his deceased brother C, it was held that such a statement, viz., the admission of A is relevant u/s. 32(5).[63] Where A mentioned in the gift deed, and also in the mutation proceedings, that B was her daughter, it was held that the statement was admissible u/Section 32(5), in a suit against B, after A's death, in which her relationship to A was denied.[64] In an application containing a statement before the Tahsildar, requesting him to enter the name of the person adopted, in the revenue accounts in the place of the applicant, it was held that the certified copies of such documents which were in the custody of the 56. Berkeley Peerage case, (1811) 4 Camp 401, 417; Amina Khatun Musammat v. Khalil-ur-Rahman Khan, ILR (1933) 8 Luck 455.

---

57. Busoid v. Newaj Ahmed Khan, AIR 1929 Cal 533.
58. Harichandan v. Commissioner of Endowments, ILR 1961 Cut 109.
59. Dolgobinda v. Nimai Charan, AIR 1959 SC 914.
60. Biro v. Atma Ram, AIR 1937 PC 101.
61. Lakshmi Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, AIR 1937 PC 201; Shivlal v. Joatha, AIR 1952 Raj 167; Kunjilal v. Subalal, AIR 1952 MB 12; Abdul Rahman v. Halima Khatun, 84 CWN 539.
62. Arjuno Naiko v. Modono Mohono Naiko, AIR 1940 PC 150; Subbarao v. Venkata Rama Rao, AIR 1964 AP 53; (statement of adoptive father in an earlier Revenue Case) Punjabrao Deorao v. Shesh Rao, AIR 1962 Bom 175 (Deed of adoption).
63. Harihar Rajguru v. Nabakishore Rajguru, AIR 1963 Ori 45.
64. Lal Devi v. Munilal, ILR 1959 Punj 1269.

Government satisfied the requirements of Section 32(5), and the documents were admissible in evidence.[65]

Statements of the father (since deceased) in his written statement in a maintenance case filed by the mother of the child, denying the paternity of the child, were not within this clause or Section 33 and were not admissible in evidence as against the child. The judgment of the Magistrate in the same proceedings, holding that the child was not the child of that father, was not binding upon the child and was inadmissible in evidence. Statements by the mother that the child was begotten by a person other than her husband were inadmissible against the child.[66]

40. MARRIAGE

An admission by a plaintiff of her marriage with a person, made before there was any dispute about such marriage, may be proved under Section 21(1) read with this clause.[67]

Where a statement was made in an unregistered gift deed that the donee is his legally married wife, it was held that such statement is admissible u/Section 32(5), as an unregistered gift deed, is admissible in regard to collateral matters.[68] Where entry in the family was maintained under rules and on the basis of divorce the name of the first wife was deleted and that of the second wife, subsequently married, was entered, the representation made by the husband and recorded as entry in the family register is very much relevant under Section 32(5) to prove that the person mentioned in the entry had married the second.[69]

Strict proof of marriage is necessary in certain criminal offences, e.g., bigamy, adultery, enticing away a married woman. This clause has no application in such cases. Otherwise general reputation of marriage is admissible.[70]

Age.—As the question as to the existence of any relationship also includes the question as to the commencement of that relationship, declarations of deceased, competent declarants, are admissible to prove a person's date of birth, and, consequently, his age, minority or majority, or the order in which the members of the family are born. Such declarations are also admissible to prove parentage, names of relations, or the date of death of a member of the family, as death implies termination of a relationship, just as birth implies its commencement.[71] A statement as to the age of a member of a family, made by a sister, or a statement as to his age made by a testator in his will, was held to be admissible after her death.[72]

Section 32(5), cannot be construed literally, and a statement regarding age cannot be said to be not one relating to existence of any relationship by blood or marriage or adoption.[73]

Entry as to age, in the school register, is a relevant piece of evidence, though slight evidence to the contrary may displace it.[74] A statement given to the school authority by the deceased father of the student and entered in the admission register of the school as to the age of the individual was held admissible u/Section 32(5).[75] The entry made by B in his Panchang, when A had gone to consult B about the position of stars at the time of birth of A's daughter, was held to be admissible in evidence as to the age of the girl, after B's death, since the question of age is a question of relationship by blood and B had special means of knowledge of the fact.[76] For the purpose of the decision of a question of

---

65. Lakshmi Reddy v. Subba Reddy, ILR 1963 AP 1085; relying on Dolgobinda Paricha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914.
66. Karapaya Servai v. Mayandi, ILR (1933) 12 Ran 243 : 36 Bom LR 394 (PC).
67. Mussammat Bashiran v. Mohammad Husain, ILR (1941) 16 Luck 615.
68. Subarna v. Arjuno, AIR 1951 Ori 337; Vaikuntam Mamikyamma v. Puppala, AIR 1971 Ori 49.
69. Twarku v. Surti, AIR 1997 HP 76.
70. Empress v. Pitambar Singh, (1879) 5 Cal 566 (FB).
71. Mahadeo Prasad v. Ghulam Mohammad, AIR 1947 All 161 : ILR (1946) All 649.
72. Oriental Government Security Life Assurance Co. Ltd. v. Narasimha Chary, ILR (1901) 25 Mad 183; K.V. Subbaraju v. C. Subbaraju, AIR 1968 SC 947.
73. K. Venkata Subbaraju v. C. Subbaraju, AIR 1968 SC 947.
74. Bhagwan Dass v. Harchand Singh, AIR 1971 P&H 65.
75. Shiv Ram v. Shiv Charan Singh, AIR 1964 Raj 126; Bhimmandal v. Magaram, AIR 1961 Pat 21; Bujhawan Singh v. Shyama Devi, AIR 1964 Pat 301; V.M. Nampoothiri v. K.K. Kuruvila, AIR 1957 Ker 103.
76. Madan Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Raj 381.

limitation, it was necessary to prove the date of the plaintiff's birth. The plaintiff and one of his witnesses each spoke to statements made to them by the relatives of the plaintiff, who were since deceased, relating to the date of the plaintiff's birth. It was held that such statements were admissible in evidence.[77] A plaint in a former suit, verified by a deceased member of the family, and as such having special means of knowledge, was held admissible under this clause to prove the order in which certain persons were born and their ages.[78] In an action to recover the amount due upon certain mortgages, the defendant pleaded that he was an infant when he executed them. As evidence in support of this plea, there was tendered, at the trial, an entry, recording the date of the defendant's birth, made by the defendant's deceased father in a book in which he made similar entries with regard to his family. It was held, under an Ordinance exactly similar to the Evidence Act, that having regard to ill S. (1) to this section the entry was admissible in evidence.[79]

41. PEDIGREE

Statements contained in a pedigree or horoscope would come under Section 32(5), provided that the other conditions viz., (1) statements, either written or verbal, must have been made by a person who is dead or cannot be found, etc. (2) The statements must relate to the existence of relationship by blood, marriage or adoption. (3) The person making the statement must have special means of knowledge as to the relationship in question. (4) The statement must have been made before the question in dispute was raised.

The statement in a genealogical table, by a member of the family, or by a person having special means of knowledge was held to be relevant under this clause.[80] Statements made by deceased members of a family are admissible in evidence to prove pedigree, if they are made before there was anything to throw doubt upon them.[81]

Evidence of witnesses as to their having heard the names of the ancestors recited by members of the plaintiff's family on ceremonial and other occasions, was held to be admissible evidence in support of the pedigree on which the plaintiff based his claim. Such evidence is not open to criticism merely on the ground that the witnesses are relatives.[82]

The oral evidence in a case consisted of statements made by the plaintiffs as to their descent, the information as to which they had received from their ancestors. Objection was taken that such of those statements as were made since 1847 were inadmissible in evidence under clauses (5) and (6), as being post litem. The Privy Council held that they were admissible, the heirship of the then claimants not being really in dispute at that time.[83]

The Supreme Court held that the Panjis are maintained by Panjikars who are professional genealogists, and they systematically maintain pedigree table in the community of Maithil Brahmins; they are maintained from time to time; by making fresh additions as they occur in the families, and they are considered important because questions of marriage (who may marry whom) and relationship and caste turn on them what they note down affect a whole family and of those who marry into it. Also there are checks and counter checks as information pours in different member of the family. Since statements are admissible under Section 32(2) and 32(6).[84]

The Privy Council held that it is the business of a Mirasi who is a hereditary family bard, to acquaint himself with the details of a family history, whose glories he recounts in a song on ceremonial occasions,

---

77. Ram Chandra Dutt v. Jogeswar Narain Deo, ILR (1893) 20 Cal 758; Bipin Behary Daw v. Sreedam Chunder Dey, ILR (1886) 13 Cal 42 may be considered as overruled.
78. Dhanmull v. Ram Chunder Ghose, ILR (1890) 24 Cal 265, 268; Gokhul Pande v. Baldeo Sukul, ILR (1927) 7 Pat 90; Mauladad Khan v. Abdul Sattar, ILR (1917) 39 All 426.
79. Mahomed Syedol Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark, (1916) 43 IA 256 : 19 Bom LR 157 : (1916) 2 AC 575.
80. Shyamanand Das Mohapatra v. Rama Kanta Das Mohapatra, ILR (1904) 32 Cal 6; Lal Harihar Pratap Bakhsh Singh v. Bisheshwar Bakhsh Singh, ILR (1927) 3 Luck 326; Sarfaraz Khan v. Musammat Rajana, (1928) 4 Luck 39; Dinomoni Chowdhrani v. Brojo Mohini Chowdhrani, (1901) 29 IA 24 : 4 Bom LR 167 : ILR 29 Cal 187.
81. Abdul Ghafur v. Hussain Bibi, (1930) 33 Bom LR 420 : 58 IA 188 : ILR 12 Lah 336; Gokhul Pande v. Baldeo Sukul, ILR (1927) 7 Pat 90.
82. Debi Pershad Chowdhary v. Rani Radha Chowdharin, (1904) 31 IA 160 : ILR 32 Cal 84.
83. Bahadur Singh v. Mohar Singh, (1901) 29 IA 1 : 4 Bom LR 233 : 24 All 94.
84. Sitaji v. Bijendra, AIR 1954 SC 601.

and the fact that he must speak from hearsay does not render his evidence valueless, where pedigree is to be proved.[85]

A family pedigree was sought to be proved by the books kept by the family chronicler and prepared by the chroniclers from time to time from the information supplied by members of the family. It was held that the pedigree would be admissible under this clause and also under Cl. 2.[86] A statement in the family pedigree, made long before the dispute about the existence of relationship of the deceased person who was aware of such relationship, was held admissible u/Section 32(5).[87]

In order to appreciate the evidence of such witnesses, the following principles should be kept in mind:

(1) The relationship or the connection however close it may be, which the witness bears to the persons whose pedigree is sought to be deposed by him.

(2) The nature and character of the special means of knowledge through which the witness has come to know about the pedigree.

(3) The interested nature of the witness concerned.

(4) The precaution which must be taken to rule out any false statement made by the witness post litem motam or one which is derived not by means of special knowledge but purely from his imagination, and

(5) The evidence of the witness must be substantially corroborated as far as time and memory admit.[88]

Deposition on pedigree based on information received from an ancestor was held to be admissible where the ancestor was dead at the time of the trial and information was given by him some 20 years prior to the question in dispute was raised.[89] A statement made by a deceased person, in a proceeding for the correction of a pedigree table started, not for the purpose of settling any dispute between any of the parties, but for the purpose of avoiding a dispute that might arise in future, falls under Section 32(5) and is admissible.[90] The statements of the deceased members of the family made ante litem motam, on the question of pedigree are evidence to prove the pedigree. It is not necessary to prove pedigree tables which were prepared at the time of settlement, by direct testimony of witnesses having personal knowledge.[91] A record known as "Pothi", kept by a Bard (Bhat) showing the relationship in a pedigree was held admissible if it comes from proper custody, though, on facts, it was held that the evidence given on the basis of the Pothi was unreliable.[92]

A party should prove every link in the genealogy. If one link is found missing genealogy cannot be said to be proved.[93]

A geneological table, purporting to have been made by a person since dead, but which was shown to be merely an exhibit binding on him for the purpose of a former suit, was held to be inadmissible in evidence, having been made without the personal knowledge and belief which must be found or presumed in any admissible statement by a deceased person.[94] The plaintiff, to prove his relationship, produced a pedigree which was prepared from the statements of bards and papers produced by them, some time ago by a Raja, to settle the class of Thakurs to which he belonged. It was held that the pedigree was not admissible, since neither any of the bards nor the Raja who assembled the bards of the family and with their assistance had the pedigree drawn up, was called as a witness, and no proof was given that they were within any of the descriptions given by this section which made it unnecessary to

---

85. Abdul Ghafur v. Hussain Bibi, AIR 1931 PC 45.
86. Mohansingh v. Dalpatsingh, (1921) 24 Bom LR 289 : ILR 46 Bom 753.
87. Shanker Daji v. Naranji Nathubhai, AIR 1951 Kutch 85.
88. State of Bihar v. Radha Krishan Singh, AIR 1983 SC 684 : (1983) 3 SCC 118 : (1983) 2 SCJ 119 : (1983) 2 SCR 808.
89. Baidri v. Ramdas Choudhary, 1968 Pat LJR (SC) 26A.
90. Sukhdarshan Singh v. Chanan Singh, AIR 1951 Pepsu 81.
91. Mangal Singh v. Manphul Singh, AIR 1961 Punj 251.
92. Manohan Lal v. Harish Chandra, ILR (1971) 1 All 254.
93. 1983 SC 684 (Supra) on appeal from AIR 1951 Pat 356; Dawood Bibi v. Abubakkar, AIR 1972 Mad 228.
94. Rai Jagatpal Singh v. Raja Jageshar Baksh Singh, (1902) 30 IA 27 : 25 All 143.

call them.[1] In a suit where the plaintiffs alleged that they were collateral relations and heirs of the last male owner, a pedigree table was put in evidence. The persons from whose statements which were made at no distant date, the pedigree had been drawn up, were absent. It was held that the pedigree table was inadmissible.[2] Where the certified copy of the decree, along with two pedigrees, found with it, were produced in court, it was held that the court may presume that the two pedigrees found in the decree were the two pedigrees failed in the suit; that both pedigrees should have been admitted as pedigrees filed by the respective parties to the suit; and not as evidence of relationship u/Section 32(5).[3] Where, in a reversionary suit, the opposing parties produced old pedigrees, and they were mutually contradictory, it was held that there was no authenticity lent to the pedigree by the mere fact of its being part of a settlement record; and that it was incorrect to say that the later pedigree was to be preferred to an older one.[4]

42. HOROSCOPE

A statement in a horoscope need not necessarily be one made at or about the time of the birth of the child, in order to attract Section 32(5).[5]

In a suit to recover possession of immovable property, the plaintiff rendered in evidence a horoscope which, he said, had been given to him by his mother and had been seen by members of his family and used on the occasion of his marriage. He was unable to say by whom the horoscope, or an endorsement on it, which purported to state what his name was, had been written. It was held that the horoscope was not admissible.[6]

This case has been distinguished in a Madras case where the defendants relied on a horoscope produced by the plaintiff's mother, which had been a public record from a period ante litem motam, and was put in as an admission under Sections 17 and 18.[7]

43. ENTRIES KEPT BY PUROHIT

Entries made in the books of priests (panda's bahis), if made by persons who are dead or cannot be found, are relevant only under this clause and cl. (6), read with Section 90, and are admissible only if all the requirements laid down therein are proved, and, among other things, the identity of the maker of those statements is established.[8]

The Bahis of the Pandas, which have no index, in which several new pages have been added, and it is not known who was the writer of the particular entries, cannot be relied on as an evidence of the relationship of the parties.[9]

Panda's Bahis and Horoscope are not public documents, and so the entries in them cannot be regarded to be so conclusive or decisive as to turn the scales in favour of one party or the other.[10]

The entries in JAJMANI BOOK OF THE PANDA OF MATHURA was held admissible, to prove the name of the grandfather of the deceased through whom the parties to the suit claimed title.[11]

44. SPECIAL MEANS OF KNOWLEDGE

A special knowledge is to be presumed in the case of members of the family.[12]

---

1. Surjan v. Sardar, 27 IA 183 : ILR 23 All 72.
2. Surjan v. Sardar, 27 IA 183 : ILR 23 All 72.
3. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ram Sundarmal, AIR 1934 PC 157.
4. Lohka v. Pohlu, AIR 1952 Bilaspur 9.
5. Secretary to Government v. Harirao, AIR 1978 Mad 42; following Dogobinda Paricha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914; See also Ramanathan Chetty v. Murugappa Chetty, AIR 1917 Mad 930 : 33 IC 969 (Mad).
6. Ram Narain Kallia v. Monee Bibee, ILR (1883) 9 Cal 613; Satis Chunder Mukhopadhya v. Mohendro Lal Pathuk, ILR (1890) 17 Cal 849.
7. Raja Goundan v. Raja Goundan, ILR (1893) 17 Mad 134.
8. Hazura Singh v. Mohindar Singh, ILR (1937) 18 Lah 732; disapproving Jahangir v. Sheoraj Singh, ILR (1915) 37 All 600.
9. Kundanlal v. Hukamsingh, AIR 1952 Punj 115; relied on Hazura Singh v. Mohindas Singh, AIR 1937 Lah 599.
10. Parasram v. Dayal Das, AIR 1965 HP 32.
11. Dukh Haran Tewary v. Dulhin Bihasa Kuer, AIR 1963 Pat 390.
12. Prabhakar v. Sarubai, (1943) Nag 253.

A statement made ante litem motam, as to the relationship of persons, by those who have special means of knowledge of such relationship is clearly admissible.[13]

Whether the statement made in a document would be relevant will depend upon the fulfilment of the conditions laid down in cl. (5) of Section 32. The writer must be shown to have special means of knowledge about the relationship.[14]

The description of a transferee, in a document, as a son of particular named person is not admissible under Section 32(5), in the absence of any material that either the executant or the scribe of that document had any special means of knowledge about that relationship.[15]

A Hindu Brahmin has a special means of knowledge of the names and relationship of the members of his family, including collaterals, up to at least seventh degree.[16]

A witness may depose from his personal knowledge about the particular relationship between some persons. If the witness has no direct knowledge, still he can give evidence about the statements relating to the existence of any relationship by blood between two or more persons, heard from persons who made such statements, provided, those persons had special means of knowledge about such relationship, and such statements were made before the question in dispute was raised, those persons are dead, or cannot be found, and so on, as required u/Section 32. It is only in that light that the depositions of the witnesses will have to be looked into, where none of them had any direct knowledge about the relationship between the parties vis-a-vis the common ancestor.[17]

It is not necessary that one who gives evidence on his age should have had personal knowledge of his own birth. The information can only be from the parents or other elders in the family, i.e., from persons who had special means of knowledge. If it is obtained before the commencement of any controversy, it would be admissible. So what legal writers call "the necessity principle" makes an in-road into the hearsay rule, which admits of certain carefully safeguarded and limited exceptions, one of which is that a witness can speak of his own age and date of birth in certain circumstances. It is true that neither birth nor age is specifically referred to in the section proper, but a statement by a dead person, on the existence of the relationship by blood between persons as to whose relationship by blood, the person making the statement had a special means of knowledge. But the date of birth is the commencement of a relationship by blood.[18]

It is not necessary that the declarant should have had personal knowledge of the facts stated; indeed, if this were otherwise, the main object of relaxing the hearsay rule would be frustrated, since most of family information is obtained second hand. It is sufficient, consequently, if his information purports to have been derived from other relatives, or from general family repute, or even simply from "what he has heard" provided such "hearsay upon hearsay" does not directly appear to have been derived from strangers.[19]

If the declarant's information expressly purports to have been derived, either wholly or in part, from incompetent sources, the declarations so founded will be excluded.[20]

The declarations need not refer to contemporaneous events; statements as to matters occurring six generations before have been received.[21]

---

13. Mangal Singh v. Manphul Singh, AIR 1961 Punj 251.
14. Sheojee Tiwary v. Prema Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 187.
15. Bujhawan Singh v. Shyama Devi, AIR 1964 Pat 301.
16. Gobardhan Mandal v. Janaki Nath Mukharjee, ILR (1953) 2 Cal 109.
17. Sheojee Tiwary v. Prena Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 187; relied on Dolgobinda Paricha v. Nimaicharan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914; Sitaji v. Bijendra, AIR 1954 SC 601.
18. Anil Krishna Basak v. Sailendra Nath, (1965) 69 Cal WN 593; relied on Md. Syedol Arffin v. Y.O. Gark, AIR 1916 PC 242; Ramachandra Dut v. Jogeswar Narain Deo, ILR 20 Cal 758; Bhim Mandal v. Magaram, 1916 Pat 21 (date of birth entered in the school register on the statement of the mother).
19. Shedeen v. Att. Gen. and Patrick, (1860) 30 LJP&M 217; The Lovat Peerage, 10 App Cas 763, 768.
20. Davies v. Lowndes, (1843) 6 M&G 473, 527; The Lovat Peerage, 10 App. Cas. 763.
21. PHIPSON 13th Edn., Page 492 (para 25-58); Monkton v. Att. Gen., 2 Russ. & My. 147, 157-158; Davies v. Lowndes, ante.

Before the dispute was raised.—Clause 5 requires that such a statement should have been made before the question in dispute was raised. The statements which were made after the question in dispute in the suit had already arisen are not relevant.[22]

Where a woman who made a statement on her own behalf, and on behalf of her three sons, as to a pedigree was dead and one of the three sons also died, it was held that the statement was as much a statement of the woman and of one of her sons who was dead, as a statement of the brothers who were alive, and was admissible, if it was made ante litem motam.[23]

The words "before the question in issue was raised" do not merely mean before the commencement of the particular legal proceeding in which such statement is produced in evidence, but even before the actual controversy regarding the subject matter of the declaration had originated.[24]

Where the question was whether the applicant was the legally wedded wife of the deceased, a statement of a deceased person given on affidavit, subsequent to the date when the dispute arose, was held to be not relevant.[25]

45. STATEMENT MADE IN A WILL OR DEED RELATING TO FAMILY AFFAIRS [SUB-SECTION (6)]

A document written by the father of a witness, showing the relationship, much before the dispute was raised, is admissible under Section 32(6).[26]

Where a son of one of the members of a joint family executed a will, the statement in the will is admissible to show that there was a partition in the family.[27]

An ancient document, purporting to be a family pedigree; produced in evidence by a person who states that he received the same from his father or grandfather, but is unable to prove the handwriting, cannot be rejected as inadmissible, it is admissible under Section 32(6) of the Evidence Act.[28] A pedigree would become admissible u/Section 32(6) even though the writer or the person who dictated, it is not known, if it has been adopted by a person who had special means of knowledge.[29]

Documents of transfer of property by B as guardian of A, stating that A was his adopted son, were held admissible under Sections 32(3), (5) & (6) of the Act.[30]

Documents containing statements as to relationship of the parties which come into existence after the disputes as to succession to certain Jagir had been raised, were not admissible under Sections 32(5) & (6).[31]

46. DIFFERENCE BETWEEN CLAUSE (5) AND (6)

Clause (5) refers to statements relating to the existence of any relationship between persons alive or dead, and the statement is to be made by a person who had special means of knowledge, that is, it imposes the restrictions that the person making the statement should have special means of knowledge. See illus. (k). Clause (6) refers to the existence of relationship between deceased persons only; and it imposes no such restriction as under cl. (5). It is enough if the statement is made in a will or deed relating to the affairs of the family or in any family pedigree, etc., no matter by whom it was made.

---

22. Dwaraka Nath v. Lalchand, AIR 1965 SC 1549; Audilaksmamma v. Ramarao, AIR 1973 AP 149; Kishanlal v. Sohanlal, AIR 1955 Raj 45; Paras Ram v. Dayal, AIR 1965 HP 32.
23. Dolgobinda Paricha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914.
24. Motilal v. Sardar Mal, AIR 1976 Raj 40.
25. Sudershan Karir v. State, AIR 1988 Delhi 368.
26. Sitaji v. Bijendra, AIR 1954 SC 601.
27. Motisingh v. Fateh Singh, ILR 1960 MP 815; relying on Bhagwathi Prasad v. Rameshwari Kuer, AIR 1952 SC 72.
28. Sitaji v. B.N. Choudary, AIR 1951 Pat 356.
29. Shivlal v. Jootha, AIR 1952 Raj 167.
30. Jagabandu Senapati v. Bhagut, AIR 1974 Ori 120.
31. Kishanlal v. Sohanlal, AIR 1955 Raj 45.

Clause (6) also refers to pedigree, but differs from cl. (5) in this, that in cl. (5) the evidence is the declaration of the person deceased or otherwise unproduceable, in cl. (6) the evidence is that of things, such a genealogical trees, tombstones, etc.

The statements in cl. (5) may be either written or verbal; the statement in cl. (6) must always be written as the evidence therein is that of things.

Under clause (6) statements relating to the existence of relationship between deceased persons made before the question in dispute was raised are admissible when they are contained in a will or a deed or in a family pedigree[32] or upon a tomb-stone. It is not necessary as in cl. (5) that the statements should have been made by a person who had special means of knowledge, simply because it is not probable that a person would insert in a will or a solemn deed any matter the truth of which he did not know. The statement should not have been made in the testator's own interest or in view of contemplated litigation.[33] The statement of testator in his will that the defendant No. 1 was his adopted son was held to be relevant to show the fact but not conclusive of it.[34]

47. DOCUMENT RELATING TO TRANSACTION CREATING A RIGHT OR CUSTOM [SUB-SECTION (7)]

This clause states that a statement contained in a deed, will or other document, which relates to any such transaction as is mentioned in Section 13(a), would be relevant.

A statement contained in any deed, will, or other document which relates to a transaction by which a right or custom in question was created, modified, recognised, asserted, or denied, is admissible under this clause. A statement in any relevant document, however recent and though not more than thirty years old, is admissible. Statements of facts contained in a will of a deceased person, tending to show that the properties are self-acquisitions, are admissible.[35] Recital of the gift-deed as old as 1945 as to the title of the property was held to be not acceptable and the title has to be decided on the basis of other evidence.[36]

The word 'verbal' used in the beginning of this section naturally does not apply to this clause as well. This clause does not allow introduction of parole evidence.[37]

Such parole evidence may be relevant under cl. (5) of Section 32. But, cl. (5) requires that such a statement should have been made before the question in dispute was raised. The statements which were definitely made after the question in dispute in the suit had already arisen, are not relevant.[38]

One J who was the owner of a house was carrying on his rice-mill business in that house had asserted his right in his written statement in a previous suit; it was held that the statement was relevant under Section 13(a), and as J had died, it was relevant u/Section 32(7) and was admissible.[39] Where the statement of a deed person, relating to an authority to adopt, had been recorded in an adoption deed, it was held that the statement was admissible under Section 32(7), and also under Section 32(3), being a statement against the interest of the (dead) person making it.[40] Where the property in question was purchased by the plaintiff's father in the name of his wife under a sale deed, but, in his will, it was stated that he had purchased the property with his own money but kept it in his wife's name, it was held that since the testator had asserted his right with respect to that transaction in his will, the statement in the will asserting the right was a relevant fact and was admissible in evidence under Section 32(7).[41] A statement in a will executed by the deceased that certain property was the joint property of three brothers, was held to be admissible under Section 32(7) read with Section 13(a), as the deceased executant was a

---

32. Jang Bahadur Singh Thakur v. Arjun Singh Thakur, ILR (1927) 3 Luck 256.
33. Chandreshwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Bisheshwar Pratap Singh, (1926) 5 Pat 777.
34. Banwari Lal v. Trilok Chand, AIR 1980 SC 419.
35. Venkatramayya v. Seshamma, ILR (1937) Mad 1012; Chandrakant v. Sharat Chandra, (1954) MB 123.
36. Kuldeep Sharma v. Satyendra Kumar Sharma, AIR 2001 All 366 (para 29).
37. Dwaraka Nath v. Lalchand, AIR 1965 SC 1549.
38. Dwarakanath v. Lalchand, AIR 1965 SC 1549.
39. Satyadeo Prasad v. Chander Joti Debi (Smt.), AIR 1966 Pat 110. See also R. Sarvadamulu v. Special Tahsildar (Land Acquisition), Madras, 2000 AIHC 1176 (para 47) (Mad).
40. Andhi Kuer (Smt.) v. Rajeswar Singh, AIR 1972 Pat 325; Chitra v. Padhamini (Smt.), AIR 1975 Ori 24.
41. Rangaswamy Pillai v. Subramania Pillai, AIR 1975 Mad 141.

disinterested person being the common aunt of the three brothers.[42] Where, in a mortgage deed executed by A & B, it was stated that B was the adopted son of A's deceased brother C, it was held that the document constituted evidence of B's assertion of the right that he was the adopted son of C and it was relevant under Section 13 read with Section 32(7), as B was dead.[43] A recital in a will as to the nature of tenancy in a bequeathed property was held to be admissible in evidence under Section 32(7) read with Section 13(a), as the expression transaction is not confined to dealing in the property between two persons but also includes a testamentary dealing with property.[44] The statements made in a gift deed executed by a Hindu widow that the properties mentioned therein were already gifted away by her father-in-law and her husband, were held admissible under Section 32(3) & (7) as they were against her proprietary interest, and related to a transaction as is mentioned in Section 13.[45]

Under this clause the word 'right' will include both public and private rights.

48. STATEMENT OF SEVERAL PERSONS, EXPRESSING FEELINGS RELEVANT TO MATTER IN QUESTION [SUB-SECTION (8)]

The general reputation prevailing in the community and the opinions, inferences or beliefs of individuals (whether witnesses or not) are inadmissible in proof of a fact. To this there are important exceptions. Witnesses in some cases are allowed to testify to the opinions of third persons who are not upon oath, e.g., when the opinion is that of the community. The concurrence of many voices among those most favourably situated for knowing raises a reasonable presumption that the facts concurred in are true.

At common law, by which criminal proceedings are still regulated, the opinions of skilled witnesses are admissible wherever the subject is one upon which competency to form an opinion can only be acquired by a course of special study or experience.[46]

In principle the same holds good for civil proceedings, but the topic is now governed by the regime set up by the Civil Evidence Act, 1972 and the rules of court made under it.[47]

Evidence that a plaintiff was publicly laughed at in consequence of a libel was admitted to prove that the libel referred to the plaintiff.[48]

When a number of persons assemble, to give vent to one common statement, which statement expresses the feelings or impressions made in their minds at the time of making it, that statement may be repeated by the witnesses, and is evidence.[49]

Thus, where a person was charged with raising a seditious mob, expressions of alarm by persons in the neighbourhood were admitted in evidence to show the feellings produced by the gathering.[50]

Illustration (n) is intended to exemplify this clause.

Relevancy of certain evidence for proving, in subsequent proceeding, the truth of facts therein stated.

S. 33. Evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding, or before any person authorised by law to take it, is relevant for the purpose of proving, in a subsequent judicial proceeding, or in a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, the truth of the facts which it states, when the witness is dead or cannot be found, or is incapable of giving evidence, or is kept out of the way by the adverse party, or if his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which, under the circumstances of the case, the Court considers unreasonable.

---

42. Chunilal Ojha v. Mulsankar Ojha, ILR 1961 Cut 635.
43. Harihar Rajguru v. Nabakishore Rajguru, AIR 1963 Ori 45.
44. Periasamy v. Varadappa, AIR 1950 Mad 486.
45. Purnananda Sastri v. Purnanandam, AIR 1961 AP 435.
46. Flokes v. Chadd, (1782) 3 Doug 157.
47. PHIPSON 13th Edn., Page 556 (para 27-07).
48. Cook v. Ward, (1830) 4 M&P 99.
49. Queen v. Ram Dutt Chowdhry, (1874) 23 WR (Cr) 35, 38.
50. Redford v. Birley, (1822) 1 St Tr NS 1071 : 3 Stark 76.

Provided*—

that the proceeding was between the same parties or their representatives in interest; that the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine;

that the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding.

Explanation.*—A criminal trial or inquiry shall be deemed to be a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused within the meaning of this section.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 443
2. Evidence given by a witness ... 445
3. Evidence in a judicial proceeding ... 445
4. Statement of injured recorded u/s. 161, Cr.P.C. ... 446
5. Affidavit ... 446
6. Before any person authorised by law ... 446
7. 'Is relevant' ... 446
8. When the witness is dead ... 447
9. Witness cannot be found ... 448
10. Witness incapable of giving evidence ... 449
11. Witness' presence cannot be obtained without delay and expense ... 450
12. Witness kept out-of-the-way by the adverse party ... 452
13. Proceeding between the same parties [Proviso 1] ... 452
14. Cross-examination by adverse party in the first proceeding [Proviso 2] ... 454
15. Same question in issue in both the proceedings [Proviso 3] ... 457
16. A criminal trial or inquiry deemed to be a proceeding [Explanation] ... 458
17. Value of prior deposition ... 459
18. Waiver ... 460

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section provides that the evidence given by a witness in an earlier judicial proceeding, or before any person authorised by law to take evidence, is relevant in a subsequent judicial proceeding or at a later stage of the same judicial proceeding, for the purpose of proving the truth of the facts contained therein if certain conditions mentioned in the section are satisfied.

Evidence of depositions in former trials is admissible as it forms an exception to the hearsay rules. Depositions are in general admissible only after proof that the persons who made them cannot be produced before the Court, to give evidence. It is only in cases where the production of the primary evidence is beyond the party's power that secondary evidence of oral testimony is admissible. Non-compliance with the provisions of this section is not cured by the fact that counsel for the accused gives his consent thereto.[1]

The principle underlying the admissibility of such evidence as is referred to in this section, is explained in PHIPSON on Evidence (15th Edn. (2000), Paras 39-14, 39-15 pages 1066-1067) as follows:

"Various theories have been advanced to justify the reception of such evidence. (1) Our view is that it constitutes an exception to the hearsay rule. (2) TAYLOR (S. 464) considered it an exception to the rule excluding secondary evidence of documents, holding that that rule is wide enough to exclude secondary evidence of oral testimony. However, this seems doubtful, and the courts have more than once decided that depositions are primary evidence, and of as high a nature and degree as viva voce testimony.[2] (3) WHARTON (S. 177) based its admission on the consideration that the parties and the issues being the same, and full opportunity of cross-examination having been allowed, the second trial is virtually a continuation of the first. (4) The rule might be sui generis; or (5) perhaps an aspect of the rule which makes admissible statements in the presence of a party.

1. Ghulam Haidar v. Crown, ILR (1929) 10 Lah 837.
2. Wright v. Tatham, (1834) 1 A & E. 3, 22; R. v. Christopher, 2 C & K. 994, 1000.

(Some support for both (4) and (5) can be found in R. v. Hall. However, the latter can only be true of oral testimony, and it is probably better to regard it as a precondition of, rather than the justification for, admission of records of such testimony, as it will be rare that any evidence of adoption of unfavourable evidence will be forthcoming so as to justify its reception as an admission).

It has been suggested that the rule cannot be treated as an exception to the hearsay rules, because the evidence was given under oath and was subject to cross-examination. However, this entails a narrower definition of "hearsay" than is adopted in this work, and would mean that the absence of the opportunity to cross-examine would go to admissibility, while the jury's inability to consider the witness's demeanour would go only to weight. It is thought that the key factor is the presence or absence of the witness giving evidence before the jury actually seized of the case.

If previous testimony were not hearsay, it would be hard to see why it should be excluded when the witness is capable of being called, or when one of the other requirements mentioned above is not satisfied. An explanation which has been advanced is that the matters are in such cases res inter alios acta. But this is not true where the objection is that the witness can be called; and it is not in any event a rule of evidence.

Accordingly, it is submitted that the better view is that the rule represents a specialised exception to the hearsay rule, evolved at a time long before the House of Lords in Myers v. D.P.P.[3] laid a paralysing hand on the rule, It is, moreover, consonant with the other exceptions to that rule affecting statements by deceased persons."

LORD GODDARD in Chainchal Singh v. Emperor[4] observed: "Where it is desired to have recourse to this section on the ground that a witness is incapable of giving evidence, that fact must be proved, and proved strictly. It is an elementary right of an accused person or a litigant in a civil suit that a witness who is to testify against him should give his evidence before the Court trying the case, which then has the opportunity of seeing the witness, observing his demeanour, and can thus form a far better opinion as to his reliability than is possible from reading a statement or deposition. It is necessary that provision should be made for exceptional cases where it is impossible for the witness to be before the Court, and it is only by a statutory provision that this can be achieved. But the court must be careful to see that the conditions on which the statute permits previous evidence given by the witness to be read are strictly proved. In a civil case a party can, if he chooses, waive the proof, but in a criminal case strict proof ought to be given that the witness is incapable of giving evidence."[5]

The section enumerates the conditions under which the evidence given by a witness (a) in a judicial proceeding, or (b) before any person authorised by law to take it, is relevant in a subsequent judicial proceeding or a later stage of the same proceeding. They are five in number, viz:—

(a) when the witness is dead;

(b) when he cannot be found;

(c) when he is incapable of giving evidence;

(d) when he is kept out of the way by the adverse party; and

(e) when his presence cannot be obtained without an amount of delay or expense which the court considers unreasonable.

The use of such secondary evidence is limited by three further conditions. Such evidence will be admissible only—

(1) if the proceeding was between the same parties, or their representatives in interest;

(2) if the adverse party in the first proceeding had the right and opportunity to cross-examine; and

(3) if the questions in issue were substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding.

---

3. 1965 A.C. 1001, HL.
4. AIR 1946 PC 1.
5. See also Hari Prasad v. State, ILR (1955) 1 All 749.

Evidence given on a different occasion is also admissible to contradict a witness (Section 155) or to corroborate him (Section 157).

2. EVIDENCE GIVEN BY A WITNESS

An affidavit is not "evidence given by a witness" within the meaning of this section and cannot therefore be admitted in evidence.[6]

3. EVIDENCE IN A JUDICIAL PROCEEDING

Evidence must have been given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any person authorised by law to take evidence. This pre-supposes the administration of oath or solemn affirmation, as required by the law in force. Section 80 of the Evidence Act deals with the presumption stating that whenever any document is produced before any court, purporting to be a record of the memorandum of the evidence, or of any part of the evidence given by a witness in a judicial proceeding or before any officer authorized by law to take such evidence etc., the court shall presume that the document is genuine; that any statement as to the circumstances under which it was taken, purporting to be made by the person signing it, is true and that such evidence, statement or confession was duly taken.

The proceedings and the evidence shall not be invalidated, where there is an omission to take the oath or to make any affirmation or there is some irregularity is administering the oath. Even if there was some irregularity or omission in the administration of oath, the statement of a witness in an earlier proceeding can be presumed to be correct.

"It must be proved that the witness was duly sworn in some judicial proceeding, to the authority of which the party, against whom his testimony is offered, was legally bound to submit, and in which he might have exercised the right of cross-examination".[7]

Evidence of a witness in a proceeding subsequently pronounced to be coram non judice is not admissible if the witness is dead, on a re-trial before a competent Court.[8]

Where a person was examined in an earlier proceeding or at an earlier stage of the same proceeding, his earlier evidence can be admitted provided the conditions of Section 33 are fulfilled.[9]

Evidence in one case cannot be considered in another case.[10]

Where the plaint was returned after taking evidence, on the ground of pecuniary jurisdiction, for presentation before the subordinate judge, it was held that Section 33 would not apply in the subsequent proceedings.[11] Which was subsequently affirmed by the Federal Court : In R. v. Benorilal,[12] where it was held that the person Mr. Hattiangadi was not authorised by law to take evidence nor could it be said that the witnesses before him deposed in a judicial proceeding. Hence there was want of jurisdiction to entertain the case.[13]

However, where there is no lack of inherent jurisdiction, and the Court records evidence to decide whether it has local jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and returns the plaint for presentation to proper court, the evidence so recorded is admissible in the proceedings of the latter Court which must be regarded as a later stage of the same judicial proceeding.[14]

---

6. Malik Jaindkhan v. Province of Sind, ILR (1947) Kar 273.
7. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 465, page 320.
8. Rami Reddi, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 48, 51; Buta Singh v. Crown, ILR (1926) 7 Lah 396; Sankappa Rai v. Koraga Pujary, ILR (1930) 54 Mad 561.
9. Ramvilas v. State of M.P., 1985 Cr LJ 1773 (MP).
10. Mitthulal v. State of M.P., AIR 1975 SC 149.
11. In re : Rami Reddy, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 48. See also Emperor v. Ajit Kumar Ghose, AIR 1945 Cal 159; Benari Lal Sharma v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Cal 285.
12. AIR 1943 FC 36.
13. See also Sudhindra Nath v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 339.
14. Sarup Singh v. Ramdithamal, ILR (1961) 1 Punj 508.

Where there is jurisdiction, though improperly or irregularly exercised, it stands on a different footing; and the evidence in the former proceeding can be taken in a subsequent proceeding or at a later stage of the same proceeding.[15]

Where an appellate court after setting aside the conviction, directs the Magistrate to commit the accused to the Sessions Court, the former proceedings in the trial court are not rendered without jurisdiction, and therefore, the deposition of a witness in those proceedings can be brought on record in the Sessions Court under Section 33, if the witness is dead or any other conditions of Section 33 are fulfilled.[16]

Where an ex parte decree is set aside, all proceedings which took place subsequent to the stage of non-appearance of the defendant, leading to the decree, are set aside, and they are not binding on the defendant. Thus, the evidence of the plaintiff recorded by the trial court in the absence of the defendant, prior to the setting aside of the ex-parte decree, is not legal evidence so as to attract the applicability of Section 33. It cannot be looked into and made the basis of a judgment and decree at a fresh trial subsequently, notwithstanding the fact that the fresh trial is also ex-parte.[17] The objection that the evidence of the plaintiff relied upon was recorded in absence of the defendant, was held to be not tenable in an ex parte proceeding and more so when the defendant defaulted even after the order to proceed ex parte was set aside.[18]

The expressing of opinion by any other authority about the oral evidence before it is analysed and assessed by the Criminal Court is certainly a prejudice or interferes or tends to interfere with the due course of judicial proceeding.[19]

4. STATEMENT OF INJURED RECORDED U/S. 161, Cr.P.C.

The statement of the injured recorded under Section 161 Cr.P.C. cannot be held to be admissible in evidence under Section 33 of the Evidence Act.[20]

5. AFFIDAVIT

An affidavit allegation is not evidence under Section 33 of the Evidence Act but it can become evidence when the person, who has sworn the affidavit, steps into the witness-box to speak to the affidavit averment and the opposite party has the opportunity to cross-examine him.[21]

6. BEFORE ANY PERSON AUTHORISED BY LAW

A deposition is inadmissible unless it was taken by an officer or other person authorised by law.[22]

7. 'IS RELEVANT'

Depositions which satisfy the conditions laid down in this section are relevant for the purpose of proving the truth of the facts which they state. They are, however, open to all the objections which might have been raised if the witness himself had been present during the trial. Leading and other illegal questions are, therefore, not allowed to go in.

The burden of proving that the conditions essential to the admissibility of depositions under this section have been complied with lies on the person who tenders the evidence. The depositions of

---

15. Empress v. Illahi Baksh, ILR 2 All 910; Sahdeo Ram v. Emperor, AIR 1935 All 579.
16. State v. Surajbali, 1972 Cr LJ 1223 (All).
17. Aziz Ahmed Khan v. A. Patel, AIR 1974 AP 1 (FB); dissenting from Doraiswami v. Palaniandi, AIR 1956 Mad 633; Seva Rayan v. Amalaor Pavanan, AIR 1928 Mad 969; Lakshmi Devi v. Roongta, AIR 1962 All 381. See contra: Shah Bharat Kumar v. Motilal, AIR 1980 Guj 51; where it was held that if the witness was offered for cross-examination after the ex-parte decree was set aside, such evidence was admissible under Section 33.
18. Punjab and Sind Bank v. Manjit Singh, AIR 1995 Del 22 (para 6).
19. D.P. Anand v. State of T.N., 1998 Cr LJ 724, at p. 729 (Mad).
20. Sukhar v. State of U.P., AIR 1999 SC 3883 (para 2) : 2000 Cr LJ 29 (SC).
21. Jai Natarajan v. M.I. Syed Ibrahim, 1999 AIHC 4457 (para 13) (Mad).
22. K. Venkatappa v. Uday Shankar, AIR 1981 AP 34.

witnesses given in a counter-case may be used as evidence against them on their trial as accused persons, but such depositions can only be evidence against the persons making them.[23]

Objections as to the admissibility of evidence should be raised at the trial and at any rate in the Court of first appeal, and will not, as a general rule, be entertained by the High Court if raised for the first time in second appeal.[24]

8. WHEN THE WITNESS IS DEAD

The death of the witness whose evidence is to be admitted should first be strictly proved unless it is admitted on the other side.[25] Where a deposition of a person was taken before 60 years in one case and before 50 years in another case, no presumption of death can be drawn in the absence of any proof of search having been made for such person or any account of him, and such deposition is inadmissible.[26] However, in Pritam Singh v. Tilak Singh; it was held that a person who conducted an enquiry and submitted his report 70 years back can be presumed that he must have died by now, and that the objection that no attempt was made to prove that he was dead or that he cannot be put in the witness-box for any other reason cannot be accepted.[27]

Evidence of a witness in a previous judicial proceeding is relevant in a subsequent judicial proceeding, or in the later stage of the same proceeding, when such witness is dead.[28]

Where the witnesses deposed to what they saw and observed and have referred to the statements made to them personally by the deceased and not to third parties, it was clearly admissible in evidence and would not be hit by the rule of hearsay.[29] Where a deposition was recorded by the committing Magistrate, and it was stated that the witness was dead, but the death was not proved, it was held that the deposition was not admissible under Section 33[30] but where there was sufficient material to establish that the arrest of the accused could not be procured as he was absconding and the records showed that the summons were received back with the report that the witnesses had died, the deposition of the deceased witnesses could form the basis of conviction.[31]

It was held by the Supreme Court that, when Panjis (Pedigree tables) were maintained by Panjikars, in the course of their discharging their professional duties, and a witness examined in a previous case to prove the entries had deposed that they were partly in his hand and partly in the handwriting of his ancestor, the evidence was admissible under this section, as that witness had died in the meanwhile.[32]

Before a deposition of a dead witness is admitted, the party tendering such evidence of a dead man should have summoned that witness before his death.[33]

Where a witness who had been examined and cross-examined in the committal court, is dead, his deposition, though admissible in Sessions trial, cannot be treated as evidence unless an order is passed by the Sessions Judge under Section 288, Cr. P.C. for using it on record.[34] When a witness dies after examination-in-chief and before cross-examination, his evidence its admissible but its probative value may be very small and may even be discarded and the Court should carefully see whether there are

---

23. Queen-Empress v. Ganu Sonba, ILR (1888) 12 Bom 440.
24. Radha Kishan v. Kedar Nath, ILR (1924) 46 All 815.
25. Sajan Singh v. Crown, ILR (1925) 6 Lah 437.
26. Benson v. Olive, (1732) 2 Str 919.
27. 1954 Pepsu 14.
28. Papa Rao v. Satyanarayana, AIR 1983 AP 257, 259.
29. State of Maharashtra v. Vasant Shankar Mhasame, 1993 Cr LJ 1134 (para 17) (Bom).
30. Jagadish Lal Ramnath v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 385 (Punj); Arabinda Dey v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 206; Sajjan Singh v. Crown, AIR 1925 Lah 418; Indar v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Lah 1041; Kala v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Lah 206; Jagadishlal Ramnath v. State, 62 Punj LR 538 : (1963) 1 Cr LJ 385, 386; Behera Tanti v. State, AIR 1950 Ori 202.
31. Nirmal Singh v. State of Haryana, 2000 Cr LJ 1803 (paras 4 and 5) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1416.
32. Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain Choudhari, AIR 1954 SC 601; Hadi v. State, AIR 1966 Ori 21 (Doctor's post mortem certificate).
33. Subramanya v. Lakshmi Narasamma, AIR 1958 AP 22.
34. Tarlok Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1974 SC 1797; Nathu v. State of Rajasthan, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 400.

indications that by completed cross-examination, his testimony was likely to seriously shaken.[35] However such evidence cannot form basis of conviction.[36]

The deposition of a witness taken before one Magistrate is admissible in evidence at a re-trial before another Magistrate if the witness is dead at the time of the re-trial.[37]

9. WITNESS CANNOT BE FOUND

Where a witness cannot be found, his evidence in the former proceedings will be relevant in subsequent proceedings. In this connection there is possibility of collusion between one party and a witness. To avoid that possibility, the Court has to be satisfied by the party concerned that bona fide search had been made, as otherwise a valuable right of the adverse party to cross-examine that witness would be lost. Before a deposition can be admitted under this provision, the court must be satisfied that all reasonable steps were taken to secure the attendence of the witness.

Where the summons were issued to the witness and the witness could not be found at his address though the police went 2 or 3 times to serve the summons, it was held that the evidence of that witness cannot be brought on record under Section 33 without first making a diligent search for him.[38] A Sessions Judge, finding that the witnesses, who had been summoned to give evidence for the prosecution, did not appear on the date fixed, adjourned the case for eighteen days and ordered fresh summonses to be issued. On the adjourned date, the witnesses were again absent. Thereupon the Sessions Judge made use of the evidence, which those witnesses had given before the committing Magistrate, purporting to do so under this section. It was held that the evidence could not be so used; the Sessions Judge ought to have directed warrants to be issued to enforce the attendence of the prosecution witnesses and compel their attendence in Court.[39]

A statement of a witness cannot be admitted if it has not been proved that he could not be found. If all that is proved is that the witnesses had gone away to a particular place, that alone is not sufficient to prove that the witness could not be found.[40] It is the duty of the prosecution to prove strictly, to the satisfaction of the Court, that the witnesses could not be found inspite of attempts to trace them and serve summonses on them. The fact that the counsel of the accused consented to the statements made before the committing Magistrate being admitted in evidence before the Sessions Court, does not do away with the necessity of the court being satisfied by proof. Where, before the Sessions Judge, the only ground for admitting the evidence was that the girls and their mother were not traceable and the court, allowed that applicant to put forward new grounds of unreasonable delay and expense in producing those witnesses, it was held that the order of the Sessions Judge in admitting the evidence was not justifiable.[41] The Court must give its decision on the evidence legally taken and recorded; the mere statement that the witness cannot be traced is not enough. Evidence must be adduced to show that attempts were made to trace the witness.[42] Where the Court was informed by the police that a witness had shifted to a particular place, an attempt should be made to serve that witness at that new station. The whereabouts of a person can be said to be unknown when the witness cannot be found at all at the places which he had, or was informed to have, visited either permanently or for a temporary stay.[43] Where a constable deputed to serve the summons on a witness could not trace him inspite of his best efforts, and the residents of the locality also could not give the whereabouts of the person, it was held that the Court was justified in admitting in evidence the previous statement of the witness.[44]

---

35. T.R. Srikantaiah Setty v. Balakrishna, 1999 AIHC 3477 (para 11) (Kant).
36. Nandram Khemraj v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 1270 (paras 15-17) (MP).
37. Lekal v. Crown, ILR (1927) 8 Lah 570.
38. Hari Prasad v. State, AIR 1953 All 660; see also Dwaraka Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1922 Oudh 254.
39. Emperor v. Dost Muhammad, ILR (1905) 28 All 98.
40. Krishan v. Sohanlal, AIR 1955 Raj 45.
41. Bismillah Khan v. State, 1959 Raj 21 : 1959 Cr LJ 84; relying on Chanchal Singh v. Emperor, 1946 PC 1; see also Kottamma Kalathingal Ummar Haji, In re : AIR 1923 Mad 32.
42. 1961 MPLJ (notes) 54.
43. Tulsiram v. State, AIR 1956 Bhopal 52.
44. Harumal v. State, AIR 1951 Ajmer 25. Also see Turner Morrison & Co., Bombay v. K.N. Tapuria, 1993 Cr LJ 3384 (paras 20 and 21) (Bom).

There may be a possibility of more than one person having the same name in the villages. Before concluding that the witness cannot be found, one has diligently to try to establish the identity of the witness whose evidence is sought to be tendered.[45]

Where a witness had gone to a particular place for training for some time, and would not return within a particular time, it was held that the provisions of this section are not satisfied.[46] But where it was proved that the witness left for Pakistan, it was held to be sufficient ground to take the previous deposition into evidence.[47] Where the witnesses for the prosecution are graziers and nomads, and their whereabouts are not traceable, their depositions before the Magistrate can be taken into evidence in the Sessions Court.[48]

Section 299 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 supersedes this section to a certain extent. It provides that if it is proved that an accused person has absconded, and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of, may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions, and that such depositions may be used at the subsequent trial of the absconder, if the witnesses are dead or are otherwise incapable of appearing.

Where the approver was examined before the committal court and the prosecution was unable to produce him before the Sessions Court, it was held that the approver's deposition in the Committal Court can be admitted as evidence in the Sessions Court.[49]

10. WITNESS INCAPABLE OF GIVING EVIDENCE

The Privy Council observed: "Where it is desired to have recourse to this section on the ground that a witness is incapable of giving evidence, the fact must be proved and proved strictly... In a criminal case strict proof ought to be given that the witness is incapable of giving evidence."[50]

It is necessary for the Judge to satisfy himself on the material placed before him, whether the witness is incapable of giving evidence. It is not sufficient to accept the statement of the public prosecutor or of the defence counsel for admitting such evidence. Strict proof has to be place, to come to a conclusion that the witness is incapable of giving evidence.[51] The Court cannot, on its own judgment, conclude that the witness is incapable of giving evidence. It should fortify itself by inviting a doctor's opinion in the form of a report or some other reliable evidence.[52]

The expression 'is incapable of giving evidence' denotes an incapacity of a permanent character, and not of transient or temporary character.[53] Temporary inability of a witness, because of ill-health or some other ground, is no ground to bring his previous deposition on record under this section.[54] However, something short of permanent incapacity might satisfy the stipulations of this section.[55] Where a person has become very old, blind, or cannot move, he must be taken to have become incapable of giving evidence.[56] Where a witness who was examined and cross-examined in the Committal Court, was suffering from paralysis at the time of the sessions trial, it was held that the Sessions Judge was justified in admitting the evidence under Section 33.[57]

Where a medical certificate was produced showing that the witness had to take rest for a week, it was held that it was insufficient to admit his deposition under Section 33.[58]

---

45. Dukhamandal v. W.N Grant, 16 I.C. 467 : 16 C.L.J. 24; Chandulal Asharam v. Bhaaikashi, AIR 1939 Bom 59.
46. Savlimiya Miyabhai v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Bom 338; Bahera v. State, AIR 1950 Ori 202.
47. Gurdial v. Emperor, AIR 1949 Punj 228.
48. Khimji Punja v. Maun Devshi Bhanji, AIR 1950 Kutch 24.
49. 1984 Mad LJ 590.
50. Chainchal Singh v. Emperor, 1946 PC 1.
51. Chainchal Singh v. Emperor, 1946 PC 1; Isher Das v. State, AIR 1954 JK 19; Kesar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 286; R. v. Gajendra, AIR 1943 Cal 222; T.S.R. Sarma v. Nagendra, 1957 Cal WN 1.
52. State v. Gajraj, AIR 1953 Raj 66.
53. In re : Pyarilal, 4 CLR 504.
54. Hariprasad v. State, AIR 1953 All 660.
55. In the matter of the petition of Aggur Hussain, (1881) 6 Cal 774.
56. Bhim Mandal v. Magaram, AIR 1961 Pat 21.
57. (1964) 30 Cut LR 43.
58. R v. Gajendra, AIR 1943 Cal 222.

Where the indisposition of a witness is only temporary, the proper procedure is not to admit the evidence, but to postpone the trial.[59] Where a witness is found to be ill, the party requiring his testimony should move to put off the trial. Such course is less open to objection and abuse.[60] Where the deponent was expected to be confined for a month and consequently unable to travel, it was held that the ground was insufficient to apply the provision, and the trial can be postponed.[61]

Mere statement of the police of the prosecution about the inability of the prosecutrix to attend and give evidence, in a rape case, before the Sessions Court, is not sufficient to transfer the earlier statement to the sessions record under this section. In that case it was alleged that the prosecutrix was suffering from mental shock, but it was found that she was preparing to appear for an examination. On those facts it was held that the submission of the prosecution was not sufficient to transfer the statement to the record of the sessions.[62]

Where a witness was examined-in-Chief by the prosecution and after the charge was framed it was found that he was so ill that he could not travel, and when interrogatories were sent he was not in a fit condition to answer the questions put to him and, as a result he was not subjected to cross-examination, it was held that such evidence was admissible, but the weight to be attached to it would depend upon the circumstances of that case.[63] If the illness is such that there is no probability of the witness ever being able to attend, the depositions are, of course, admissible; so, probably, if it is such as to prevent his attendance within a reasonable time.[64] Where a person is insane, he is incapable of giving evidence.[65]

If the depositions were taken shortly before the second trial, it is unnecessary to show that the witness was sane when they were taken.[66]

Where, after questioning the witness, the court found that he was not in a fit state of mind to give evidence, and to fortify itself the witness was sent to a doctor for his opinion, it was held that the witness was proved to be incapable of giving evidence.[67]

Precise evidence should be required by the court as to the nature of the illness and incapacity to attend and give evidence.[68]

It is not necessary in every case where a witness is unable to attend the court on the ground of physical incapacity, that there must be evidence of a medical person. There may be many cases in which the facts are such that the incapacity can be proved by a lay witness.[69]

11. WITNESS' PRESENCE CANNOT BE OBTAINED WITHOUT DELAY AND EXPENSE

This condition can be said to have been fulfilled only when the court considers that the delay and expense involved in securing the presence of the witness is unreasonable.

Independent evidence has to be placed before the court can excercise the powers given under this section. Reliable evidence showing the impracticability of procuring the attendance of a witness has to be given.[70] It is only in extreme cases of expense or delay that the personal attendance of a witness is

---

59. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn., p 675 (para 29-18).
60. Harrison v. Blades, (1813) 3 Camp 457.
61. R. v. Omant, 6 Cox 466; R. v. Butcher, (1900) 64 JP 808.
62. 1975 Kashmir LJ 391.
63. Mangalsen v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 840; See also Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundram Iyer, AIR 1925 Mad 497.
64. See Beaufort (Duke of) v. Crawshay, LR 1 CP 699, deciding that the words "permanent sickness or infirmity", in the Evidence on Commission Act, 1831, were to be thus construed. But see now St. Edmundsbury and Ipswich Diocesan Board v. Clark, (1973) Ch 323; (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Ed., page 675 (para 29-18).
65. R v. Enswell, 3 TR 707, 720-21; even if the insanity is temporary R. v. Marshall (1841) C&M 147.
66. Cf R. v. Wall, cited in (1830) Russ. Cr. (8th ed.), p. 2089; (PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Ed., page 675) (para 29-18).
67. State v. Gajraj, AIR 1953 Raj 66.
68. In re : Ashgar Hussain, ILR 6 Cal 774; Abdul Ghaffoor v. Govind Prasad, AIR 1928 Rang 284; S.C. Mitter v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 435.
69. Chainchal Singh v. Emperor, (1945) 48 Bom LR 284 : 72 IA 270.
70. Annavi Muthirivan v. Emperor, 1916 Mad 851; Emperor v. Gajendra Mohan, AIR 1943 Cal 222 : ILR (1943) 1 Cal 405; G. Bulliswamy v. C. Annapurnamma, 1976 AP 270.

dispensed with, and his evidence given in a former inquiry is referred to.[71] It must be shown that necessary steps were taken to procure the attendance of the witness.[72]

It was held that the same principle as is laid down by the Privy Council in Chainchal Singh v. Emperor[73] can be applied where the presence of the witness cannot be secured without delay or expense which the court considers as unreasonable.[74]

Where a statement of a doctor made before the committing Magistrate was brought on record before the Sessions Judge, the evidence of a constable was given to the effect that from the enquiries he made he learnt that the doctor's whereabouts were not known; besides that evidence, there was also a report of the hospital superintendent stating that the doctor was no longer in service and it was not known where he was. The Public Prosecutor made an application that the doctor's statement be transferred to the Sessions record on the ground that there was no likelihood of the witness being available without unreasonable delay and expense. The defence counsel took no objection at that stage, and the record was transferred to the file of the Sessions Judge. On those facts the Supreme Court held that, though the Judge might have been well-advised to give fuller reasons for making the order transferring the statement, it was clear that he transferred it on the ground of unreasonable delay and expense; and there was no infirmity in the order of the transfer.[75] The carbon copy, made by one uniform process, of a doctor's certificate issued in discharge of his professional duty, is admissible when it is proved that the doctor's attendance could not be procured without considerable delay and expenses.[76]

Only when all reasonable efforts to secure the attendance of a witness have failed, can it be said that there is unreasonable delay in securing his attendance. The provisions of Section 33, are an exception to the general rule that, in order that the evidence of a witness may be admissible against an accused or a party, he must have an opportunity to test the truth of the statement by cross-examination. The exception must not be lightly availed of. Where no attempt has been made by summoning the witness or by other means to secure his presence, the earlier statement before the committing Magistrate is not admissible in the court of Sessions under Section 33.[77]

One main prosecution witness had been examined in a case and also cross-examined before the original charge was framed. But he was not produced for recross-examination after the charge, on the ground that he could not be procured without unreasonable delay. The Magistrate convicted the accused. On appeal, the Sessions Judge directed the Magistrate to call the witness for cross-examination. Later, the Magistrate failed to secure the presence of the witness and sent a certificate to that effect. Then the Sessions Judge transferred that evidence to his file. On those facts, it was held that the Sessions Judge was right in taking the record to his file on the ground of unreasonable delay and expense.[78] Where a witness was brought from Calcutta to Rangoon twice for the purpose of his examination and cross-examination, it was held that, as it involved undue delay and heavy expenses to call witness again, it was sufficient for his prior deposition to be brought on record u/s. 33.[79]

Mere consent of the prosecutor and the pleader for the accused is not sufficient.[80] Mere inconvenience to witness or amount of expenses is no ground where the entire case rests on the evidence of those witnesses.[81] Where the witness joined the army and was stationed at Muttra, it was held that it would be improper to apply Section 33 for taking his earlier deposition before the Sessions, as the witness was available for production before the Court.[82]

---

71. Empress of India v. Mulu, ILR (1880) 2 All 646; In re : Ramureddy, ILR (1881) 3 Mad 48.
72. Emperor v. Kangal Mali, AIR 1915 Cal 256; Noshai Mistri v. Empress, ILR 5 Cal 958; Queen v. Likhunsenthal, 21 WR (Cri) 56.
73. 1946 PC 1.
74. Nathuram v. State, AIR 1951 HP 1; State v. Rikshpal Singh, AIR 1953 All 520.
75. Bakshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1957 SC 904; Krashan Alias Khatu Padhan v. State, (1958) 28 Cut LT 494; (Where the doctor was in England and his presence could not be secured without unreasonable delay and expense).
76. Pruthi Chand v. State of H.P., AIR 1989 SC 702.
77. Murli Singh v. Rex, 1951 All LJ 677.
78. Narain Singh v. State, (1962) 64 Punj LR 142.
79. Fernandez v. R. AIR 1934 Rang 434.
80. Re : Annavi Muthiriyan, ILR (1915) 39 Mad 449; Emperor v. Savlimiya Miyabhai, (1944) 46 Bom LTR 589; Emperor v. Gajendra Mohan, ILR (1943) 1 Cal 405; Bismilla Khan v. State, AIR 1959 Raj 21.
81. Queen Empress v. T. Burke, ILR (1884) 6 All 224.
82. In re : Antony Nadar, AIR 1944 Mad 319.

12. WITNESS KEPT OUT-OF-THE-WAY BY THE ADVERSE PARTY

The admisibility of evidence of a witness who is kept out-of-the-way by the adverse party is to be based on the broad principle of justice which will not permit a party to take advantage of his own wrong. Strict proof is essential that the witness has been kept out-of-the-way, for admission of his previous deposition.[83]

Where a person did not appear as a witness for the plaintiff but appeared on behalf of the defendant on the occasion and was not examined, and it was found that the witness was not kept out-of-the-way by the defendant, it was held that there was no ground for admitting the deposition under this section.[84]

13. PROCEEDING BETWEEN THE SAME PARTIES [PROVISO 1]

This proviso states that the proceeding in the earlier litigation must be between the same parties or their representatives in interest.[85]

This proviso is based on the grounds of recriprocity because the right to use evidence being co-extensive with the liability to be bound thereby, the adversary in the second suit has no power to offer evidence in his own favour which, had it been tendered against him, would have been clearly inadmissible.

The conditions of Section 33 can be said to have been fulfilled when all the parties in the subsequent proceedings were also parties in the earlier proceedings, and the self-same question was required to be determined in the previous stage, in which the deposition was taken and the witness was also cross-examined.[86]

The use of the word 'was' in the first proviso indicates the first proceeding. Under the English Law, the former deposition is admissible in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties or the parties who represent the original parties or are their privies in estate, when the deponent is dead, insane, or ill, or kept out of the way by the opposite party.

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, (15th Edn. (2000), page 1065-66; para 39-13) says: "At common law, depositions and oral testimony given by a witness were admissible in a civil case, and are still in criminal proceedings in a subsequent (or in a later stage of the same) trial in proof of the facts stated, provided: (1) that the proceedings are between the same parties or their privies; (2) that the same issues are involved; (3) that the party against whom, or whose privy, the evidence is tendered had on the former occasion a full opportunity of cross-examination; and (4) that the witness is incapable of being called on the second trial. (In peerage cases, evidence given before a Committee of Privileges is admissible in a hearing of the same case before a subsequent committee; The Beaumount Peerage, 6 C. & F., 868.

The rule for civil cases had been supplanted by the Civil Evidence Act, 1995, although criminal cases are governed by the common law. This section is therefore relevant only to criminal cases."

LORD RUSSEL in Krishnayya Surya Rao Bahadur v. Venkatakumara[87]; observed "Whatever may have been the intention of those who framed the section, the first proviso exactly inverts the requirements of the English Law, which requires that the parties to the second proceeding should legally represent the parties to the first proceeding or be their privies in estate..... The legislative authority was, it must be remembered, dealing with a country in which (amongst other institutions) the Hindu joint family involved representation of interest of a kind and degree and in circumstances unfamiliar to English Law. In view of this fact, their Lordships cannot but surmise that the omission of strict English legal terminology and the employment of the less restricted phrase "representatives-in-interest" was deliberate and intentional..... Turning back to the first proviso, it requires, in their Lordships' view, that the party to the first proceeding should have represented in interest the party to the second proceeding in relation to the question in issue in the first proceeding to which "the facts which the evidence states" were relevant. It covers not only cases of privity in estate and succession of title, but also cases where both the following conditions exist, viz., (1) the interest of the relevant party to the second proceeding in

---

83. Mokshed v. Emperor, AIR 1930 Cal 756; R. v. Scaife, (1851) 17 QB 238; Egan v. Larkin, (1842) 1 Arm M & O 403.
84. Brajaballav Ghose v. Akhshay Bagdi, AIR 1926 Cal 705.
85. Sitanath Dass v. Mohesh Chunder Chuckerbati, ILR (1886) 12 Cal 627.
86. Fakirnath v. Krushna Chandra Nath, AIR 1954 Ori 176.
87. AIR 1933 PC 202 : 60 IA 336 : ILR 57 Mad : 1 (1933) 35 Bom LR 1076.

the subject-matter of the first proceeding is consistent with and not antagonistic to the interest therein of the relevant party to the first proceeding; and (2) the interest of both in the answer to be given to the particular question in issue in the first proceeding is identical. There may be other cases covered by the first proviso, but if both the above conditions are fulfilled, the relevant party to the first proceeding in fact represented in the first proceeding the relevant party to the second proceeding in regard to his interest in relation to the particular question in issue in the first proceeding, and may grammatically and truthfully be described as a representative-in-interest of the party to the second proceeding."[88]

The decision of the Privy Council was rendered before the Civil Evidence Act, 1968. In England, evidence given in previous proceedings is admissible in subsequent proceedings, subject to the provisions of the Act.

This proviso requires that the party to the first proceeding should have represented in interest the party to the second proceeding, in relation to the question in issue in the first proceeding to which the facts which the evidence states were relevant.[89]

Proviso 1 to Section 33, not only covers cases of privity in estate and succession of title, but also cases where both the following conditions are fulfilled:—

(1) The interest of the relevant party in the second proceeding is the subject matter of the first proceeding and is consistent with and not antagonistic to the interest therein of the relevant party to the first proceeding; and

(2) The interest of both in the answer to be given to the particular question in issue in the first proceeding is identical.

If both these conditions are fulfilled, it could be said that the relevant party in the first proceeding in fact represented in the first proceeding the relevant party to the second proceeding in regard to his interest in relation to a particular question in issue in the first proceeding; and may be correctly described as a representative-in-interest of the party to the second proceeding.[90]

After a son had been adopted by the widow of a deceased Hindu, she does not represent the estate of the deceased as a representative-in-interest within the meaning of this section. If after the death of the first adopted son, a second son is adopted to the deceased, he would not be called a representative in interest of the first adopted son, as sons in a joint family governed by Mitakshara Law claim through their father only.[91]

Depositions of persons were recorded in a suit in which the respondent in a subsequent suit was not party. By the time of the subsequent suit, the witnesses died and their depositions in the prior suit were sought to be tendered in evidence in the subsequent suit. It was held that it could not be done as the respondent was not a party to the prior suit and hence Section 33 is not attracted.[92]

The daughter A of the deceased father filed a suit for declaration that one V was not the adopted son of her deceased father. In a prior suit by the alleged adopted son V, against a debtor of the deceased, the defence was that V was not the adopted son. The witnesses who were examined by the adopted son were all dead. It was held that the depositions in the earlier suit for recovery of the debt were admissible, as the debtor represented the estate of the deceased in the same way as the alleged adopted son was representing it in the subsequent suit for declaration.[93]

Partners and joint contractors who are each other's agents for the purpose of making admissions against each other in relation to partnership transactions or joint contractors are regarded as privies in estate, and are included in the term "representatives in interest".[94]

---

88. See also Subramanya Shastry v. Lakshminarasamma; AIR 1958 AP 22; Karrivenkata Narasayamma v. Venkatarattanamma, AIR 1957 AP 378.
89. Krishnayya Rao v. Venkata Kumara, AIR 1933 PC 202 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 1076, 60 IA 336 : ILR 57 Mad 1.
90. Krishhayya Rao v. Venkata Kumara Mahipati, AIR 1933 PC 202 : 60 IA 336 : ILR 57 Mad 1 : (1933) 35 Bom LR 1076; Kamla Devi v. Rodre Shwar Prasad Singh, 1976 Hindu LR 185 (Pat); Karri Venkata Narasayamma v. Venkatarathnamma, AIR 1957 AP 378.
91. Mrinmayi Debya v. Bhuban Mayi Debya, 23 WR 42; see also Lakshman Dada Naik v. Ramachandra Dada Naik, ILR 5 Bom 48 (PC).
92. Ayyavar Thevar v. Secretary of State, AIR 1942 Mad 528.
93. Karri Venkata Narasayamma v. Venkatarathnamma, AIR 1957 AP 378.
94. Chandreshwar Prasad Narain Singh v. Bisheshwar Pratap Narain Singh, ILR (1926) 5 Pat 777.

R charged A with breach of trust, and S gave evidence in support of the charge. A being acquitted, R was tried for making a false charge and S for prejury. It was held that the depositions given by witnesses in the first case could be used against R in the second case, but not against S under this section.[1]

14. CROSS-EXAMI .TION BY ADVERSE PARTY IN THE FIRST PROCEEDING [PROVISO 2]

The adverse party in the first proceeding is the party against whom the witness is produced in the previous proceeding. The party producing the witness and having the advantage of examining the witness is not such adverse party referred to in 2nd proviso.[2]

Under this proviso, the adverse party in the first proceeding must have had the right and opportunity to cross-examine the witness. The object of cross-examination is to elicit information regarding the relevant fact in issue which is favourable to the party who conducts the cross-examination and to cast doubts upon the accuracy of the evidence in chief examination. The section contemplates that the party must have not only the right but also the opportunity to cross-examine the witness. The word 'and' cannot be read as 'or'.[3]

In Dal Bahadur v. Bijay[4], an application was filed for mutation of the name of the adopted son. The reversioners of the deceased wanted to cross-examine the widow in that proceeding. An objection was taken against allowing the cross-examination on the ground that the question involved in the proceeding does not relate to the real issue as to whether the widow had power to adopt a son. That objection was upheld, though it appeared that some cross-examination took place inspite of the objection. In the subsequent suit filed by the reversioners, questioning the widow's power to adopt, the revesioners wanted to tender, the evidence of the widow given in the mutation proceeding. The Privy Council held that the evidence of the widow in the mutation proceeding was not admissible, as the other party never had the opportunity to cross-examine the widow nor had they right to cross-examine her.

The proviso uses the word 'right'. It follows that the opposite party must have a legal right to cross-examine. The word 'right' used in Section 33 means a right conferred by a statutory provision, such as that contained in Section 138 of the Evidence Act, and not a right occurring from mere permission granted by the Court. If the Court permits the accused to cross-examine a witness, it is nothing but giving him an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. Section 33 expressly requires a right in addition to an opportunity to cross-examine.[5] Where a witness is not produced for cross-examination, after a charge in a warrant case, his evidence should not be taken into consideration even if the accused was given the option to cross-examine him before the charge, but he did not do so.[6]

This proviso is based on the fundamental principle in the administration of justice that every man should have an opportunity of cross-examining witnesses whose evidence is to be used against him. If the adverse party has had liberty to cross-examine and has not chosen to exercise it, the case is the same in effect as if he had cross-examined. It is not necessary that the opponent should have exercised his right of cross-examining, for the depositions will be relevant if he deliberately forbore from, or waived the exercise of, an opportunity for cross-examining.[7]

---

1. Rami Reddi, In re : (1881) 3 Mad 48, 51. See Emperor v. Kadhe Mal, ILR (1919) 42 All 24. See Phool Chand v. Amrit Lal, AIR 1980 P&H 122 (where the earlier proceeding was ex parte and, therefore, not between the same parties.)
2. V.M. Mathew v. V.S. Sharma, AIR 1996 SC 109 (paras 7 and 8).
3. Mulkhraj v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1974 SC 1723; Dal Bahadur Singh v. Bijay Bahadur Singh, 57 IA 14, 52 All 1 : AIR 1930 PC 79.
4. AIR 1930 PC 79. See also V.M. Mathew v. V.S. Saramma, 1996 AIHC 973 (para 17), dissenting from Poonamchand v. Motilal, AIR 1955 Raj 179.
5. Banwarilal v. State, AIR 1956 All 385; Arabinda Dey v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 206. See contra Mahboodan v. Fakima Begum, 1950 All 167; (when permission is given the accused becomes vested with the right); S.C. Mitter v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 435 : ILR (1951) Cal 480 (vested right).
6. S.C. Mitter v. State, ILR (1951) 1 Cal 480. see however State v. Baldev Kishan, (1952) Patiala 543.
7. M'Combie v. Anton, (1843) 6 M & G 27; Gurudin v. Emperor, (1934) 31 NLR 276; Queen-Empress v. Ramchandra Govind Harshe, ILR (1895) 19 Bom 749; Sadu v. Express, (1885) PR No. 26 of 1885 (Cr); State v. Hazura Singh, ILR (1952) Patiala 48; Mulkhraj v. Delhi Admn, AIR 1974 SC 1723, (where opportunity of cross-examination was not made use of).

The Supreme Court in Mulkhraj Sikka v. Delhi Admn.,[8] held that, where in a sessions trial, the witness whose deposition was recorded by the committing Magistrate was sought to be brought on record on the ground that the witness could not be found inspite of all reasonable steps taken, including the one taken by the High Court during the hearing of the appeal, and the counsel of the accused, although he had a right to cross-examine that witness in the committing court, had preferred not to cross-examine at that stage and had reserved it for the Sessions Court trial, both the conditions of Section 33 were satisfied and the evidence of such a witness recorded in the committing court was admissible in the Sessions Court, as there was opportunity, for the accused or his counsel to cross-examine that witness, but the opportunity to cross-examine was not availed of by them.

The Allahabad High Court has held that the evidence of a witness who had been examined in Court, is not admissible in the course of the same judicial proceeding merely because it is impossible to cross-examine him on account of his death in the meanwhile, but the weight to be attached to his testimony depends on the circumstances of the case.[9]

Under this proviso, the party must have the opportunity to cross-examine the witness in full and not partially.[10] A statement made by an informant before the police was treated as FIR, and the investigation started; that informant, however, died before the case was committed to a Court of Session. It was held that the statement cannot be admitted in evidence.[11] The deposition of a witness who was not cross-examined before the committing Magistrate and who died before the trial is inadmissible as the accused had the right to cross-examine him.[12] But if a witness under examination dies before his cross-examination is completed, no part of his evidence can be made use of.[13]

Where the death of a witness took place after he had been examined and cross-examined in the Committal Court, it was held by the Supreme Court, that his deposition, though admissible in Sessions Trial by virtue of Section 33 of the Evidence Act, cannot be treated as evidence under Section 288, Cr.P.C.[14]

Where the accused claims to cross-examine the prosecution witness before charge, the Magistrate cannot refuse the request. If he refuses, the evidence recorded by him becomes admissible if the other conditions of the section are satisfied.[15]

When the witness is dead, or cannot be found, the evidence given by him in the committing Court cannot be admitted in the sessions trial if he had been examined in Chief in the Sessions Court and if he dies or cannot be found after such examination in chief.[16]

Where the prosecution witness was examined and the cross-examination was reserved, it was held that, in the absence of anything on record to show that the Magistrate afforded the opportunity to the accused to cross-examine the witness before he framed a charge, Section 33 would have no application and the Magistrate was right in omitting such evidence from consideration.[17] The deposition of a witness before the committing Magistrate, whom the counsel had not preferred to cross-examine at that stage, but had reserved his right to cross-examine before the Sessions Court, was held to be admissible before the Sessions Court as both the conditions of Section 33 were satisfied and the witness could not be found inspite of all reasonable steps taken.[18] Where the witness died before he could be cross-examined after the framing of the charge, his evidence in chief before the charge, was held to be not admissible under Section 33.[19]

---

8. AIR 1974 SC 1723.
9. Ahmad Ali v. Joti Prasad, AIR 1944 All 241.
10. Laxmmavva v. Hanamappa Bhimappa, (1967) 1 Mys LJ 553.
11. ILR 1984 Bom 1215.
12. Queen v. Baswanta, 25 Bom 168.
13. Narsingh Das v. Gokul, ILR (1927) 50 All 113.
14. Tarlok Singh v. State of Punjab, 1974 SC 1797 : 1974 Cr LJ 1265.
15. Karmadhan Lama v. State of Sikkim, 1979 Cr LJ 610.
16. State v. Dhua Kandy 1970 Cr LJ 1322 (Ori).
17. State of Assam v. Ramani Mohan Chandra, 1953 Assam 176 : 1953 Cr LJ 1593 (Assam).
18. Mulkh Raj Sikka v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1974 SC 1723; relied on Dal Bahadur Singh v. Bijai Bahadur Singh, AIR 1930 PC 79; See also State of Hyderabad v. Bhimaraya, 1953 Cr LJ 524 : 1953 Hyd 63; Harumal v. State, AIR 1951 Ajmer 25.
19. Kalyan Lahiri v. State, 1980 CrLJ 484 (Cal) : (1972) 1 Cut WR 464; State v. Dhusa Kandy, 1970 Cr LJ 1322 (Ori); Dr. A.N. Mukerjee v. State, AIR 1969 All 489; Brahmachari v. Ananth Bandhu, AIR 1954 Cal 396 : ILR (1955) 2 Cal 19; State v. Hazura Singh, ILR (1952) Patiala 48.

The evidence recorded in the Committal Court can not be admitted in the Sessions Court if that witness was partly examined in the Sessions Court. Such evidence can only be admitted under Section 288, Cr.P.C.[20]

Unless the examination of a prosecution witness is complete, that is, to say, unless he has been cross-examined and re-examined, or unless his cross-examination and re-examination have been deferred, his evidence cannot be considered except under the circumstances mentioned in Section 33, although it is in favour of the defence.[21]

The Karnataka High Court held that the deposition given in a previous criminal trial cannot be admitted in subsequent trial in respect of an absconding accused who was apprehended later, as that accused was not a party to the previous trial and had no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses.[22]

In a warrant case under Section 256, Cr.P.C., the accused has no right to cross-examine the witnesses until the charge has been framed. The fact that the accused cross-examined the witness does not make his evidence admissible under Section 33.[23]

Where in a case of prosecution for cheating under Section 420, I.P.C. the complainant died before framing a charge after his examination but without being cross-examined, it was held that it cannot be said that the opposite party had a right to cross-examine the complainant before he died.

The complainant's evidence given before the charge is inadmissible.[24] However, a contrary view was expressed in:—[25]

Under the old code there were two types of cases which were treated as warrant cases. One was on a complaint by a private party, and the other was where the police filed a case which had to be tried as a warrant case. In the former one, the witness accused could cross-examine the witness before framing the charge, by exercising his right of cross-examination under Section 208(2) of Cr.P.C., whereas in the latter, he had no right to cross-examine the witness before the charge was framed. Under the Amendment Act 26 of 1955, under Section 251-A Cr.P.C. in the interest of speedy disposal of warrant cases instituted on police report, the examination of witnesses before the charge is framed is dispensed with. So, in the police warrant cases, the question of cross-examination by the accused would not arise. Under the new Cr.P.C. of 1973, in warrant cases on police report, witnesses are to be examined only after the charge is framed, and the accused can cross-examine them, and there is no right to the accused to reserve the cross-examination, though the Court in its discretion can allow deferring the examination (cross) u/s. 231, 242(3), Cr.P.C. In the private warrant cases, the witnesses are to be examined before the framing of the charge, and the accused is given a right to cross-examine them immediately or after framing the charge u/s. 244, 246(4)(6), Cr.P.C.

Section 33 does not require, for a deposition to be admissible, that the adverse party should have actually exercised his right to cross-examine.[26]

Such an opportunity is available to the accused in the committal proceedings under Chap. 18, Cr.P.C., (Pvt. Warrant Procedure), unlike in Chap. 21 (police warrant cases) where cross-examination is allowed only after the framing of the charge.[27]

Justice GURNAM SINGH, while delivering the majority judgment in State v. Baldev Kishan[28] observed: "the words 'in a later stage of the same judicial proceedings' in Section 33, contemplate a stage at which attendance of a witness is required for the purpose of introducing his evidence; when the

---

20. Kasim Ali v. King, AIR 1950 Assam 75.
21. Phani Bhusan Ghosh v. Sibakali Basu, 1952 Cal 218 : 1952 Cr LJ 582 (Cal).
22. Gavi Siddiah v. State, ILR 1975 Kant 355.
23. Arbinda Dey v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 206.
24. Brahmachari v. Anant Bandu Dutt, AIR 1954 Cal 395; State v. Gajaraj, AIR 1953 Raj 66; Emperor v. C.A Mathews, AIR 1929 Cal 822; Lachmi Narain v. Emperor, AIR 1931 All 621.
25. Muthayya Pilai v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Mad 559; In re : Muthayya Chetti, AIR 1924 Mad 735; Banwari Lal v. State, AIR 1956 All 385; Local Government v. Maria, AIR 1925 Nag 44.
26. Chintamandas v. State, AIR 1970 Ori 100.
27. Gauri v. Dowring, AIR 1934 Pat 413; Panalal Pal v. State, (1959) 2 Cut LT 307; In re : Bora Narasimhulu, AIR 1952 Mad 165; (cross-examination does not mean effective cross-examination; Sundara v. Gopala, AIR 1934 Mad 100 (Cases under the old code).
28. 1953 Cr LJ 51 (Pepsu-FB).

deposition of a witness is already recorded, the question of introducing his evidence does not arise. Once a witness's evidence is complete, his non-availability cannot in any way affect its admissibility or relevancy. Where a witness in a warrant case is examined, cross-examined and re-examined before the framing of the charge, such evidence is complete and such evidence before charge is admissible after framing a charge. A stage at which evidence is sought to be admissible is not 'later stage' within the meaning of Section 33, so Section 33 does not apply to such a situation.[29]

In a private warrant case, where evidence was recorded before the charge in full and where the witness could not be produced for cross-examination after the charge u/s. 256, Cr.P.C. (Old), it was held that his evidence before the charge, if otherwise relevant, would continue to remain admissible and relevant as before, without the aid of the provisions of Section 33, though the absence of cross-examination may very much affect, its reliability.[30]

Where the investigation was recorded regarding an employee by the Junior Inspector of Mines, it was held that the deposition of the witness was not admissible, as the proceeding was not a judicial proceeding, and the delinquent at that stage had no right or opportunity to cross-examine the witness.[31]

The second proviso protects the right of 'adverse party in the first proceeding' and not the right of the person who produces and examines the witness. The object of this proviso seems to be to protect those parties against whom the previous proceedings might have gone ex parte, or those who could have no right or opportunity to cross-examine for some reason; it would also protect co-plaintiffs or co-defendants who may not have had the right or opportunity to cross-examine the witness produced from their own side.[32]

Where the defendant, in a subsequent suit was examined and cross-examined by the adverse party in an earlier summary suit for eviction under the Portuguese Civil Procedure Code, (between the same parties) it was held that the statements made by the defendant in the earlier proceedings would be admissible under Section 33 in a subsequent suit, and the fact that, under the Portuguese Civil Procedure Code, a party to the earlier proceeding was not a witness on his own behalf, but could be examined if the other party so desired, and therefore the scope of cross-examination was limited, would not affect the applicability of Section 33.[33]

15. SAME QUESTION IN ISSUE IN BOTH THE PROCEEDINGS [PROVISO 3]

The principle involved in requiring identity of the matter in issue is to secure that, in the former proceeding, the parties were not without the opportunity of examining and cross-examining to the very point upon which their evidence is adduced in the subsequent proceeding. And though separate proceedings may involve issues, of which some only are common to both, the evidence of those common issues given in the former proceeding may be given in the subsequent proceedings. Thus, "if in a dispute respecting lands, any facts come directly in issue, the testimony given to that fact is admissible to prove the same point in another action between the same parties or their privies, though the last suit relates to other lands."[34] The recitals of boundaries in deeds not inter partes are inadmissible in evidence unless the executants are examined.[35]

In the third proviso it is stated that the questions in issue must be substantially the same in the first as in the second proceeding. It is not necessary that all the questions in issue in the two proceedings should be substantially the same. It is sufficient if the principal question in issue in both the proceedings is identical.[36] It must be established that the issues in the two proceedings are substantially the same,

---

29. Mangal Sen v. Emperor, relied on AIR 1929 Lah 840; Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaramal, AIR 1925 Mad 497; Horil Kuer v. Rajab Ali, AIR 1936 Pat 34; Sri Kishun v. Emperor, AIR 1946 Pat 384; Ahmed Ali v. Jyothi Prasad, AIR 1944 All 188; Jaman Singh v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 232 (Raj).
30. State of Sikkim v. Pemba Sherpa, 1981 Cr LJ 856.
31. Bhurangya Coal Co. v. Saheb Jan Mian, AIR 1956 Pat 299.
32. Poonam Chand v. Motilal, AIR 1955 Raj 179.
33. Sadassiva Rauj Gaitonde v. Jose Jogaquim Fonseca, AIR 1976 Goa 11.
34. Rami Reddi, In re : (1881) 3 Mad 48, 52; TAYLOR, 12th Edn. (para 467), p. 321.
35. Sadhurajan v. Sriramulu Naidu, AIR 1999 Mad 377 (para 28) relying on Amiappa Nainar v. Annamalai Chettiar, 1972 (1) MLJ 317 : AIR 1972 Mad 154.
36. Krishnayya Rao v. K. Mahipati, AIR 1933 PC 202 : 60 IA 336 : ILR 57 Mad 1; Subrahmanya v. Lakshminarasamma, AIR (1958) AP 22.

though any specific issue was not raised in any of the two.[37] Whether the questions at issue are substantially same, depends upon whether the same evidence is applicable, although different consequences may follow from the same fact.[38] Where the same question is substantially in issue both the proceedings, it does not matter that they relate to different transactions or properties.[39]

A prosecution was instituted by S against N, at the instance and on behalf of F, for criminal trespass in respect of a certain house, and on his own behalf for assault and insult. S gave evidence at the trial in support of those charges. F subsequently brought a civil suit against N for possession of the same house under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act. S died before the institution of the civil suit. At the trial of the civil suit, the deposition of S in the criminal Court was tendered by F as evidence on the issue of possession. It was held that, S being dead, and the proceedings being between the same parties and the issues being the same (substantially), the deposition of S was admissible.[40] In the proceedings before a Magistrate on a charge of causing grievous hurt, two (among other) witnesses, one of whom was the person assaulted, were examined on behalf of the prosecution. The accused were committed for trial. Subsequently, the person assaulted died in consequence of the injuries inflicted on him. At the trial before the Sessions Judge, charges of murder and of culpable homicide not amounting to murder were added to the charges of grievous hurt. The deposition of the deceased witness was put in and read at the Sessions trial. It was held that the evidence was admissible either under Section 32, Cl. (1), or this section, notwithstanding additional charges before the Sessions Court.[41] Statements of scribe and attesting witness were recorded in a proceeding involving the genuineness of a will. Copies of their statement were held to be relevant in a matter of the same will, as they had died in the meantime.[42]

16. A CRIMINAL TRIAL OR INQUIRY DEEMED TO BE A PROCEEDING [EXPLANATION]

This explanation was intended to do away with any objection, in criminal cases, that the Crown or the State, is the prosecutor and not a party. It says that the prosecutor and the accused are the parties in a criminal trial or enquiry. The object of Section 33 is to make the previous deposition of the witnesses admissible in subsequent proceedings, when the witnesses cannot be produced, or when the witness is dead, or, is incapable of giving evidence, etc., in the subsequent proceedings. This explanation has been inserted for the purpose of excluding the objection which arises when the depositions are taken in criminal cases, that they cannot be used in a subsequent proceeding for want of mutuality or reciprocity, because the Crown is the prosecutor in all proceedings.[43]

The effect of the explanation is that the deposition taken in criminal proceedings may be used in a civil suit, and vice versa.

By reason of this explanation, as the prosecutor and the accused are deemed to be parties in the criminal proceeding, it would be possible to allow depositions in a criminal case to be admitted in subsequent proceedings provided the conditions in Section 33 are satisfied.[44]

Under the English Law, a former deposition in a criminal case is not admissible on mere proof that the witness cannot be found after diligent search, nor even if it is shown that, being a foreigner, he has left the country, without any intention to defeat justice. This was relaxed under the Explanation by making it possible to use the former deposition in a criminal case, in a subsequent proceeding, subject of course to the other conditions mentioned in Section 33.

FIELD ON EVIDENCE (11th Edn, Vol. 3, p. 2072, para 46) states: "The effect of the explanation seems to be that a deposition taken in a criminal trial may be used in a civil suit and conversely, provided that the conditions of the section are fulfilled. It is not a principle of universal application that if the police or the magistracy act on information by a private individual, without a formal complaint or application for process, the State and not the individual becomes the prosecutor."

---

37. Sarvabhotla v. Kanala, 1939 Mad 446; Sadasiva Rauji Gaitonde v. Jose Joaquion Forseca, AIR 1976 Goa 11; Arabinda Dey v. State, AIR 1953 Cal 206.
38. In the matter of the Petition of Rochia Mohato, ILR (1881) 7 Cal 42.
39. Llanover v. Homfray; Phillip v. Llanover, (1881) 19 Ch D 224.
40. Foolkissory Dasee v. Nobin Chunder Bhujno, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 441.
41. In the matter of the Petition of Rochia Mohato, ILR (1881) 7 Cal 42. See also Mulkh Raj v. Delhi Admn., AIR 1974 SC 1723 (where the evidence in committal proceedings was brought in the Sessions trial, the witness being dead)
42. Mohinder Kaur v. Piara Singh, AIR 1981 P&H 130.
43. Soojan Bibee v. Achmut Ali, (1874) 12 Beng LR (Appx) 3.
44. State of Himachal Pradesh v. Charan Dass Dogra, 1976 Cr LJ 1466.

In Gaya Prasad v. Bhagath Singh,[45] it was observed: "A prosecutor has been described as a man actively instrumental in putting the law in force. A person would be a prosecutor where he files the complaint himself, or has it filed through the instrumentality of an agent or a counsel. A private person, at whose instance and report, the prosecution is launched by the police is a prosecutor within the meaning of the present context..... The answer to the question, who is the prosecutor, must depend on the whole circumstances of the case. Mere setting the law in motion is not the criterion; the conduct of the complainant before and after making the charge must also be taken into consideration.[46]

Under Section 495, of the old Criminal Procedure Code, corresponding to Section 302 of the Cr.P.C. of 1973, a private person is also allowed to conduct the prosecution. So it would be possible for the court to consider him as the prosecutor.[47]

There is a distinction between a person simply giving information to the police and a person making a complaint upon which the prosecution is launched. In the former case, the informant cannot be taken as prosecutor, unless he subsequently complains and takes proceedings against another. So the question whether such a person is the real prosecutor or informant only, is to be determined by his conduct before and during the trial.[48]

In cases of malicious prosecution, or a suit for damages, the foundation for the action lies on the abuse of the process of the Court, by wrongfully setting the law in motion, and it is designed to discourage the perversion of the machinery of the justice for any improper purpose. The previous depositions in a criminal case are admissible in a subsequent criminal case for malicious prosecution or a civil suit for damages, under this section, provided other conditions are satisfied.[49]

The deposition of a witness taken in the course of an enquiry before the Coroner cannot, in the event of death of the witness, be taken in evidence at the trial of the case in the High Court, because the enquiry before the Coroner is not a proceeding between the prosecutor and the accused.[50]

The introduction and use of depositions taken in criminal cases in bulk in a subsequent civil suit for the purpose of either contradicting or discounting the evidence of witnesses given in the suit, are illegitimate, unless the particular matter of point had been placed before the witness as one for explanation, in view of its discrepancy with the evidence then being tendered.[51]

17. VALUE OF PRIOR DEPOSITION

This section only deals with relevancy of the statements of witness in previous proceedings. The section does not enjoin upon the court that the statement of a witness examined in the previous proceeding must be believed. It would always be open to the person against whom the statement is produced to show that it should not be believed, for the reasons given by him.[52]

In the committing Magistrate's Court, witness was not cross-examined with reference to his earlier statements during investigation or statement recorded under Section 512, Cr.P.C. The Sessions Judge brought on record the deposition of the witness given before the committing Magistrate by dispensing with the personal attendance. It was held that it was pre-mature for the Sessions Judge to give a finding at the time of admitting the deposition that it was of little use to prosecution, because the witness had not named the accused before he was examined in the committal Court. And the reason given by the Sessions Judge for dispensing with the personal attendance of the witness in Court was quite insufficient.[53]

---

45. ILR 30 All 525 (PC).
46. See also S.T. Sahib v. Hasan Ghani Sahib, AIR (1957) Mad 646.
47. Gaya Prasad v. Bhagat Singh, ILR 30 All 525 (PC).
48. Periya Goundan v. Kuppa Goundan, ILR 42 Mad 880; Rajagopala v. Spencer and Co., AIR 1920 Mad 712.
49. S.T. Sahib v. N. Hasan Ghani Sahib, AIR 1957 Mad 646.
50. Emperor v. Mohomed Yusuf, (1932) 35 Bom LR 1020.
51. Bal Gangahdar Tilak v. Shri Shrinivas Pandit, (1915) 17 Bom LR 527 : 42 IA 135 : 39 Bom 441.
52. Poonam Chand v. Motilal, AIR 1955 Raj 179.
53. Birey Singh v. State, 1953 Cr LJ 1817 (All) : AIR 1953 All 785.

Despite the fact that recording of evidence of the same witness twice, in two independent proceedings, is cumbersome and burdensome, this section cannot be availed of for admitting the former deposition of a witness in the second proceeding when the witness is alive and available.[54]

18. WAIVER

In a civil case a party can, if he chooses, waive the proof; but in a criminal case, strict proof ought to be given that the witness is incapable of giving evidence, and even the consent of the accused's counsel cannot do away with the necessity of the Court being satisfied by proof of that fact.[55]

The Supreme Court observed: "While what is not relevant under the Evidence Act cannot, in proceedings to which Evidence Act applies, be made relevant by consent of parties, relevant evidence can be brought on the record for consideration of the Court or the Tribunal without following the regular mode, if parties agree. The reason behind this rule is that it would be unfair to ask any party to prove a particular fact when the other party has already admitted that the way it has been brought before the Court has sufficiently proved it."[56]

Where the advocate for the defendant gave consent to the deposition of an absent witness to be brought on record, it was held that such consent cannot make it admissible, if it is not otherwise admissible.[57] Consent of the accused to the admission of the evidence under Section 33 has no meaning and it would not relieve the court of the duty of examining the circumstances in order to come to a decision whether or not the evidence was legally admissible. Consent can, however, lead to some inference on a point of fact, such as that a certain witness is seriously ill or his whereabouts are not known.[58] Where the previous depositions of prosecution witnesses were agreed to be admitted as evidence against one accused, by his counsel in a subsequent trial, it was held that the Sessions Judge had committed grave error of law in the procedure he had followed, and that Section 33 and Section 145 of the Evidence Act do not apply to the facts of the case, and consent of the counsel would not cure the irregularity of the procedure adopted in the case.[59]

STATEMENTS MADE UNDER SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES

[60][Entries in books of account including those maintained in an electronic form] when relevant.

S. 34. [60][Entries in the books of account, including those maintained in an electronic form] regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to inquire, but such statements shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.

ILLUSTRATION

A sues B for Rs. 1,000, and shows entries in his account books showing B to be indebted to him to this amount. The entries are relevant, but are not sufficient, without other evidence, to prove the debt.

SYNOPSIS

1. The Information Technology Act, 2000—Entries in books of account ... 461
2. Principle and scope ... 461
3. Books of Account ... 462
4. Regularly kept in the course of business ... 463
5. Proof of entries and accounts ... 464
6. Such statements alone shall not be sufficient evidence ... 466
7. Absence of entry ... 468

---

54. 1972 Ker LT 728.
55. Chainchal Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1946 PC 1; Ratna Munda v. State, AIR 1951 Ori 245; Queen v. Bholanath, ILR (1876) 2 Cal 23 : 1960 MPLJ 1235; Bisimillah Khan v. State, AIR 1959 Raj 21 : 1975 Cut LR 1.
56. Kalyan v. Dulhan Bibi, AIR 1966 SC 1072.
57. Savlimiya Miyabhai v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Bom 338; Kesar Singh v. State, AIR 1954 Punj 286; Meharlila Meraman v. State, AIR 1954 Sau 159 (DB); M/s. Power & Power v. C.B.C.I. Society for Medical Education, ILR (1980) 2 Kant 930; Ghulam Haider v. Crown, ILR (1929) 10 Lah 837.
58. Gaya Prasad v. State, 1954 All 59 : 1954 Cr LJ 68 (All).
59. Ram Singh v. State, 1956 All LJ 919.
60. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000—ENTRIES IN BOOKS OF ACCOUNT

Now, this expression would also include entries maintained in an electronic form.

2. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section entries in books of accounts regularly kept in the course of business are relevant, though they may not be sufficient by themselves to charge any person with liability[61] and in case of the entries being allegedly vague and false the party must adduce evidence to substantiate them and show that they are genuine.[62]

This section is based upon the principle that entries made regularly in the course of business can be presumed to be accurate. In all such entries the writer has full knowledge, there is no motive to falsehood, and there is the strongest improbability of untruth.

This section provides (1) that entries in books of account regularly kept in the course of business are relevant and therefore admissible whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to enquire; and (2) that such entries, though admissible, are not alone sufficient to charge a person with liability unless corroborated by other evidence.[63]

Account books are admissible in evidence without any formal proof that they were regularly kept in the course of business.[64]

STEPHEN in his introduction (at p. 165) observes, "We have admitted entries in books kept in the ordinary course of business. We have also made admissible written acknowledgements of the receipt of money, goods, securities, or property of any kind, and documents used in commerce. Declarations which under the English Law are only admitted because they have been made against interest, will, by the effect of our rules, be excluded, unless they have been made in the ordinary course of business. The test of pecuniary interest is exceedingly difficult of application, and appears to us to be of little value as a test of truth. (Fifth Report). In certain cases statements are made in circumstances which in themselves are a strong reason for believing them to be true, and in these cases there is generally little use in calling the person by whom the statement was made. The sections which relate to them are 34-38".

An account book which is kept regularly, necessarily results in a continuity which makes fraudulent addition extremely difficult and dangerous; it is a chain of forged links into which a subsequent interpolation of a link of forgery without discovery is almost impracticable. A man who wishes to defraud his neighbour generally avoids keeping a regular account, or having kept them, supresses them; the labour of weaving falsehood with truth in regularly kept accounts is too great to be popular, because of the mathematical connection running through them.

In State of A.P. v. Sri Ganeshwar Rao,[65] the Supreme Court held that all entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant and admissible whenever they refer to a matter into which the Court has to enquire notwithstanding any want of corroboration; but such entries, though admissible, are not by themselves sufficient to charge a person with liability.

Though the statement made by a person in his own favour, whether oral or documentary, is usually not admissible in evidence, the entries in the books of account if proved to have been regularly kept in the course of business, are admissible under this section.[66] Normally, entries in books of account, if regularly kept, carry some weight, unless there be counteracting elements to throw sufficient doubt as to

---

61. Gulamahammad v. Government of J & K, 1960 J&K 136; Godavari Bai Ammal v. Seshadrinathan, (1961) 2 MLJ 333.
62. Y. Venkanna Chowdry v. G. Lakshmidevamma, AIR 1994 Mad 14.
63. Gopeswar Sen v. Bijoy Chand Mehatab, ILR (1928) 55 Cal 1167; Kakaram Sohanlal v. Firm Thakardas Mathradas, AIR 1962 Panj 27; Kandaswami v. Theagaraja, AIR 1968 Mad 203.
64. Emperor v. Narbada Prasad, ILR (1929) 51 All 864.
65. AIR 1963 SC 1850.
66. Suklal Deb Barman v. Kalaram Malakar, AIR 1976 Gau 103.

their genuineness.[67] In order to be relevant under Section 34, the books of account must be kept regularly in the course of business; they must be in conformity with some known system of accounting.[68]

Under the English Common Law, entries in books of account are admissible only when they are against a person's interest on the principle that a man ought not to be allowed to make evidence for himself by writing things behind the back of others.[69]

Section 34 of the Evidence Act has no application to the proceedings under Section 32 of Rajasthan Act of 1962 for determination of the compensation payable to the Jagirdhar.[70]

3. BOOKS OF ACCOUNT

A book of account should be fool-proof. A bundle of sheets detachable and replaceable at pleasure cannot be characterised as a book of account. A ledger by itself is also not proof. There must be supporting evidence.[71]

Where the accounts consisted of loose sheets of paper, they would not have the same probative force as account books which are regularly kept in the course of the business.[72]

In its ordinary sense a 'book' signifies a collection of sheets of paper bound together in a manner which cannot be disturbed or altered except by tearing apart. The binding is of a kind which is not intended to be moveable in the sense of being undone and put together again. A collection of papers in a portfolio, or clip, or strung together on a piece of twine which is intended to be united at will, would not, in ordinary English be called a book ..... the term "book" in Section 34 may properly be taken to signify, ordinarily, a collection of sheets of paper bound together with the intention that such binding shall be permanent and the papers used collectively in one volume. Unbound sheets of papers in whatsoever quantity, though filed up with one continuous account, are not a book of account.[73] "Book" implies a collective unity of sheets even at the time the entries are made. It is not necessary that it should contain a particular number of sheets or that it should be bound in a particular way.[74] Even though, no particular form is prescribed for an account book to be maintained, it should be such a regular and usual account book as explains by itself. Mere loose sheets are not admissible and a single entry does not constitute an account book.[75] Spiral note book recording monetary transactions i.e. entries of receipt of money from certain persons on the left side of the page and payment to certain persons on the rights side—entries totalled and balanced and thus duly reckoned—is a 'book of account'.[76] In account books regularly kept in due course of business, usually the pages are interconnected; particularly in daily accounts, the balance of one day or one page is carried over to the other day or the other page, so that interpolation or replacement of a particular page becomes very difficult, and sanctity is to be attached to such books. Where the credit register is not a bound book but a stitched one, the pages can be replaced or interpolated. No importance can be attached to the entries made in such a register and they cannot be taken to be accounts regularly kept in the course of business.[77]

When an entry is tendered in evidence, it must be shown to be in a book, that book must be a book of account, and that account must be kept in regular course of business.[78]

Khata Bahi is a book of account and, if maintained in regular course of business, can be admitted in evidence. But the entries are not however, admissible if not supported by corresponding entries.[79] The presumption of genuineness of books of account is not available to the partner of a firm who has

---

67. Maidhandas Agarwalla v. Sri Charana Barua, AIR 1956 Assam 170.
68. Chandiram Deka v. Jamini Kanta Deka, AIR 1952 Assam 92.
69. See BEST ON EVIDENCE 11th Ed., Section 503.
70. Thakur Bhanu v. State of Rajasthan, ILR (1964) 14 Raj 90.
71. Zenna Sorabji v. Mirabe, AIR 1981 Bom 446; Mohanlal v. Dwarkanath, AIR 1985 J&K 85.
72. Ganesh Prasad v. Nagendranath, AIR 1953 SC 431.
73. Mukundram v. Dayaram, AIR 1914 Nagpur 44 Spiral pads and note books are books but not loose sheets of paper contained in files. Central Bureau of Investigation v. V C Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 (para 18)
74. Ambalawana v. Gowri, AIR 1936 Mad 871.
75. Fuljari Lal v. Ramsarup, AIR 1953 MB 177.
76. Central Bureau of Investigation v. V C Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 (para 26) (SC).
77. Hira v. Birbal, ILR (1957) Cut 437 : AIR 1958 Ors. 4.
78. Mukundram v. Dayaram, AIR 1944 Nag 44.
79. Rokar and Naqual Bahi; Sohanlal v. Gulab Chand, AIR 1966 Raj 229.

fiduciary relationship with other partners and is bound to make full and correct disclosure to other partners.[80] If the accounting partner has not maintained the accounts properly and when the account books submitted by him do not reflect the true account, the Court must order to reopen and/or reject the accounts submitted by him.[81]

Where the books of accounts were kept in normal course of business but they were not mentioned in the plaint and were produced instead at the time of evidence as supporting documents of the bill on which the money suit was based, it was held that it could be relied upon for evidencing the transaction[82] but entries in diaries disclosing acceptance of payment of illegal gratification by the petitioners are not admissible in evidence as the said diaries are not books of accounts within the ambit of Section 34.[83] A hotel register also kept at its counter cannot be a book of accounts unless it is shown that such a register also pertained to pecuniary transactions involving customers of the hotel.[84]

4. REGULARLY KEPT IN THE COURSE OF BUSINESS

The word 'business' is one of wide import and it means an activity carried on continuously and systematically by application of skill and labour with a view to earning an income.[85]

The Privy Council has laid down that the admissibility of books of account regularly kept in the course of business is not restricted to books in which entries have been made from day to day, or from hour to hour, as and when transactions took place. The time of making the entries may affect the value of them but should not, if they have been made regularly in the course of business afterwards, make them irrelevant.[86] The entry need not be made in the book of account at or about the time, the related transaction takes place so as to enable the book to pass the test of 'regularly kept'.[87]

The Privy Council has also held that books of account professing to record facts relating only to the particular transaction in question are less reliable than a book in which the same is recorded in common with other transactions in the ordinary course of business.[88]

Entries in an account book which is not regularly kept in the course of business are not admissible in evidence under this section[89] but the entries made in the ledger account, maintained in the regular course of business are admissible.[90]

The phrase 'regularly' means that the accounts must be kept according to a system, though that system need not be elaborate. It is wrong to think that the expression 'regularly kept', is synonymous with 'correctly kept' though, if they are not correctly kept, that would affect the weight to be attached to the entries made therein, but not their admissibility.[91] The words 'regularly kept' do not necessarily mean kept in a technically correct manner; even the roughest memoranda of account, kept by petty shopkeepers, are admissible if they are authentic. Where not a single entry in the account book, running for a period of five years, is false or bogus, and the only mistake is about an entry which was entered as debit entry instead of credit entry, but the accounts, though not scientifically maintained, were regularly kept in the course of business carried on by the plaintiff who made the entries by himself and who had personal knowledge of the dealings, the account book can be relied upon.[92] The words 'regularly kept' only mean that they should be kept according to a certain fixed method or in some customary form, and

---

80. Y. Venkanna Chowdry v. G. Lakshmidevamma, AIR 1994 Mad 140 (para 41).
81. Y. Venkanna Chowdry v. G. Lakshmidevamma, AIR 1994 Mad 140 (paras 30 and 35).
82. P. Shanmugam v. Reddiar & Co., 1998 AIHC 3264 (para 6) (Mad).
83. L.K. Advani v. Central Bureau of Investigation, 1997 Cr LJ 2559 (Del). See also C. Murugan v. N. Saghadevan, 2000 AIHC 1411 (paras 23, 25-27) (Mad).
84. Manish Dixit v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 133 (para 16) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 93.
85. Central Bureau of Investigation v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 (para 27) (SC).
86. Dy. Commissioner of Bara Banki v. Ram Parshad, ILR (1899) 27 Cal 118 : 26 IA 254; overruling Munchershaw Bezonji v. New Dhurumsey S & W Co., ILR (1880) 4 Bom 576; Emperor v. Narbada Prasad, ILR (1929) 51 All 864; Gulab Chand Lala v. Manni Lal Lala, ILR (1940) 16 Luck 302; Pannalal v. Labhchand, (1954) MB 237; See however, Balmukund v. Jagan Nath, AIR 1963 Raj 212.
87. Central Bureau of Investigation v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 (para 31) (SC).
88. Bhoy Hong Kong v. R.M.M.S.P. Ramanathan Chetty, (1902) 6 CWN 401.
89. Vithoo v. Thakurdas, AIR 1949 Nag 414.
90. State Bank of India v. Ramayanapu Krishna Rao, AIR 1995 Ori 244 (para 5).
91. Balmukund v. Jagan Nath, AIR 1963 Raj 212.
92. Thomas v. Govinda, ILR 1960 Ker 51.

has reference to the system of book keeping rather than to the truth or correctness of the entries in the account books.[1] The words "regularly kept" mean account kept in accordance with certain fixed method or form refering to any system. Section 34 although dispenses with formal proof that the accounts were kept in the regular cause of business, it is a matter of intrinsic evidence as to whether the books in question were books of account and regularly kept in the court of business, and Section 34 is subject to the silent proviso that such entries shall not alone be sufficient evidence to charge any person with liability.[2] An exercise book containing unnumbered slips of papers with entries not proved by any witness is not admissible. The fact that the said exercise book was exhibited without any objection does not take away the right of the Court to question its evidentiary value.[3]

For the purpose of this section no particular form of book is prescribed. All that is necessary is that the book should be such a regular and usual account book as explains itself and as appears on its face, to create a liability in an account with the party against whom it is offered. The person making the entry should have personal knowledge of the facts stated therein.[4]

No doubt an account book kept in the form of daily entries of debits and credits is far more satisfactory, but it is not essential that the accounts should be made up daily. An account book containing entries made of all transactions would be a regular one, even if it is made up every month.[5] Where the practice of noting transactions of eight days at one time in Rokar System was followed, it was held that, though the system was defective, it could not be said on that ground that the account books were not maintained in the regular course of business. The fact that those books were not filed before the Income Tax Department would not show that they were not maintained in the regular course of business.[6] Kachchi Rokar, the genuineness of which is not seriously contested, and in which the balance is struck daily, is a book regularly kept in the course of business within the meaning of Section 34.

An entry in an account book regularly kept is relevant only to prove that the entry was made at the time of the transaction. An entry made in 1917 in the account book of the creditor was held not relevant on the question whether a person had taken a loan from the creditor in 1916.[7]

There is a distinction between a faked book and a book with irregularities and mistakes. A genuine book may be improperly or irregularly kept, but nevertheless it is genuine. After effecting the necessary corrections it is possible to use that book in evidence.[8]

Where a debit entry at the end of a page in an account book showed certain goods as sold at a certain rate, and the description was written closely in a cramped style on the same page, though it could have been written on the next page, and the total amount debited was written in a different ink, which entry, was relied upon to prove the price agreed, it was held by the Supreme Court, that these circumstances detracted from the value of the entry, and it cannot be said that such entry was made in the course of business. Hence it cannot be relied on.[9]

A Khata entry and an entry in the Rokar or Nakal Bahi have to be proved as corresponding to each other, and Katha entry alone is not admissible.[10]

5. PROOF OF ENTRIES AND ACCOUNTS

The Privy Council observed: "The regular proof of books and accounts requires that the clerks who have kept those accounts, or some person competent to speak to the facts, should be called to prove that they have been regularly kept, and to prove their general accuracy".[11]

---

1. Gulab Halwai v. Bhagwan Dass, AIR 1932 Oudh 225.
2. Following Chandradhar v. Gauhati Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1058; Pit Ram Singh v. Vimala Devi, AIR 1992 Raj 149.
3. State of Meghalaya v. Joinmanick Nosmel Giri, AIR 1995 Gau 23 (para 20).
4. Pannalal v. Labhchand, AIR 1955 MB 49; Parasram Kalyandas v. Champalal, AIR 1957 MB 118.
5. Parasram Kalyandas v. Champalal, AIR 1957 MB 48.
6. Firm Ramlochan Ram Lakshmi Prasad v. Maikha Shethani, AIR 1960 Pat 271.
7. Ramaji Batanji v.Manohar Chintamani, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
8. Sarat Kumar Paul v. Sudhir Kumar Pal, AIR 1960 Cal 231; (The mere fact that a ledger contains blank pages is no reason to reject it as it is common knowledge that ledgers have blank pages); Jagdish Kaur v. Rabinder Singh, AIR 1991 Del 51.
9. Venkata Mallayya v. Thodepu Ramaswami and Company, AIR 1964 SC 818; Dharm Chand Joshi v. Satya Narayan Bazaz, AIR Gau 35 (paras 7 and 9).
10. Sohanlal v. Gulab, AIR 1966 Raj 229.
11. Dwaraka Das v. Janaki Das, 6 MIA 88. See also Arakkan Narayanan v. M/s. Indian Handloom Traders, AIR 1999 Ker 279 (para 6).

It was held by the Supreme Court that the books of account must be held to have been proved even in the absence of examining the writer as a witness, provided, there is proof firstly of proper maintenance of the books in the regular course of business; and secondly, of the impossibility of securing the presence of the writer.[12] It is not always necessary that, in order to establish that the account books have been kept regularly in the course of business, the person who had written them should be examined; what the law requires is that some one competent to speak about it should be tendered as a witness.[13] Where a person having personal knowledge of the facts regarding the entries in the account books stated that they were maintained regularly in the course of business, and the accounts were prepared from rough books or memoranda, it was held that they should be treated as the original account, and they cannot be rejected on the ground that they were not entered regularly from day to day.[14] When the accountant could not be examined, and when most of the items claimed by the plaintiff are shown to be real by other independent evidence, the plaintiff cannot be nonsuited. It is not necessary that each entry should be further corroborated.[15] Where a witness deposed that the entries were made by a clerk under his supervision, it was held that the entries were duly proved.[16] Where the plaintiff produces account books, and a witness on his behalf gives evidence in support of the entries, and there is no cross-examination of the witness with respect to his personal knowledge of the facts stated therein, it has been held to be sufficient corroboration.[17]

Where the writer of the account books is alive but has not been examined, the account books cannot be said to be duly proved, and they are inadmissible in evidence.[18]

Mere production of the extracts of the account books is not tantamount to a proof of those extracts. They are to be proved by evidence.[19]

When the entries were not admitted by the opposite party, the person who tenders them in evidence has to establish that the entries were regularly kept in the course of business.[20]

When account books are produced in evidence, firstly, it must be shown that they were produced from proper custody and, secondly, the account books have been kept in the ordinary course of business. Where no objection was taken by the opposite party regarding their admissibility at the time of their production, no objection can be taken subsequently in the appellate stage.[21]

Entries in certified copies of statements of account corroborated by the certificate of their truth, are sufficient to charge a person with debt or liability.[22]

The law requires not only the proof of account books but also of each entry therein.[23]

The section does not mean that there should be independent evidence to prove each and every transaction entered in a book of account. What is necessary to be seen in each case is whether besides the entries in a book of account, there is any evidence to prove that the transactions referred to in those entries actually took place. Such corroboration will be best afforded by the evidence of the person who

---

12. Ram Janaki Devi v. Juggilal Kamlapati, AIR 1971 SC 2551 : (1971) 3 SCR 573.
13. Sahharan v. Velayudhan, ILR (1978) 1 Ker 619.
14. Ram Kunwar Jainarayan v. Pyarchand, AIR 1952 MB 55.
15. Gopala Pillai v. Gopala Pillai, AIR 1957 Trav/Co 184.
16. Ram Kunwar Jainarayan v. Pyarchand, AIR 1952 MB 55.
17. Balmukund v. Jaganath, AIR 1963 Raj 212; Narain Das v. Firm Ghasi Ram, AIR 1938 All 353.
18. Kakaram Sohanlal v. Firm Thakar Dass, AIR 1962 Punj 27; Gajendra Shah v. Shankar Bux Singh, AIR 1935 Oudh 16; Haggamilal v. Bhuralal, AIR 1961 Raj 52; Lachmi v. Musaddi, AIR 1942 Oudh 155.
19. Duni Chand v. Munshi Amarnath, AIR 1953 HP 68. See also N. Nagarajan v. State of T.N., 1994 Cr LJ 1007 (para 11) (Mad); original account books must be produced, Ishwar Dass Jain v. Sohan Lal, AIR 2000 SC 426 (paras 23, 24 and 31).
20. Lilawati (Smt.) v. Parasram, AIR 1977 HP 1.
21. Jaganath Prasad v. Hanuman Prasad, ILR 36 Cal 833 (PC); Official Liquidator M.E. Moola and Sons Ltd. v. Burjojee, 1932 PC 118; Ramaji v. Manohar, AIR 1961 Bom 169; Gopal v. Sri Thakurji, AIR 1943 PC 83; Kakaram Sohanlal v. Firm Thakur Das, AIR 1962 Punj 27.
22. Kalipada Sinha v. Mahalukshmi Bank Ltd., AIR 1961 Cal 191.
23. Mathilda v. Fritz Gaebelie, AIR 1926 Mad 955; Dwarka v. Baksh, ILR (1895) 18 All 92; Aswatha Narayanaiah v. Sameeviah, AIR 1965 AP 33; Imambandi v. Haji Mutsaddi, AIR 1918 PC 11.

wrote the books of account and in whose presence the transactions took place.[24] Where the entries made in the books of account produced by the bank were corroborated by the evidence of the Branch Manager and the other bank employees, it was held to be sufficient proof of transaction of loan.[25] Where there was nothing to prove that the books of accounts were not properly kept by the bank or that the amount paid by the defendant/loanee has not been properly entered into them, the entries in them could be relied on to fasten liability on the loanee/defendant.[26]

6. SUCH STATEMENTS ALONE SHALL NOT BE SUFFICIENT EVIDENCE

The entries in books of account, regularly kept in the course of business, are relevant in all proceedings in a court of law but these entries are not by themselves sufficient to charge any person with liability.[27] By mere proof of the entries in the account books regularly kept in the course of business, one cannot get a decree; he has to prove by some other independent corroborative evidence that it was a real and honest transaction.[28]

There has to be evidence to prove payment of the money which may appear in the books of account in order that the person may be charged with liability thereunder, except where the person to be charged accepts the correctness of the books of account and does not challenge them.[29]

The object behind this is that a man cannot be allowed to make evidence for himself by writing his own account books behind the back of the third parties. So, independent evidence is required of the transaction to which the entries relate.[30]

Though account books by themselves are not sufficient to charge the defendant with liability to pay, the defendant can be made liable if there is corroboration in support of the account books.[31] When there is independent evidence, the entries could be used as a piece of corroboration.[32] The entries in the account books which are kept in the regular course of business are merely corroborative; primary evidence is always required to prove the transactions mentioned therein.[33] Though entries in the account books are relevant, mere entries without any oral evidence are not sufficient to prove entrustment.[34] However in the case of transactions which are numerous and which extend over some length of time, it is not reasonable to expect independent evidence to prove each particular transaction. In such cases the genuineness of the account books, if they are kept in regular course of business, will be the determining factor. It must, however, be understood that mere proof of the correctness of the entries in the account books would not be enough. There must be some further evidence to corroborate the entries in the account books.[35] Account books alone are not sufficient to charge a person with liability unless there is

---

24. Ramgobind Prasad v. Gulab Chand Sahu, ILR (1940) 20 Pat 273; Dwarka Doss v. Baboo Jankee Doss, (1855) 6 MIA 88, 98; Lachmi Narain v. Musaddi Lall, ILR (1941) 17 Luck 327; Himmat Mal v. Shah Magaji Khubaji, ILR (1953) 3 Raj 815.
25. State Bank of India v. Yumnam Gouramani Singh, AIR 1994 SC 1644 (para 5).
26. Raigarh Khetriya Gramin Bank v. Taliram Gupta, 1999 AIHC 2823 (para 9) (MP).
27. State of A.P. v. Ganeswara Rao, AIR 1963 SC 1850; Consolidated Coffee Ltd. v. Workmen, (1970) 2 Lab LJ 376 SC; Mettur Beardsell Ltd. v. Salem Textiles Ltd., AIR 2001 Mad 466 (para 9).
28. Chandradhar Goswami v. Gauhati Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1058; V.K. Abraham v. N.K. Abraham, AIR 1978 Mad 56; Seetharamaiah v. Srirama Motor, AIR 1977 AP 164; Sajjanraj v. Mehta Commercial Co. Ltd., AIR 1973 Guj 57; H. Motor Works Ltd. v. Haranath Baura, AIR 1965 Assam 10; Deluxe Roadlines v. Palani Chetty, (1992) 2 MLJ 481; Chandi Ram v. Jamini Kanta, AIR 1952 Assam 92; Central Bureau of Investigation v. V.C. Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 : 1998 Cr LJ (paras 34 and 39) (SC); Dharam Chand Joshi v. Satya Narain Bazaz, AIR 1993 Gau 35 (para 7).
29. Chandradhar v. Gauhati Bank, AIR 1967 SC 1058 followed in Pitram Singh v. Vimla Devi, AIR 1992 Raj 149.
30. Beni v. Bisan Dayal, 89 Indian Cases 371 (Nag).
31. Himat Singka Motor Works Ltd., Gauhati v. Haranath Baura, AIR 1965 Assam 10, relying on Sorabjee Waca Ganda v. Koonwurjee Manjhi, (1866) 1 Moo IA 47; Sri Kishen v. Rai Huri Kishen, 5 Moo IA 432 (PC); Chandi Ram Deka v. Jamini Kanta Deka, AIR 1952 Assam 92; Ramkishen Ramnarayan Agarwal v. Vallabh Dass Chunnilal, AIR 1958 Raj 255; Hiralal v. Ram Rakha, 1953 Pepsu 113; Kulu Transport Co-operative Society Ltd., Kulu v. Arora Traders, (1978) 90 Punj LR 503 (P&H); Kelu Sahu v. Hadibandhu Sahu, AIR 1968 Ori 19; Shubh Karan Rameshwaralal Agarwal v. Durga Prasad Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1972 Guj 208; Gulam Ahmad v. Government of J&K, AIR 1960 J&K 136; Purushottam Sahu v. Rajkishore Prvsty, ILR (1977) 1 Cut 376.
32. State v. Kishen Dayal, AIR 1952 HP (B) 46; Sajjanraj Swaroop Chand v. Mehta Commercial Co., AIR 1973 Guj 57 : Kulu Transport Co-operative v. Arora Traders, 1978 (80) Punj LR 503.
33. Jai Narain v. Zubeda Khatoon, 1972 All 494.
34. Dadarao v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1974 SC 388 : 1974 Cr LJ 447.
35. D.K. Aswathanarayanaiah v. Nallapula Sanjeeviah, AIR 1965 AP 33 EKBOTE J.

sufficient corroborative evidence in support of the account books.[36] No doubt entries in the account books maintained by a creditor are not by themselves evidence to attach a liability to the debtor but they can be used to corroborate the evidence given by the creditor that the payments had been made and a decree can be passed on the basis of such corroborative evidence.[37]

The Court is not bound to act on the entries in the account books which are relevant under Section 34 and also Section 32(2), without corroboration.[38]

One party cannot bind the other by merely producing his own books of account.[39] But the plaintiff's own testimony on oath in support of the entries in his books could be sufficient to fasten the defendant with liability.[40]

Section 34 does not limit in any way at all the nature of the material upon which a court may rely to support the statements in a book of account. Such material may take the shape of contemporary vouchers, receipts or other documentary evidence or of sworn oral testimony.[41]

When the plaintiff says in evidence that the account books are regularly maintained, and he is not cross-examined with regard to the genuinenss of the accounts, the plaintiff's own statement of oath in support of the entries is sufficient to fix the defendant with the liability. No other corroboration is required.[42]

Where it was proved that the entries in the ledger account were kept in the ordinary course of business, and they were corroborated by some other admitted transactions evidenced by documents of unquestioned genuineness, it was held that the mere fact that the party had not produced the day book of his business did not detract from the evidentiary value to be attached to the ledger; that the evidence of the party himself was a substantial compliance with the provisions of Section 34 corroborating the entries, to fasten liability.[43]

Where the plaintiff did not assert that the transaction was on credit, it was held that it was a very material omission on account of which the plaintiff's evidence cannot be treated to be corroborative of the entry in the credit register.[44]

Where the question is whether a house was built by the deceased with joint family funds, the party tendering the account books cannot rely on entries here and there. All the entries have to be taken together and an inference consistent with the surrounding circumstances and probabilities has to be drawn in deciding whether the cost was met by the deceased, exclusively from his funds, or whether it was met by the joint family fund, at least partly.[45]

Entries in the party's own account book regarding payment to the opposite party, are to be supported by corroborative evidence, either by production of receipts or by proving the payments by independent and reliable testimony.[46] Where there was a practice of a bank to deposit on each day its cash box in a sealed condition, in a police station and when it was found there was shortage, the cash book of bank and the detailed book of account showing an amount on hand from day to day was held admissible to prove the contents of the box.[47] Where the ex-secretary of a bank proved entries in the ledger book maintained

---

36. Kakaram Sohanlal v. Firm Thakurdas Mathradas, AIR 1962 Punj 27.
37. Suraj Prasad v. Makhna Devi, AIR 1946 All 127.
38. J.N. Eranna Rao v. Vitta Dodda, AIR 1960 AP 331; Hari Bux Gowri Shankar Firm v. Subhakaran Tulsiram, AIR 1965 Ori 211; Ganapati Ram v. Narasigha Charan Sahu Others, (1972) 38 Cut LT 309; Kelu Saho v. Hadibandhu Saho, ILR 1967 Cut 413.
39. Hira Bhagat v. Gobind Ram, (1897) PR No. 63 of 1897 (Civil); Abdul Ali v. Puran Mal, (1914) PR No. 82 of 1914 (Civil); Bichha Lal v. Jai Pershad, (1899) PR No. 45 of 1899 (Civil); Gopeswar Sen v. Bejoy Chand Mahatab, ILR (1928) 55 Cal 1167.
40. Kakaram v. Firm Thakar Das Madhna Das, 1962 Punj 27; Firm Jodholal Budhulal v. Bhavani Das, 1925 Lah 242.
41. Kallumal Dhakkan Lal v. Bhawani Das Rekhab Das, AIR 1925 All 742.
42. Kakaram Sohanalal v. Firm Thakurdas Matra, AIR 1962 Punj 27; Balmukand v. Jaga Nath, 1963 Raj 212; Aswathanarayanaiah v. Sanjeeviah, AIR 1965 AP 33.
43. Gopasundar v. Chunnilal, AIR 1955 Ori 6; Mohanlal Bodj Raj v. Dwarka Nath Kuldeep Kumar, AIR 1985 J&K 85.
44. Hira Mehare v. Birbal Prasad, AIR 1958 Ori 4.
45. Chandrasekhar Praharaj v. Pitambari Dibya, AIR 1953 Ori 315.
46. Banshidhar Ganga Prasad v. Chaman Lal, ILR (1975) 1 Del 445; Vasireddy Seetharamaiah v. Sriram Motor Finance Corp., Kakinada, AIR 1977 AP 164.
47. Bilaspur Central Co-operative Bank Ltd. v. State of M.P., AIR 1959 MP 77.

in the regular course of business, it was held that the claim was sufficiently proved, and no adverse inference could be drawn against the bank for non-production of its cash book.[48] In a money suit part payment was claimed by the defendant; the plaintiff produced an account showing the outstanding balance due, which was acknowledged by the defendent by putting his signature at the foot of the account. It was held that it amounts to account stated as proved; and the defendant is liable to pay the balance.[49] Where the books of account on which the plaintiff relied are not those maintained by the plaintiff, but the account books of an entirely different institution namely, The High Commission of India in London, it was held that neither the illustration to Section 34, nor the argument that self-serving admissions without more cannot be sufficient basis to charge the defendant with liability, can strictly speaking be applicable; the circumstances surrounding, the existence of books of account and recorded therein may constitute sufficient corroborative material. The quantum of other evidence required in each case will depend upon the circumstances of that case.[50]

Accounts relevant under Section 32(2), are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible only under this section, require corroboration. Entries in account may, in the same suit, be relevant under both the sections; and in that case the necessity for corroboration does not arise.[51]

In the absence of evidence that the book produced is an account book, regularly kept in the ordinary course of business, it should not be admitted, though, if no objection was taken at the time of production of the book, it is not permissible to take objection subsequently in an appeal. However, even if no objection could be taken in appeal, the reliability and the weight to be given to the account book have still to be considered.[52]

Where some entries in an account book are proved to be bogus, by independent evidence, the whole book is to be discredited, when such independent evidence precludes the possibility of error or accident. Such bogus entries cannot fasten any liability on the defendant; it is only when the evidence proving the entries is reliable and inspires confidence in the Court, the entries can be made relevant as having been made in the regular course of business.[53]

7. ABSENCE OF ENTRY

This section applies to entries in the books of account; and not to an absence of entry; no inference can be drawn from the absence of an entry relating to any particular matter.[54]

Where the account books were produced by the plaintiff, showing the absence of an entry of the receipt of rent for a relevant period, and the account books are proved, in the absence of any reliable evidence on behalf of the defendant, except saying that the rent was paid to the servant of the plaintiff, it was held that the statement of the defendant was not believable and that the finding of the lower court that the rent was not paid, was legal, and that the account book may be admitted to prove the absence of the entry.[55] However, it was held by the Supreme Court, that where an entry in A's account books regularly kept in the course of business, of a certain payment made to B is relevant; the non-existence of such an entry in B's account book, though not relevant under Section 34, is relevant under Section 5 and 11 and can be proved by B's account book.[56]

---

48. Official Liquidator Puri Bank Ltd. v. Ramaniklal Joshi, AIR 1967 Ori 169.
49. Sachindra Prasad Chakravarthy v. Ahmed Ali, AIR 1988 Gau 33.
50. Ghulam Ahmad v. Government of J&K, AIR 1960 J&K 136; Kelu Sahu v. Hadi Bandhu Sahu, AIR 1968 Ori 19; Shubh Karan Rameshwaralal Agrawal v. Durga Prasad Pvt. Ltd., AIR 1972 Guj 208; Kallu Mal v. Bhavani, AIR 1925 All 742.
51. Rampyarabai v. Balaji, (1904) 6 Bom LR 50 : 28 Bom 294.
52. Official Liquidator M.E. Moola and Sons Ltd. v. Burjorjee, AIR 1932 PC 118; Jagarnath Pershad v. Hanuman Pershad, 36 IA 221 (PC); Ramji Bataiji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
53. Seth Magan Mal v. Darbarilal Chowdhry, AIR 1928 PC 39; Chanbey Sushil Chandra v. Raj Bahadur, AIR 1977 All 259; Siddalingappa v. M.C. Moben, AIR 1978 Kant 10; Chandradhar Goswami v. Gauhati Bank Ltd., AIR 1967 SC 1058; Kurapati Venkata Mallayya v. Thondepu Ramaswami and Co., AIR 1964 SC 818 : 1982 Mad WN (Cri) 120; Thomas v. Gounda Gurukkal, ILR 1960 Ker 5.
54. Rampandit v. Lakpati, 30 Cal 231; See also R. v. Girish, 10 Cal 1024.
55. Babulal v. Kamaladevi (Smt.), AIR 1954 Cal 145; Debendra v. Arun, AIR 1925 Cal 64; Kasam v. Haji Jamal, AIR 1924 Nag 22; Suresh Kumar v. Mewaram, AIR 1991 P&H 254.
56. State of A.P. v. Chimalapathy Ganeshwararao, AIR 1963 SC 1850; See also Imam Bandi v. Haji Mutsaddi, AIR 1918 PC 11; Pragdas v. Dawalatram, 11 Bom 157; Alinasar v. Manik, ILR (1902) 25 All 90.

Relevancy of entry in public record, made in performance of duty.

S. 35. An entry in any public or other official book, register or [57][record or an electronic record], stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, and made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or by any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by the law of the country in which such book, register or [58][record or an electronic record] is kept, is itself a relevant fact.

SYNOPSIS

1. The Information Technology Act, 2000—Record ... 469
2. Principle and scope ... 469
3. Public or other official book, register or record ... 470
4. Birth and death registers ... 472
5. Marriage register ... 475
6. School registers ... 475
7. Electoral Roll ... 477
8. Record of rights ... 477
9. Revenue Records ... 479
10. Mutation entries ... 481
11. Wajib-ul-arz ... 481
12. Rivaz-i-am ... 482
13. Inam register ... 482
14. F.I.R. and Case Diary ... 483
15. Text book of academic interest ... 483
16. Probative value of entries of a document admissible under Section 35 ... 483

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000—RECORD

The meaning of the word "record" has been expanded by the above Act so as to include in it an electronic record also.

2. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section is based upon the circumstances that in the case of pubic documents, entries are made in discharge of public duty by an officer who is an authorized and accredited agent appointed for the purpose. The law reposes such confidence in public officers that it presumes they will discharge their several trusts with accuracy and fidelity.[59]

To render a document admissible, three conditions must be satisfied. Firstly, the entry that is relied on must be one in any public or other official book, register, or record, secondly, it must be an entry relating to a fact in issue or relevant fact; and thirdly, it must be made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, or any other person in performance of a duty specially enjoined by law.The reason why an entry made by a public servant in a public record or other official book or register or record stating a fact in issue or relevant fact, has been made relevant is that when a public servant makes it himself in the discharge of his official duty, the probability of its being truly and correctly recorded is high.[60]

"A FURTHER class of exceptions to the hearsay rule consists of statements contained in public or official documents, which, subject to the qualifications hereinafter specified, are in general prima facie, though not conclusive, evidence of the truth of the facts recorded, even against strangers.

The general grounds of receiption are (1) that the statements and entries have been made by the authorised agents of the public in the course of official duty; and (2) that the facts recorded are of public interest or notoriety. To which it may be added that it would not only be difficult, but often impossible, to prove facts of a public nature by means of actual witnesses examined upon oath."[61]

---

57. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).
58. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).
59. Ramprasad Sharma v. State of Bihar, AIR 1970 SC 326.
60. Brij Mohan Singh v. Priya Brat Narain Sinha, AIR 1965 SC 282 : (1965) 3 SCR 861; See also State of Bihar v. Radha Krishna Singh, AIR 1983 SC 684 : (1983) 2 SCR 808; Harpal v. State of H.P., AIR 1981 SC 361; Samar Dasadh v. Jugoll Kishore, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 366; State v. Qamruddin, ILR 1956 Nag 282.
61. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (paras 25.01, 25.03), page : 508.

"The principle upon which entries in a register are received is that it is the public duty of the person who keeps the register to make such entries after satisfying himself of their truth; it is not that the writer makes them contemporaneously, or of his own knowledge, for no person in a private capacity can make such entries."[62]

However, the Supreme Court observed that in interpreting this section decisions on common law of England, would not be of much help.[63]

Statements in public documents are receivable to prove the facts stated on the general grounds that they were made by the authorised agents of the public in the course of official duty, and respecting facts which were of public interest or required to be recorded for the benefit of the community.[64] Evidentiary value of the entries in the records will not be presumed to be correct if they are shown to be not correct by the evidence produced.[65]

3. PUBLIC OR OTHER OFFICIAL BOOK, REGISTER OR RECORD

As no definition is given in the Act for the expressions 'public' or 'official book', reference can be made to Section 74 of the Act, which states, what are public documents.[66]

The Madras High Court held, that a statement amounting to an admission which was contained in a judgment can be received u/s. 35 as an entry in a record made by a public servant in the course of his duty.[67]

This was approved by the Privy Council in Collector of Gorakhpur v. Ramasundur,[68] and held that a statement by a predecessor in title of the party contained in a previous judgment, against whom the document, a pedigree referred therein, was sought to be used, was admissible u/s. 35 of this Act as an entry in public record.[69]

Section 35 read with Section 74, pre-supposes that a document produced is really an extract from the official register.[70]

In a case, the Calcutta High Court held that the section is confined to that class of cases where a public officer has to enter in a register or other books some actual fact which is known to him.[71] But this case has not been approved of in a subsequent case in which it was held that certified copies of entries in a register kept by a public servant under a statute are admissible in evidence.[72]

However, the privilege given to public records under this section does not extend to entries which the public officer is not expected to, and is not permitted to, make.[73]

The Gazette, being an official record evidencing public affairs, is admissible under Section 35 r.w. Section 81 of the Evidence Act and the Court may presume their contents as genuine.[74]

---

62. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Ed., p. 513 (para 25-12); Doe v. Andrews, (1850) 15 QB 756, per ERLE J; CF. Sturla v. Freccia, (1850) 5 App Cas 623, 644, per LORD BLACKBURN; Lyell v. Kennedy, 56 LT 647, per C.A.; Ioannou v. Demetriou, (1952) 1 All ER 179 (PC).
63. Bakhshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752.
64. Gulam Rasul Khan v. Secretary of State, (1925) 6 Lah 269 : AIR 1925 PC 170 : 52 IA 201; Secretary of State v. Chimanlal Jamnadas, (1941) 44 Bom LR 295 : AIR 1942 Bom 161 : (1942) Bom 357.
65. Motilal Lakhotia v. Mewang Tobgyal Wangchuk Tenzing Namgyal, AIR 1994 Sikkim 6 (para 12), following Sita Ram v. Ramchandra, AIR 1977 SC 1712 (para 20).
66. Samar Dosadh v. Jugoll Kishore Singh, ILR 23 Cal 386.
67. Krishnasamy Iyyangar v. Rajagopala Iyyangar, ILR (1895) 18 Mad 73.
68. AIR 1934 PC 157, 164 : 61 IA 286, 306.
69. Krishnasami Iyyangar v. Rajagopala Iyyengar, ILR (1895) 18 Mad 73, see also Ramaswami Goundan v. Subbaraya Goundan, AIR 1948 Mad 388.
70. Bhagirathammal v. Bibhuti Bhushan, AIR 1942 Cal 309; war diaries of Bombay Pioneers and Chief Engineer Bus Corps were records of official acts and therefore admissible, Bakshish Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1967 SC 752 : (1967) 1 SCR 211.
71. Saraswati Dasi v. Dhanpat Singh, ILR (1882) 9 Cal 431.
72. Shoshi Bhooshun Bose v. Girish Cunder Mitter, (1893) 20 Cal 940; Rai Durgaj Deo Bahadur v. Beni Mahto, AIR 1917 PC 197(1) : (1917) 20 Bom LR 712 (PC).
73. Ali Nasar Khan v. Manik Chand, ILR (1902) 25 All 90 (FB).
74. Bala Shankar Maha Shankar Bhattjee v. Charity Commissioner, Gujarat, AIR 1995 SC 167 (para 22).

The registers maintained by public bodies are public documents and extracts from those documents are admissible under this section.[75] Where land was allotted to the tenant under Punjab Security of Land Tenures Act, 1953 and the certificate of allotment appeared in the index of the relevant file and the delivery of possession of land was also mentioned in the report, the fact of non-availability of certificate on file would be of no consequence.[76]

Entries in a book which is prescribed under Section 154, Cr.P.C. (Old) may be relevant under the section. A report as provided by Section 157, Cr.P.C. (Old) made to a Magistrate may be a public document but it being a report is not relevant under this section.[77] A report of the Court of Enquiry, appointed under rule 75 of the Aircraft Rules, 1937, cannot be regarded as an entry in a public or official book, register or record within the meaning of Section 75, though it is relevant under Section 5 of the Act, because it bears on the question of the existence or non-existence of every fact in issue, or of such facts as are regarded as relevant under the Evidence Act, and it may also be admissible under Section 7 & 9 of the Act.[78] A certificate of Guardianship issued by a Court is not admissible in evidence under Section 35 to prove the minority of a person, as the certificate is neither a book nor a register nor a record kept by any officer in accordance with any law.[79] Where there was a Tahsildhar's Report recording a fact about holding a cattle fair at a particular place, it was held such report was not admissible under this section, though it may be admissible under some other provisions of the Act, if the Tahsildhar is examined as a witness.[80] A death certificate by certain respectable person of the place where the family of the dead person once resided, does not satisfy the requirements of Section 35, and is inadmissible in evidence when there is no satisfactory proof that any statutory duty was cast upon him to keep a record of births and deaths.[81]

This section does not deal with the binding nature or the effect of judgements.[82]

An entry from a register made by a public officer under the Municipal Act, is to be presumed to be true as it is a public document.[83]

Section 35 only provides that an entry in an official or public book, which is duly made by a public servant in the discharge of his duty, is by itself a relevant fact. But, it does not make the public book evidence to show that a particular entry has not been made.[84]

For the admissibility of an entry under Section 35, it is not necessary that the clerk who actually wrote the entry should have had any personal knowledge, or that the register should be a copy of a previous register which had become untidy.[85]

The entries made by the Police Officer in the Site Inspection Map and the Site Inspection Memo are record made in discharge of his official duties and the entries are relevant under this section.[86]

The certified copies of FIR, Inspection Map and Site Inspection Memo, Panchnama, Injury Report or Post-mortem Report and other relevant documents prepared by the police and the doctor while

---

75. Harilal v. Amriksingh; following AIR 1978 All 292; Municipal Board Aligarh v. Mumtaz Khan, AIR 1948 All 309 : (1948) ALJ 87.
76. Krishna Kumari v. State of Haryana, (1999) 1 SCC 338 : AIR 1999 SC 854.
77. Hasan Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1962 Guj 214.
78. Indian Airlines v. Madhuri Chaudhury, AIR 1965 Cal 252 reversing, Madhuri (Smt.) v. Indian Airlines Corporation, AIR 1962 Cal 544.
79. Muktipada v. Aklema, AIR 1950 Cal 533.
80. State of U.P. v. Smt. Ram Sri, AIR 1976 All 121.
81. Rajrani (Smt.) v. Chief Settlement Commissioner, Delhi, AIR 1984 SC 1234 : (1984) 3 SCR 763.
82. Govind Kesheo v. State of M.P., AIR 1955 Nag 236; K. Khedia v. Turia, AIR 1962 Pat 420; Ram Kirpal v. Munabati Kumari, AIR 1958 Pat 477; Chandulal v. Pushkar Raj, 1952 Nag 271; Jagannath Nanda v. Bishnu Dalei, ILR 1974 Cut 675 : 40 Cut LT 888; Naiak v. Salilendra Narayan, AIR 1961 Ori 327; Asa Singh v. Mansha Ram, AIR 1930 Lah 238.
83. Nanhaklal v. Baijnath, AIR 1935 Pat 474; A.K. Basak v. Sailendra Nath Paul, (1965) 69 Cal WN 593; Komal (Mst.) v. Gurcharan Prasad, AIR 1938 All 242.
84. In re : K. Rama Rao, AIR 1960 AP 441; following In re : Siram Reddy, AIR 1960 AP 253.
85. William Graham v. Phanindranath, AIR 1916 Cal 617.
86. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation v. Nand Kishore, AIR 2001 Raj 334 (paras 5 and 7).

discharging official duty are admissible in evidence without formal proof as strict provision of the Evidence Act are not to be insisted upon in summary proceedings of claim for compensation before a Tribunal.[87] Entries in a village crime notebook are admissible in evidence.[88] When a statutory duty is laid upon a public officer to investigate and report, his report is an official record within the meaning of Section 35.[89] The Telephone Trunk Call tickets prepared under rules 49 and 50 of the Posts and Telegraphs Financial Rules, are official records, and the entries are made by the public servants in the discharge of their duties. They are not inadmissible because their writers were not called as witnesses. There is the presumption about their genuineness, because those tickets purport to be documents kept under rule 49 of the rules.[90] Even if a first information report was not signed by the informant, its admissibility in evidence is not affected if the informant is examined, as it is a part of the official record.[91] The documents proved to have been received in official correspondence by the witness and found to be genuine are admissible as official record.[92] Sri S. VARADACHARIAR J., in Sevugan v. Raghunatha[93] held that where a book or file of papers containing copies of the communications, was maintained according to a practice, that book or the file was itself an official register u/s. 35 and was a public document under Section 74 of the Act. Where disciplinary proceeding was initiated against the respondent for obtaining employment by showing a higher percentage of marks in SSC examination but the original documents like his application and the certificate were not available so the charge was proved on the basis of the extracts produced from "Z" Register and the oral evidence of another employee who was conversant with the practice of making entries in the Register, it was held that the Tribunal failed to appreciate that the Register was a public document and the entry made in it was a relevant evidence.[94]

The endorsement by a sub-registrar may be treated as sufficient proof of the execution of a document. Specific denial of execution is necessary before the document is required to be proved.[95]

Though the statements in the F.I.R. are not substantive evidence, they can be used as previous statements for purpose of corroboration u/s. 157 or for contradiction u/s. 145 of this Act, and not for any other purpose.[96]

The iner-departmental secretariat notes do not come within the purview of Section 35, as they are not supposed to be exhibited to the public.[97]

4. BIRTH AND DEATH REGISTERS

Certified copy of the entry in the birth register maintained by an official in discharge of his official duty, is admissible u/s. 35, and it is not necessary to examine the official.[98] Where the date of birth given in the Register of Births and Deaths, the LIC policy and the matriculation certificate was the same, a different date of birth filled in by the father in the application form at the time of admission pales into

---

87. Rajasthan State Road Transport Corporation v. Nand Kishore, AIR 2001 Raj 334 (para 8).
88. Amdumiyan v. Crown, ILR (1937) Nag 315 : AIR 1937 Nag 17; Shrikisan v. Jagoba, ILR 1937 Nag 382 : AIR 1937 Nag 264.
89. Ramkrishna v. Tirunarayana Pillai, AIR 1932 Mad 198; Krish Nandan v. State, AIR 1958 Pat 166.
90. Nandlal More v. State, (1965) 1 Cr LJ 393 (Punj); Public Prosecutor v. Sadagopan, AIR 1953 Mad 785; Ramarao v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Oudh 1; D'C Ruz v. D'C Ruz, 1927 Oudh 310.
91. Ratanchand v. State, AIR 1960 Bom 146; Emperor v. Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18.
92. Desa V.P. v. Union of India, AIR 1958 MP 297.
93. AIR 1940 Mad 273.
94. Union of India v. A. Nagamalleshwar Rao, AIR 1998 SC 111.
95. Fateh Md. v. Ghosia Bibi, AIR 1953 Ajmer 19; Ganpatrao v. Nagorao, 1940 Nag 382; Bhima Singh v. Fakir Chand, AIR 1948 Nag 155; Bam Jassa Kunwar v. Sahu Narain Das, AIR 1946 All 178.
96. Hasib v. State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 283; Sankaralinga v. Emperor, ILR 53 Mad 590; Mohan v. R., AIR 1925 All 413; Rahenuddin v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Cal 323; Miyana v. State, AIR 1962 Guj 214.
97. Biswabhusan v. State, AIR 1952 Ori 289.
98. Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1981 SC 361; Anita v. Atal Bihari, 1993 Cr LJ 549 (para 5) (MP); Mohandas Suryavanshi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 3451 (para 10) (MP), birth entry prevails over school entry and is conclusive.

insignificance.[1] An entry of birth made in the register by another person, at the request of an illiterate chowkhidar who maintained the register, was held inadmissible.[2]

Where a birth register was maintained at a police station by Head Moharir (registration officer), in accordance with the provisions of U.P. Police Regulations, it was held that the entries therein are relevant under Section 35, in the absence of any evidence to rebut the presumption as to the correctness of the regular performance of the official acts.[3] The birth or death registers which are kept by the Police Patil at the Police Station are relevant under section 35 and certified copies are admissible in proof of the original entry under Section 77.[4]

The fact that the entry in the register relates to a particular person and none other is required to be proved.[5]

Though an entry regarding the birth of a certain person was made on information after the expiry of the period prescribed by Section 7 of the Bengal Birth and Death Registration Act, 1873, it was held that it was still admissible under this section, as it was maintained by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties.[6]

A certified copy of birth certificate, which is signed by the executive officer of the Municipal Corporation, is a public document. It is conclusive evidence, unless it is disproved.[7] Entry of the date of birth in the register of births is prima facie evidence but not conclusive in nature[8] but in case of variation of age given by the medical opinion by two years from age given in the birth register, the latter should be preferred.[9] A birth register is conclusive proof of age, but the entry does not prove itself and is not proof of age of any particular person unless the person connected with the entry, either by making the entry or giving information, comes forward and speaks regarding the entry and connects it with the individual concerned.[10] Where the father of the person concerned had no other male child except him and the entry was corroborated by the testimony of the witness, the same could not be ignored.[11]

Birth entries in registers of public schools, though relevant under Section 35, have far less evidentiary value to show the correct age, than the entries in the birth register which furnish the best evidence of the date of birth and can be accepted unless they are shown to be wrong.[12]

An entry relating to the date of birth, made pursuant to the directions of the Magistrate, is not conclusive evidence of a disputed date of birth.[13]

When information is given by a village servant to the registering officer that a child was born to a male and a female, it is his duty to make entries. An extract of the entries from the book is proof of the entries, though the registering officer, cannot be supposed to have knowledge of the fact, that the male was the paramour of the woman nor can it be assumed that the servant informed him that the child was an illegitimate child. It cannot be said that when he made the entries he did not discharge his official duty within the meaning of section 35.[14] In the absence of testimony by some competent witness to speak to the knowledge of the relationship or as to the source of information on which recitals came to be

---

1. Santenu Mitra v. State of W.B., (1998) 5 SCC 697 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1381 : AIR 1999 SC 1587.
2. Brijmohan v. Priya Brat, AIR 1965 SC 282; Jogindra Kaur v. Balbir Kaur, AIR 1974 Punj 31; Jaladhar Sanal v. Malatidei, 1971 Ori 230.
3. Rajindra Kumar v. C.N. Singh, (1970) 2 SCC 277; Ghuia Devi v. Shyamlal Mandal, AIR 1974 Pat 68; Biswnath Gosain v. Dulhia Lalmuni, AIR 1968 Pat 481; Manick Chand v. Bhagwan Das, AIR 1964 Pat 353; Shib Deo Misra v. Ram Prasad, ILR 46 All 637 : AIR 1925 All 79; Tamijuddin v. Taju, ILR 46 Cal 152 : AIR 1919 Cal 721.
4. Manik Rao Jairamji v. Deorao Baliram, AIR 1955 Nag 290.
5. Mukhtar Ahmad Khan v. Board of Revenue, Uttar Pradesh, 1962 All LJ 1094.
6. Manick Chand v. Bhagwan Das, AIR 1964 Pat 358.
7. Dalipkumar Sain v. Nandarani Dassi (Smt.), AIR 1970 Cal 292. See also Goverdhan v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 632 (para 6) (Mad).
8. Parkashchander v. Parameshwari (Smt.), AIR 1987 P&H 37. However, M.P. High Court has held it to be conclusive in Mohandas Suryavanshi v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 3451 (para 10) (MP).
9. State of Gujarat v. Inayathusen Mohmadmiya, 1996 Cr LJ 3225 (para 13) (Guj).
10. Alekh Prasad v. State, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 102 (Ori).
11. Kanji Bibi v. Md. Siddique, 1996 AIHC 3913 (para 13) (Cal).
12. Krishnarajan v. Doraswamy, AIR 1966 Ker 305; Banshi Ram v. Jit Ram, AIR 1964 Punj 231.
13. H. Subbarao v. Life Insurance Corp., AIR 1976 Kant 231.
14. Tatayya v. Nakaraju, AIR 1958 AP 611.

incorporated, the recitals themselves cannot be treated as substantive evidence concerning the paternity indicated in the said documents, as such entries are matters extraneous to what is strictly enjoined upon the officer to record.[15]

An entry in a birth register mentioning the names of the complainant and the accused as father and mother of a new born child, made by a village Munshif in the course of his official duty, is a public document; when it is produced from the office of the Register of Assurances. Its authenticity cannot be doubted and as it is a public document, it is admissible, to show that the complainant lived with the first accused as his wife and gave birth to a child.[16]

The certificate relating to an entry in the death register, though admitted in evidence without objection, is not conclusive evidence regarding the date of death of the deceased.[17] It was held that an extract from the register of deaths is bound to be accepted as conclusive as to the date of death of a person, when there is no controversy that the extract did not relate to the person whose death is in question. The death register is covered by the language of Section 35.[18] Entries in a death register maintained by Gram Panchayat under the Bihar Panchayat Raj Act, 1948 are admissible in proof of a person's date of death.[19] Entry of date of death in the death register maintained by Gram Sevak in a Gram Panchayat is admissible under the section.[20] The register of deaths maintained by the Sub-Registrar under Calcutta Municipal Act, 1923, is admissible under the section and an entry in such register can be proved under section 77 of the Evidence Act, by the production of a certified copy, but the particulars as to the cause of death or the age of the deceased, of which the officer concerned can have no personal knowledge or any other means of checking, cannot be treated as evidence.[21] Entry in a municipal register of deaths or Land Record Register is admissible.[22] As an outdoor ticket and discharge certificate, granted by the authorities of a public hospital, contain entries in the official register made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duties, they are admissible in evidence on the combined effect of Section 35 and 74 of the Evidence Act.[23]

A birth and death register (Hath Chitha) is admissible under this section; it is not admissible when it is not proved as to who made the death entry and whether it was made in discharge of official duty or not. If it is so proved, it is admissible.[24] But the Hath Chitha is not admissible if the book is not maintained in the hand of the Chowkidar.[25]

Entries in the register of birth, death or marriage are prima facie evidence, though they not be always conclusive; it is not necessary to prove who made the entry and what was the source of information. The ground of reception of such evidence is that it is the public duty of a person who keeps the register to make the entry after satisfying himself of the truth.[26]

Only such of the entries as are made in the birth and death register by the persons in discharge of their official duty are admissible.[27]

---

15. Thimmakku v. Rangappa, AIR 1977 Kant 115.
16. Chellammal v. Angamuthu, 1978 Mad LJ (Cri) 327 : 1978 Cr LJ 752 (Mad).
17. Swarnalatha v. K.I.F.&M. Works Ltd., AIR 1974 Cal 393 following Purushothama Reddiar v. S. Perumal, AIR 1972 SC 608.
18. Bagiammal v. Kamalammal, AIR 1965 Mad 205; Rangappa v. Rangaswami Naiker, AIR 1925 Mad 1005; Ramalinga Reddy v. Kotayya, ILR 41 Mad 26; Secretary of State v. Kasturi Reddy, ILR 26 Mad 268.
19. Manni Devi v. Ramyan Singh, AIR 1985 Pat 35 (for an entry as to birth in an official record) See Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1981 SC 361.
20. Manni Devi v. Ramyan Singh, AIR 1985 Pat 35.
21. Haridas v. Kishenchand, AIR 1952 Cal 393.
22. Anis-ul-Rehman Khan v. Beni Ram, (1901) PR No. 59 of 1901 (Civil); PO Gaung v. Ma Shwe Bwin, (1908) 4 LBR 231; Gangabai v. Fakirgowda, (1929) 57 IA 61 : 32 Bom LR 368 : 54 Bom 336.
23. Ramani Bala Devi v. Kanai Lal Malakar, AIR 1965 Tripura 17.
24. Ramprasad Sharma v. State of Bihar (Chowkidars Hath Chitha), AIR 1970 SC 326; Jaladhar Samal v. Malati Dei, AIR 1971 Ori 230; Sanatan Senapati v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Pat 489; Biraj Ananda Banarjee v. Sitaram Chatterjee, AIR 1949 Cal 192; Nanda Kishare Swain alias Nanda Swain v. Gour Mani Debi, ILR 1962 Cut 409; Khyali Ram v. State of H.P., 1979 Cr LJ 620.
25. Jaladhar Samal v. Malatidei, 1971 Ori 230; Jogindra v. Babir Kaur, AIR 1974 Punj 31.
26. Bishwanath Gossain v. Dulhia Lalmuni, AIR 1968 Pat 481; Dasiram v. Emperor, AIR 1947 All 429; Bujhawan Singh v. Shyama Din, AIR 1964 Pat 301; Kunja Mohanta v. State of Bihar, 1967 BLJR 227.
27. State v. Qamruddin, AIR 1956 Nag 74; Rai Bhaiya Durgrag Deo Bahadur v. Beni Mahto, AIR 1917 PC 197

Statement of an adulteress, recorded in a Government Maternity and Rescue Home register is admissible to corroborate the evidence of the spouse in case of accusation of adultery.[28]

5. MARRIAGE REGISTER

The Bombay High Court did not rely upon the extract from the register of marriages maintained by the Gram Panchayat, without the informant or the Gram Sewak being produced.[29]

6. SCHOOL REGISTERS

An entry in the S.S.L.C. book[30] and School Admission Register,[31] with regard to the age of a pupil, is admissible in evidence to prove the age of the person concerned. But for determining the age of the victim of abduction/kidnapping school admission register cannot be regarded as the sole clinching factor.[32] Where the testimony of the father of the minor prosecutrix had contradictions regarding her age, the school certificate was held to be suspicious and unreliable.[33] Originals of the admission register from the schools are admissible for proving the date of birth.[34]

Where two public documents of two different public schools showed the same age of a child, it was held that they would be admissible under Section 35.[35]

Under the standing orders, there is a duty imposed upon a school master to ascertain and enter in his register the age of all pupils whom he admits; such entries are therefore admissible in evidence to prove the age of the person concerned.[36]

However, the Supreme Court observed that, in actual life, it often happens that persons give a false age of the boy at the time of his admission in a school, so that, later in life, he would have an advantage when seeking public service for which a minimum age or eligibility is often prescribed. The Court cannot ignore this fact while assessing the value of the entries in the school register.[37]

Matriculation certificate is admissible on the question of a person's age.[38] Entry made in the High School certificate is presumed to be correct and burden lies on either side to prove it otherwise.[39]

The register of a Municipal High School under the Madras Educational Rules of 1958, requiring the school to keep a register of admissions and withdrawals in the form prescribed, is an official register, and the entries therein are relevant under Section 35; because under Section 385 of the District Municipalities Act, every Municipal Officer or servant shall be deemed to be a public servant within the meaning of Section 21 of the Indian Penal Code. Normally, it is unnecessary, for the purpose of proving the entries, to call the concerned clerk as a witness, but the absence of entries by itself may be capable of explanation such as that the public servant was not enjoined to enter every transaction, or that he was negligent or

---

28. Vedavalli (Smt.) v. Ramaswamy, AIR 1964 Mys 280.
29. Baby v. Jagat, AIR 1981 Bom 283.
30. Manikoth Achara Moidu v. Puthalath Kuniyil Parkum, 1999 AIHC 3321 (para 9) (Ker), relying on State of Kerala v. Jose, (1989) 1 Ker LT 296.
31. Manikchand v. Krishna, (1931) 28 NLR 127; Mohd. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625; Deoki Nandan Dayma v. State of U.P., (1997) 10 SCC 525 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 875; Mahendra Prasad Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1995 Pat 162 (paras 8 and 14); Bhim Mandal v. Magaram, AIR 1961 Pat 21; Sumitra Bai v. State of M.P., 1999 Cr LJ 2541 (para 13) (MP); Manikoth Achara Moidu v. Puthalath Kuniyil Parkum, 1999 AIHC 3321 (para 9) (Ker).
32. Bishnudas Dehera v. State of Orissa, 1997 Cr LJ 2207 (Ori).
33. Annakodi v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 3387 (para 8) (Mad).
34. Maniyamkandi Kunhiraman v. Machil Parambath Vanaja, AIR 1998 Ker 24, following Umesh Chandra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1057.
35. Umesha Chandra v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1982 SC 1057.
36. Harpal Singh v. State of H.P., AIR 1981 SC 361.
37. Brijmohan Singh v. Priya Brat, AIR 1965 SC 282; reversing Priyabrat Narain Singh v. Brijmohan Singh, AIR 1964 Pat 2; Sita Ram v. District Pilibhit, 1957 All LJ 383; Banshiram v. Jitram, AIR 1964 Punj 231; Anant Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 Pun 198.
38. Jagadhananda v. Rabindranath, AIR 1958 Cal 533; Hrishikesh v. Sushil Chandra, AIR 1957 Cal 211; Anadi Mohan Ghose v. Rabindra Nath Dutta, AIR 1962 Cal 265; Vaidhyanath v. Rambadan, AIR 1966 Pat 383.
39. Mayank Rajput v. State of U.P., 1998 Cr LJ 279 (para 26) (All).

had some motive in omitting some of the transactions. It is from this point of view that the non-examination of the clerk who maintained the register becomes material.[40]

Entries relating to the date of birth, made in accordance with the duties imposed and instructions issued by the Government, were held relevant u/s. 35[41]; but the entry in the school register which is not shown to be maintained by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty or any other competent authority, cannot be accepted as a positive proof regarding the date of birth.[42]

An unproved and unexhibited school certificate cannot be relied upon in proof of age.[43]

Once the school leaving certificate is duly proved in accordance with law, it is not necessary to produce the Head Master of the school who issued the certificate; it is for the other side to disprove it.[44] The School register is an official register which is kept in the discharge of official duties of the concerned school authorities. The question of assessing the evidentiary value of the records which are relevant under Section 35, depends upon the facts of each case.[45] The question whether a school certificate or college certificate can be taken into consideration for determining the age of a person, without formal proof of the particulars contained in the certificate, is a matter which has to be decided with reference to the circumstances of each case.[46]

An entry made by a teacher in a private school, in his admission register or transfer certificate, cannot come within the scope of this section.[47] The Rangoon High Court has held that if the school is not a Government School, such entry has but little probative value.[48] Entry relating to the date of birth, in a non-government school's general register, maintained under a Statutory Rule, is admissible under this section however. Its evidentiary value depends upon other factors. In a kidnapping case, where the parents of the girl were not examined as to her age, it was held that the entry could not be held to have proved the age.[49] If the school is not a Government or a State School, the entries in the school register or transfer certificate issued by it are not admissible under this section, as the employee of that school is not a public servant u/s. 21 of the Penal Code, and the entries in the register made by him are not made in public or official registers.[50]

Where there was a difference regarding the year of birth, in the school attendence register and a staff card, it was held that, in the absence of independent proof relating to the year of birth as entered in the school register, the Court cannot prefer the entry in the school register to the entry in the staff card.[51] Where in the school certificate produced, the name of the original school from which the student was transferred was not mentioned, such a certificate could not be relied upon.[52]

Correction in the entry.—In case of error or mistake alteration of caste, entered in the admission register, can be made as the name, date of birth and religion can be corrected on the ground of wrong

---

40. In re : Sriram Reddy, AIR 1960 AP 253; Subbarao v. Venkata Ramarao, 1964 AP 53.

41. Brijmohan Singh v. Priya Brat, AIR 1965 SC 282; Shivram v. Shivcharan, AIR 1964 Raj 126; Abdul Majeed v. Bhargavan, AIR 1963 Ker 18; V.M. Nampoothiri v. K.K. Kuruvila, AIR 1957 Ker 103; In re : Siram Reddy, AIR 1960 AP 253 : 1971 Punj LJ 859 : 75 Punj LR 33; Bhim Mandal v. Magaram, AIR 1961 Pat 21; Arathan v. State of Kerala, 1966 Cr LJ 210 (Guj); Radhakrishan v. Bhushanlal, AIR 1971 J&K. 62; Liladhar v. Mohibu, AIR 1934 Nag 44; Samsuddin Isabhai v. State, AIR 1970 Guj 178.

42. Ram Deo Chauhan v. State of Assam, AIR 2001 SC 2231 (paras 20 and 41) : 2001 Cr LJ 2902.

43. Rammurthi v. State of Haryana, AIR 1970 SC 1029.

44. Durga Prasad v. Subedhar Singh, AIR 1978 All 472.

45. Vidhyadhar v. Mohanlal, ILR 1978 HP 174.

46. Shanmugham v. State, 1984 Cr LJ 1081 (Mad).

47. Rajappan, ILR 1960 Ker 481.

48. Hoak Saing v. Moung E. Hla, 1940 Rang LR 481 : AIR 1940 Rang 191.

49. Samsuddin Isabhai v. State, AIR 1970 Guj 178 : 1970 Cr LJ 1348.

50. Anant Ram v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 Punj 198 following ILR 1940 Rang LR 481; Hoak Saing v. Ma E Hla, AIR 1940 Rang 191; Asa Nand v. Gian Chand, AIR 1936 Lah 598; Brijmohan Singh v. Priya Brat, AIR 1975 SC 282; Gopalan v. Kannan, AIR 1959 Ker 12.

51. Tata Iron and Steel Co. Ltd. v. Abdul Wahab, AIR 1966 Pat 458.

52. Jagtar Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Cr LJ 2886 (para 1) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2448 See also Union of India v. Kantilal Hemantram Pandya AIR 1995 SC 1349 (paras 5 and 7); Burn Standard Co. Ltd. v. Dinabandhu Majumdar, AIR 1995 SC 1499 (para 10).

entry or subsequent changes.[53] Where the petitioner's date of birth was wrongly type-written in school records for the correction of which he produced the hospital records as well as municipal record showing his correct date of birth and accordingly the school authorities corrected the error and the C.B.S.E. issued his date of birth certificate, it was held that it only amounted to removing of typographical error which is permissible.[54]

7. ELECTORAL ROLL

Electoral roll prepared under the Representation of People Act is a public record within Section 35, and is admissible in evidence.[55] It is admissible to show that the plaintiff is the wife of one S.[56] Certified extracts from electoral rolls and the family register of a village, which are public documents, are admissible.[57] The electoral roll is not conclusive regarding the entry relating to the date of birth.[58]

In determining whether a person had completed 21 years of age on the qualifying date or not, for the purpose of elections, as between the competing entries in the electoral roll, (which is prepared under the Representation of People Act and the rules framed thereunder) and the admission register prepared under the education code, uncorroborated by anything else, the Kerala High Court held that the electoral roll was entitled to greater probative value than the latter.[59] Where the entries in previous electoral rolls betrayed a motive behind them, to enable the candidate to stand for a certain election, and they did not inspire confidence, it was held that no finality could be attached to the entries in the electoral rolls and they were at best a piece of prima facie evidence, liable to be rebutted.[60]

If the entries in the voters' list of a village show relationship of two voters as husband and wife and the entries supported by the evidence of the village Karanam, they are admissible to prove marriage.[61] Voters' list has no evidentiary value on the question of identity of the house under the occupation of a particular person, and it cannot displace what is established by the entries in a Municipal record, which is a public record.[62]

8. RECORD OF RIGHTS

Entries in the records of right, maintained in the official course of business are a relevant piece of evidence.[63] Entries made in the record of rights, in pursuance of a notification issued under the Bombay Land Revenue Code, are to be considered under Section 35.[64]

An entry in the record of rights is presumed to be correct until it is proved by evidence that it is incorrect; but the said presumption would arise only if the entries have been made by persons authorised under some enactment and the rules framed thereunder.[65] Where there was no entry in the record of right that a feast was celebrated in the suit open space but the fact that the feast was carried out there, was admitted and the material placed on record disclosed that the feast was celebrated there for the last 40 years, the material was held to be sufficient to rebut the presumption arising from no entry in the record of rights.[66]

---

53. Kerala Pattika Jathi Samrekshana Samithy v. State (FB), AIR 1995 Ker 337 (paras 24, 25 and 34), following Bishamber Dayal Chandra Mohan v. State of U.P., AIR 1982 SC 33 and State of Sikkim v. Dorjee Tshering Bhutia, AIR 1991 SC 1933.
54. Rajesh Kumar Jain v. Secretary, C.B.S.E., AIR 1999 Del 395 (paras 10-12).
55. Kirtan Sahu v. Thakur Sahu, AIR 1972 Ori 158.
56. Linga v. Ajodhy, AIR 1974 Ori 107.
57. Aina Devi v. Bachan Singh, AIR 1980 All 174 at 177.
58. Kunhiraman v. Krishna Iyer, AIR 1962 Ker 190 (FB).
59. Abdul Majeed v. Bhargavan, AIR 1963 Ker 18. Also see Nazir Hossain Halder v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 1720 (Cal).
60. Shivram v. Shivcharan, AIR 1964 Raj 126.
61. Chellammal v. Angamuthu, 1978 Cr LJ 752 (Mad).
62. Kewalchand v. Samirmal, AIR 1953 Nag 146.
63. Digambar Adhar Patil v. Devram Girdhar Patil, AIR 1995 SC 1728 (para 5).
64. B.M. Kharwar v. Ramanlal Motiram, (1964) 5 Guj LR 701.
65. Krishnadayal v. Rani Bhubaneshwari, AIR 1931 PC 221; Jatindra Nath v. Sushilendra Nath, AIR 1965 Cal 328 (prepared under West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act 1 of 1954) Ramakrishna v. Arjuno, AIR 1963 Ori 29; Suraj Mal v. State, 1959 Raj LW 381 (entries in Khasra Girdawari in Rajasthan); entries in Khasra and Bandobast Missal, Jayaprakash v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 AIHC 1329 (paras 12 and 15) (Bom).
66. Joaguim Gama v. Custodio Gama, 1999 AIHC 2503 (para 6) (Bom).

The entries are not the foundations of the title, but are mere items of evidence, the presumption raised by them is not conclusive; they are prima facie correct, if not rebutted.[67] Records of rights of themselves may not confer title, but old records supporting title can be treated as basis of title.[68] Records of rights neither destroy nor create title; therefore, omission of the deity's name in the record of right would not destroy its title to the property acquired by it under a sale deed.[69] Where there is an entry in the record of rights showing the plaintiff's name as the holder, as the presumption is in favour of the plaintiff, onus lies on the defendant to prove his own independent title to one half of the land and his alleged korfa right to the other half an alleged agreement.[70] An order under the Record of Rights Act, directing the name of the respondent to be entered in the record of rights, is not conclusive to show that he is the actual holder of the land.[71] The record of rights is conclusive to show the character of land and not the nature of title.[72]

Where a particular land was recorded as jointly belonging to two branches of a family, such entry must be deemed to be correct unless the contrary is shown. Mere fact of possession is not sufficient to rebut the presumption attached to the entry.[73]

Record of rights, like the Dag Chittas and Jama Bandi records, have presumptive value as to possession by persons whose names have been recorded.[74]

The Court is entitled to take into consideration the entry in the record of rights for coming to the conclusion that a certain person was the raiyat of the land in question.[75]

Where the Khasra itself is the instrument which confers or embodies the right, and there is no other document which creates title, the Khasra and the Map are not merely historical materials, but are instruments of title or, otherwise, the direct foundations of the rights.[76] In Keshav Krishnaji v. Municipal Corp.,[77] it was held that Khasra is not conclusive evidence of title. In that case, the municipality relied in Khasra. But the plaintiff and their predecessors were found to be in long possession. It was held that this was prima facie proof of title and the Khasra was not sufficient to rebut the presumption. Khasra is a record of right according to Section 45(2), of Central Provinces Land Revenue Act, 1917. Section 80(3) of that Act provides that such entries in the record of right shall be presumed to be correct unless the contrary is shown.[78] Entries in Khasra are evidence of title because they are good evidence of possession. Entries made contrary to the fact of possession carry little weight, especially when entries are made as routine and without motive of the parties.[79] Entries in Khasra are good evidence till they are proved to be false.[80] Entries in Khasra Girdawaries are public documents and are relevant for purpose of considering surplus area for purpose of cultivation.[81] Khasra Girdawari is admissible under Section 35, but no statutory presumption of correctness attaches to it.[82] Entries in Khasra Girdawari are valuable evidence under Section 35. It is not necessary to produce patwaris who made the entries.[83]

---

67. Ahmed Khan v. Union of India, AIR 1955 Punj 37.
68. Ganesh Das v. Jagabandhu Prusti, (1971) 37 Cut LT 420.
69. (1975) 1 Cut LR 35 : (1975) 2 Cal LJ 305.
70. Prafulla Nalini Bhowmick (Smt.) v. Dajendra Garoo, AIR 1968 Tripura 5.
71. Payappa Neemauna v. Chamu Appayaya, (1969) 2 Mys LJ 198.
72. Parameshwaridevi v. Khusali Mandal, AIR 1957 Pat 482 (under Santal Paraganas Settlement Regulation 2 of 1872).
73. Harak Narain v. Sham Behari, AIR 1968 Pat 450.
74. H.B. Sharma v. H.G. Sharma, AIR 1975 Gau 47.
75. Salabat Mahata v. Malati Mahatani (Smt.), AIR 1954 Pat 481.
76. Ballabh Das v. Nur Mohammad, AIR 1936 PC 83.
77. AIR 1951 MP 114.
78. Shikarchand Jain v. D.J.P. Kariani Sabha, AIR 1974 SC 1178, relied in Secretary to Government of India, Ministry of Defence, New Delhi v. Indira Devi, 1999 AIHC 4682 (AP), relying on Shikarchand v. D.J.P. Karimi Sabha, AIR 1974 SC 1178; Shankarrao v. Shambu Nathu Patil, AIR 1940 PC 192 (Section 80(3) of C.P. Land Revenue Act corresponds to Section 135-J of Bombay Land Revenue Code).
79. Keshoprasad Singh v. Bhag Jogna Kuer, AIR 1937 PC 69.
80. Sheojee v. Prema Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 187; Beant Singh v. Natha Singh, AIR 1966 HP 48; Shyam Pratap Singh v. Collector of Etawah, AIR 1946 PC 103.
81. Tara Singh v. Financial Commissioner Punjab, 1969 Punj LR 983; Beant Singh v. Natha Singh, AIR 1966 HP 48
82. Gurucharan Singh v. Prithi Singh, AIR 1974 SC 223 (Punjab Land Revenue Act 17 of 1887), Khiali Ram v. Santlal, AIR 1972 Punj 393.
83. 1975 Punj LJ 151.

Where the entries in the record of rights show that certain properties were resumable on certain conditions, there would be presumption of correctness of the entries unless rebutted.[84] Where the record of rights reveal that a land was recorded as Puratan Patita, and there is no entry in favour of the villagers, the presumption is in favour of immemorial user as Puratan Patita. Hearsay evidence regarding the user since time immemorial becomes admissible, as an exception to the general rule of evidence.[85] Where the entries in the record of rights are relied on, and there is conflict between old and new record of rights, it is the latter entry which must prevail.[86] Presumption of correctness attaching to a latter entry cannot be rebutted by an earlier entry in the old record of rights.[87]

It is the entry in the record of rights and not the entry in the Tenancy Register, that has greater probative value.[88]

Under the Bengal Tenancy Act, the entries in the record of right, after final publication, are presumed to be correct unless proved to be incorrect. But the entries in the draft record of right do not carry such a presumption of correctness. As the entries were made by a public servant in the discharge of his duties, they are admissible under section 35.[89]

Under the Chottanagapur Tenancy Act of 1908, the entry made in the record of rights, in respect of the property, a Khorposh Grant, that they are Kabilzapati properties on failure of legitimate descendants of the original grantee, is not only admissible in evidence but has a much higher value, namely that it carries with it the presumption of correctness and will prevail until rebutted by proper evidence.[90]

9. REVENUE RECORDS

Where the entries in the Revenue Records are made after a careful public enquiry, they are cogent evidence of the facts recorded, though not conclusive[91] but where the details of manner, mode, time etc. of the entry was not shown, failure to examine the Patwari to prove the same was fatal.[92]

An entry in the Monzawari Register is admissible under Section 35.[93]

Entries in revenue record as to possession are presumed to be true[94]; but the presumption is rebuttable.[95] The pencil entry made in records showing the possession of the defendant on a certain land without having been verified or attested by any revenue officer, can not be relied upon.[96]

The entries in the Revenue Records are to be accepted at their face value, and the Courts should not embark upon an appellate enquiry into their correctness. But, the presumption of correctness can apply only to genuine, not forged or fraudulent entries. The distinction may be fine, but it is real. The distinction is that one cannot challenge the correctness of what the entry in the Revenue Record states, but the entry is open to the attack that it was made fraudulently or surreptitiously. Fraud and forgery rob the document of all its legal effect and cannot found a claim to possessory title.[97]

---

84. Bhageshwari Charan Singh v. Kamakhya Narain, AIR 1931 PC 30; Charu Chandra Ghose v. Kamakhya Narain, AIR 1931 PC 5; Srinath Ray v. Maharaja Pratap, AIR 1923 PC 217.
85. Shyama Charan Mohanty v. Upemdra Mohanty, ILR 1973 Cut 1080 : 39 Cut LT 1136: relying on Paddayya v. Krishnamurthy, AIR 1927 Mad 653; Raja Rajendra Narain v. Kumar Gangananda Singh, AIR 1925 PC 213; Subhani v. Nawab, AIR 1941 PC 21.
86. Durga Singh v. Tholu, AIR 1963 SC 361; Hrishikesh Bank v. State of W.B., AIR 1978 Cal 556.
87. Banka v. Bartul, AIR 1952 Pat 157.
88. State v. Bharatsingh, 1961 (1) Cr LJ 649.
89. Haridas v. Kishan Chand, AIR 1952 Cal 393.
90. Hariharsahu v. Sheo Prasad, AIR 1954 Pat 173; Ghosi Sahu v. Shib Sahu, 1942 Pat 140.
91. Gangabai v. Fakir Gowda, AIR 1930 PC 93.
92. Sitaram v. Ram Charan, AIR 1995 MP 134 (para 9).
93. Cantonment Committee v. Satish Chandra, AIR 1931 PC 1.
94. Sant Ram v. Faquiroo, AIR 1986 HP 10; Gurcharan Singh v. Prithi Singh, AIR 1979 SC 223; Avadh Kishore Das v. Ram Gopal, AIR 1979 SC 861, (about Wajibulzar Paper, a Village Admn. Paper) Vishwa Vijay v. Fakhrul Hassan, AIR 1976 SC 1485 : (bogus entries).
95. Vishal Singh v. State of M.P., AIR 1998 SC 308 : 1998 Cr LJ 505.
96. Sohan Singh v. Gulzari, AIR 1997 HP 12.
97. Vishwa Vijay Bharati v. Fakhrul Hassan, AIR 1976 SC 1485 : 1976 (Supp) SCR 519.

Where the evidence of Jama Bandi and mutation proceedings showed the property to be joint property, it was held that the evidence outweighed the inference from other facts.[1] Where the land was settled on an Annual Patta, the entries in the Jama Bandi indicate only possession in that year and not for other years.[2] The entries in the Jama Bandi made under the Himachal Pradesh Land Revenue Act are to be presumed to be correct under Section 46 of that Act.[3]

It is not safe to rely upon an entry itself for determining the right, but recourse must be had to the origin of the entry.[4]

Entries in revenue records is the paradise of the 'patwari' and therefore, creation of records is a camouflage to defeat the just and legal right or claim and interest of the tiller of the soil on whom the Act confers title to the land he tills.[5] The entries in the revenue records, though they may be relevant under Section 35, are not evidence of title.[6]

Khatauni Papers prepared under the Uttar Pradesh Land Revenue Act are admissible under Section 35, and presumption of correctness would prevail until rebutted[7] but the entries in the remark column have no presumptive value as to rights/possession.[8] Extract of Khatauni is an authentic piece of documentary evidence of possession, and is relevant in the proceedings under Section 145, Cr.P.C.[9]

A Kancha Khatian, though relevant, is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of correctness of a finally published record.[10]

The entries of persons as possessing certain land, made in the village papers, are only for the purpose of realisation of revenue and are not conclusive of the title of the person to the property.[11]

Where the revenue records or village papers which are kept for purpose of revenue, and not for purpose of title of the persons, showed members of a joint family as owners of definite shares, it was held that no presumption can be raised as to the separation of the joint family, as the presumption in law was that the family was joint.[12]

The entry in the revenue record showing a sir land in the possession of the plaintiff, is only presumptive evidence which can be rebutted.[13] Presumption of truth is attached to the entries in the revenue record; to rebut such presumption, convincing and reliable evidence is required.[14]

Though there is no strong presumption of the correctness of title on the basis of entries in the Municipal Khasra, however, its evidentiary value has to be considered along with other material on the record.[15]

In the case of discrepancies between the entries in the Khasra and Wajib-ul-arz, it was held that the entries in the latter must prevail.[16]

---

1. Bhagawan Dayal v. Reoti Devi, AIR 1962 SC 287.
2. Abdul Hasem v. Haji Mahiuddin, AIR 1967 Assam 9.
3. Lilawati (Smt.) v. Paras Ram, AIR 1977 HP 1.
4. Pirtha Singh v. Raja Md. Ali, AIR 1926 Oudh 427; Nageshwar Baksh v. Ganesh, AIR 1920 PC 46.
5. Baleshwar Tewari v. Sheo Jatan Tiwary, AIR 1997 SC 2089. Also see Himachal Pradesh v. Keshav Ram, AIR 1997 SC 2181 (para 4); Abasaheb Ali Gharge v. Balaji Ramhari Gharge, 1996 (1) Mah LJ 209; Bhaguji Bayaji Pokale v. Kantilal Baban Gunjawate, AIR 1998 Bom 114 (para 10).
6. Rammanna v. Sambamoorthy, AIR 1961 AP 361 (Diglot Register); Durga Prasad v. Ghanshiam Das, AIR 1948 PC 210; Nirman Singh v. Rudra Pratab Narain Singh, AIR 1926 PC 100; Nageshwar Baksh v. Ganesha, AIR 1920 PC 46; Balwant Singh v. Daulat Singh, AIR 1997 SC 2719; R.K. Madhuryyajit Singh v. Takhellambam Abung Singh, AIR 2001 Gau 181 (paras 12, 13, 17 and 22).
7. National Investment Co. v. Mohandra Nath, AIR 1960 Cal 724.
8. J.R. Ahir v. P.R. Yadav, AIR 2000 MP 223 (paras 5 and 6), relying on Chusamani v. Ramadhar, 1991 MPLJ 311. Contra : Gajraj Singh v. Krishna Pal Singh, 2001 AIHC 1432 (para 30) (MP).
9. Hari Saran v. Patangal, AIR 1967 All 486.
10. Badridas Goenka v. Fani Bhusan Dhar, ILR (1958) 2 Cal 692.
11. Amarchand v. Paramanand, AIR 1934 All 474.
12. Brajraj Singh v. Yogendrapal Singh, AIR 1952 MB 146.
13. Budhilal v. Jagannath Das, AIR 1963 MP 344.
14. Santram v. Faquiroo, AIR 1985 HP 10.
15. Lal Babu Yadava v. Ram Bilash Rai, AIR 1997 Pat 131.
16. Manturabai v. Ital Chiman, AIR 1954 Nag 103.

The record known as Tankithat is not the result of any mechanical process of adopting the entry found in the existing record. Where the regular settlement of records takes place for the first time, it does not carry with it any statutory presumption of truth.[17]

Where the entry in the revenue records was made by the Patwari after the commencement of lis but the Patwari was not examined to eliminate the element of concoction, it was held that the rights and obligations of the parties are adjudicated as they obtain at the commencement of lis.[18]

10. MUTATION ENTRIES

Mutation of name by itself confers no proprietary title upon a person, for the proceedings regarding mutation of names are not judicial proceedings in which title to, and proprietary rights in, immovable property are determined.[19] The order of the revenue officer in mutation proceedings based on untruthful evidence, has no evidentiary value in a civil suit.[20] Mutation entries are not admissible in evidence.[21] The mutation of names in the revenue records is not conclusive and the civil court can go behind the pattas issued by the revenue authorities.[22] There is no presumption of correctness attached to a mutation entry as to the date of death of the last holder.[23]

Tabdilat Papers maintained under the Revenue Rules are public documents. The entry therein, showing separate mutations in favour of different persons, proves that it was made according to an agreement between those persons. The entry does not lose its evidentiary value even if the document of agreement is not produced.[24]

An acknowledgement of a mortgage in mutation entry made by some of several mortgagors, does not bind the remaining mortgagors and cannot be used against them under Section 21(2) of the Limitation Act.[25]

Omission on the part of the plaintiff to object to mutation being effected in the revenue records, on the application of the defendants, will amount to a relinquishment by the plaintiff of his title to the plaint property.[26]

In a case of acquisition of land, compensation cannot be claimed merely on the basis of mutation entries.[27]

11. WAJIB-UL-ARZ

Wajib-ul-arz is a village administration paper prepared by the village official, prepared with care and after due inquiry. It is a part of the settlement record and a presumption of correctness attaches to it.[28] Wajib-ul-arz, which is a part of a revenue record, is of greater authority than a Riwaj-i-am which is of general application.[29] An entry regarding an agreement in a Wajib-ul-arz holds good during the period of the settlement in which it is made, and becomes inoperative when the settlement comes to an end.[30] An entry in Wajib-ul-arz is admissible under Section 35, as part of an official record, and also under Section 48 and 49 of the Evidence Act as being statements by persons who had special means of knowledge as regards the custom.[31]

---

17. Vidhyadhar v. Mohanlal, ILR 1978 HP 174.
18. Sitaram v. Ram Charan, AIR 1995 MP 134 (paras 8 to 10).
19. Abid Alikhan v. Secretary of State, AIR 1951 Nag 327; Nirman Singh v. Rudra Pratab Narain Singh, AIR 1926 PC 100; Chokhey Singh v. Jote Singh, ILR 31 All 73 (PC); Mehr Singh v. Hukmi, AIR 1949 HP 22.
20. Dayaram v. Dawalatshah, AIR 1971 SC 681 : (1971) 3 SCR 324.
21. Pakhar Singh Atwal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 2185 (para 5).
22. Hooriya v. Munna, AIR 1956 MB 56.
23. Dalpat Singh v. Rajvant Singh, AIR 1954 Punj 33.
24. Gobardhan Gountia v. Labanyanidhi Bhai, ILR 1966 Cut 816.
25. Bagga Singh v. Lal Chand, AIR 1952 Pepsu 6.
26. Edward Top v. State, AIR 1954 Tra/Co. 7.
27. Durga Das v. Collector, AIR 1996 SC 2786 (para 2).
28. Murtaza Husain v. Md. Yasin Ali, AIR 1916 PC 59; Avadh Kishore Dass v. Ramgopal, AIR 1979 SC 961.
29. Rajindra Chand v. Sukhi, AIR 1957 SC 286.
30. Chhotekhan v. Malkhan, AIR 1954 SC 575 : 1955 SCR 60.
31. Premalata v. Janka, ILR (1951) 2 All 328.

12. RIWAZ-I-AM

Riwaj-i-am is a public record prepared by a public officer in discharge of his duties under government rules, and the statements therein in support of the custom are admissible, to prove facts recited therein; it would form a strong piece of evidence unless rebutted by a party denying the custom.[32]

There is an initial presumption of correctness as regards the entries in the Riwaz-i-am and when the custom, as recorded in the Riwaj-i-am, is in conflict with the general custom as recorded in RATTIGAN'S DIGEST or ascertained otherwise, the entries in the Riwaj-i-am should ordinarily prevail except where the Riwaj-i-am affects adversely the rights of females who had no opportunity of appearing before the revenue authorities. The presumption would be weak and only a few instances would suffice to rebut it.[33] An entry in it recording a special custom is prima facie proof of that custom and the onus is on the other to rebut it.[34] A certified copy of Riwaj-i-am prepared by the settlement officer in 1913 is of very high evidentiary value.[35] If the Riwaj-i-am is a reliable and a trustworthy document, and is carefully prepared and does not contain contradictory statements relating to a custom, it would be presumptive piece of evidence in proof of the special custom set-up. The quantum of evidence necessary to rebut the presumption will, however, vary on the facts and circumstances of each case.[36]

13. INAM REGISTER

The Privy Council dealing with the Inam Register of the year 1864 observed: "It is true that the making of this Register was for the ultimate purpose of determining whether or not the lands were tax-free. But it must not be forgotten that the preparation of this Register was a great act of state, and its preparation and contents were the subject of much consideration under elaborately detailed reports and minutes. It is to be remembered that the Inam Commissioners through their officials, made enquiry on the spot, heard evidence and examined documents, and with regard to each individual property, the Government was put in possession not only of the conclusion come to, as to whether the land was tax-free, but of a statement of the history and tenure of the property itself. While their Lordships do not doubt that such a report would not displace actual and authentic evidence in individual cases; yet the Board, when such is not available, cannot fail to attach the utmost importance, as part of the history of the property, to the information setforth in the Inam Register."[37]

The Privy Council held that the title deeds and the entries in the Inam Register are evidence of the true intent and effect of the transaction and of the character of the right which was being recognised and continued; that the entries in the Inam Register and the description of the Inam therein were accepted as indications of the nature and quantum of the right and the interest created in the land.[38]

The two decisions above were referred to with approval by the Privy Council.[39]

The Supreme Court, relying on Arunachalam Chetti's case and the Secretary of State v. Vidya Sri Varada Tirtha Swamigal case, observed: "The entries in the Inam Register are evidence of the true intent and effect of the transaction and of the character of the right which was being recognised and continued. The entries in the Inam Register and the description of the Inamdar therein can be accepted as indications of the nature and quantum of the right and the interest created in the land. The entries made in the Inam Register are the result of an elaborate enquiry based upon oral evidence, on the spot enquiry and scrutiny of available accounts and records. The Inam statement is only one of the pieces of evidence which the Inam Commissioner might have taken into consideration in compiling the Inam Register. The recitals in the statement must, therefore, give place to the recitals in the Inam Register, though an attempt shall be made to harmonize them, if possible.[40]

---

32. Ujagar Singh v. Jeo, AIR 1959 SC 1041.
33. Jai Kaur Singh v. Sher Singh, AIR 1960 SC 118 : (1960) 3 SCR 975; Kehr Singh v. Diwan Singh, AIR 1966 SC 1555
34. Basant Singh v. Brij Raj Saran, AIR 1935 PC 132.
35. Badri Narayan v. Nagarmal, AIR 1959 Bom 241; Subhani v. Nawab, AIR 1941 PC 21; Vaishno Ditti v. Rameshri, AIR 1928 PC 294. Basant Singh v. Brij Raj Saran, AIR 1935 PC 132; Beg v. Allah Ditta, ILR 1916 PC 129
36. Saligram v. Mayadevi, AIR 1955 SC 266 : 1955 SCR 1191.
37. Arunachallam Chetty v. Venkata Chalapathi Swamigal, ILR 43 Mad 263 : 1919 PC 62 : 46 IA 204
38. Secretary of State v. Vidhya Sri Varudi Tirtha Swamigal, AIR 1942 PC 21.
39. Shankarnarayana v. Board of Commissioners, AIR 1948 PC 25.
40. Perla Swami Gounder v. Sundaresa Ayyar, AIR 1965 SC 516.

The decision of the Inam Commissioner in Inam Register has great evidential value as to the nature and quantum of right and the interest in the lands in the absence of authentic evidence to the contrary.[41] Though in the absence of the original grant, the Inam Register is of great evidentiary value, it does not mean that the entry or entries in any particular column or columns of the Register should be accepted at their face value, without giving due consideration to other matters recorded in the Register itself. The entries cannot displace actual or authentic evidence in individual cases.[42] The inference drawn from the Register must be based on the cumulative effect of all the entries, and not on a particular phrase describing on Inam as Hissa Shrotriem.[43] Entries in Inam Register are of great evidentiary value and are almost conclusive.[44] Though there is no statutory presumption of the correctness regarding the entries in the Inam Register, as in the case of entries in a record of rights, yet, as the Inam Register was prepared after a thorough enquiry at the spot by the public officials, entries contained therein should, in the absence of actual and authentic evidence to the contrary, be given the utmost importance.[45]

In determining the question whether the grant of Inam was to the deity or to the Archaka burdened with service to the deity, it was held that in the absence of the sanad (grant), the entries in the Inam Fair Register are entitled to great weight, as the enquiry by the Inam Commissioner is a great act of State and the entries are made by the responsible officer.[46]

Inam Fair Register entries are not conclusive, but are strong piece of evidence, not to be lightly disregarded, excepting for solid and substantial reasons or contrary evidence.[47]

"Yadast Bogatta" purported to have been prepared in 1818 but not under any law or under any other orders or instructions of any authority, cannot be said to be an authentic document, especially when it was not referred to at the time of the Inam Fair Register enquiry, held subsequently. As that Yadast Bogatta is not a public document, there is no presumption regarding the correctness of its contents, and it would not prevail over the contents in the Inam Fair Register.[48]

14. F.I.R. AND CASE DIARY

The statements made in the F.I.R. as well as in the case diary cannot be utilised as substantive evidence even before the Claims Tribunal for the purpose of finding out about the manner of accident.[49]

15. TEXT BOOK OF ACADEMIC INTEREST

Reference in any text book of academic interest cannot be construed as a document of title.[50]

16. PROBATIVE VALUE OF ENTRIES OF A DOCUMENT ADMISSIBLE UNDER SECTION 35

Admissibility of a document is one thing and its probative value quite another—these two aspects cannot be combined. A document may be admissible and yet may not carry any conviction and weight or its probative value may be nil.[51] The Court or Tribunal, entrusted with the duty of ascertaining a truth on the basis of the entries of a document, relevant under Section 35, must make effort to find out the probative value of the entries contained in the document. This necessity arises from the fact that such a document is a relevant fact constituting the circumstantial evidence of which a presumption may be drawn under 114 having regard to common course of natural events, human conduct, and public and private business in relation to the facts of a particular case.[52] If an entry regarding the date of birth in the scholar's register is made on the information given by parents or some one having special knowledge of

---

41. Narayan Bhagwantrao v. Gopal Vinayak, AIR 1960 SC 100.
42. Sadavarthy v. Commissioner, R.C. Endowments, AIR 1963 SC 510 : 1962 Supp (2) SCR 276.
43. Seethamma v. Chalapathi, (1969) 2 And WR 219.
44. Brahmayya v. Rajeshwara Swami Temple, AIR1953 Mad 580.
45. Padmanabho v. Arjuna, AIR 1953 Ori 92.
46. Venkayya v. Srirama Murthy, AIR 1957 AP 53; Thirulakshmi Ammal v. Special Tahsildar, AIR 1974 Mad 182.
47. Harihar Mahapatra v. Hari Otha, AIR 1950 Ori 257.
48. V Appayya v. D. Narasimhamurty, AIR 1976 AP 295.
49. Sk Kalu v. Kumar Bohera, AIR 1997 Ori 197.
50. Karnataka Wakf Board v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1996 Kant 55 (para 18).
51. State of Bihar v. Radha Krishna Singh, AIR 1983 SC 684 : (1983) 3 SCC 118.
52. Tara Devi v. Sudesh Chaudhary, AIR 1998 Raj 59 (paras 22 and 36).

the fact, the same would have probative value. But the date of birth mentioned in the scholar register has no evidentiary value unless the person who made the entry or who gave the date of birth is examined.[53] An entry relating to date of birth made in the school register is relevant and admissible under Section 35 but the entry regarding to the age of a person in a school register is not of much evidentiary value to prove the age of the person in the absence of material on which the age was recorded.[54] Failure to rebut the entries, made in a public record, relevant under Section 35, cannot increase the evidentiary value of those entries. It will have to be assessed by the Court under Section 114, Keeping in view all relevant facts and circumstances and the common course of natural events, human conduct, and public and private business.[55]

Relevancy of statements in maps, charts and plans.

S. 36. Statements of facts in issue or relevant facts, made in published maps or charts generally offered for public sale, or in maps or plans made under the authority of the Central Government or any State Government, as to matters usually represented or stated in such maps, charts or plans, are themselves relevant facts.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 484
2. Made under the authority of Government ... 485
   (a) Survey Maps ... 485
   (b) Thak Bast Maps ... 485
   (c) Chittas ... 486
   (d) Superimposition of maps ... 486
3. Private maps ... 486
4. Maps and plans in Criminal Proceedings ... 487

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section mentions two kinds of maps or charts, viz., (1) maps or charts generally offered for public sale; (2) maps or plans made under the authority of Government. The admissibility of the first kind of maps rests upon the ground that they contain the result of inquiries made under competent authority, concerning matters in which the public are interested. The admissibility of the second class rests on the ground that, being made and published under the authority of Government, they must be taken to have been made by, and to be the result of, the study or inquiries of competent persons.

To render inquisitions, reports, surveys, and other similar documents admissible in evidence as public documents, it must appear that they were made so that the public might make use of them and be able to refer to them, for the fact that the public are interested in the documents, and are in a position to challenge or dispute them, if inaccurate.[56]

There is a distinction between relevancy and admissibility. Relevancy connotes logically probative evidence, whereas admissibility is to the legally receivable facts, irrespective of the consideration whether the legally receivable facts are or are not logically probative. Under this section, published maps, or charts generally offered for public sale, and maps or plans prepared under the authority of the Government, are relevant. In the former case, they are relevant because the publications of the maps or charts are accessible to the whole community and open to criticism of all, and the accuracy of them can be challenged, and because there is no presumption as to accuracy. In the second case of maps and plans which are made under the authority of the Government, except those prepared for a specific purpose, the presumption under Section 83 would be applicable including as regards their accuracy.[57]

This section speaks of relevancy of facts contained in the maps, charts or plans, whereas Section 83, says that the Court shall presume that the maps, or plans purporting to be made by the authority of

---

53. Birad Mal Singhvi v. Anand Purohit, AIR 1988 SC 1796, at p. 1806 : 1988 Supp SCC 604.
54. Birad Mal Singhvi v. Anand Purohit, AIR 1988 SC 1796, at p. 1807 : 1988 Supp SCC 604. Also see Rakesh v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1434 (paras 27 and 31) (Raj).
55. Tara Devi v. Sudesh Chaudhary, AIR 1998 Raj 59 (paras 40 and 42). The Court referred to Birad Mal Singhvi v. Anand Purohit, AIR 1988 SC 1796, at p. 1808 : 1988 Supp SCC 604.
56. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1769 A, P. 1113. Rahmat-Ulla-Khan v. Secretary of State, (1913) PR No. 63 of 1913 (Civil).
57. Ram Kishore Sen v. Union of India, AIR 1965 Cal 282.

Central Govt., or State Govt., were so made and are accurate. However maps or plans made for the purpose of any cause must be proved to be accurate.

The presumption which can be raised under Section 83 of the Evidence Act, about the correctness or accuracy of the maps, charts or plans, is rebuttable.[58]

2. MADE UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF GOVERNMENT

(a) Survey Maps

When the survey maps are prepared by the Government after making enquiries in the villages, they become valuable evidence of possession, but under no circumstances they are evidence of title. As they are prepared after due enquiry they are presumed to be correct unless the contrary is proved.[59] Regarding the survey maps, there is presumption of accuracy and it is for the party who challenges it to show that they are incorrect.[60]

Statements of fact in the plans and line plans of a property purchased from the Custodian Department, purporting to be made under the authority of the Central Government, were held to be relevant.[61] A Cadastral survey map is admissible and presumed to be correct[62] but not the sketch map prepared on the basis of a cadastral map.[63] A map prepared by the municipality under the Calcutta Survey Act was held to be admissible as it is prepared under the authority of the Government.[64] Maps of different wards of a city printed by Government are admissible in evidence.[65]

This section does not say that the authority under which a map is prepared must be an authority under any statute. In the preparation of the map or chart, if the enquiry is of a public nature, and the survey was done for a public purpose, it would be sufficient under this section.

(b) Thak bast maps

During a survey of a district the Amin draws a map of the locality and enters in a register particulars gathered from the people. The map is called Thak Bast map and the register Thak Kasra. (Thak means a small boundary demarcation mark).

Thak Bast maps were held to be evidence of possession and also of title, though, they were not conclusive.[66]

The Calcutta High Court held that when the parties in the localities admitted the boundary lines of various estates of the Thak Bast survey based prepared maps, at that time, it constituted strong evidence that they were correct.[67]

Statements of Zamindars or their agents during the preparation of Thak Bast maps may amount to admissions by them that the land belonged to one village or the other, and such admissions can be relied on, as they were made at a time when there was dispute regarding the boundaries.[68] It was held by the Privy Council that the decree based on an entry in the remarks column of the Thak Bast map prepared

---

58. Shib Chandra Roy Chowdhury v. Harendra Lal Rai Chowdhury, AIR 1919 Cal 752, 794; Kamakhya Narayn Singh v. Abhiman Singh, AIR 1934 PC 182 : 619 A 333 (entry in the survey Khewat).
59. Tarakdas Acharjee Choudhury v. Secy. of State, AIR 1935 PC 125; Srinivas Chariar v. T.N. Evalappa Mudaliar, AIR 1922 PC 325 : 49 IA 237; Secretary of State v. Birendra Kishore, AIR 1916 PC 141; Ramanandhan Sahay v. Jaigovind, AIR 1924 Pat 213; Jagadindra v. Secretary of State, ILR (1902) 30 Cal 291 PC : 30 IA 44.
60. Kamakhya Narain Singh v. Abhiman Singh, AIR 1934 PC 182 : 619 A 333. Contra : Gujarat High Court has taken a contrary view in holding that no presumption as to their accuracy could be attached when surveyors were not examined. Prabhatbhai Shankerbhai Parmar v. Mahijbhai Nanabhai Parmar, 1998 AIHC 4395 (paras 14 and 15) (Guj) (It seems that the learned counsel failed to bring to the notice of his Lordship the view of the Apex Court).
61. Mannumal v. Prit Bai, 1970 Raj LW 302.
62. Mazharul Ekbal v. Gopallal, AIR 1924 Pat 719.
63. Coal India Ltd. v. Ananga Mohan Dutta, 1998 AIHC 2877 (para 8) (Gau).
64. Jagan Koeri v. Chairman, Gaya Municipality, AIR 1937 Pat 567.
65. Secretary of State v. Chimanlal, (1941) 44 Bom LR 295 : ILR (1942) Bom 357 : AIR 1942 Bom 161.
66. J.G.N. Pogose v. Mokoond Chandur Surma Sircar, (1876) 25 WR 36.
67. Syamasunderi Dasya v. Jogobundu, ILR (1889) 16 Cal 186.
68. Collector, Rajshahye v. Doorga Soondurree Debia, (1865) 2 WR 210.

during the survey proceedings, relying on the ex parte statement of Zamindar's agent which was contradicted by the agent immediately, was unsustainable.[69]

Thak Bast maps are of great value and they are good evidence of things at the date of the Permanent Settlement in the absence of evidence to the contrary.[70]

(c) Chittas

Chittas are documents prepared by a public servant after making enquiries and survey of the fields. The Privy Council, dealing with chittas, held that they would not by themselves be evidence, if unsupported by other substantial evidence, but they can be treated as corroborative piece of evidence.

However, it was held that the chittas of the Government survey can be admitted as they are the basic records forming the basis of the survey maps, if they are verified and attested chittas.[71]

(d) Superimposition of Maps

The Privy Council observed: "It is true that one map was superimposed upon another, surely a very natural thing to do when land was supposed to have, undergone accretion between the two dates; but the land itself was visited and surveyed.... The results of a comparative map formed by inscribing the results of superimposition marked upon the maps used in that process formed a comparative map were not put upon a separate piece of paper which contained the outline of the alluviated land... Their Lordships are clearly of opinion that all this was in a practical region eminently cognizable by the officials acting in the revenue proceedings and eminently fit for settlement and decision by the Board of Revenue..... There is nothing wrong with this (superimposition of maps) from the legal point of view, and from the practical point of view, the revenue court can deal with it".[72]

Where the question in dispute was whether municipal plot No. 106 was a part of the cadastral survey plot Number 1090. To prove that, copies of municipal survey map and cadastral survey map prepared by the Amin were produced but the Amin was not examined. Instead, another witness who was a survey-passed pleader was examined, he deposed that he checked the copies of the maps by superimposition and he found that plot 106 was a part of plot No. 1090. It was held that, when the accuracy of the copies of the maps prepared by the Amin, had not been established, the conclusion derived from superimposing one map upon the other could not be accepted.[73]

There is nothing wrong in the operation of superimposition of maps and plans from the legal point of view, and the court may rely on a plan which is superimposed, provided both these plans are brought to the same scale, and no cogent reasons are shown for rejecting the plan.[74]

3. PRIVATE MAPS

Maps prepared by private persons and not under the authority of the Government, are irrelevant unless proof of the fact that they were generally offered for public for sale is given.[75] Even where private maps offered for public sale, are relevant they do not get the benefit of presumption of accuracy under Section 83 of the Act.[76]

This section is not applicable, if the documents were prepared for private purposes. In Kanto Prashad Hazari v. Jagatchandra Datta,[77] it was observed; "It appears to have been made by the Government (Deputy Collector) for a particular purpose which is not a public purpose, namely, the settlement of the silted bed of a certain river. That being so, we do not think that the provisions of Section 36 and 83 on the Evidence Act, are applicable to this map".[78] A plan prepared by a commi-

---

69. Jagadindra Nath v. Hemantakumari, (1910-11) 15 CWN 887 (PC).
70. Kumar Raj Krishnaprasad v. Barbani Coal Concern Limited, AIR 1935 Cal 368.
71. Sarasati Desi v. Ambikanand Biswas, 24 WR 192.
72. Secretary of State v. Roy Jatindra Nath, AIR 1924 PC 175 : 51 IA 241 at 252, 253.
73. Chintamani v. Zahiruddin, AIR 1956 Pat 57.
74. State of A.P. v. P.V. Raju, 1959 An LT 305.
75. Ram Kishore Sen v. Union of India, AIR 1966 SC 644 : (1966) 1 SCR 430.
76. Ram Kishore v. Union of India, AIR 1966 SC 644.
77. ILR (1895) 23 Cal 335.
78. See also Jummajoy Mullik v. Dwarakanath Mytee, ILR 5 Cal 287; Ramochandunder Sao v. Bunsee Dhur Nayak, 9 Cal 714; Secretary of State v. Wajed Ali, AIR 1921 Cal 687.

assigned in a suit, even if not an integral part of the judgments of the trial and appellate courts is admissible to understand the judgments.[79] Where the Electricity Supply Company was supplying electricity outside the area of supply, and later revoked the licence given to a company, it was held by the Calcutta High Court, that the map produced by the Government to show the area of supply, was not admissible, under Section 36 since it was not prepared under the authority of the Government, and no question of presumption under Section 83 arose.[80]

4. MAPS AND PLANS IN CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

The Supreme Court, held that the site plan relating to the offence prepared by the Police Officer is not admissible, as it was drawn relying on the statement of witnesses during investigation, and was hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C.[81]

In Tori Singh v. State of U.P.,[82] Justice WANCHOO observed: "If the sketch map is prepared by a police inspector, basing on his own observations at the scene of offence, it can be admitted, but when he draws the sketch map based on the statement of the witnesses, it would be hit under Section 162, Cr.P.C."[83] In Santa Singh v. State of Punjab,[84], the plan produced in the case by the prosecution was drawn to scale by a draughtsman, on being shown the places by the witnesses. The witnesses also corroborated the statement of the draughtsman that they showed him the places. It was held that such map is not hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C, and it can be admitted. In that case, there was another sketch prepared by the Sub-Inspector and it was held not admissible, as it was hit by Section 162, Cr.P.C.

Relevancy of statement as to fact of public nature, contained in certain Acts or notifications.

S. 37. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any fact of a public nature, any statement of it, made in a recital contained in any Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom or in any Central Act, Provincial Act or a State Act or in a Government notification or notification by the Crown Representative appearing in the Official Gazette or in any printed paper purporting to be the London Gazette or the Government Gazette of any Dominion, colony or possession of His Majesty, is a relevant fact.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Acts of Parliament of the United Kingdom, or of the Central Government or of Provincial or State Government, are admissible in evidence when the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any fact of a public nature stated therein. Under Section 81 the Court "shall presume" the genuineness of these documents. These documents, as well as all others of a public nature, are generally admissible in evidence, although their authenticity is not confirmed by the usual test of truth, namely, the swearing, and the cross-examining, of the persons who prepared them.

Public statutes are judicially noticed and no proof of them is required.

"Statements contained in any public statute, speech from the throne, Royal Proclamation, Parliamentary journal, Government gazette or State paper are admissible in evidence to prove facts of a public nature. The journals of either House of Parliament are proved by copies purporting to be printed by the printer to either House, and are admissible as evidence of the facts relating to parliamentary procedure recorded in them."[85]

---

79. Joseph v. Makkaru, AIR 1960 Ker 7.
80. Electric Supply v. State of W.B., AIR 1958 Cal 85.
81. Dharam Singh v. State of U.P., (1962) Supp. (3) SCR 769 : (1964) 1 CrLJ 78 (SC).
82. AIR 1962 SC 399.
83. Bhgirathi Chowdhury v. Emperor, AIR 1926 Cal 550; Ibraakanda v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Cal 339; Empress of India v. Idu Beg, ILR 3 All 776; Kalia v. Emperor, AIR 1925 Cal 959.
84. AIR 1956 SC 526.
85. HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND, Vol. 17, page. 111 (para 151).

"Statements contained in any public statute, speech from the throne[86], royal proclamation[87], parliamentcary journal[88] government gazette[89] or state paper[90] are admissible in evidence[91] to prove facts of a public nature[92].

The journals of either House of Parliament are proved by copies purporting to be printed by the printer to either House[93], and are admissible as evidence of the facts relating to parliamentary procedure recorded in them.[94]"

2. FACTS SHOULD BE OF PUBLIC NATURE

Under this section the fact as to the existence of which the Court has to form an opinion should be a fact of public nature. The expression 'public nature' is used in Section 42 also. Under Section 35 an entry in any public or other official book, etc., made by a public servant in the discharge of his official duty, and under Section 36, statement of facts in issue or relevant facts made in published maps or charts offered for public sale, or in the maps or plans made under the authority of the State Government or Central Government, are made relevant. Section 57 says that the court shall take judicial notice of all Public Acts passed by Parliament. Whereas Section 78 deals with the mode of proof of such Acts, orders or notifications of the Government, Section 81 deals with the presumption to be drawn by the court about the genuineness of the official gazette, if they are substantially in the form required by law and are produced from proper custody.

Where public statutes recited that great outrages had been committed in a particular part of the country, and a public proclamation was issued, with similar recitals, and offering a reward for the discovery and conviction of the perpetrators, these recitals were held admissible and sufficient evidence of the existence of those outrages, to support the averments to that effect in an information for a libel on the Government in relation thereto. So, a recital of a state of war in the preamble of a public statute, is good evidence of its existence, and the war will be taken notice of without proof, whether this country be or be not a party to it.[95]

In England a private Act of Parliament is not evidence of the facts recited against strangers. This section makes no distinction between Private and Public Acts and makes the recital admissible provided the fact recited is of a publication.

Entries in a diary in a solicitor's office, though a contemporaneous record maintained in the ordinary course of business, are not admissible for showing the truth of the contents of those entries, under this section. They may be admissible under Section 32, and may also be admissible under Section 157 as corroborative of other evidence.[96]

The word "notification" means a formal declaration, proclamation and publication of an order of a Government which shows it as an act of authority. Under the Land Acquisition Act, the Government, by the issue of a notification, shows its intention to acquire property and it is relevant under this section.[97]

---

86. R. v. Francklin, (1731) 17 H. State Tr 625 at 636-638.
87. R. v. Sutton, (1816) 4 M & S 532; R. v. De Berenger, (1814) 3 M & S 67.
88. A-G v. Bradlaugh, (1885) 14 QBD 667 (CA); Forbes v. Samuel, (1913) 3 KB 706 at 721.
89. R. v. Holt, (1793) 5 Term Rep 436; A-G v. Theakstone, (1820) 8 Price 89.
90. E.g. an official dispatch; see Thelluson v. Cosling, (1803) 4 Esp 266.
91. Such statements are not conclusive evidence: see R. v. Greene, (1837) 6 A & E 548; R. v. Francklin, (1731) 17 H. State Tr 625.
92. At common law such statements were admissible as being statements in public documents. They are now admissible in civil cases by virtue of the Civil Evidence Act 1968, S. 9(2)(c): see para 76, ante.
93. Evidence Act 1845, S. 3. No proof is required that such copies were in fact so printed; S. 3.
94. A-G v. Bradlaugh, (1885) 14 QBD 667 (CA), when a cause is being tried in London, and a journal of the House is required in evidence, it is usual for an officer of the House to attend with the necessary volume; in other cases a certified copy of the required entry in the journals can be obtained from the Journal Office of the House; see ERSKINE MAY'S PARLIAMENTARY PRACTICE (19th Edn.) 247, 253. Journals, minutes of evidence and other parliamentary documents may only be produced by leave of Parliament, which is given during recess by the Speaker: see ERSKINE MAY'S PARLIAMENTARY PRACTICE (19th Edn.) 89, 253. The test roll of the House of Commons and the official copy of the division lists are admissible in evidence; Forbes v. Samuel, (1913) 3 KB 706.
95. TAYLOR, 1660.
96. Md.Yusuf v. D., AIR 1968 Bom 112.
97. Kashmirilal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1984 Punj 87.

A statement made in the gazette notification that an Act has been assented to by the President is proof of that fact.[1]

In Jyotindra Mohan Tagoe v. Brojo Sundari,[2] it was held that the Government Gazette containing the advertisement of sale and the condition of sale appended in a printed paper which were issued in the name of the Master, from the office of the Master of the Court office, can be admitted in evidence to prove the actual conditions of the sale.

In the Wahabi trials, several official letters which were published in the Gazette of India and the Calcutta Gazette were admitted as evidence regarding hostility between British Government and certain Mahammaden rebels in the Frontier.[3]

The Gazette will be judicially noticed on its mere production, provided the entire paper and not a mere cutting is shown.[4]

In District Bar Association, Kurukshetra v. State of Haryana (FB)[5] the Court observed that creation of new districts is the discretion of the State Government and the Court cannot interfere. However, the Court can take judicial notice of the absence of judicial complexes due to paucity of funds and inconvenience caused to all and the Government should pay attention to it.[6]

Relevancy of statements as to any law contained in law books.

S. 38. When the Court has to form an opinion as to a law of any country, any statement of such law contained in a book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of such country and to contain any such law, and any report of a ruling of the Courts of such country contained in a book purporting to be a report of such rulings, is relevant.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Statements in books of law and in law reports are admissible on grounds similar to those stated in sections 35, 36 and 37.

Section 3 of the Indian Law Reports Act 18 of 1875, states that no Court shall be bound to hear, cite, or shall receive or treat as an authority binding on it, the report of any case decided by any of the said High Courts on or after the said day, other than a report published under the authority of the Governor General in Council.

The Madras High Court held that the above said Act has no application to the decisions of the Privy Council and the Courts are at liberty to refer to an unauthorised report of the decision of the Privy Council, and once the Court is satisfied that it is a correct report, it is bound to follow it.[7]

When a view was expressed in a judgment of a High Court which was not officially published in the Indian Law Reports, it was not to be followed blindly like the one officially published.[8]

When the Court is satisfied about the accuracy of the judgment placed before it, whether it is officially published or unofficially reported, or is a certified copy, it is the duty of the Judge to follow it.

---

1. Gajapati Narayan Dev v. State of Orissa, AIR 1953 Ori 188.
2. 1864 WR 50.
3. R. v. Amiruddin, 7 BLR 63 : 15 WR 25 (Cri) 25.
4. R v. Lowe, (1883) 15 Cox 286; (PHIPSON'S EVIDENCE 13th Edn. p. 512) (para 25.10).
5. AIR 1997 P&H 231, following J.R. Raghupathy v. State of A.P., (1988) 4 SCC 364 : AIR 1988 SC 1681 and Sundarjas Kanyalal Bhathija v. Collector, Thane, (1989) 3 SCC 396 : AIR 1990 SC 261. The Court referred to CW No. 10428 of 1995, decided on 27.3.1996 (P&H).
6. AIR 1997 P&H 231, following J.R. Raghupathy v. State of A.P., (1988) 4 SCC 364 : AIR 1988 SC 1681 and Sundarjas Kanyalal Bhathija v. Collector, Thane, (1989) 3 SCC 396 : AIR 1990 SC 261. The Court referred to CW No. 10428 of 1995, decided on 27.3.1996 (P&H).
7. (Nawab) Shuja-ul-Mulk v. Umir-ul-Umra Bahadur, AIR 1926 Mad 20.
8. Muralidhar v. Anand Rao, AIR 1925 Nag 414.

The Indian Law Reports Act is nothing more than an addendum to Section 78 of the Evidence Act. An officially certified copy of the Judgement of a High Court is bound to be treated in the same way as an officially reported judgment.[9]

A Judge cannot disregard an unreported ruling of the High Court to which he is subordinate. Section 3 of Act 18 of 1875 does not prevent the court from looking at an unreported judgment.[10]

It was held by the Calcutta High Court that, going strictly by Section 38, the report of a judgment in a case, in a newspaper, does not appear to be relevant, because a newspaper cannot be regarded as a book purporting to be a report of the rulings of the Courts; the presumption under Section 84 cannot also arise, strictly speaking; all the same, a report of a case reported only in the newspaper 'Statesman' was allowed to be relied upon.[11]

2. FOREIGN LAW

When it is necessary to form an opinion as to the law of any country, statements of such law in a book published under the authority of Government of that country and reports of cases decided by courts of that country and contained in books purporting to be reports of such rulings, are relevant, that is, may be referred to by the court.

Section 45 of this Act says that when the court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, opinions of skilled persons in such foreign law would be relevant. Section 84 of this Act, says that the court shall presume the genuineness of every book purporting to be printed or published under the authority of the Government of any country and to contain any of the laws of that country and of every book purporting to contain reports of decisions of the court of such country. The only effect of Section 38 and 84 read together is that the Court may take judicial notice of a publication containing a foreign law, if it is issued under the authority of the foreign government concerned, and may be accepted, as set-out in such publication, as a law in force in the particular foreign country at the relevant time. But such a publication cannot be evidence that what is contained in it is the whole law. What the whole law of a foreign country at a particular point of time is, cannot, therefore, be proved except by calling in an expert, as provided for in Section 45, Evidence Act.[12]

Where the original record of the Law of Limitation passed prior to 1942 in Kota State was not available, that which was purported to have been published under the authority of His Highness of Kota was presumed to be genuine, and the law of limitation contained therein relevant. The fact that it did not contain reference to the order of His Highness could not lead to an inference that the law did not receive His assent. The presumption is in favour of its validity.[13]

A statement contained in an unauthorized translation of the Code Napoleon as to what the French Law is, on a particular matter, is not relevant.[14]

Production of a copy of a foreign Government Gazette attested as true copy by a seal of the Court is not the mode approved by this Act, for proving a foreign law and the Court cannot take notice of such copy, for the purpose.[15]

No Court takes judicial notice of the laws of a foreign country, but they must be proved as facts.

"Where it is necessary for an English Court to know or apply the law of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom, or of any part of the United Kingdom other than England and Wales, that law may be proved in civil poceedings by a person suitably qualified to give expert evidence of such law on account of his knowledge or experience. It is immaterial whether he has acted or is entitled to act as a legal practitioner in the country concerned. A court is not generally entitled to construe a foreign code itself, without expert assistance, but, where any question as to the law of any country or territory outside the United Kingdom or any part of the United Kingdom other than England and Wales with respect to any matter has already been determined, and any finding made or decision adduced before the court (which must be done on notice), the law will be taken to be in accordance with the finding or decision,

---

9. Vinayak v. Moreshwar, AIR 1944 Nag 44.
10. Mahomed Ali v. Nazarali, ILR (1901) 28 Cal 289.
11. State v. Sardar Bahadur, AIR 1969 Cal 451.
12. Jagdish v. I.T. Commissioner, AIR 1956 Cal 40.
13. Bhanwarlal v. Lila Dhar, 1959 Raj LW 323.
14. Christien v. Delanney, (1899) 26 Cal 931.
15. Ramanlal v. Ramgopal, ILR (1954) 4 Raj 262 : AIR 1954 Raj 135.

unless the contrary is proved, unless there are conflicting decisions on the same question adduced by virtue of the same provision of the same poceedings."[16]

Foreign law need not be proved if it is admitted.[17]

In exceptional circumstances and with the parties' consent a court can itself decide a question of foreign law.[18]

HOW MUCH OF A STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED

What evidence to be given when statement forms part of a conversation, document, electronic record, book or series of letters or papers.

[19][S. 39. When any statement of which evidence is given forms part of a longer statement, or of a conversation or part of an isolated document, or is contained in a document which forms part of a book, or is contained in part of electronic record or of a connected series of letters or papers, evidence shall be given of so much and no more of the statement, conversation, document, electronic record, book or series of letters or papers as the Court considers necessary in that particular case to the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement, and of the circumstances under which it was made.]

SYNOPSIS

1. The Information Technology Act, 2000—How much statement is to be proved ... 491
2. General ... 491
3. Statement ... 492
4. Discretion of Court ... 492

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000—HOW MUCH STATEMENT IS TO BE PROVED

Section 39 has been recast by the Act above so as to accommodate the words "electronic record".

2. GENERAL

When evidence is given of a statement which forms part of (a) a longer statement or (b) a conversation, or (c) an isolated document, or (d) a document contained in a book, or (e) a series of letters or papers, the Court has the discretion as to how much evidence should be given of the statement, conversation, document, book, or series of letters or papers, for the full understanding of the nature and effect of the statement and the circumstances under which it was made. The principle on which this section is based is that it would not be just to take part of a conversation, letter, etc., as evidence against a party, without giving to the party, at the same time, the benefit of the entire residue or what he wrote or said on the same occasion.[20]

Thus, the rule enacted in this section will not warrant the reading of distinct entries in an account book, or distinct paragraphs in a newspaper, unconnected with the particular entry or paragraph relied on by the opponent.

If such a restriction is not there, much time of the Court would be wasted and some inadmissible matter would also be let in. Thus the rule contained in this section is founded on convenience and justice.

---

16. HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND 4th Edition, Vol. 17 (para 93), Page 68.
17. Moulis v. Queen, (1907) 1 KB 746 CA.
18. Beatty v. Beatty, (1924) 1 KB 807 at 914 CA; Jabbour v. Custodian of Israeli Absentee Property, (1954) 1 All ER 145 at 153.
19. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17.10.2000).
20. Queen's case (1820) 2 Br & B 284, 302.

3. STATEMENT

Dealing with Section 157 of this Act, the Supreme Court held that the word 'statement' has been used in a number of sections of the Act in its primary meaning of "something that is stated", that a "statement" may be made to some one in the sense of a communication, but that is not its primary meaning; that there is no reason to hold that communication to another is the essence, and there cannot be a statement without communication.[21]

4. DISCRETION OF COURT

In the case of an admission or confession the whole of it must be taken; it is unfair to take that which is against the declarant's interest as the very next sentence may contain a material qualification.[22]

It is the court which has to consider what is necessary to make a statement intelligible.[23]

When a police officer uses the police diary to refresh his memory, the accused is entitled to see not only the entry relied on by the officer but so much of the diary as in the opinion of the court may be necessary to the proper understanding of the entry.[24]

This section cannot be invoked for the purpose of allowing a confession in respect of which there is a bar, under Sections 24, 25 and 26 of the Evidence Act, which is not removed by Section 27. It was never intended that a matter, which is expressly ruled out, should be allowed to come in the garb of an explanatory statement.[25]

JUDGMENTS OF COURTS OF JUSTICE, WHEN RELEVANT

Previous judgments relevant to bar a second suit or trial.

S. 40. The existence of any judgment, order or decree which by law prevents any Court from taking cognizance of a suit or holding a trial, is a relevant fact when the question is whether such Court ought to take cognizance of such suit or to hold such trial.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 492
2. Civil Cases—Judgment inter partes ... 494
3. Civil Cases—Judgment not inter partes ... 495
4. Land acquisition cases ... 495
5. Criminal proceedings ... 496
6. Criminal Court judgment whether binding on Civil Court ... 496
7. Prior Judgement in Civil Proceedings whether binding in later Criminal Proceeding ... 497

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

Sections 40 to 43 deal with the relevancy of judgements.

Judgements, qua judgements or adjudications are admissible as res judicata under this section, and as relating to matters of public nature under Section 42. Judgements other than those mentioned in Sections 40, 41 and 42 may be relevant under Section 43, if their existence is a fact in issue or is relevant under some other provision.

Under this section, the existence of a judgement, decree, or order, is a relevant fact, if, by law, it has the effect of preventing any Court from taking congnizance of a suit, or holding a trial. It is intended to

---

21. Bhogilal v. State, AIR 1959 SC 356 (see commentary under Section 157).
22. WOODROFFE 9th Edition Page 406.
23. Karam Din v. Emperor, AIR 1929 Lah 338.
24. R. v. Mannu, ILR 19 All 390 (FB).
25. Sukhan v. Emperor, 1929 Lah 344 : ILR 10 Lah 283.

include all cases in which a general law relating to res judicata inter partes applies. The main object of the doctrine of res judicata is to prevent multiplicity of suits and interminable disputes between litigants. Res judicata means, by its very words, a thing upon which the Court has exercised its judicial mind. Section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code lays down the law as to res judicata.

This section has nothing to do with questions of evidence beyond the admissibility of the judgements, because a plea of res judicata is not a plea as a matter of evidence, but only a plea barring the action as a matter of procedure as distinguished from the rules of evidence.[26]

STEPHEN in his Digest (7th Ed., p. 175) has observed: "The subject, as ordinarily dealt with, introduces into the Law of Evidence, an attempt to distinguish between judgments in rem, and the judgments in personam or inter partes, the question of the effect of the pleas of autrefois acquit and autrefois convict, which belongs to criminal procedure; the question of estoppel, which belongs rather to the law of pleading than to evidence; and the question of the effect given to the judgments of foreign courts of justice, which would seem more properly to belong to private international law".

The principle is that when once an issue was tried and determined by a competent civil or criminal court, the same cannot be reopened between the same parties to such an adjudication or their privies. In other words, no one ought to be twice harassed, if it be clear to the Court that it is for one and the same cause. This rule is consistent with justice to the individual. It is also for the benefit of the State that there should be a limit to litigation.

The intendment of the section is that judgments inter partes in a previous proceeding can be taken cognizance of in a later proceeding between the same parties or their privies, to decide a question whether, it can proceed with the trial of the subsequent proceedings. GARTH C.J., observed: "But, I cannot doubt that it was intended to include all judgments which by law operate to prevent the Court, whether civil or criminal, from taking cognizance of a suit or trying any particular issue. The words 'holding a trial' are amply large to admit of this construction".[27]

If judgments do not fall within one or the other of Sections 40 to 43, they must be held to be irrelevant unless they can be brought under any other provision of the Act. Under this section, previous judgments can be admitted in evidence in support of a plea of res judicata in civil cases or autre fois acquit or autre fois convict in criminal cases.[28]

This section applies where a Court has jurisdiction to decide a matter, and one of the parties to the suit raises the plea of res judicata and claims that the Court cannot proceed to decide the case because the matter was already decided earlier.[29]

Sections 40 to 42, were held not applicable to the proceedings before the Motor Accidents Tribunal and the criminal courts' judgments cannot be taken as relevant in the tribunal's proceedings, as the Motor Vehicles Tribunal has to come to independent conclusions for awarding compensation to the injured or the heirs of the deceased who were involved in the motor vehicle accident; and the degree of negligence on the part of the driver required to be proved in a civil action is different from the one the law requires in a criminal prosecution.[30]

However, the Karnataka High Court has held that the fact of conviction is relevant before the Claims Tribunal, under Section 43 of the Act.[31]

Under Sections 40 to 44 of this Act, a judgment is not admissible to prove that the plaintiff filed a false case.[32]

---

26. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palkdhari Singh, ILR (1880) 12 All 1, 44 FB.
27. Gujjulal v. Fathelal, 6 Cal 171.
28. Ramanamma v. Appalanarasayya, ILR 55 Mad 446; Kashyap v. Emperor, AIR 1945 Lah 23 (FB); Mahabir Mahton v. Sonmati Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 66; Purnima Debya v. Nandalal, AIR 1932 Pat 105; Ram Parekha Pande v. Ramjhari Kuer, AIR1933 Pat 690; Ajmer Singh v. Jangir Singh, AIR 1952 Pepsu 76.
29. Lakshan v. Ramdas, AIR 1929 Cal 374 (FB).
30. Prabhakar Babusso Chodankar v. Meria Victoria (Smt.), 1977 Goa 15; Mahuir Pershad v. Municipal Corporation of Delhi, 1975 ACJ 190 (Del); Municipal Committee Jullundhar v. Romesh Saggi, AIR 1970 Punj 137; Yaginder Paul Chowdhry v. Durga Das, Punj., 1972 ACJ 483.
31. Vinobabbai v. K.S.R.T.C., (1979) 1 Kant LJ 257; Badrinarayan Prasad v. Anilkumar Gupta, AIR 1979 Pat 204.
32. Miyana Hasan Abdulla v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1962 Guj 214.

2. CIVIL CASES—JUDGMENT INTER PARTES

The Supreme Court, observed: "The principle of res judicata is based on the need of giving finality to judicial decisions. What it says is that once a res is judicata, it shall not be adjudged again. Primarily, it applies as between past litigation and future litigation. When a matter, whether on a question of fact, or on a question of law, has been decided between two parties in one suit or proceeding, and the decision is final, either because no appeal was taken to a higher Court, or because the appeal was dismissed, or no appeal lies, neither party will be allowed, in a future suit or proceeding between the same parties, to convass the matter again. The principle of res judicata is embodied in relation to suits under Section 11, C.P.C. but even where Section 11, C.P.C., does not apply, the principle of res judicata has been applied by Courts for the purpose of achieving finality in litigation. The result of this is that the original Court as well as the higher Court must, in any future litigation, proceed on the basis that the previous decision was correct".[33]

SIR LAWRENCE JENKINS, in Sheo Parsan Singh v. Ramnandan[34] observed: "It has been well said" declared LORD COKE, 'interest republicae ut sit finis litium. Otherwise, great oppression might be done under colour and pretence of law'. Though the rule of the Coke may be traced to an English source, it embodies a doctrine in no way opposed to the spirit of the law as expounded by the Hindu Commentators. VIJNANESWARA and NILKANTA include the plea of a former judgment among those allowed by law, each citing for this purpose the text of KATYAYANA, who describes the plea thus: 'If a person, though defeated at law, sues again', he should be answered, 'you were defeated formerly'. This is called the plea of former judgement. And so the application of the rule by the Courts in India should be influenced by no technical considerations of form, but by matter of substance within the limits allowed by law."[35]

Where the present controversy was directly and substantially in issue in the former suit against the defendants, the decision in the prior suit is conclusive and the present contentions of the defendants are barred by res judicata and the previous judgment is relevant under Section 40.[36] Where there was a decision of the High Court, in an earlier petition between the same parties, issuing directions to the respondent Government, and the Government did not follow the directions but issued fresh notification for acquisition, it was held that the decision in the earlier petition was binding on the Government on the principle of res judicata.[37] Where, in a previous suit, a decree was obtained under fraud or collusion, it was held that it could be relied on for the purpose contemplated under Section 40 & 44, and the collusive decree would still be relevant to support the plea of estoppel if the ingredients of estoppel were made out.[38]

Section 11 of the Civil Procedure Code dealing with this type of principle does not cover all cases of estoppel by judgment.[39] Even though, the previous judgment between the same parties may not operate as res judicata under Section 11, C.P.C., nevertheless, it would be a valuable piece of evidence under Section 40, and a party would be estopped from contesting the correctness of the judgment.[40]

A finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the court in one case cannot be evidence of that fact in another case and this evidence even if admissible would be of very little weight.[41] Where a judgment was not in rem, nor relating to matters of public nature, nor between the parties to a subsequent suit, a point decided in a particular way cannot be held relevant in another case, for the purpose of the decision of the same question in a subsequent suit.[42] A finding in a previous suit inter partes would not

---

33. Satyadhyan v. Deorajin Debi, AIR 1960 SC 941 : (1960) 3 SCR 590 at 594.
34. AIR 1916 PC 78 : 43 IA 91, 98.
35. Kalipada De v. Dwijapada Das, 57 IA 24 : AIR 1930 PC 22; Hook v. Administrator General of Bengal, 48 IA 187 : AIR 1921 PC 11.
36. Joseph alias Kochu v. Makkaru Pillai, AIR 1960 Ker 127. See also Udit Gopal Beri v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 2001 Raj 147 (paras 4, 6, 7 and 9).
37. Ramprasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1988 All 309.
38. Ibne Hasan v. Hasina Bibi (Smt.), AIR 1984 All 216.
39. Ramamurthy Dhora v. Secretary of State, AIR 36 Mad 141.
40. Ybka Rajamma v. P.Y. Digantam Buthiramayya, (1967) 2 An LT 283.
41. Gopika Raman Roy v. Atal Singh, 56 IA 119 at 125 : AIR 1939 PC 99; Govinda v. Shamlal, 58 IA 125 : AIR 1931 PC 89; Ramaji v. Manohar, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
42. Maharaja Sir Kesho Prasad Singh Bahadur v. Bahuria Bhagjogna Kuer, AIR 1937 PC 69.

operate as res judicata but the party against whom finding was given is bound to displace that finding.[43] A finding in a judgment in order to operate as res judicata, must be material and necessary to support the precise and particular ground or grounds on which the decree or some operative part of it was made. Otherwise, the finding must be considered either as superseded by the decree, or as entirely immaterial, or as no more than incidental and subsidiary to the main question in the suit, although in the latter case the finding may have been necessary to the decision of the court.[44]

Whether an adverse finding against a successful party is res judicata or not depends on the right of appeal, against that finding.[45] A party aggrieved by a finding in a decree favourable to a party has no right of appeal; unless the finding is necessarily implied in the decree and has prejudiced the party wishing to appeal, such a finding does not operate as res judicata.[46] An unappealable finding may operate as res judicata.[47]

Where the decision of the Court on an issue was unnecessary to dispose of the prior suit, it would not operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit.[48]

3. CIVIL CASES—JUDGMENT NOT INTER PARTES

BEST (8th Ed, Section 590, p. 543) states: "The record of a Court of justice consists of two parts, which may be denominated respectively the substantive and judicial portions. In the substantive portion, the Court records or attests its own proceedings and acts. It can neither be allowed to be contradicted nor to be proved in any other way than by the production of the record itself; or by copies proved to be true in the prescribed manner. In the judicial portion, on the contrary, the Court expresses its judgment or opinion on the matter in question. In forming that opinion it is bound to have regard only to the evidence and arguments adduced before it by the respective parties to the proceedings. Such a judgment, therefore, with respect to any third person, who was neither a party nor privy to the proceedings in which it was pronounced, is only res inter alios judicata, and hence the rule that it does not bind and is not, in general evidence, against any one who was not such party or privy."[49]

A right in dispute cannot be proved on the basis of the findings in respect of that right in a previous suit not inter partes; hence previous judgment is not relevant.[50] A finding in judgments not inter partes about the title or possession of the property would be irrelevant in a suit for an injuction restraining the defendant from interfering with plaintiff's possession of property.[51] A judgment not inter partes is admissible only as showing that certain observations were made on certain facts found in a certain judgment, but is not admissible as evidence of the truth of the facts found or observations made.[52]

4. LAND ACQUISITION CASES

Judgments not inter partes would be relevant if they relate to similarly situated properties and contain determination of value on the dates fairly proximate to the relevant date.[53]

For detailed discussion of cases relating to res judicata, reference may be made to commentary Section 11, C.P.C. in standard treatises on Civil Procedure Code.

---

43. Joseph alias Kochu v. Makkaru Pillai, AIR 1960 Ker 127.
44. K. Venkatasubbayya v. Virayya, AIR 1957 AP 981; see contra K. Virayya v. K. Venkatasubbayya, AIR 1955 AP 215; Abdeali Abdul Hussain v. Taiyab Ali, AIR 1951 Nag 355; Gourisankar v. Gurupada Haldar, AIR 1931 Cal 511.
45. Muthaya Setty v. Kantappa Setty, 34 MLJ 431; Parbati v. Mathura, ILR 40 Cal 29.
46. Secretary of State v. Swaminatha, ILR 37 Mad 25 : AIR 1915 Mad 294.
47. Peary Mohan v. Ambica, ILR (1896) 24 Cal 900.
48. Angati Venkateswarlu v. Maharanipeta Military Mosque, AIR 1972 AP 132.
49. Ram Kirpal v. Munabati, AIR 1958 Pat 477.
50. Hiralal v. Harinarain, AIR 1964 All 302.
51. Gopal Krishna Guptan v. Ammalu Ammal, AIR 1972 Ker 196.
52. Muneswari v. Jugal Mohini Dasi, AIR 1952 Cal 368; Ramaji Batanji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
53. Land Acquisition Officer, City Improvement Trust, Bangalore v. H. Narayanaian, AIR 1976 SC 2403; Collector of Bilaspur v. Lachhman, AIR 1965 HP 18; State of U.P. v. Nathhoo, AIR 1986 All 172; Madan Mohan Burman v. Secretary of State, AIR 1925 Cal 481; Mariam v. State, AIR 1980 Ker 176; Bombay v. Lakhamsi Ghelabai, AIR 1960 Bom 78; (cannot be regarded as good law in view of the decision of the Supreme Court).

5. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

The principle of this section applies to criminal courts as well. The plea of autrefois convict or autre fois acquit, that is, of a previous lawful conviction or lawful acquittal, has always been held to be a good plea.

See Section 403, Criminal Procedure Code.

The Privy Council in Sambasivam v. Public Prosecutor[54], held that the principle of res judicata is applicable to criminal proceedings, because a finding has been reached by a competent court in favour of an accused and it constitutes res judicata against the prosecution. But it is not a bar to the trial and conviction of an accused for a different or distinct offence. That finding only precludes the reception of evidence to disturb the finding of a fact in issue, provided that the parties are the same and the fact in issue, proved or not, is identical with what is sought to be subsequent trial.[55]

Where there are two different trials for distinct offences, arising out of different transactions, and the common object in both the cases is different, acquittal in one does not bar the conviction in the other case, because the reasoning of the judgment of acquittal is not admissible as evidence in the other.[56]

Following the above case, the Allahabad High Court held that neither the reasons for acquittal in earlier case, nor the evidence on record, is relevant for the decision in the later case. Though the two offences in the two cases were the same offence of dacoity at night, the circumstances in the two cases are different. It was further observed that the reasoning in the earlier judgment could not be relied upon as it proceeded on evidence which was recorded separately and which was considered separately. The earlier judgment could be admissible only if it fulfilled the conditions laid down in sections 40 & 43 of the Evidence Act. The earlier judgment was admissible to show the parties and the decision, but was not admissible for the purpose of relying upon the appreciation of evidence.[57]

Where an exporter of handloom cloth was charged for tampering with bales of goods before loading, the case was split up into two cases according to the two different invoices on different dates. The accused was acquitted in the first case. When the second case was taken up for trial, an application was filed for quashing the proceedings in the second case. The Supreme Court held, that the application for quashing the proceedings was not maintainable as the two cases stood on two different footings, though the object might be same.[58] Where several persons apprehended in an offence of dacoity, were tried and acquitted, and afterwards two more accused connected with the same dacoity and who were absconding were arrested and tried separately, it was held that the finding given in the previous trial of the other accused was not binding in the second trial concerning the two other accused.[59]

6. CRIMINAL COURT JUDGMENT WHETHER BINDING ON CIVIL COURT

The judgment of a Criminal Court that a person did or did not commit an offence, does not operate as res judicata to prevent a Civil Court from determining such questions for purposes of a suit.[60]

The Supreme Court has held: "Where in a proceeding for revocation of the grant of probate under Section 263, Succession Act, the question is whether the son of the testator murdered him, it cannot be assumed, on the basis of a previous judgment of a Criminal Court convicting the son of the murder of his father and sentencing him to transportation for life, that the son was the murderer of the testator. The judgment of the Criminal Court is relevant only to show that there was such a trial, resulting in the conviction and sentence of the son to transportation for life. It is not evidence of the fact that the son was the murderer of the testator. That question has to be decided on evidence.[61]

---

54. 54 Cal WN 695.

55. Pritam Singh v. State, AIR 1956 SC 415; Mohar Rai v. State, AIR 1968 SC 1281; Piara v. State, AIR 1969 SC 961; Manipur Administration v. Bira Singh, AIR 1965 SC 87; Bajrang Ram Bhadani v. Bharath Ram Razak, 1974 BLJR 121.

56. Kharkan v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 83.

57. Ali Hasan v. State, 1975 CrLJ 345 (All).

58. S.P.E. Madras v. K.V. Sundaravelu, AIR 1978 SC 1017.

59. Sheonandan v. State AIR 1964 All 139. See also Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 415.

60. Ram Lal v. Tularam, (1881) 4 All 97; See Bishen Das v. Ram Lubhaya, 32 IC 18 Pr. No. 106 of 1915 (Civil).

61. Anil Bihari v. Lakika Bala Dassi (Smt.), AIR 1955 SC 566.

A Criminal Court judgment can be relevant only to establish the fact that an acquittal had taken place in a civil suit for damages in a malicious prosecution case.[62] It cannot be relied on as one binding in a civil action[63] but it still holds the field of proof by corroboration.[64] It can be admitted in a civil proceeding (departmental enquiry) for purposes of showing that there was a criminal case of identical facts, ending in acquittal.[65] When a person was prosecuted by the Sales Tax Department and he was acquitted, it was held that the judgment of the Criminal Court is admissible though it did not debar the Sales Tax authority from assessing him.[66]

It is a well-recognised principle of law that a conviction in a criminal case is no evidence of the facts on which that conviction was based, in a civil case in which those facts are in issue or form the subject-matter of the suit. But, the authorities are clear that when the conviction is based on a plea of guilty that plea is relevant and to prove it, the judgment in the criminal case is admissible in evidence in the subsequent civil suit in which the facts giving rise to the charge are in issue or form the subject-matter of the suit.[67]

7. PRIOR JUDGEMENT IN CIVIL PROCEEDINGS WHETHER BINDING IN LATER CRIMINAL PROCEEDING

The judgement of a Civil Court is not admissible in a criminal prosecution, for proving the innocence of the accused.[68] In a Bombay case, the judgment of a Civil Court dismissing a suit to recover moneys was held relevant in a prosecution for criminal breach of trust for some of the items covered by the civil suit.[69]

In a criminal trial, it is for the court to determine the question of the guilt of the accused, and it must do this upon the evidence before it, independently of decisions in civil litigation between the same parties. A judgment or a decree is not admissible in evidence in all cases as a matter of course and, generally speaking, a judgment is only admissible to show its date and legal consequences.[70]

A judgement of a Civil Court, other than one in rem, cannot finally decide a matter subsequently dealt with in a Criminal Court, even though the facts in dispute in the civil suit govern the only question that can arise in the criminal proceedings.[71]

To hold that when a party has been able to satisfy a Civil Court as to the justice of his claim and has, in the result, succeeded in obtaining a decree which is final and binding upon the parties, it would not be open to Criminal Courts to go behind the findings of the Civil Courts, to place the Civil Court, without any valid reason, in a much higher position than what is actually occupies in the system of administration in this country, and to make it master not only of cases which it is called upon to adjudicate but also of cases which it is not called upon to determine and over which it has really no control.[72]

Where a person was charged under Section 467 read with Section 109 Penal Code for forging a will, it was held that a judgment in a civil suit holding that the will in dispute was a forged one, was not admissible, as the degree of proof of evidence was different between civil and criminal proceedings.[73]

Findings of tax authorities in the assessment proceedings as to the genuineness of a document was held to be not binding in the criminal case.[74]

---

62. Maru Paudi Kutumba Rao v. Parvathanani Venkataramayya, AIR 1951 Mad 344; Perumal v. Devarajan, AIR 1974 Mad 14; Radha Mohan v. Barelal, 1972 All LJ 15.
63. Krishnan Asari v. Adaikalam, AIR 1966 Mad 425.
64. Sardar Prahlad Singh v. Syed Ali Musa Raza, 1997 AIHC 3122 (para 16) (AP).
65. Banta Singh v. National Coal Development Corp., AIR 1968 Pat 300.
66. Macherlappa and Sons v. State of A.P., AIR 1958 AP 371.
67. B. Meenakshisundaam Chetty v. Kuttimalu, AIR 1958 Ker 39.
68. Ramanamma v. Appalanarasayya, AIR 1932 Mad 254 : ILR (1931) 55 Mad 346.
69. Markur, (1914) 41 Bom 1, 18 Bom LR 185; see also Narayanan v. Mathan Mathai, AIR 1982 Ker 239.
70. Trailokyanath Das v. Emperor, ILR (1931) 59 Cal 136 : AIR 1932 Cal 293.
71. Maung Po Nwe v. Ma Pwa Chone, ILR 1940 Ran 163.
72. B.N. Kashyap v. Crown, ILR (1944) 25 Lah 408 FB : AIR 1945 Lah 23.
73. (1982) 2 Chand LR (Cri) 250.
74. State of Maharashtra v. Rasiklal K. Mehta, 1978 CrLJ 809 (Bom).

A decision of a competent court on a question of title, even if followed by delivery of possession to the successful party is not conclusive evidence of the party is possession, in an enquiry under Section 145(4), Cr.P.C. A Magistrate is not bound by any law to give his finding in accordance with such a decision, regardless of the actual evidence. If the evidence satisfied him that the other party is in actual possession, he is bound by law to declare him to be in possession, despite the decision of the Civil Court or the delivery of the possession by it. It was further observed that, even if the Civil Court's decision involves a finding on possession in favour of the title holder, the possession might have been disturbed after the decision, and there was no reason why the Magistrate should ignore that fact and hold the party who was successful in the Civil Court to be still in possession.[75]

When both parties claimed in a criminal case, possession in respect of certain property, it was held that the judgment of a Civil Court which was in favour of the complainant in the criminal case, was held relevant in determining the probabilities, in the criminal case, though a civil proceedings were pending in second appeal.[76]

An order in a previous claim petition, rejecting the claim of the accused, can be used in a subsequent criminal case for committing the theft of the crop in the very same land.[77]

Relevancy of certain judgments in probate, etc., jurisdiction.

S. 41. A final judgment, order or decree of a competent Court, in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction, which confers upon or takes away from any person any legal character, or which declares any person to be entitled to any such character, or to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely, is relevant when the existence of any such legal character, or the title of any such person to any such thing, is relevant.

Such judgment, order or decree is conclusive proof—that any legal character, to which it confers accrued at the time when such judgement, order or decree came into operation; that any legal character, to which it declares any such person to be entitled, accrued to that person at the time when such judgment, order or decree declares it to have accrued to that person; that any legal character which it takes away from any such person ceased at the time from which such judgment, order or decree declared that it had ceased or should cease; and that anything to which it declares any person to be so entitled was the property of that person at the time from which such judgment, order or decree declares that it had been or should be his property.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle	... 499	5. Matrimonial Jurisdiction	... 505
2. Judgments in rem	... 499	6. Admirality Jurisdiction	... 507
3. Judgments not in rem	... 501	7. Insolvency Jurisdiction	... 508
4. Probate Jurisdiction	... 504	8. Legal Character	.. 508

---

75. Hosnaki v. State through Sheobaran Rai, AIR 1956 All 81; See contra : Makhanlal v. Mangal, ILR 1943 All 150 : AIR 1942 All 150; V.E. Argles v. Chhail Behari, AIR 1949 All 230; Imtiaz Ali Khan v. Shekh Badruddin, AIR 1943 Oudh 410; Jang Bahadur v. Nazimul Haque, AIR 1947 Pat 245.
76. Shiv Charan v. State, AIR 1965 All 511.
77. Haripanda v. State, AIR 1956 Ori 212.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

Under this section a judgment, order or decree, given by a competent Court in the exercise of (1) probate, (2) matrimonial, (3) admiralty, or (4) insolvency jurisdiction, will be conclusive proof as to the legal character conferred on, or taken away from, any person or to which any person is declared to be entitled.

2. JUDGMENTS IN REM

The section deals with what are usually called judgments [22]in rem, i.e., judgments which are conclusive not only against the parties to the proceedings but also against the whole world. "A judgment in rem has been defined to be 'an adjudication pronounced, as its name indeed denotes, upon the status of some particular subject-matter, by a tribunal having competent authority for that purpose." (TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1674, p. 1050). "This rule appears to rest, partly, upon the ground that..... every one who can possibly be affected by the decision is entitled, if he thinks fit, to appear and assert his own rights, by becoming an actual party to the proceedings; partly, upon the ground that judgments in rem not merely declare the status of the subject-matter adjudicated upon, but, ipso facto, render it such as they declare it to be; and, partly, if not principally, upon the broad ground of public policy, it being essential to the peace of society, that the social relations of every member of the community should not be left doubtful, but that, after having been clearly defined by one solemn adjudication, they should conclusively be set at rest".[78]

Normally, a judgment is conclusive, as against the parties to it or their privies, of the facts directly in issue in the case and actually decided by the court. But there are certain exceptions to this general rule and this Section 41 is by way of an exception. For attracting Section 41, the judgment must be (1) of a competent court in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admirality or insolvency jurisdiction and (2) it must (a) confer upon or take away from any person any legal character, or (b) declare any person to be entitled to any such character, or (c) to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified persons but absolutely.[79]

A judgment in rem e.g. judgments or orders passed in admirality, probate proceedings etc. would always be admissible irrespective of whether they are inter partes or not.[80]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (15th Edn. (2000), page 997, para 34-14) states: "As applied to judgments, the terms in rem and in personam, which are adopted from, though not belonging to, the Roman Law, have never been clearly defined in reference to our own or any other system. A judgment in rem has been described as "an adjudication upon the status of some particular subject-matter by a tribunal having competent authority for that purpose," a definition which, though seemingly the best that can be framed upon a difficult subject, is imperfect in that it fails to distinguish between territorial and ex-territorial status, besides including in its terms matters which are not properly classed as judgments in rem : e.g. inquisitions and criminal convictions. It has also been defined as "a judgment by a court having special jurisdiction over the subject-matter"; such judgments, however, only operate in rem if they alter status."

In the report of the Select Committee published in the Gazette of India dated 1-7-1871 part 5 p. 273, it was stated: "For the sake of simplicity, and in order to avoid the difficulty of defining or enumerating judgments in rem, we have adopted the statement of law by SIR BARNES PEACOCK in Kanhyalal v. Radhachurn[81]. In this section, only four types of judgements, namely, those of courts of probate, matrimony, admirality and insolvency are made relevant, and conclusive as against the whole world as judgements in rem.

In Viswanathan's case[82] the Supreme Court dealt elaborately with judgements[22] in rem and judgments in personam, and observed: "Roman lawyers recognised a right either as a jus in rem or jus in

---

78. TAYLOR, 12th Edn. S. 1676, p. 1054
79. Ripumadhusudan Prasad v. Rama Shanker Prasad, AIR 1970 Pat 138.
80. State of Bihar v. Radhakrishna Singh, AIR 1983 SC 684.
81. (1867) 7 WR 338.
82. (1963) 3 SCR 22 : AIR 1963 SC 1.

personam. According to its literal meaning "jus in rem" is right in respect of a thing, a "jus in personam" is a right against or in respect of a person. In modern legal terminology, a right in rem, postulates a duty to recognise the right imposed upon all persons generally; a right in personam postulates a duty imposed upon a determinate person or class of persons. A right in rem is, therefore, protected against the world at large; a right in personam against determinate individuals or persons."

"There is another sense in which an action in rem is understood. A proceeding in relation to personal status is also treated as a proceeding in rem, for the judgement of the proper court within the jurisdiction of which the parties are domiciled is, by comity of nations, admitted to recognition by other courts. As observed by CHESHIRE in his "Private International Law", Sixth Edn., at page 109, "In Roman law, an action in rem was one brought in order to vindicate a jus in rem, i.e., a right such as ownership available against all persons, but the only action in rem known to English law is that which lies in an Admiralty court against a particular res, namely, a ship or some other res, such as cargo, associated with the ship." Dealing with judgment in rem and judgment in personam, CHESHIRE observes, at page 653: "It (judgment in rem) has been defined as a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction determining the status of a person or thing (as distinct from the particular interest in it of a party to the litigation); and such a judgment is conclusive evidence for and against all persons, whether parties, privies or strangers of the matter actually decided..... A judgment in rem settles the destiny of the res itself 'and binds all persons claiming an interest in the property inconsistent with the judgment even though pronounced in their absence'; a judgment in personam, although it may concern a res, merely determines the rights of the litigants inter se to the res. The former looks beyond the individual rights of the parties; the latter is directed solely to those rights."

JUSTICE HIDAYATULLA observed in a separate judgement: "The salient point of English law on the subject may be stated to be that all judgments are divided into two broad categories—judgments in rem and judgments in personam. The best definitions of these terms are to be found in HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND, Vol 22, p. 742, para 1605, which reads:

"A judgment in rem may be defined as the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction determining the status of a person or thing, or the disposition of a thing, as distinct from the particular interest in it of a party to the litigation. A judgment in personam determines the rights of the parties inter se to or in the subject-matter in dispute, whether it be corporeal property of any kind whatever, or a liquidated or unliquidated demand, but does not affect the status of either persons or things, or make any disposition of property, or declare or determine any interest in it except as between the parties litigants. Judgments in personam include all judgments which are not judgements in rem, but, as many judgments in the latter class deal with the status of persons and not of things, the description 'judgment inter partes' is preferable to 'judgment in personam'.

The definition of HALSBURY is merely a restatement of a definition given by BOWEN and it has been accepted and applied by EVERSHED, M.R., in Lazarus-Barlow v. Regents Estates Co. Ltd. Such judgments, says PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 8th Edn., p. 401, are conclusive in the case of judgments in rem against parties or their privies or strangers, and in the case of judgments in personam, against the parties and their privies only. In the matter of foreign judgments, the rule about judgments in rem has been somewhat reduced in its extent in one direction and extended in another in recent years in England. In the matter of status, it has been extended to give more and more faith to foreign decrees but in the other direction, it has been curtailed. In respect of things and determinations of rights or title to things (excluding immovable property as to which I shall say something later) judgments in rem are now confined to Admirality actions. There is, however, a remnant in respect of movables, which is represented in the three rules of WESTLAKE (s.149) which are:

(a) judgments which immediately vest the property in a certain person as against the whole world;

(b) judgments which decree the sale of a thing in satisfaction of a claim against the thing itself; and

(c) judgments which order movables to be sold by way of administration.

This distinction is summed up by HOLMES, C.J., in Tyler v. Judges of the Court of Registration, as follows:

"If the technical object of the suit is to establish a claim against some particular person, with a judgment which generally in theory, at least binds his body, or to bar some individual claim or objection, so that only certain persons are entitled to be heard in defence, the action is in personam, although it may concern the right to, or possession of, a tangible thing..... If on the other hand the object is to bar indifferently all who might be minded to make an objection of any sort against the right sought to be established, and if any one in the world has a right to be heard on the strength of alleging facts which, if true show an inconsistent interest, the proceeding is in rem ..... All proceedings, like all rights, are really against persons. Whether they are proceedings or rights in rem depends on the number of persons affected."[83]

This classic exposition, which was evoked the admiration of every text-book writer and also the Privy Council in Ingenohl v. Wing on & Co.,[84] sums up in an admirable manner the distinction between the two kinds of judgments".

He further observed as follows: (page 170-71).

"It is not possible to add to the list of subjects mentioned in Section 41 of the Indian Evidence Act, except by legislation. Conclusiveness there attaches only to the subjects mentioned therein, and a fact established by a judgment of a competent Court on any of the subjects is taken to be proved, and established in all subsequent proceedings and does not require to be proved again. The Judicial Committee in Appa Trimbak v. Waman Govind[85], did not extend the principle of Section 41 to a case of adoption and a former judgment on the question of adoption was considered under Section 11 of the Code and not under Section 41 of the Indian Evidence Act. The former judgment was not accepted under Section 11 of the Code as it did not come within its terms, and the fact was allowed to be proved de novo. The reason given for the non-applicability of Section 41 was said to be that the decisions on adoption were excluded by SIR BARNE P EACOCK in Kanhya Lal v. Radha Charan[86] and also in Section 41.

From the above, it follows that conclusiveness, from the point of view of the law of evidence, will attach to a judgment, order or decree, only if it falls within the categories mentioned in Section 41. Once a judgment etc. falls within it, the law dispenses with the proof of the fact the conclusion of the former judgment etc., about the legal character which it confers or declares, together with the declarations of property arising from the legal character, is final."

A judgment in rem is an adjudication pronounced upon the status of some particular subject-matter by a tribunal having competent jurisdiction and authority to that office.[87]

A judgment in rem can only be impeached if it can be shown—

(1) that the Court had no jurisdiction; or

(2) that the judgment was obtained by fraud or collusion; or

(3) that it was not given on the merits; or

(4) that it was not final, e.g., interlocutory.

3. JUDGMENTS NOT IN REM

Under the West Bengal Premises Rent Control Act 17 of 1950, standard rent was determined in the case of a sub-tenant. It was held that such judgment determining standard rent is not a judgment in rem.[88] A judgment regarding the validity of an ante-adoption agreement between the adopting mother and the natural father of the adopted son will not come in the category of a judgment in rem, so as to be binding against the whole world.[89] A judgment in a partition suit declaring the right of a person to share in particular properties is not a judgment in rem.[90] An order passed by the court in guardianship proceedings cannot be treated as a judgment in rem as in the case of a grant made under the Succession Act. But a certified copy of the order may be admissible to prove only that such an order had, in fact

---

83. Cheatham—Cases and Materials on Conflict of Laws, p. 168.
84. AIR 1928 PC 83.
85. AIR 1941 SC 85.
86. (1867) 7 WR 338.
87. Sriram v. Prabhu Dayal, AIR 1972 Raj 180.
88. E. Scott v. Residence Ltd., AIR 1956 Cal 606.
89. Radhabai v. Kadar Ali, AIR 1957 MB 159.
90. Abdurahiman Koya Kutty Hajee v. Agastheenju Joseph, AIR 1952 Tra/Co 176.

been made but not to prove its contents.[1] Where there are joint tenants, and a decree was passed against one of them for eviction, it was held that it was open to proceed in execution for eviction against others on the basis of the decree, against them only, as the judgment obtained was not a judgment in rem.[2]

An order passed under Bihar Hindu Religious Trusts Act 1 of 1951 is not an order in rem[3] but not a judgment deciding whether a temple is a private or a public one and therefore in a case between a third party and one of the parties to earlier proceedings the said judgment can be treated as precedent inasmuch as it decides the nature of the temple.[4]

Where a petitioner in an execution proceedings was not a party in another case against the same judgment debtors, it was held that the order passed in that execution case could not be held to be judgment in binding on other decree holders.[5]

In Kanliyalal v. Radhacharan[6] SIR BARNES PEACOCK observed: "If a judgment in a suit between A & B that certain property for which the suit was brought belonged to A as the adopted son of C, were a judgment in rem and conclusive against strangers as to the fact and validity of the adoption the greatest injustice might be caused. Referring to this decision the Privy Council in Appa Trianbak v. Waman Govind, 59 IA 64 observed at p. 69 "Section 41 of the Indian Evidence Act does not give to such decision as those arived at in Trianbak's suit of 1894 (where a particular adoption was held invalid) the character of judgments in rem".

In Duggamma v. Ganeshayya[7] dealing with the binding nature of a judgment of a foreign court the High Court discussed elaborately the meaning of the word "Status". It had that the judgment of a foreign court which declared the status of a person is by courts of Nations treated in India as analogus to a judgment in rem. It observed: "It is difficult to predicate what are all the matters comprehended by the term 'status'. There is an exhaustive discussion of the meaning of this term by ROSCOE POUND' in his 'Jurisprudence' (See Vol. IV pages 262 to 272, Edition 1959). It is sufficient to note that status of a person means his "personal legal condition, that is to say, a man's legal condition only so far as his personal rights and burdens are concerned, to the exclusion of the proprietary relation". An adjudication on adoption will in law amount to a declaration of status and is decided according to the law of domicile of the party making the adoption. The claim to succession is not a matter of status in this sense but would relate to the 'proprietary relation' of the claimant with reference to deceased estate-holder.[8]

A decision whether a person is or is not a partner of a firm, does not amount to conferring or taking away the legal character of the person within the meaning of Section 41; hence the judgment is not in rem.[9]

According to BEST ON EVIDENCE, 9th Ed., Section 593, Page 492, in order for the judgment to be in rem, the Court or the tribunal must have the lawful control of the subject matter within the state under the authority of which the Court or the tribunal sits and the State should have conferred on the Court or tribunal jurisdiction to decide as to the disposition of the thing and the court or tribunal should act within its jurisdiction.

The word 'Court' is not limited to Courts in India. The expression 'competent Court' means the Court of any country which is competent to pass such judgment as is referred to in this section, that is to say, judgment in rem.[10]

The reason for accepting, u/Section 41, the judgments of courts having competent jurisdiction in a foreign country was explained by the Bombay High Court, stating that a declaration by a court affecting

---

1. Muktipada Dawn v. Aklema Khatun, AIR 1950 Cal 533.
2. Md. Mustafa v. Mansoor, AIR 1977 All 239.
3. Bihia State Board of Religious Trust v. Raj Ratan Gir, ILR 1968-47 Pat 1.
4. K M. Rathinam Nadar v. Arulmigu Hanumantharayar Bhajanai Madam, 1996 AIHC 5469 (para 18) (Mad), dissenting from Ramaji Batanji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
5. Mukhdeo Singh v. Kaushalya Devi, 1979 BLJR 688.
6. (1867) 7 WR 338.
7. AIR 1965 Mys 97.
8. AIR 1965 Mys 97 at page 101, Col. 12.
9. Radhakishin v. Gangabai, AIR 1928 Sind 121; Official Assignee Madras v. Official Assignee Rangoon, AIR 1924 Mad 662, Punjab National Bank v. Balkram, AIR 1940 Cal 225.
10. Messa v. Messa, (1938) 40 Bom LR 571 : ILR (1938) Bom 529 : AIR 1938 Bom 394.

the status of a person domiciled within its territory is treated by the Comity of Nations as being analogus to a judgment in rem.[11]

The validity of a foreign judgment rendered in a civil proceeding must be determined in India on the terms of Section 13, C.P.C. If the judgment falls under any of the clauses of Section 13, C.P.C., it will cease to be conclusive as to any matter thereby adjudicated upon, and will be open to collateral attack on the grounds mentioned in Section 13, C.P.C. Thus, a foreign ex parte divorce decree obtained by the husband from the Neveda State Court in U.S.A., without the wife submitting to its jurisdiction will not be valid and finding of a criminal court in proceedings for maintenance under Section 488, Cr.P.C., when it is found from the facts on record that the decree of divorce was obtained by fraud or by making a false declaration as to a jurisdictional fact viz., that the husband was a bona fide resident and was domiciled in Neveda, was valid. The decree being open to collateral attack on the jurisdictional fact, the recital in the judgment of the Neveda Court that the respondent was a bona fide resident of and was domiciled in Neveda is not conclusive and can be contradicted by satisfactory proof. The judgment of Neveda Court, though a judgment in rem, is open to attack on the grounds mentioned in Section 44 of the Evidence Act, i.e., fraud, or collusion, or want of jurisdiction in the other foreign Court.[12]

Where a will was duly proved and deposited in a competent Court having jurisdiction beyond Mysore, and the named executor in the will, applied in Mysore for an ancillary grant, it was held that, as the probate of the will was granted by the High Court of Justice having jurisdiction in England and as it had to be deemed to be a judgment in rem binding on all the Courts, the letters of administration which partake of the nature of probate could be granted in Mysore.[13]

A probate granted by a foreign competent Court, would be sufficient proof of title of the legatee or the executor, and it is admissible under Section 41 in proof of that right.[14]

The decision of a foreign Court regarding the question of title to the property situated beyond its jurisdiction cannot operate as res judicata in a suit filed on the same question, in an Indian Court.[15]

No Court can pronounce a judgment in rem binding outside the State in which the Court exercises jurisdiction, unless such judgment affects either a thing situate, or a person domiciled, within such State. Thus it was held that a judgment of the Supreme Court at Alexandria as to the validity or otherwise of a will made by a person domiciled at Aden would be binding on the parties so far as the properties in Egypt are concerned; but it had no effect as a judgment in rem in respect of assets outside Egypt.[16]

Where the fact in issue was whether the detenus were foreigners within the meaning of the Foreigners Act, it was held that the prior judgments of Baroda State Court, deciding that they were not Baroda State subjects, was not admissible under Sections 11, 40 or 41 of the Evidence Act.[17] A judgement passed in a suit under Section 92, C.P.C., representative is not one that comes within Section 41. It may be relevant under any other provisions of the Act, but it will not have conclusive effect.[18]

In suits filed u/Section 92, C.P.C., in regard to the appointment of Mutwalli under the Waqf Act in relation to public Waqf[19], and framing schemes in respect of temples where there are a large number of worshippers, [20]and in respect of public trusts of a permanent character and charitable institution[21], the judgments would be in rem by the application of a fiction that the whole world is a party to the suit.

---

11. Mehahem Mesha v. Moses Bunin, AIR 1938 Bom 394; Viswanathan v. Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1; Channalappa v. Abdul Wahab, ILR (1911) 35 Bom 139.
12. Satya v. Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105; Viswanathan v. Ruku-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1; Firm Ramnath Ramachandra v. Firm Bhagatram and Co., AIR 1959 Raj 149 (FB).
13. 49 Mys HCR 188; referred in S. Abdul Wajid v. Gajambal Ramalingam, AIR 1050 Mys 57; See also Mehahem Mesha v. Moses Bunin, AIR 1938 Bom 394.
14. Black Wood & Sons Ltd. v. A.N. Parasuraman, AIR 1959 Mad 421; See also Lakshminan Chetti v. Karuppan Chetti, ILR 6 Mad 273; Nalla Karuppa Settiar v. Md. Iburam Saheb, ILR 20 Mad 112.
15. Duggamma v. Ganeshayya, AIR 1965 Mys 97.
16. Messa v. Messa, (1938) 40 Bom LR 571 : ILR (1938) Bom 529.
17. In re : Antonius Raab, AIR 1950 Bom 101.
18. Anjuman Islamia v. Latafat Ali, AIR 1950 All 109; M. Enayatullah Inbrhri v. Hajji Saleh Mohammad Ahmfd Salt, (1959) 37 Mys LJ 234.
19. Sunni Central Board of Waqf U.P. v. Sirajul Haq Khan, AIR 1954 All 88.
20. Sakharam Daji v. Ganu Raghu, AIR 1921 Bom 297; Sri Ram v. Prabhu Dayal, AIR 1972 Raj 180; Surajgir v. Bramh Narain, AIR 1946 All 148 (decree in a scheme suit would be a bar to a suit claiming hereditary trusteeship.

4. PROBATE JURISDICTION

The word 'probate' is not defined in this Act. But it is defined in Section 2(f) of the Indian Succession Act, as follows:— "Probate means the copy of a will certified under the seal of a Court of Competent Jurisdiction with a grant of administration to the estate of the testator." When a probate is granted it establishes conclusively the legal character of the person to whom, it is granted.

The grant of probate under the Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925) is conclusive proof of the title of the executors and of the genuineness of the will admitted to probate. The conclusiveness of the probate rests upon the declared will of the Legislature as expressed in Sections 227 and 273 of the Indian Succession Act, 1925. The grant of probate is the method which the law specially provides for establishing a will.

The judgment of a probate court regarding the genuineness of the will and the legal character of the widow as an executor of the will is binding in the proceedings in Court exercising other than the testamentay jurisdiction.[22] The judgment of a probate court in respect of a will and on the contentions rasied, is conclusive and it is not open to any civil court (in a subsequent suit) to retry those issues.[23] The action of the probate court in admitting the will to probate, so long as the order remains in force, is conclusive as to the due execution and validity of the will, and a party to those proceedings cannot be permitted to contest the will unless the grant of probate is revoked.[24] Where a person wanted to intervene in the proceedings before the Court having probate jurisdiction, by filing a caveat, and it was refused stating that he had no locus standi, it was held that the order of the probate court was binding on such a person who wanted to intervene, and so he could prefer an appeal against the order granting the probate. He can not challenge it in any other proceedings.[25] The judgment of a probate Court granting probate of a will in favour of the petitioner must be presumed to have been obtained in accordance with the procedure prescribed by law and it is a judgment in rem[26] binding on the whole world and failure to implead other legal heir in probate proceedings would be of no consequence.[27] A judgment of a Court of Probate is conclusive proof that the person to whom letters or probate have been granted has been clothed with the powers and the responsibilities of the deceased and of nothing else, and a question of status decided by a Court of Probate can be raised again.[28]

One can ask for revocation of the grant of probate only on the ground of fraud or want of jurisdiction or its having been granted wrongly by applying to the same court of probate.[29]

The grant of probate or letters of the administration is decisive only of the genuineness of the will and the right of the person to whom the grant is made to represent the estate. It is impossible to say, therefore, that the grant of probate or letters of administrations with a copy of the will annexed would be at all a bar to the determination of any question of title or construction of the will. The fact that third parties may have acquired rights in the properties can be no ground for refusing probate or letters of the administration, as the one cannot prejudice or be prejudiced by the other.[30]

But a stranger may come and assert his title to the property which was not the subject of the trust and dispute the scheme).

21. Ramdas v. Hanumantha Rao, ILR 36 Mad 364; Yara Kalamma v. Naramma, (1864) 2 Mad HCR 276; Abdur Rahim v. Abu Mahomed Barkat Ali, AIR 1928 PC 16; Bower on Res Judicata P. 126; Hassanullah Khan v. Royal Mosque Trust Board (Scheme in charitable trust), AIR 1948 Mad 134.
22. Sheo Parsan Singh v. Ramnandan Prashad Singh, ILR 43 Cal 694 (PC) : AIR 1916 PC 78:43 IA. 91.
23. Brendon v. Sunderabai (Smt.), AIR 1914 Bom 181.
24. Damodarlal Sunderlal v. Gopinath Sunderlal, AIR 1956 Nag 206; See also Alegemmal v. Rakkammal, AIR 1992 Mad 136.
25. Malati v. Dhanpati, AIR 1964 Cal 41; See also Venkatarathnam v. Satyavati, AIR 1924 Mad 578; Maung Hmat v. Ma Htay, AIR 1923 Rang 257; Bakhsh Singh v. Underaj Singh, AIR 1930 Oudh 29.
26. Surinder Kumar v. Gian Chand, AIR 1957 SC 875 : 1958 SCR 548; Annaswami v. Janaki Ammal, AIR 1951 Tra/Co 229; Rukh-ul-mulk S. Abdul Wazid v. Gajambal Ramlingam, AIR 1950 Mys 57.
27. Subaitha Beevi v. Yvonn Thambi, 1999 AIHC 3763 (paras 26 and 20) (Mad).
28. Mi Ngwe Zan v. Mi Shwe Taik, (1910) 1 UBR (1910-13) 61, 63; Mali Muthu Servay v. King-Emperor, ILR (1926) 4 Ran 251 : AIR 1926 Rang 202.
29. Komollochan Dutt v. Nierutten Mundle, ILR (1878) 4 Cal 360; Daropti v. Santi, AIR 1929 Lah 483; Pannalal v. Hansraj Gupta, AIR 1940 Cal 236; Runk-ul-Mulk S. Abdul Wajid v. Gajambal Ramalingam, AIR 1950 Mys 57.
30. John Simon v. Gorge John, AIR 1955 Tra/Co 177.

A finding of a court that a will was not proved is not a judgment within the meaning of Section 41, the only kind of negative judgment contemplated under the section is that which takes away from a person of a legal character which has up to the time subsisted.[31]

However Madras High Court held when the court refuses to grant the probate, it amounts to taking away the legal right from the executors or the legatees who were mentioned in the will and hence the judgment is a judgment in rem.[32]

The judgment of a court of probate is in rem and binds all the world; a judgment in a civil case operates only between the parties to the suit or their privies: so a judgment in rem cannot be revoked or set aside by a civil court judgment. Where there is an allegation of forgery, the proper remedy of a party who wants revocation of a grant of a probate, is only to apply before the probate court under Section 263 of the Indian Succession Act and not to file a civil suit.[33]

However, it was held that under Section 41, the judgment of the probate court is conclusive proof only with respect to the various legal characters or declarations made in those proceedings, insofar as they are within the scope of the proceedings. The probate court has no jurisdiction to decide that a document is forged within the meaning of the Penal Code. So, the declaration that a will was forged cannot be binding on the criminal court.[34]

Mainly, this section is concerned with wills of Indian Nationals and those executed in India. But, in view of Section 228 of the Indian Succession Act, which enables the Court to grant an ancillay probate in the case of foreigners, this section applies to such probate also.

Section 213 of the Indian Succession Act, prescribes a rule of evidence and provides the procedure of requirement of lex fori. The Madras High Court has held that it stands to reason that Section 213 of the Indian Succession Act, cannot be construed as insisting on the production of probate, which no court in India is competent to grant in regard to a will for which probate has been granted by a foreign Court of Competent Jurisdiction; if this were the proper construction of Section 213 of the Succession Act, and there is no doubt as to the correctness of the position, the foreign probate would be sufficient proof of the title of the legatee or the executor, and is admissible in evidence u/Section 41 in proof of that right.[35] Where a deceased is alleged to have executed a will in the United Kingdom where he was working and letters of administration were granted there, it was held that if conclusively proved execution of the will and by operation of res judicata, the matter could not be re-opened in a civil court under Section 213 of the Indian Succession Act.[36]

Where there is a decision of a civil court regarding the proof of the will, it has been held that such decision cannot be res judicata in probate proceedings, as the nature of the judgment in probate court is different.[37]

Section 41 does not exclude proof by secondary evidence, or by evidence of conduct in respect of matters dealt with in that section.[38]

Judgments of probate court in the testamentary suit of the first caveator is a judgment in rem.[39]

5. MATRIMONIAL JURISDICTION

This jurisdiction is conferred on Courts by Special Acts such as:—

(a) The Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869) relating to the divorce of persons professing the Christian religion.

---

31. Kalyan Chand Lalchand v. Sitabai, AIR 1914 Bom 8 (FB).
32. Chinnasami v. Harihar Bhadra, ILR (1893) 16 Mad 380.
33. Kailash Chandra v. Nandakumar, AIR 1944 Cal 385.
34. State v. Yashwant Rao, 1978 CrLJ 1434 (Bom).
35. Blackwood and Sons v. A.N. Parasuraman, AIR 1959 Mad 410, 421.
36. Darshan Singh v. Kuldip Singh, AIR 1979 Punj & Hari 250.
37. Jerbanoo v. Pootlamai, AIR 1955 Bom 447.
38. Satyacharan Das v. Hrishikesh Karar, AIR 1959 Cal 795.
39. Maneklal v. Jagdish, (1970) 72 Bom LR 719.

(b) The Parsi Marriage and Divorce Act (III of 1936) relating to marriage and divorce among the Parsis.

(c) The Native Converts' Marriage Dissolution Act (XXI of 1866).

(d) The Indian Christian Marriage Act (XV of 1872).

(e) Dissolution of Muslim Marriage Act, 1939.

(f) Special Marriage Act, 1954.

(g) Hindu Marriage Act, 1955.

A judgement of a Matrimonial Court, decreeing divorce or nullity of marriage is binding as to the status of the parties concerned. It is conclusive upon all persons that the parties have been divorced and that they are no longer husband and wife.

Prior to the Hindu Marriage Act of 1955 a civil court, exercising its ordinary jurisdiction under Section 9, C.P.C., could entertain suits regarding matters connected with a marriage such as restitution or conjugal rights, or declaration that the marriage was null and void. In such cases the civil court could be considered as a court of matrimonial jurisdiction. But, after the Hindu Marriage Act all these questions are no longer triable by ordinary Civil Courts. The jurisdiction to entertain applications for restitution of conjugal rights, judicial separation, divorce, declaration of nullity, etc., are exclusively given to District Courts or Subordinate Courts which will now be courts of matrimonial jurisdiction when deciding such applications. In Siddaiah v. Penchalamma,[40] it was held that a decision of the courts under the Hindu Marriage Act would come within Section 41 and would be conclusive not only against the parties but against the whole world as it would be a judgement in rem.[41]

A decree of dissolution of marriage under the Madras Hindu (Bigamy Prevention and Divorce) Act, is a judgement in rem.[42]

A suit for separate maintenance was filed by the wife on the ground of cruelty and ill treatment, under Section 18 of the Hindu Adoptions and Maintenance Act. Pending that suit, the husband filed a petition under Section 9 of the Hindu Marriage Act, for restitution of conjugal rights. When the appeal against the decree of maintenance obtained by the wife, was pending, the petition of the husband for restitution of conjugal rights was dismissed, and no appeal was filed. When the wife applied for certified copies of the husband's petition and the order of its dismissal as additional evidence in the appeal, it was held that the order of dismissal of the petition for restitution of conjugal rights had become final and conclusive within the meaning of Section 41, that the certified copies thereof could be admitted as an additional piece of evidence and that it was immaterial that the decision of the matrimonial court was rendered during the pendency of appeal against the decree for maintenance.[43]

A judgment in a maintenance suit decides the right as between the parties and so cannot be treated as a judgement in rem; such judgement cannot be pleaded as a bar to a petition under Section 10 of the Hindu Marriage Act. On the other hand a judgement of the court under the Hindu Marriage Act being a judgement in the exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction would operate as a judgement in rem and binding not only the parties but against the whole word.[44] A finding on the question of adultery, in maintenance proceedings by the wife, does not operate as res judicata in the divorce proceedings started by the husband.[45] The wife obtained an order for maintenance in a civil court. Subsequently, the husband obtained a decree for dissolution for marriage on the ground of desertion, in a civil court. Then, the husband filed an application for cancellation of the maintenance order. It was held that such application cannot be granted because the ground of desertion in civil courts decree was not a 'decision' within the meaning of Section 127(2), Cr.P.C., and the plea of desertion had to be proved independently in the proceedings under Section 127(2), Cr.P.C.[46] Where a husband's petition for restitution of conjugal rights

---

40. 1963 AP 158.
41. See also Subas Manohar Pande v. Shyamrao Pande, AIR 1971 Bom 183.
42. Sunanda v. Subbarao, AIR 1957 AP 424.
43. (1975) 88 Mad LW 445; Survepalli Siddaiah v. Survepalli Penchalamma, AIR 1963 AP 158; Subas v. Manohar AIR 1971 Bom 182.
44. S. Siddaiah v. S. Penchalamma, AIR 1963 AP 158.
45. Champa Gouri v. Jamandas Anichand, (1971) 1 APLJ 230.
46. Ranjit Kumar Pandey v. Swaha Rani Pandey, 1979 CrLJ 1301 (Cal).

was resisted by the wife on the ground of adultery and cruelty, it was held that the findings therein are relevant in the wife's petition for dissolution of marriage, though they do not operate as res judicata.[47] A decree of a civil court for divorce was held to be no bar for granting maintenance under Section 125 Cr.P.C.[48]

Section 41, inter alia provides that a final judgment of a competent court in the exercise of matrimonial jurisdiction is conclusive proof that the legal character which it confers or takes away, accrued or ceased at the time declared in the judgment for that purpose. But the judgment has to be of a competent court, i.e., a court having jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter. Even a judgment in rem is, therefore, open to attack on the grounds specified in Section 44 of the Evidence Act, namely, that it was delivered by a court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion, fraud in any case bearing on jurisdictional facts vitiates all judicial acts whether in rem or in personam.[49]

A judgment in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights is purely a suit between two persons, and such a judgment is not a judgment in rem within the meaning of this section.[50]

In a petition for maintenance by wife, a prior judgment in a petition for restitution of conjugal rights where it was held that the husband had contracted a second marriage, is admissible though it was not a judgment in rem and is binding on the parties.[51]

A judgment under Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act declaring the defendant as not the legally wedded wife of the plaintiff was held to be not relevant in the trial of the husband (plaintiff) for the offence of bigamy under Section 494, I.P.C., as the earlier judgment did not satisfy the ingredients of Section 41.[52]

Judgment of competent court exercising jurisdiction in matrimonial matters is a judgment in rem.[53]

The expressing in Section 41 "not as against any specified persons but absolutely" does not indicate that only the decision relating to status as a wife or husband could be treated as judgment in rem and not any finding relating to the right of the wife to reside separately and claim maintenance. Those words only mean that the finding is of such a nature that persons who are not parties to the proceeding are not entitled to challenge such findings. If the wife is held entitled to live separately in the proceeding for restitution of conjugal rights, it will amount to a declaration of status or legal character, as there is no difference between a decree or order granting judicial separation and the one which declares the right of the wife to live separately and claim maintenance.[54]

Where in a foreign judgment regarding divorce by mutual consent, the Court found that the grounds of divorce were not opposed to public policy in India and the judgment was pronounced by a Court of competent jurisdiction, it was held that presumptions as to conclusiveness of the judgment was available to the parties. The Court confirmed the same.[55]

6. ADMIRALITY JURISDICTION

Admiralty jurisdiction is conferred on several High Courts by Letters Patent. It is also conferred on Mofussil Courts by 12 & 13 Vic. c. 88. The decision of a Prize Court is conclusive upon all the world. A judgment delivered in an ordinary suit in an Admiralty Court is not a judgment in rem binding strangers.

Where the order in an admiralty suit emphatically stated that all the authorities concerned shall be bound by the order, it was an order in rem and findings in such order would be conclusive upon the world and the dispute in the suit could not be referred to arbitration by invoking arbitration clause in insurance cover of the vessel in question.[56]

---

47. Santhammal v. Thangaraj, AIR 1975 Kant 23 (SB).
48. Sukumar Dhibar v. Anjali Dasi (Smt.), 1983 CrLJ 36 (Cal).
49. Satya v. Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105; reversing Teja Singh v. Satya (Smt.), AIR 1971 Punj 80.
50. Ma Po Khin v. Ma Shin, ILR (1933) 11 Rang 198 : AIR 1933 Rang 250.
51. Sangawwa v. Shankarappa, AIR 1992 Kant 311.
52. 1970 Cut LJ 192.
53. Suhas Manohar Pande v. Manohar Shamrao Pande, AIR 1971 Bom 182; Manku v. Krishte, ILR 1967 Guj 1003.
54. (1975) 88 Mad WN 445; Sunanda v. Subba Rao, AIR 1957 AP 424; Duggamma v. Ganeshayya, AIR 1965 Mys 97.
55. Roy Andre Sales de Andrade v. State of Goa, 1996 AIHC 99 (para 4).
56. Osprey Underwriting Agencies Ltd. v. O.N.G.C. Ltd., AIR 1999 Bom 173 (para 6).

7. INSOLVENCY JURISDICTION

The jurisdiction is conferred on the High Courts by the Presidency-Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909) and on Mofussil Courts by the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920). Orders passed in insolvency bind strangers as well.

In Exparte Learoyd In re Foulds (10 Ch D. 3) it was held that the adjudication that a person had committed the act of bankruptcy is conclusive under the English Bankruptcy Act. The Privy Council, in Md. Siddique Yousuf v. Official Assignee of Calcutta[57] overruling the decision in Official Assignee Madras v. O.R.M.O.R.S. Firm,[58] held that the principle in Exparte Learoyd would apply even to cases under the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act. The Privy Council observed: "No doubt it is anomalous that a decision affecting the right of a third party should be conclusively determined against him in his absence, and even without notice to him, but the words of the section and the importance of maintaining the status of the debtor as determined by an order of adjudication, and the necessity of securing the stability of the administration of the debtor's estate once his status has been fixed, have been justly held to outweigh the consideration of hardship to the private citizen. (Page 78 of 70 IA 93).

An adjudication of a person as an insolvent has the effect of taking away from that person his legal character of being not insolvent. Such order is covered by Section 41, when, on appeal, the order of adjudication is set aside the effect of the appellate court judgment is to declare that person to be entitled to the legal character of being not insolvent, and should be deemed to fall within the ambit of Section 41. It is, thus, a judgment in rem only in respect of matters before the insolvency court. Where the question was whether the gift by a person against whom insolvency proceedings have been instituted, was made with a view to defraud and delay the creditors, had not come up for adjudication before the insolvency court, the judgment of the insolvency court could not operate as a judgment in rem in that respect. The judgment was relevant only to show that the donor was not insolvent at the time the proceedings to adjudicate him insolvent took place. As the findings of an insolvency court, given six years after the gift was made, related to the time when the proceedings to adjudicate the donor as insolvent took place, and not to the state of affairs as they existed six years before that finding was given, they could not form a good basis for upsetting the finding of facts, of the courts below which ran contrary to such findings.[59]

The Madras High Court has in a Full Bench case held that the judgment of a Court exercising insolvency jurisdiction, admitting proof of an alleged debt of a creditor and declaring him to be a creditor in the insolvency, is not a judgment in rem since it neither confers upon nor takes away from him any "legal character", nor declares him "to be entitled to any specific thing, not as against any specified person but absolutely', within the meaning of this section.[60]

A debtor was adjudged as an insolvent, on an application by one of the creditors. It was held that it was not open to any other person to challenge the adjudication on the ground that the debt owing to the creditor on whose application the debtor was adjudicated insolvent was not genuine. The adjudication being a judgment in rem is final and binding on all.[61]

A judgment of a High Court, declaring a person to be a partner of an involvent firm would not operate as a judgment in rem under Section 41.[62] A decision rendered in a proceeding arising out of the creditors' suit cannot be brought in under this section.[63]

8. LEGAL CHARACTER

The expression "legal character" is not defined in this Act. The declaration of legal character imports a person's status which would be known to all the world, and is different from a declaration of a person's legal right; it is something more than the declaration of a mere right.[64]

---

57. AIR 1943 PC 130 : 70 IA 93.

58. 1927 Mad 526.

59. Amar Kaur v. Shiv Karan, AIR 1965 Punj 206.

60. Punjab National Bank v. Balikram, AIR 1940 Cal 225, (1931) 54 Mad 601 FB.

61. Bajirao, Bhawanrao v. Bansilal, Ganeshlal, AIR 1963 Bom 212; relying on 1943 PC 130 : Md. Siddique Yousuf v. Official Assignee, Calcutta, 70 IA 93.

62. Ibrahim Hazi Issac v. Md. Hazi Issac, AIR 1951 Sau 37; In re : Venkataramanayya, AIR 1931 Mad 441 (SB); Official Assignee of Madras v. Official Assignee of Rangoon, AIR 1924 Mad 662.

63. S. Gopala Krishna Iyer v. Subbaraya Iyer, AIR 1972 Mad 269.

64. In re : Venkataramanayya, AIR 1931 Mad 441 (SB), Official Assignee of Madras v. Official Assignee of Rangoon, AIR 1924 Mad 662; Ramakrishna v. Narayana, ILR 39 Mad 80; Gangadhar v. Umasoondery, 7 WR 347; Kanhya Lall v. Radha Churn, (1867) 7 WR 338 (FB); Sriram v. Prabhu Dayal, AIR 1972 Raj 180.

Declaration that a person is the exclusive proprietor of a property and others have no share does not amount to a declaration of any party's "legal character" or "status" as against the entire world. It is only a decision about a mere right.[65]

Relevancy and effect of judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in Section 41.

S. 42. Judgments, orders or decrees other than those mentioned in Section 41, are relevant if they relate to matters of a public nature relevant to the enquiry; but such judgments, orders or decrees are not conclusive proof of that which they state.

ILLUSTRATION

A sues B for trespass on his land. B alleges the existence of a public right of way over the land, which A denies.

The existence of a decree in favour of the defendant, in a suit by A against C for a trespass on the same land, in which C alleged the existence of the same right of way, is relevant, but it is not conclusive proof that the right of way exists.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Under this section judgments relating to matters of a public nature are declared relevant, whether between the same parties or not. It forms an exception to the general rule that no one shall be affected or prejudiced by judgments to which he is not a party or privy. The exception just stated is allowed in favour of verdicts, judgments, and other adjudications upon subjects of a public nature, such as customs, prescriptions, tolls, boundaries, between parishes, counties, or manors, rights of ferry, liabilities to repair roads, or seawalls, moduses, and the like. In all cases of this nature, as evidence of reputation will be admissible, adjudications—which for this purpose are regarded as a species of reputation—will also be received, and this, too, whether the parties in the second suit be those who litigated the first, or be utter strangers. The effect, however, of the adjudication, when admitted, will so far vary that, if the parties be the same in both suits, they will be bound by the previous judgment but, if the litigants in the second suit be strangers to the parties in the first the judgment, though admissible, will not be conclusive.[66]

Section 40 admits as evidence all judgments inter partes which would operate as res judicata in a second suit. Section 41 admits judgments in rem as evidence in all subsequent suit where the existence of the right is in issue, whether between the same parties or not. And this section admits all judgments not as res judicata, but as evidence, although they may not be between the same parties, provided they relate to matters of public nature relevant to the enquiry.[67]

"A judgment may be of two kinds. If it is a judgment in rem, that is a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction determining the status of a person or thing, or the disposition of a thing (as distinct from a particular interest in it of a party to the litigation), it is conclusive of the facts or state of things actually decided or effected..... The conclusiveness of judgments in rem of the matters actually decided is against all persons, whether parties, privies or strangers to the decision.[68]

Other judgments have the effect that the parties to them, and their privies, are prevented from denying what the judgement itself establishes, and the grounds upon which it was founded. Save to prove their existence, date and consequences, such judgments are inadmissible for or against strangers (i.e. those which are not in rem. Commonly referred to as judgments in personam or judgments inter partes).

---

65. Banslal v. Joint Director of Consolidation, 1968 All LJ 80.
66. TAYLOR, 12th End., S. 1683, p. 1058.
67. Gujju Lall v. Fateh Lal, ILR (1880) 6 Cal 171, FB.
68. Lazarus Barlow v. Regent Estates Co. Ltd., (1949) 2 KB 465 CA.

The rule that a judgment in personam is inadmissible against strangers is subject to the following exceptions in addition to those already mentioned: (1) when the judgment determines a question of public right and is admissible as evidence or reputation; (2) in bankruptcy proceedings; (3) in administration proceedings; and (4) to an extent in patent actions."[69]

In PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (15th Ed. (2000), para 38-82, p. 1045) it is observed: Judgments and verdicts upon public or general rights are not only conclusive between parties and privies, but prima facie evidence of the matter decided, between strangers or a party and a stranger. They are not, however, conclusive in the latter cases."

PHIPSON also states: "The rule is now established that, on questions of public or general, but not of private, interest, the verdict, judgment or order, even inter alias, of a competent tribunal whether superior court, duchy, manor or survey court, or statutory commission, is admissible, not, however, as evidence or any particular fact, but as an adjudication upon the state of facts and question of usage at the time."[70]

2. MATTERS OF PUBLIC NATURE

The word 'public nature' means such of those matters in which public are interested and it does not deal with a matter where individuals are interested. Matters like custom, regarding succession to the properties in a particular community.[71]

The rule that the judgment in personam is not admissible against strangers is subject to the exception when the judgment determines a question of public right and is admissible as evidence of reputation. The judgment relating to matters of public nature would only be relevant under this section not on the principle of res judicata but as evidence, whether it be between the same parties or not.[72]

The Privy Council observed: "Their Lordships are of opinion that, although the predecessor of the Raja was no party to that litigation, it was competent to use the judgment as evidence showing the rent paid for the possession at and prior to that date, now nearly eight years ago. Taken with the other evidence in the case the respondents have thus established possession at a uniform rent for so long a period as to lead to the inference that the tenure was and is of a permanent nature."[73]

The Calcutta High Court observed; "It is clear from the decision of the Privy Council in[74], that, under certain circumstances, and in certain cases, the judgment in a previous suit to which one of the parties in a subsequent suit is not a party may be admissible in evidence for certain purposes and with certain objections in the subsequent suit."[75]

The Privy Council referring to police orders made to prevent breaches of peace observed: "This necessarily makes them evidence of the following facts all of which appear from the orders themselves namely who the parties to the dispute were what the land in dispute was and who was entitled to retain possession..... But they are not otherwise admissible, unless they are made so by Section 13 of the Indian Evidence Act. Where a judgment is admissible, it is conclusive evidence for or against all persons, whether parties privies or strangers, of its own existence, date and legal effect of it, as distinguished from the accuracy of the decision rendered.[76]

The previous judgment is not admissible for the purpose of relying upon the appreciation of evidence, though it is admissible to show the parties and the decision.[77]

---

69. HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND, 4th Edn., Vol. 17 (para 194), page 141.
70. PHIPSON 15th Edn. (2000), para 35-42, page 855.
71. Bai Baiji v. Bai Santok, ILR (1894) 20 Bom 53 or a customary right in land tenures; Dalgish v. Gazabtar Hussani, 23 Cal 427 PC or a custom of pre-emption; Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palak Dhari, ILR (1889) 12 All 1 (FB) are matters of a public nature. See also Ram Ranyan Chakrabarti v. Ramnarayan Singh, 22 Cal 534 PC ancient possession).
72. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palak Dhari, ILR (1889) 12 All 1 (FB).
73. Ramranjan Chakerbaty v. Ramnarayan Singh, 22 Cal 533 (PC).
74. ILR 22 Cal 533 (PC).
75. Tepukhan v. Rajani Mohandas, ILR (1898) 25 Cal 522 (FB).
76. Dinomoni Chaudharani v. Brojomohini Chaudharani, ILR 29 Cal 187 (PC).
77. Kharkhan v. State of U.P., (1965) 2 SCJ 546, 549 : AIR 1965 SC 83.

The question whether a judgment in personam can have the force of a judgment in rem was dealt with in Srinivas Iyengar v. Arayar Srinivas Iyengar[78], it was observed: "Turning to the Evidence Act, I have already pointed out that Sections 41 and 42 draw a distinction between judgments in rem and judgments in personam and it seems to me to be clear from the sections that a judgment which does not fall within Section 41 can only be evidence but cannot be used for the purpose of preventing the other side from proving facts which he sets up. It is not open to import considerations as to convenience in dealing with matters which have been codified and dealt with by Evidence Act, however attractive the theory may be and however much one would like to have the principle embodied by the Legislature in the Codes. It is no doubt true that the decisions of this Court which adopt the view of BIGELOW as to judgments in personam creating an estoppel as against strangers."[79]

All judgments rendered in suits of representative character under Section 92, C.P.C. are judgments in rem, and they are of public nature[80] but not a judgment deciding whether a temple is a private or a public one and therefore in a case between a third party and one of the parties to earlier proceedings the said judgment can be treated as a precedent inasmuch as it decides the nature of the temple.[81] If a custom has been recognised by any judgment, it may be proved by the production of that judgment or a certified copy of it; and it would be relevant under this section as such custom or usage was recognised judicially, though, the judgment is not conclusive proof of the custom.[82] A decision as regards the existence or non-existence of a custom is a good piece of evidence in other cases.[83]

The Privy Council held: "When a custom or usage, whether in regard to a tenure or a contract or a family right is repeatedly brought to the notice of the Court of the country, the court may hold that custom or usage to be introduced into the law without the necessity of proof in each individual case. It becomes in the end truly a matter of process and pleading."[84] In a later case, the Privy Council in Mst. Subhani v. Nawab[85] observed: "A judicial decision, though of comparatively recent date, may contain on its records, evidence of specific instances of succession by daughters in preference to collaterals, which are of sufficient antiquity to be of value in rebutting the presumption. In such a case, the value of the decision arises from the fact not that it is relevant under Secs. 13 and 42, Evidence Act, as forming in itself a 'transaction by which the custom in question was recognised, etc.' but that it contains, on its records, a number of specific instances relating to the relevant custom. To ignore such judicial decisions merely on the basis of the riwaj-i-am, would add greatly to the perplexities and difficulties of proving a custom."[86] Where an issue was finally determined at the highest level by the Privy Council, the same could not be re-examined though the plaintiff, not being a party to that proceeding, the same was not binding on him.[87]

Where the rights of the villagers of certain villages to graze their cattle in a particular disputed land were recognised by the order of a superintendent of the former Mandi estate during the settlement operations, it was held relevant for proving their customary right.[88]

It is not obligatory that a judgment, dealing with the question of custom, should have been pronounced before the commencement of any controversy now on hand, though the weight to be attached to it may be a different matter.[89]

---

78. ILR (1910) 33 Mad 483.
79. See also Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmad Badsha Sahib, AIR 1921 Mad 248 (FB).
80. See cases dealt with under Sec. 41.
81. K.M. Rathinam Nadar v. Arulmigu Hanumantharayar Bhajnai Madam, 1996 AIHC 5469 (para 18) (Mad), dissenting from Ramaji Batanji v. Manohar Chintaman, AIR 1961 Bom 169.
82. Raghunath v. Ram Pratap Ramchander, AIR 1935 Sind 38; Lachman Rai v. Akbar Khan, ILR (1877) 1 All 440.
83. Ram Kishore Jaiswal v. B. Kavindara Karayan, AIR 1955 All 59; Amarchand v. (Mst.) Shankari, AIR 1956 Raj 51; Maharaja of Kolhapur v. Sundaram Ayyar, 1925 Mad 497; Shimbunath v. Gayan Chand, ILR (1894) 16 All 379.
84. Ramarao v. Raja of Pittapur, AIR 1918 PC 81 : 49 IA 148, 154.
85. AIR 1941 PC 21 : 68 IA 1.
86. See also Amarchand v. Shankari, AIR 1956 Raj 51; Suganchand Bhai Ramchand v. Mangibai Gulabchand, AIR 1942 Bom 185; Baiji v. Bai Santok, ILR 20 Bom 53; Madhub Chander Nath Biswash v. Tomee Bewah, (1867) 7 WR 210.
87. V. Shankarayya v. N.S. Pattadadevaru, AIR 1995 SC 2187 (para 9), reversing AIR 1976 Kant 103.
88. Tula v. Sadh, AIR 1962 HP 28.
89. Amarchand v. (Mst.) Shankari, AIR 1956 Raj 51.

A judgment not inter partes, though not coming within Sections 40 to 42, would be relevant for certain purposes under Section 13, where it is relied on to establish a right or custom which was previously created, claimed, modified, recognised, asserted or denied.[1]

Even uncontested judgments would be very good proof of any alleged custom, because it carries greater weight of the custom, and less probability to controvert it.[2]

Questions relating to Muslim Waqfs are matters of public nature within the meaning of Section 42.[3]

The Madras High Court, held that though a judgment is not inter partes, if it declares that a particular trust is not of public nature, but only a private trust, it is admissible under Section 42. It was observed: "Though the first defendant alone, among the present parties, was involved in that litigation and the plaintiff was not a party thereto, it should be deemed as if the first defendant represented the descendants of the founder when he contested the Endowments Board and wanted a decision that the trust was a private trust."[4]

Where the trustees of a temple obtained a decree against certain landowners, for recovering certain amounts as due to the temple on an alleged right, it was held that in other suits against other land owners in which the trustees claimed under the same right, the previous decrees are relevant as they were matters of public nature.[5]

The principle has been extended to cases where the fixation of value of the lands are in question. The value of the lands which are contiguous, and of similarly situated lands, when fixed in other judgments, has been held to be relevant as a good piece of evidence in other cases.[6]

Where in a land acquisition case, the High Court gave directions to the government, by quashing the previous order of the Government, and when the Government, without following the directions, gave a fresh notification for acquisition, it was held that the previous judgment of the High Court was admissible, as the public were interested in challenging the basis for the acquisition.[7]

Even compromise decrees have been held to be relevant.[8]

3. ADMISSIBILITY OF RECITALS

A judgment in a criminal case is not a matter of a public nature and is not admissible in evidence in civil proceedings under this section[9] but it still holds the field of proof by corroboration.[10] The recitals in an inquest report cannot by themselves be read as substantive evidence and cannot be admitted under Section 42.[11] Where discovery panchnama witnesses turned hostile, though admitted their signatures which were identified by the Police Officer who testified that they had signed over it in his presence, it was held that the order of the Court refusing to exhibit it on the ground of not proved was improper.[12]

A Coroner inquest which is aimed at inquiring into the cause of death of a person, whether, by accident, homicide or suicide, is only to satisfy the public conscience that an unnatural death was not hushed up, and it is not a judgment or even an opinion of the Coroner.[13]

Where a Sub-Divisional Officer ordered restoration of possession to an applicant under Section 12A of West Bengal Bargadars Act, for purpose of cultivation, it was held that the order was relevant only to

---

1. Special Land Acquisition Officer, Bombay v. Lakhamsi, AIR 1960 Bom 78; Mahabir Mahton v. Sonmati Kaur, AIR 1964 Pat 66.
2. Shamdass v. Moolo Bai, AIR 1926 Lah 210; Mariyam Sultan v. Karam Illahi, AIR 1947 Peshawar 39.
3. Misbdhuddin v. Vidya Sagar, AIR 1935 Lah 64.
4. Narayanaswami v. Balasundaram, AIR 1953 Mad 750; See also Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmed Badhsa Sahib, AIR 1921 Mad 248 (FB).
5. Umaswamy v. Appalu, ILR 12 Mad 9.
6. Collector of Bilaspur v. Lachhman, AIR 1965 HP 18; Madanmohan Burman v. Secretary of State, 1925 Cal 481.
7. Ram Prasad v. State of U.P., AIR 1988 All 309; for other cases under Land Acquisition see secs. 40 and 13.
8. Abdul Karim v. Shiv Narain, AIR 1952 Punj 356.
9. Bishen Das v. Ram Labhaya, (1915) PR No. 106 of 1915 : 32 IC 18.
10. Sardar Prahlad Singh v. Syed Ali Musa Raza, 1997 AIHC 3122 (para 16) (AP).
11. Raghava Kurup v. State of Kerala, AIR 1965 Ker 44.
12. Koli Arshi Lila v. State of Gujarat, 1999 Cr LJ 2595 (para 13) (Guj).
13. Emperor v. Bhagwan Das, AIR 1946 Bom 184; Emperor v. Md. Yusuf, AIR 1933 Bom 479.

the extent that, by virtue of that order, the applicant got restoration of possession, and it could not be used for the purpose of supporting a finding that he was a bargadar, on the basis of a recital therein.[14]

Judgments, etc., other than those mentioned in Sections 40 to 42, when relevant

S. 43. Judgments, orders or decrees, other than those mentioned in Sections 40, 41 and 42, are irrelevant, unless the existence of such judgment, order or decree, is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provision of this Act.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A and B separately sue C for a libel which reflects upon each of them. C in each case says that the matter alleged to be libellous is true, and the circumstances are such that it is probably true in each case, or in neither.

A obtains a decree against C for damages on the ground that C failed to make out his justification. The fact is irrelevant as between B and C.

(b) A prosecutes B for adultery with C, A's wife.

B denies that C is A's wife, but the Court convicts B of adultery.

Afterwards, C is prosecuted for the bigamy in marrying B during A's life-time. C says that she never was A's wife.

The judgment against B is irrelevant as against C.

(c) A prosecutes B for stealing a cow from him. B is convicted.

A afterwards sues C for the cow, which B had sold to him before his conviction. As between A and C, the judgment against B is irrelevant.

(d) A has obtained a decree for the possession of land against B. C, B's son, murders A in consequence.

The existence of the judgment is relevant, as showing motive for a crime.

(e) A is charged with theft and with having been previously convicted of theft. The previous conviction is relevant as a fact in issue.

(f) A is tried for the murder of B. The fact that B prosecuted A for libel and that A was convicted and sentenced is relevant under Section 8 as showing the motive for the fact in issue.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope	...	531	4. Judgments regarding market value	...	538
2. Judgment in Criminal cases	...	535	5. Other cases	...	539
3. Judgment in Civil cases	...	538

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section expressly contemplates cases in which judgments, which are not admissible under Section 40, 41 or 42, would be admissible under other sections of the Act. The cases contemplated by this section are those where a judgment is used not as res judicata or as evidence more or less binding upon an opponent by reason of the adjudication which it contains. But the cases referred to in this section are such as the section itself illustrates, viz., when the fact of any particular judgment having been given is a matter to be proved in the case. As for instance, if 'A' sued 'B' for slander, in saying that he had been convicted of forgery and 'B' justified upon the ground that the alleged slander was true, the conviction of 'A' for forgery would be a fact to be proved by 'B' like any other fact in the case, and quite irrespective of whether 'A' had been actually guilty of the forgery or not. This would be one of the many cases alluded to in this section.[15]

14. Tarendra Nath Das v. Khirode Chandra Das, ILR (1958) 2 Cal 480.

To have the effect of res judicata, a judgment inter partes alone can be admitted in evidence, but for other purposes where judgments are sought to be used to show the conduct of the parties, or show particular instances of the exercise of a right, or admissions made by ancestors, or how the property was dealt with previously, they may be used under Section 11 or 13 as exceptions recognised under this section, as relevant evidence. That is to say, their existence, though not their correctness, might be proved. Except where they are judgments in rem or where they relate to public matters, judgments not inter partes have been always held to be not res judicata, but they cannot be wholly excluded for other purposes insofar as they explain nature of possession, or throw light on the motives or conduct of parties or identify property.[16]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, (15th Edn. (2000), Para 38-02, Page 987) states that "Judgments being public transactions of a solemn nature are presumed to be faithfully recorded. Every judgment is therefore, conclusive evidence for or against all persons (whether parties, privies or strangers) of its own existence, date and legal effect, as distinguished from the accuracy of the decision rendered. In other words, the law attributes unerring varity to the substantive, as opposed to the judicial, portions of the record."

It was observed: "Section 43 of the Indian Evidence Act declares that judgments, orders and decrees other than those mentioned in Sections 40, 41 and 42 are of themselves irrelevant, that is, in the sense that they can have any effect or operation mentioned in those recited sections qua judgments, orders and decrees, but I do not take this to make them absolutely inadmissible when they are the best evidence of something that may be prove aliunde".[17]

The Privy Council observed: "The Indian Evidence Act, does not make a finding of fact arrived at on the evidence before the court in one case, evidence of that fact in another case."[18]

It was held by the Privy Council that judgment was admissible under the provisions of Section 13 and Section 43 as establishing a particular transaction in which partibility of the Pandra estate was asserted and recognized by the Court. The reasons upon which the judgment is founded are not part of the transaction and cannot be so regarded nor can any finding of fact, there come to, other than the transaction itself, be relevant in another subsequent suit in a case in which the parties are different.[19]

It is not the correctness of the previous decision but the fact that there was a decision that is to be established by the production of the judgment under this section.[20]

SIR GEORGE RANKIN in Maharaja Sir Kesho Prashad Singh v. Bahuria Mst. Bhagjoigna Kuer[21] observed: "Whether based upon sound general principle or merely supported by reasons of convenience, the rule that so far as regards the truth of the matter decided a judgment is not admissible evidence against one who is a stranger to the suit, has long been accepted as a general rule in English law. Exceptions there are, but the general rule is not in doubt. A well-known statement of it was given by SIR WILLIAMS DE GREY (afterwards Lord WALSINGHAM) in Duchess of Kingston's case[22] and a striking instance of its application by the Board may be seen in Natal Land and Colonisation Co. v. Good[23]. That the same rule applies in India, though it is not expressly formulated in these terms, and may be seen from a reference to Section 43, Evidence Act, 1872, and the illustrations given thereunder."[24]

---

15. Gujju Lall v. Fatteh Lall, ILR (1880) 6 Cal 171, 192 (FB). See Secretary of State v. Syed Ahmed Badsha, ILR (1921) 44 Mad 778, (FB); Indar Singh v. Fateh Singh, ILR (1920) 1 Lah 540.
16. Lakshman v. Amrit, ILR (1900) 24 Bom 591, 598, 599 : 2 Bom LR 386.
17. Collector of Gorakhpur v. Palakdhari Singh, ILR 12 All 1 (FB).
18. Kumar Gopika Raman v. Atalsingh, 56 IA 119, 125 : AIR 1929 PC 99.
19. Govindanarayan v. Shyamlal, AIR 1939 PC 89 : 58 IA 125, 136.
20. Ram Ranjan v. Ram Narayan (PC), (1894) 22 IA 60 : ILR 22 Cal 533; Bhitoo Kunwar v. Kesho Prasad, 19 All 277 (PC); Dinomoni v. Brojo Mohini, (1901) 29 IA 24: ILR 29 Cal 187 (PC); Ramprakas v. Anand, 43 Cal 707 (PC); Kashinath v. Jagath Kishore, 20 Cal WN 643 : 23 Cal LJ 583; Tripura Seethapati v. Rokhan Venkanna, 1922 Mad 71; Natal Land Co. v. Good, 16 WR 1086.
21. 1937 PC 69, 74.
22. (1776) 2 Howells State Trial 538.
23. (1868) 2 PC 121.
24. See also Muneshwari v. Jugal Mohini Dasi, AIR 1952 Cal 368; Maroti v. Jaganuadhudas, AIR 1939 Nag 72 : ILR (1940) Nag 699.

The judgment is not admissible to prove the truth of the fact which it states or the reasons given for arriving at a decision on a particular fact; however, if a right of a party has already been concluded by a previous judgment, that fact can be proved by the production of the judgment, as the existence of the judgment itself is relevant. Where a decree of the Court not relevant under Sections 40 to 42, was a fact in issue and, as a matter of fact, an issue was specifically raised about its existence and also its effect on the suit, it was held that the prior decree was relevant under Section 43.[25]

The existence of a judgment, its date or its legal consequence, as distinguished from the accuracy or truth of the decision rendered, can be proved by the production of the original record or of a certified copy of it as contemplated in Section 76 of the Evidence Act, and it would be conclusive evidence against all the world. But as to the recitals in a judgment, they are not admissible under this section, though they may be admissible under any other provision of the Evidence Act.[26]

The Privy Council has held that the findings in a civil proceeding are not binding in a subsequent prosecution founded upon the same or similar allegations.[27] Technically, it is inadmissible as it is not between the same parties, the parties in the prosecution being the State on the one hand, and the accused on the other, and in the civil suit the accused and some third party; but the substantial ground is that the issues in a civil and a criminal proceeding are not identical and the burden of proof rests in each case on different shoulders.[28]

This section contemplates cases in which judgments would be admissible either as facts in issue or as relevant fact under any other section of the Act. Thus a judgment is admissible to prove that a right was asserted or denied etc., as contemplated in Section 13 of the Act. The actual decision in a previous judgment however, cannot, be used as evidence for a decision on the points which are in issue in a different case, except as provided by Sections 40 to 42 of the Act.[29]

If the previous judgment deals with a right asserted or denied or recognized, it would be relevant under Section 43, but when it deals with a transaction consisting of certain facts it would be relevant under Section 13.[30] Where the claim was in regard to a customary right, it was held that the facts in the previous judgment would be relevant under Sections 13 and 43.[31]

Where the Deputy Registrar of Co-operative Societies gave a finding in his order about the liability of one A and in pursuance of it a bungalow belonging to A was attached and sold and in a subsequent suit filed by A's son for partition of joint family property and possession of his separate share, it was contended that the debt incurred by A was avyavaharika and in support of that contention the son sought to produce the order of the Deputy Registerar, it was held that the opinion in the order of the Deputy Registrar as to the nature of the liability of A could not be used as evidence, in the suit, to determine whether the debt was avyavaharika or not. The order was not admissible under Section 43 to prove the truth of the facts therein, but may be relevant to prove the existence of the judgment.[32]

Where the question was whether a trade mark is identical or deceptively similar to the trade mark of the opponent and when the opponent cited judgments in which parties, facts and trade marks were entirely different, it was held that such judgments or facts cannot be used against the applicant.[33] A party by filing a previous judgment cannot rely on admission of certain facts contained therein, in a subsequent suit.[34] A finding regarding the right in a previous suit not inter partes is not admissible in a subsequent

---

25. Hulasi v. Mohan, ILR (1960) 10 Raj 94; see also Maroti Laxman Goshti Lachhandas v. Jagganath Das, AIR 1939 Nag 72.
26. Tripurana Seethapati v. Rokkan Venkanna, 42, MLJ 324 (FB) : AIR 1922 Mad 71; Seethapathirao Dora v. Venkanna Dora, ILR 45 Mad 332 (FB) : AIR 1922 Mad 71; Trailokyanath Das v. Emperor, ILR (1931) 59 Cal 136 : AIR 1932 Cal 293. Raghunath Singh v. Emperor, ILR (1935) 15 Pat 336; Abdul Latif v. Abdul Hag, 28 Cal WN 62 : AIR 1924 Cal 240; Kashinath Pal v. Jagat Kishore, 23 Cal LJ 583.
27. Emperor v. Nazir Ahmad, AIR 1945 PC 18.
28. Gogun Chunder Ghose v. The Empress, (1881) 6 Cal 247, 248.
29. Ramadhar v. Janki Choudhary, AIR 1956 Pat 49.
30. Mahabir Mahtou v. Sonmati Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 66.
31. Ramchandra Singh v. Partap Singh, AIR 1965 Raj 217.
32. S.M. Jakati v. Borkar, AIR 1959 SC 282 : (1959) SCR 1384 at 1390.
33. Prem-N-Mayor v. Registrar of Trade Marks, AIR 1969 Cal 80.
34. Sitlabakhsh Singh v. Surendra Bikram Singh, AIR 1953 All 378; Dundbahadur Singh v. Durga Prasad, AIR 1953 Pat 346.

suit, as the right cannot be proved on the basis of such finding.[35] Judgments not inter partes do not come under Sections 40 to 42 and hence findings therein, about the title to and possession of property would be irrelevant in a suit for injuction restraining the defendant from interfering with plaintiff's possession of the property.[36]

2. JUDGMENT IN CRIMINAL CASES

A judgment in a criminal case cannot be received in a civil action to establish the truth of the facts upon which it is rendered. The judgment of a criminal court may be relevant only to show that there was a trial resulting in conviction or acquittal.[37] Where a plea of private defence was raised in another case, wherein a judgment was delivered it was held such judgment is not relevant where such plea did not give rise to or necessarily involve the same issue which required the same evidence for purpose of proof.[38]

Where in a proceeding for revocation of the grant of probate under Section 263, Succession Act, the question was whether the son of the testator murdered him, it was held that it cannot be assumed on the basis of a previous judgment of a Criminal Court convicting the son of the murder of his father and sentencing him to transportation for life, that the son was the murderer of the testator. The judgment of the Criminal Court is relevant only to show that there was such a trial resulting in the conviction and sentence of the son, it is not evidence of the fact that the son was the murderer of the testator, that question has to be decided on evidence.[39]

Decision of a Criminal Court cannot be relied on as one binding in civil action[40] but it still holds the field of proof by corroboration.[41] The finding in a Criminal Court that the decree holder did not obtain delivery of possession would not be binding upon the parties in the Civil Court.[42] A Criminal Court judgment was held admissible in evidence in the civil proceedings only for the purpose of showing that there was a criminal case with identical facts ending in an acquittal.[43]

Where a civil right was raised in a dispute before a Criminal Court, it was held that it would be proper for the Criminal Court to take the decree of a Civil Court into consideration as Section 43 makes the existence of the judgment relevant, if covered by any other section of the Evidence Act.[44]

Where there was a suit for damages for malacious prosecution, it was held that the earlier judgment of a Criminal Court discharging the accused/plaintiff cannot be used to prove the contents of the First Information Report and the findings are not admissible in evidence.[45] But the judgment is conclusive for the purpose of showing that the prosecution terminated in favour of the plaintiff.[46] In deciding a suit for damages arising from a malacious prosecution, the judge treated the judgment of the Magistrate and evidence given before the Magistrate, in the prosecution complained of, as evidence in the case. And looking at the judgment of the Magistrate, as being a record of the facts found, the Judge came to the conclusion that the plaintiff was not present at the time when the alleged offence was committed; and decreed the plaintiff's claim. It was held that it was not permissible to the Judge to utilize the judgment of the Magistrate in the way he did; and that this section or S. 13 or S. 11 did not apply to the case.[47] In a

---

35. Hira Lal v. Hari Narain, 1964 All 302; Khub Narain Missir v. Ramachandra Narain Dass, AIR 1951 Pat 340
36. Gopal Krishna Gupthan v. Ammalu Ammal, AIR 1972 Ker 196.
37. Anil Behari Ghosh v. Latikabala Dasi, AIR 1955 SC 566; Purnima Debya v. Nandalal, AIR 1932 Pat 105; Ramadhar Chaudhury v. Janaki Chaudhary, 1956 Pat 49; Onkarmal v. Banwarilal, AIR 1962 Raj 127; Raj Kumar Debi v. Bama Sundari Debi, ILR (1896) 23 Cal 610 at 613; Ramlal v. Tula Ram, AIR (1881) 4 All 97.
38. Chandra Bhal v. State of U.P., (1971) 3 SCC 983 : 1970 SCR (Cri) 387.
39. Anil Behari Ghosh v. Latikabala Dassi (Smt.), AIR 1955 SC 566 : 1955 SCJ 578, 585
40. Krishnan Asari v. Adaikalam, AIR 1966 Mad 425. See also S. Gurcharan Singh v. S. Kuldip Singh, 1999 AIHC 4769 (para 17) (J&K).
41. Sardar Prahlad Singh v. Syed Ali Musa Raza, 1997 AIHC 3122 (para 16) (AP).
42. Natulal Ramaprasad v. Balakrishna Jugal Kishore, AIR 1955 Nag 269.
43. Banta Singh v. National Coal Development Corpn., AIR 1968 Pat 300; Perumal v. Devarajan, AIR 1974 Mad 14.
44. Varadaraja Chettiar v. Swami Maistry, AIR 1948 Mad 49 : (1947) 2 MLJ 179; Balakees v. K.C. Jacob, (1964) 2 MLJ 583; Midnapure Zamindari Co. Ltd. v. Naresh Narayan Roy, AIR 1922 PC 241; Jang Bahadur Singh v. Nazimul Haque, 1947 Pat 245, Raj Nandan Missir V. Cheddi Thakur, AIR 1932 Pat 185.
45. Sri Niwas Shukla v. Dinbsh Dal Dobey, 1978 All LJ 1391; Kutumba Rao v. P. Venkataramayya, AIR 1951 Mad 344.
46. Jogendra v. Lingaraj Patra, AIR 1970 Ori 91; Shubrati v. Shamsuddin, AIR 1928 All 337; Pedda Venkatapathi v. G. Balappa, AIR 1933 Mad 429; Kutumba Rao v. Venkataramayya, AIR 1951 Mad 344.
47. Gulabchand v. Chunilal, (1907) 9 Bom LR 1134; Onkarmal v. Banwari Lal, AIR 1962 Raj 127.

suit for damages for malacious prosecution the result of the Criminal Court judgment in favour of the accused is relevant but the reasoning on which the order of acquittal is based would not be accepted as conclusive.[48]

Where a person was convicted by a Criminal Court under Section 304, Penal Code, for causing bodily injuries to his adoptive father who ultimately died of the injuries, it was held that in the subsequent proceedings for succession, the judgment of the Criminal Court is only relevant to show that there was a trial, resulting in conviction, but it is not evidence on the fact that the person was the murderer, that the Civil Court has to determine on evidence whether the offence falls under 304, Penal Code or under Section 299, and 300, Penal Code, and whether he was a murderer.[49] A judgment of acquittal is irrelevant in a civil suit based on the same cause of action, just as a judgment of conviction cannot, in a subsequent civil suit, be treated as evidence of facts on which the conviction is based.[50] The decision of a Magistrate in a proceeding under Section 145, Cr.P.C. in favour of the defendant on the question of possession is not binding on the civil court dealing with a suit for declaration of title and possession and it is not relevant under this section as the civil court is entitled to come to a different finding altogether.[51]

Where a prosecution for failure to furnish returns of turnover to the sales tax department, ended in acquittal it was held that judgment is not relevant for making a subsequent assessment.[52] Judgment of Criminal Court determining guilt or innocence of the driver of the vehicle is not binding on the claims tribunal under the Motor Vehicle's Act.[53] A conviction of a driver in a criminal case is relevant before the claims tribunal under this section only to show that the driver was convicted, though it is not conclusive.[54]

An admission in a criminal proceeding cannot be proved in a civil case by producing the Criminal Court judgment, as a Civil Court is bound to come to a decision by itself on the facts placed before it.[55]

Where a conviction is based on the plea of guilty by the accused, it was held that the judgment showing the plea is relevant in a subsequent suit which gave rise to a fact in issue or formed the subject-matter of the suit.[56]

A plea of autrefois acquit arises when a person is tried again for the same offence or on same facts for any other offence under conditions attracting Sections 236 and 237, Cr.P.C., but where there were two different trials for distinct offences arising out of different transactions, and the common object in both the cases was different, it was held that acquittal in one did not bar conviction in another, because the reasoning of a judgment of acquittal is not admissible as evidence.[57] Where an exporter of handloom cloth was charged for tampering with the bales of goods before loading and the case was split up into two cases, according to the two invoices, it was held that the judgment in the one case acquitting the accused is not admissible in the second case and the application for quashing the second proceedings is not maintainable.[58] A document containing a confession of an accused admitting misappropriation of sums of money with respect to three items, was produced in an earlier criminal case. It was found that the confession was not voluntary and in regard to two items the evidence was disbelieved and the accused was acquitted in respect of those two items, but was convicted in regard to the third item on the evidence. It was held by the Supreme Court, that the judgment in that case would be admissible in a subsequent case relating to misappropriation of the third item, to show what was the issue in question in that case and the decision thereof; that the documents containing confession was of little evidentiary value, and

---

48. Gobind Chandra v. Upendra Padhi, AIR 1960 Ori 29.
49. Biro v. Banta Singh, AIR 1980 Punj 164.
50. Onkarmal v. Banwarilal, 1962 Raj 127.
51. Mahabir Pandey v. Ramnarayan Singh, AIR 1959 Pat 406.
52. Macherlappa v. Govt. of A.P., AIR 1958 AP 371.
53. Municipal Committee Jullunder City v. Romesh Saggi, AIR 1970 Punj 137; Prabhakar Babussa Chodankar v. Maria Victoria (Smt.), AIR 1977 Goa 15.
54. Vinobabai v. K.S.R.T.C., Banagalore, (1979) 1 Kant LJ 257; Yogendra Paul v. Durgadass, 1972 ACJ 483; Radha Mohan v. Barealal, 1972 All LJ 15.
55. Dinomoni v. Brojo Mohini, ILR 29 Cal 187 (PC); Purnima Debya v. Nandalal, AIR 1932 Pat 105; Dund Bahadur Singh v. Durga Prasad, AIR 1953 Pat 346; Kesho Prasad v. Bhagjogna Kuer, AIR 1937 PC 69; Harihar Prasad v. Janak Dulari, AIR 1941 Pat 118; Mahabir Pandey v. Ramnarain Singh, AIR 1959 Pat 406.
56. B. Meenakshisundaram Chetty v. Kuttimalu, ILR 1958 Ker 39.
57. Kharkan v. State of U.P., AIR 1965 SC 83.
58. S.P.E. Madras v. Sundara Velu, AIR 1978 SC 1017.

could not form the sole basis for convicting the accused.[59] A judgment of a Criminal Court acquitting some of the accused who were separately tried for certain offences relating to the same transaction is not admissible in evidence in an appeal preferred by the other accused who were convicted by another Court for similar offences in respect of the same transaction as Section 43 does not make the earlier judgment admissible.[60]

3. JUDGMENT IN CIVIL CASES

The judgment of a Civil Court holding that a will was forged is not relevant under this section in a criminal case for the offence of forgery.[61]

Where an accused cut certain trees on the land which was with the usufructuary mortgagee and the trial court held that the mortgagor was entitled to the trees on redemption and the accused cut them to cause wrongful loss to the mortgagor and convicted the accused and when a revision against the conviction was pending, a Civil Court recognizing the right of the accused to cut the trees was brought to the notice of the Court, it was held that the Civil Court judgment should be admitted as additional evidence in the interest of the justice and the accused should be acquitted as even a bona fide claim of the right would rule out the criminal intention on his part.[62]

A judgment of a Civil Court in a title suit which is not final in the sense that it is pending second appeal, can be admitted in Criminal Proceedings as proof of fact of possession of disputed property. The provisions of Sections 40 to 43 only exclude judgments as pieces of conclusive evidence, but do not bar the admission of judgments as proof of the fact of litigation or its results and effects upon the parties which makes a certain course of conduct probable or improbable on the part of one of the parties.[63]

Where there was an order rejecting the claim to the property in a previous claim suit by the accused in a subsequent criminal case and it was used by the Magistrate to convict the accused, it was held that the use of the claim order by the Magistrate cannot be said to be unwarranted by law, as the fact of rejecting the claim may be relevant.[64] A judgment in rem in an earlier suit would be admissible in subsequent proceedings under this Section.[65] The existence of a judgment, not being a fact in issue, will not be relevant.[66] The judgment in the previous suit which was not inter partes cannot be relied in a subsequent suit.[67]

4. JUDGMENTS REGARDING MARKET VALUE

Judgments relating to market value of particular pieces of land, though they are judgments not inter partes, would be relevant if they relate to similarly situated properties and contain determinations of value on dates fairly proximate to the relevant date.[68]

At pages 2413 and 2414 in the above case, the Supreme Court observed: "It is apparent that Section 43 enacts that judgments other than those falling under sections 40 to 42 are irrelevant unless they fall under some other provision of the Evidence Act; and, even if they do fall under any such other provision, all that is relevant, under Section 43 of the Evidence Act, is the existence of such judgment, order, or decree provided it is a fact in issue, or is relevant under some other provision of this Act. An obvious instance of such other provision is a judgment falling under Section 13 of the Evidence Act. The Illustration to Section 13 of the Evidence Act indicates the kind of facts on which the existence of

---

59. Brijbasi Lal Shrivastava v. State of M.P., AIR 1979 SC 1080.

60. In re : Bojjagani Moogadu, In re, (1971) 1 An WR 316. Also see Gopal v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 2162 (Raj).

61. (1982) 2 Chand LR (Cri) 250.

62. Balakees v. K.C. Jacob, (1964) 2 Mad LJ 583.

63. Shiv Charan v. State, AIR 1965 All 511.

64. Haripanda v. State of Orissa, AIR 1956 Ori 212.

65. Gopi Kishan v. Bajrang Lal, 1996 AIHC 4064 (para 15) (Raj).

66. A. Munuswami v. R. Sethuraman, AIR 1995 Mad 375 (paras 8 and 14), relying on Keso Prasad v. Bhagjogna Kuer, AIR 1937 PC 69.

67. Gulabrao Maruti Bhagat v. Bhagwan Nana Bhagat, 2001 AIHC 2146 (para 13) (Bom).

68. City Improvement Trust v. Narayanaiah, AIR 1976 SC 2403; dissenting from Land Acquisition Officer v. Lakhamsi Ghelabhai, 1960 Bom 78; Mariam v. State of Kerala, 1980 Ker 176 (DB); State of UP v. Nathhoo, AIR 1986 All 172; Fulbhai v. A.S.L.A. Officer, (1967) 8 Guj LR 37; Collector Bilaspur v. Lachhman, 1965 HP 18; State of Bihar v. Musafir Thakur, AIR 1984 Pat 40.

judgments may be relevant. In Special Land Acquisition Officer, Bombay v. Lakhamsi Ghelabhai, AIR 1960 Bom 78 SHELAT J., held that judgments not inter partes, relating to land acquired are not admissible merely because the land dealt with in the judgment was situated near the land of which the value is to be determined. It was held there that such judgments would fall neither under Section 11 nor under section Section 13 of the Evidence Act. Questions relating to value of particular pieces of land depend upon the evidence in the particular case in which those facts are proved. They embody findings or opinions relating to facts in issue, investigated in different cases. The existence of a judgment would not prove the value of some piece of land not dealt with at all in the judgment admitted in evidence. Even slight differences in situation can, sometimes, cause considerable differences in value. We do not think it necessary to take so restrictive a view of the provisions of sections 11 and 13 of the Evidence Act as to exclude such judgments altogether from evidence even when good grounds are made out for their admission. In Khaja Fizuddin v. State of Andhra Pradesh, CA No. 176 of 1962, decided on 10-4-1963 (SC), a bench of three Judges of this Court held such judgments to be relevant if they relate to similarly situated properties and contain determinations of value on dates fairly proximate to the relevant date in a case".

5. OTHER CASES

The order of mutation of a revenue officer and the judgment of the Civil Court are held to be relevant in a suit for redemption of property, under Sections 13 and 43 of the Evidence Act.[69]

Though the order in a maintenance proceeding is not relevant under sections 40, 41 and 42, it is relevant in a proceeding under the Hindu Marriage Act, to show the conduct of the husband towards the wife as it is relevant and admissible under Section 8.[70]

A judgment not inter partes in a suit where a right was asserted and recognised or denied was held admissible under this section in a subsequent proceeding.[71] A judgment upholding the right of the defendant as an adopted son is relevant though plaintiffs are not parties to that judgment.[72]

In a suit filed to set aside the order of the Commissioner of Religious Endornments, not recognizing the plaintiff as the hereditary trustee, it was held that a judgment in an earlier proceeding recognizing the plaintiff's father as hereditary trustee is relevant to prove usage of hereditary trusteeship.[73]

Findings given against the petitioner in the department inquiry are not relevant under Section 43 and cannot be used to show that no prima facie case is made out against him.[74]

Fraud or collusion in obtaining judgment, or incompetency of Court, may be proved.

S. 44. Any party to a suit or other proceeding may show that any judgment, order or decree which is relevant under Section 40, 41 or 42, and which has been proved by the adverse party, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.

SYNOPSIS

1. General Principle ... 519
2. Court not competent to deliver it ... 520
3. Fraud or collusion ... 522
4. Cases other than fraud or collusion ... 525

COMMENTS

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLE

This section states that any judgment, order or decree which is relevant under sections 40, 41 or 42 can still be shown by a party to it who was adversely affected by such judgment, decree or order, to have

---

69. State v. Thakur Dass, (1969) 71 Punj LR 435.
70. Shyam Chand v. Janki, AIR 1966 HP 70.
71. Ramdhan v. Purushottam, AIR 1926 Nag 109.
72. Ram Gopal v. Ram Kunwari, ILR (1965) 15 Raj 529.
73. V.T. Arunachalam v. Commr. H.R.&C.E., (1980) 1 Mad LJ 405.
74. Jagdish Chandra Soni v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1902 (para 10) (Raj). relying on State of Bihar v. Radha Krishna Singh, AIR 1983 SC 684 : (1983) 3 SCC 118.

been delivered by the Court not competent to deliver it, or it was obtained by fraud or collusion. The competency of the Court or fraud or collusion go to the root of the matter and vitiate the sanctity, finality and the binding nature of a judgment. Every species of judgment will be rendered inadmissible in evidence on proof being given that the Court which pronounced it had no jurisdiction.

Want of jurisdiction to entertain a suit or proceeding, or a judgment, order or decree obtained by fraud or collusion, whether such judgment was in rem or in personam, vitiates all judicial acts of the Court.[75]

This section applies to both civil and criminal proceedings.[76]

A judgment, coming within Section 41 of the Evidence Act, though in rem, is open to attack on the grounds specified in Section 44. Fraud in any case bearing on jurisdictional facts vitiates all judicial acts whether in rem or in personam.[77]

Section 44 does not apply to judgments admissible under Section 43 of the Act.[78]

Under Section 44 the principle applies only to judgments or decree or orders which are relevant under Sections 40, 41 or 42. A judgment appointing a guardian, and extending the minority of the ward, is somewhat analogus to those judgments in rem under Section 41; it is not a judgment in the exercise of probate, matrimonial, admiralty or insolvency jurisdiction of the Court u/Section 41.

A decree passed by a competent Court can only be set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction, collusion or fraud; otherwise it would stand.[79]

It is not necessary for the party against whom such a judgment, order or decree is sought to be used, to bring a separate suit to have set aside; it is open to such party suit in which such judgment order or decree is sought to be used against him, to show, if such be the case, that the judgment, order or decree relied upon by the other side was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it, or was obtained by fraud or collusion.[80]

The section lays down not only a rule of law relating to evidence, but also a rule of procedure. There are many sections of this Act, such as Sections 66-73, 130, 135, 136 and 150, which relate more or less to matters of procedure.

A person can impeach a decree on the grounds mentioned in this section even if he was a party to the suit in which the decree was passed.[81]

The judgment or decree which the section allows a party to impeach on the ground of fraud must be one which has been proved by the adverse party.[82]

2. COURT NOT COMPETENT TO DELIVER IT

Every species of judgment will be rendered inadmissible in evidence on proof that the Court which pronounced it had no jurisdiction.

The "competency" of a Court and its "jurisdiction" are synonymous terms. They mean the right of a Court to adjudicate in a given matter. They do not mean, in a case where that right exists, the coming to a

---

75. Sumera v. Baijnath, 1983 ALJ 921, 928.
76. Bhagwan Das v. D D. Patel and Company, AIR 1940 Bom 131; Sita Devi v. Gopal Saran, AIR 1928 Pat 375; Ahmed Bhoy Habibhoi v. Vellebhoy Cassum Bhoy, ILR (1882) 6 Bom 703; (a stranger can impeach the judgment in rem showing fraud); Narmada Prasad v. State of V.P., 1956 VP 30; Viswanathan v. Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1; Satya v. Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105; Shah Gulam Ghous Mohiuddin v. Syed Shah Abdul Har Khamisul Qadri, AIR 1959 AP 212.
77. Satya v. Teja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105; Viswanathan v. Rukn-ul-Mulk Syed Abdul Wajid, AIR 1963 SC 1.
78. Venkata Rangacharyulu v. Akkappa Rao, AIR 1941 Mad 569.
79. Newton Hickie v. Official Trustee of W.B., AIR 1954 Cal 506.
80. Bansilal v. Dhapo, ILR (1902) 24 All 242; Rajib Panda v. Lakhan Sendh Mahapatra, ILR (1899) 27 Cal 11, 20; Bhagwandas Naraindas v. D D. Patel & Co., (1939) 42 Bom LR 23 : AIR 1940 Bom 131.
81. Nachattar Singh v. Jagir Kaur, AIR 1986 P&H 197; Joginder Singh v. Nirmal Naini Mehta, AIR 1986 Del 305.
82. A decree holder or one claiming through him can avoid the decree u/s. 44. Ibne Hasan v. Hasina Bibi, AIR 1984 All 216.

correct conclusion upon any question of law or fact arising in that matter.[83] The words "not competent" refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction.[84]

In STEPHEN'S DIGEST LAW OF EVIDENCE, in Art.46, it is stated that the rule of English Law corresponding to Section 44 of the Indian Evidence Act is stated to be that whenever a judgment is offered as evidence, the party against whom it is so offered may prove that the Court which gave it has no jurisdiction; the competency of a Court and its "jurisdiction" are thus synonymous terms; they mean the right of a Court to adjudicate in a given matter.[85]

JUSTICE VENKATARAMA IYYER in Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan,[86] observed: "It is a fundamental principle well-established that a decree passed by a Court without jurisdiction is a nullity, and that invalidity could be set up whenever and wherever it is sought to be enforced or relied upon, even at the stage of execution and even in collateral proceedings. A defect of jurisdiction, whether it is pecuniary or territorial, or whether it is in respect of the subject-matter of the action, strikes at the very authority of the Court to pass any decree, and such a defect cannot be cured even by consent of parties.[87]

Either party or a stranger against whom a previous judgment is used in a subsequent suit may impeach it on the ground of want of jurisdiction. Any party to a suit or proceeding has a right to show that a judgment which is relevant under Section 41, was delivered by a Court not competent to deliver it or it was obtained by fraud or collusion.[88]

This right is available even to a stranger to the suit.

Section 44, has nothing to do with the competency of the former Court to try the subsequent suit, which is contemplated under Section 11, C.P.C. It is concerned only with the competency of the former Court to try the former suit.[89]

A defect in jurisdiction, whether it is territorial or pecuniary, or whether it is in respect of the subject-matters of the action, strikes at the very authority of the Court to pass any decree, and such a defect cannot be cured even by consent of parties, but this general rule is subject to certain exceptions, which are well-defined viz., those contained in Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act, and Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was observed by the Supreme Court: "With reference to objections relating to territorial jurisdiction, Section 21 of the Civil Procedure Code enacts that no objection to the place of suit should be allowed by an Appellate or Revisional Court, unless there was a consequent failure of justice. It is the same principle that has been adopted in Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act with reference to pecuniary jurisdiction. The policy underlying Sections 21 and 99, C.P.C. and Section 11 of the Suits Valuation Act is the same, namely, that when a case had been tried by a Court on the merits and judgments rendered, it should not be liable to be reversed purely on technical grounds, unless it had resulted in failure of justice, and the policy of the Legislature has been to treat objections to jurisdiction, both territorial and pecuniary, as technical and not open to consideration by an Appellate Court, unless there has been a prejudice on the merits."[90]

The Supreme Court, in Mohanlal Goenka v. Benoy Kishna Murkerjee,[91] held that lack of territorial jurisdiction can be waived.[92]

In Hiralal v. Sri Kalinath[93] it was held that Section 44 has no application to the objection based on lack of territorial jurisdiction. No objection can be raised regarding want of territorial jurisdiction, in execution proceedings.[94]

---

83. Sardarmal v. Aranvayal Sabhapathy, ILR (1896) 21 Bom 205.
84. Ketliamma v. Kelappan, ILR (1889) 12 Mad 228.
85. FIELD 9th Edn., Vol. 3, p. 2336.
86. AIR 1954 SC 340.
87. See also Pantha Lakkunnummal Mother of Kunheema Umma v. Puthalath Bala Krishnan Nair, AIR 1967 Ker 97.
88. Munireddy v. Apparao, (1973) 2 SCR 458; (1975) 1 SCC 120 : Sathya v. Theja Singh, AIR 1975 SC 105.
89. Newton Hickie v. Official Trustee of WB, AIR 1954 Cal 506.
90. Kiran Singh v. Chaman Paswan, AIR 1954 SC 340; Beerappa v. Yeshwant Rao, AIR 1972 Mys 338.
91. AIR 1953 SC 65.
92. Bahrein Petroleum v. Pappu, AIR 1966 SC 634; Hiralal v. Kali Nath, AIR 1962 SC 199 confirming Hiralal v. Sri Kali Nath, AIR 1955 All 569; Beerappa v. Yeshwantrao, AIR 1972 Mys 338.
93. AIR 1955 All 569.
94. Hiralal v. Sri Kali Nath, AIR 1955 All 569; Gurbux Singh v. Brij Lal Chiranjilal, AIR 1951 Pepsu 46.

There is essential distinction between inherent want of jurisdiction in a Court to entertain a cause and irregular exercise of it. Jurisdiction does not depend upon the correctness of the decision because the power to decide necessarily carries with it the power to decide rightly or wrongly. Incompetency of a Court or absence of jurisdiction has to be proved to avoid a judgment or decree. Even an erroneous decision on a question of law, operates as res judicata between the parties to it.[1]

Where there was no undervaluation or overvaluation, but the Court acted on the valuation given in the plaint, according to which the suit was not entertainable by that Court, and rendered a judgment, the judgment would be treated as a nullity.[2]

3. FRAUD OR COLLUSION

This section allows a party to prove fraud or collusion in order to avoid a judgment or order.[3]

Fraud contemplated in this section must be fraud practised in the court itself. Fraud is an extremely collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of courts of justice.[4]

It is always competent to any Court to vacate any judgment or order, if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud.[5]

For setting aside a decree on the ground of fraud, the fraud must be external and collateral to adjudication and must be of a person who secured the judgment.[6]

The Supreme Court, in Satya v. Tejasingh[7], reversing the decision in Tejasingh v. Sathya[8], held that a foreign decree of divorce obtained by the husband from the Nevada State Court in U.S.A., in the absence of the wife, without her submitting herself to its jurisdiction, will not be valid and binding in a criminal court proceedings, for maintenance u/Section 488, Cr.P.C. (old) in India. When it is found that such a decree was obtained by fraud or by making false representation as to the jurisdictional facts, the decree is open to collateral attack. But, when the validity of the decree, or competency of the Court, is not challenged, it would be binding.

The expressions 'fraud' or 'collusion' are not defined in the Act. But the Indian Contract Act, Section 17 defines 'fraud' and 'collusion'. Fraud or collusion, by themselves, do not make a judicial act void but it is voidable by the party who was defrauded or affected by collusion.

According to WHARTON'S, LAW LAXICON, collusion in relation to a judicial proceeding is a secret agreement between two or more persons that one should institute a suit against the other in order to obtain the decision of a judicial tribunal for some sinister purposes.[9]

It is not permitted to show that the Court was mistaken, but it may be shown that it was misled by collusion of the parties or by party playing fraud against the other party. Where a judgment was allowed to be admitted in evidence against a stranger, he may avoid its effects by placing distinct proof that it was obtained by fraud or collusion.[10]

The decision given in a suit in which one person is authorised to represent others, is binding on all unless the decision can be shown as vitiated under Section 44. If however, they were not in fact represented then fraud or collusion need not be proved.[11]

---

1. Panthalakunammal Mother of Kunheema Umma v. Puthalath Balakrishna Nair, AIR 1967 Ker 97.
2. Rachappa Subrao v. Shidappa Venkatrao, AIR 1918 PC 188; Hiralal Patni v. Shri Kalinath, AIR 1955 All 569.
3. Siraj Fatma v. Mahmud Ali, (1932) 54 All 646 (FB) : AIR 1932 All 293.
4. Meadows v. Duchess of Kingston, (1775) 2 Amb 750.
5. Bhikaji v. Balvant, (1927) 29 Bom LR 1046 : AIR 1927 Bom 510; Paranjpe v. Kanade, ILR (1882) 6 Bom 148, 153; Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, ILR (1894) 21 Cal 612.
6. Papavinasham Subramaniam v. Daivani Nagaramma, AIR 1963 Ker 26.
7. AIR 1975 SC 105.
8. AIR 1971 Punj 80.
9. Lakshmi Narain v. Md. Shafi Bari, AIR 1949 East Punj 141.
10. BEST ON EVIDENCE, 8th Edn., Sec. 595, P. 457; Paranjee v. Kande, ILR (1882) 6 Bom 148; Gurdit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1974) 2 SCC 260.
11. Krishna Pillai v. Karthiyani Amma Sarasmm, AIR 1969 Ker 26.

A party cannot be allowed to plead his own fraud or collusion for setting aside any judgment, order or decree.[12]

The Privy Council held that the party alleging fraud is bound to establish it by cogent evidence.[13]

LORD ATKIN observed: "Fraud, like any other charge of a criminal offence, whether made in civil or criminal proceedings, must be established beyond reasonable doubt. A finding as to fraud cannot be based on suspicion and conjecture."[14]

A judgment or decree obtained by fraud upon a Court does not bind such court or any other, and its nullity upon this ground, though it has not been set aside or reversed, may be alleged in a collateral proceeding.[15]

In applying this rule it matters not whether the impeached judgment has been pronounced by an inferior tribunal or by the highest Court of judicature in the realm; in all cases it is alike competent for every Court, whether superior or inferior, to treat as a nullity any judgment which can be clearly shown to have been obtained by manifest fraud.[16]

A court of inferior jurisdiction is competent to declare a decree of a superior Court to be a nullity on the ground of fraud, if otherwise it has jurisdiction to entertain the suit.[17]

It is always competent to any Court to vacate any judgment or order, if it be proved that such judgment or order was obtained by manifest fraud.[18]

A distinction exists between those cases in which the fraud is only attempted but not carried into effect and those in which it has actually been carried into effect. In the former case, a party attempting to commit fraud is not precluded from maintaining an action to set aside the fraudulent transaction; but in the latter case he is not allowed to take advantage of his own wrong and is precluded from maintaining an action to set aside the fraudulent transaction actually carried into effect.[19]

A judgment which was obtained by fraud can be challenged without setting aside the decree, and can be impeached collaterally by pleading fraud as a defence to an action. Section 44 is very wide and lays down not merely a rule of law relating to evidence but also a rule of procedure as to how the judgment should be impeached. The contention that a party may impeach a judgment on the ground of fraud under Section 44, only within a period of three years, as provided by Article 95 Limitation Act, is therefore not acceptable.[20]

The principle of res judicata under Section 11, C.P.C., is outside the region of fraud or collusion, which is contemplated under Section 44; Thus Section 44 is an exception to Section 11, C.P.C.[21] but the decision relied upon for invoking the plea of res judicata can be attacked on the ground that it was procured by practising fraud or collusion. That can be done otherwise than filing appeal. However, the ground of fraud for vacating judgment relied upon has to be extraneous to everything adjudicated upon in the judgment relied upon.[22]

---

12. Parameshwaran v. Aiyappan Pillai, AIR 1959 Ker 206.
13. Hansraj Gupta v. Dehradun Mussoorie Electric Tram Way Co. Ltd., AIR 1940 PC 98.
14. A.L.N. Narayanan Chettiyar v. Official Assignee Rangoon, AIR 1941 PC 93.
15. The Queen v. Saddlers Company, (1863) 10 HLC 404, 431.
16. Nistarini Dassi v. Nundo Lall Bose, (1899) 26 Cal 891, 908.
17. Sarthakram Maiti v. Nundo Ram Maiti, (1906) 11 CWN 579.
18. Paranjpe v. Kanade, ILR (1882) 6 Bom 148, 153; Bhikaji v. Balvant, ILR (1927) 29 Bom LR 1046; Mahomed Golab v. Mahomed Sulliman, ILR (1894) 21 Cal 612.
19. See Goberdhan Singh v. Ritu Roy, ILR (1896) 23 Cal 962; Banka Behary Dass v. Raj Kumar Dass, ILR (1899) 27 Cal 231; Govinda Kuar v. Lala Kishun Prosad, ILR (1900) 28 Cal 370; Sham Lall Mitra v. Amarendra Nath Bose, ILR (1895) 23 Cal 460; Gram Panchayat, Naulakha v. Ujagar Singh, AIR 2000 SC 3272 (paras 5-7).
20. Bishunath Tewari v. Mirchi, 1955 Pat 66; Tribani Mishra v. Ramapujan Mishra, AIR 1970 Pat 13; Jatindra Nath Das v. Jadaram, (1975) 2 Cal LJ 209 : 79 Cal WN 936.
21. Vellappan v. Peter Thomas, AIR 1979 Ker 194; M.N. Paul v. State of Kerala, AIR 1982 Ker 38, 40; See also Radha v. Wajid Ali, 36 IC 746 (Oudh); Krishna Bhupati v. Ramamurthi, ILR (1892) 16 M 198; Laxmi Narain v. (Md.) Shafi, AIR 1949 Punj 141; Khrodh Chandra v. Banshidhar, AIR 1978 Ori 111.
22. Keepattel Bappu v. Kizhakke Valappil Muhammad, AIR 1993 Ker 273 (paras 17, 18 and 32).

A party to a decree, or a person claiming through such party can under Section 44 be allowed to avoid the effect of the decree on the ground of fraud or collusion. Still, such decree will be relevant to support the plea of estoppel if the ingredients of estoppel are made out.[23]

The word 'fraud' in Section 44 means that the party against whom the decree is obtained is deliberately kept out of knowledge of the suit or by some means disabled from defending the same.[24]

A wife can file an application u/order 9, Rule 13, C.P.C., for setting aside an ex parte decree of dissolution of marriage by challenging the decree under the provisions of Section 44, on any of the grounds mentioned therein, even though the husband dies and such a suit is maintainable[25] but in a maintenance proceeding a husband cannot apply for leading evidence on the ground of fraud viz. the concealment of fact of gainful employment by wife. No dishonesty or deceit could be attributed to a helpless wife attracting the provisions of this Section.[26]

A certificate of sale obtained by fraud is vitiated and is not binding on the party; the sale can be attacked by a suit or in collateral proceedings by way of defence, on the ground of its being nullity due to fraud; such defence can be raised in a suit for possession by a purchaser at a sale under Section 44.[27] Even in execution matters, if it is shown that the order was made by mistake or fraud which affects the validity of the order under execution, rendering it ineffective. Section 44 applies and permits a person to lead evidence to show that the order is not binding.[28] Where an ex parte decree in the earlier title suit was obtained by the plaintiff in that suit in collusion with all the defendants in the said suit, it was held that the decree would not operate as res judicata in the subsequent title brought against the plaintiff in the earlier suit.[29] Where a suit was filed by the plaintiff for possession of the property, and the defendant claimed title under a decree passed in an earlier suit to which the plaintiff was a party, it was held that the plaintiff can challenge the decree as collusive under this section.[30] Where a claim suit was filed under order 21, Rule 63, C.P.C. (old) by a decree holder, it was held that the objector can attack the decree on the ground of fraud or collusion.[31]

A suit for setting aside a decree on the ground of fraud and for possession, was dismissed as time barred under Section 95 of the Limitation Act, though fraud was held to be proved. It was however held that, by virtue of Section 44 of the Evidence Act, the plaintiff could still avoid the fraudulent decree and that relief of setting aside the impugned decree may be ignored, and relief of possession can be granted.[32]

The Madras High Court held that Section 44 relates to procedure; that it does not confer any right on the party; that, if a judgment is sought to be relied upon in a proceeding, it is open to the party to contend that the judgment sought to be relied on was obtained by fraud; that this is far from saying that a Court has jurisdiction to set aside a decree under this section, at the instance of one of the parties to it saying that it was obtained by fraud; and that as application under Order 37, Rule 4 C.P.C., was filed by a respondent to set aside the decree dated 1-3-1972 that was dismissed on 24-9-1974, and that order was not appealed against or questioned, it had given finality to the decree, dated 1-3-1972; and thereafter the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to set aside a decree.[33]

Where plaintiffs in a suit against a minor colluded with the minor's natural father by paying some amount and obtained a decree in their favour, it was held that the decree in the earlier suit was vitiated by

---

23. Ibne Hasan v. Hasina Bibi, AIR 1984 All 216; overruling Sahib Rai v. Bahari Rai, AIR 1927 All 494; Chauhana v. Gaya Prasad, AIR 1971 All 439.
24. Haria v. Gaon Sabha of Dera Moad, ILR (1972) 2 Del 964.
25. Iraavva v. Shivappa Sidhalingappa Angadi, AIR 1987 Kant 241.
26. Asha Anil Deshmukh v. Anil Mahadeorao Deshmukh, 1996 Cr LJ 2751 (paras 10-12) (Bom). Distinguishing S P Chengalvaraya Naidu (dead) by L.R.s v. Jagannath (dead) by L.R.s, AIR 1994 SC 853.
27. Sukhisahu v. Prayag Shah, AIR 1959 Pat 508.
28. Shewa Lachha Banjar v. Bhawarilal Ganeshmal, AIR 1973 Bom 139; Joginder Singh v. Niramal Naini Mehra, AIR 1986 Del 305.
29. Khirod Chandra Mohanty v. Bashidhar Khatua, AIR 1978 Ori 111.
30. Nachhittar Singh v. Jagir Kaur, AIR 1986 P&H 197.
31. Vijaya Lakshmamma v. Y Padmanabham, AIR 1955 AP 112; see contra - Nawab Syed Md Hashimali Khan v. Hamdi Begum, AIR 1942 Cal 180
32. Ekawari v. Jadunandan Kamat, AIR 1974 Pat 191.
33. Thigarajan v. Md. Umar Sait, AIR 1978 Mad 223.

collusion and can be set aside u s.44 of the Act.[34] In cases where an inference of fraud or collusion can be drawn from the negligence or gross negligence of the next friend of a minor, it would be permissible for the minor to avoid the judgment or the decree passed in the earlier proceeding by invoking Section 44 without taking resort to a separate suit for setting aside the decree or the judgment.[35]

Where both parties to a suit practise fraud on the Court and obtain a collusive decree, it is not open to either of them to impeach the judgment of the Court on the ground that it was collusively procurred.[36]

Where a compromise decree was passed in an appeal, according to which a religious trust was created on the basis of a deed, it was held that when two views were possible regarding the construction of the deed and the concerned decree was based upon one view, it could not be challenged in a subsequent suit on the ground of collusion or fraud.[37]

The party playing fraud on the Court is liable to be thrown out at any stage and the decree so obtained is vitiated by fraud.[38]

4. CASES OTHER THAN FRAUD OR COLLUSION

The principle of this section cannot be extended to other grounds like misrepresentation or undue influence, but only applies to grounds like fraud or collusion, as mentioned in this section.[39] Though under Section 44, the party is entitled to show that the judgment was obtained by fraud, it is not open to him to plead that the compromise on which the judgment was based was vitiated by a mutual mistake as to a material fact.[40]

In Talluri Venkata Sheshayya v. Thati Konda Kotiswar Rao[41], after referring to two earlier cases in Lalla Sheo Churnlal v. Ramnandan Dubey,[42] and Pamayyah v. Rajam Viranna,[43] the Privy Council observed: "Their Lordships are not concerned to discuss the question of the validity of these decisions, or the exlusive distinction between negligence and gross negligence, as they are satisfied that the principle involved in these cases is not applicable to such cases as the present one. The protection of minors against the negligent actings of their guardians is a special one..... The provisions of Section 11, C.P.C., are mandatory and the ordinary litigant, who claims under one of the parties to the former suit, can only avoid its provisions by taking advantage of Section 44, Evidence Act, which defines with precision, the grounds of such avoidance as fraud or collusion. It is not for the Court to treat negligence, or gross negligence as fraud or collusion, unless fraud or collusion, is the proper inference from the facts." They further observed: "The Subordinate Judge's finding of gross negligence is very far from a finding of intentional suppression of the document, which would amount to want of bona fides, or collusion, or of such intentional suppression of the plaintiff's evidence before the High Court. In their Lordships' opinion, there is no evidence in this suit which establishes either want of bona fides or collusion on the part of the plaintiffs in the 1891 suit, and, accordingly, the appellants have failed to show that the decisions in the 1891 suit are not binding on them as res judicata."

In Kari Bapana v. Sunkari Erramma[44] it was held that the principle under Section 44 can be extended to cases of gross negligence; that view cannot be held to be correct in view of the above decision of the Privy Council.

A distinction has to be borne in mind between a right of a party other than a minor in any proceeding to question the validity of a judgment and the right of a minor on attaining majority to set aside the decree passed against him on the ground of gross negligence of the guardian. In the former case the party

---

34. Channayya Basayya Renukanath v. Shekharayya, (1962) 2 Mys LJ 84.
35. Asharfi Lal v. Koili, AIR 1995 SC 1440 (paras 14 and 15), reversing the WP No. 8876 of 1971, Dt. 23-2-1982 (All).
36. Shripadgouda Venkagouda v. Govindgouda Narayangouda, ILR (1941) Bom 160 : (1940) 42 Bom LR 1185. See Parameswearn v. Aiyappan Pillai, AIR 1959 Ker 206.
37. Jadu Gopal Chakravarty (dead) His L.Rs. v. Pannalal Bhowmick, AIR 1978 SC 1329.
38. S.P. Chengalvaraya Naidu v. Jagannath, AIR 1994 SC 853 (paras 7 and 8).
39. Krishna Subala Bose v. Dhanapati Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59; Pandrangi Lingeswara Rao v. D. Venkata Subbarao, (1966) 2 An WR 144.
40. Krishna Sobala Bose v. Dhanapati Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59.
41. AIR 1937 PC 1 : 64 IA 17.
42. ILR 22 Cal 8.
43. AIR 1922 Mad 273.
44. 45 MLJ 324.

cannot show that any judgment is vitiated by gross negligence unless fraud or collusion is the proper inference from the facts.[45] Section 44 does not affect the right of a minor to set aside the decree by an independent suit on the ground of gross negligence or fraud of guardian. Such a suit exists independently of the provisions of the Evidence Act.[46]

In an application in a Revenue Court, a guardian of certain minors raised a contention regarding the question of proprietary title to the lands and he was directed to institute a suit in a Civil Court; but he failed to file the suit. There upon the Revenue Court decided the question against the minors. One of the minors, after attaining majority, filed a suit for declaration of title, and for possession without praying for the avoidance of the order of the Revenue Court. The two lower Courts held that fraud or collusion was not established, but there was gross negligence on the part of the guardian in not filing the suit as direcd by the Revenue Court, and thus decreed the suit. The Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, held that the right of a minor to avoid a decree on the ground of negligence of his guardian is a well established rule of common law and is therefore, a substantive right, and that this section does not prevent a minor from adducing evidence of negligence of his guardian, if he has a substantive right to prove such negligence and thereby avoid the judgment. It does not enumerate and exhaust the grounds upon which a decree or order may be attacked.[47] This section is only permissive. It allows a party to avoid a judgment, but does not destroy his substantive right which exists independently of the Evidence Act. Thus, the right of a minor to challenge a decree on the ground of the negligence of the guardian is not taken away.[48] A decree passed against a minor can be avoided by him, on his attaining majority, on the ground of gross negligence of the party of his next friend or guardian ad litem, by bringing a subsequent suit even if he has not succeeded in proving fraud or collusion on the part of such next friend or guardian.[49]

However, a Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that gross negligence, apart from fraud or collusion, on the part of the next friend or guardian ad litem, does not afford the basis of a suit to set aside a decree obtained against a minor.[50]

It is submitted that the view of the various High Courts other than Bombay and Rajasthan that Section 44 does not affect the right of a minor to sue to set aside a decree on attaining majority on the ground of gross negligence on the part of the guardian is to be preferred.

A Court cannot pass a decree unless the minor is represented by a guardian.[51]

OPINIONS OF THIRD PERSONS, WHEN RELEVANT

Opinions of experts.

S. 45. When the Court has to form an opinion upon a point of foreign law, or of science, or art, or as to identity of handwriting or finger impressions, the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science or art, or in questions as to identity of handwriting or finger impressions are relevant facts.

---

45. Talluri Venkata Sheshayya v. Thati Konda Kotiswar Rao, 64 IA 17 : AIR 1937 PC 1.
46. Venkatappa Naik v. Subba Naik, ILR (1905) 29 Mad 179; Mahesh Chandra Bayan v. Manindra Nath Das, ILR (1941) 1 Cal 477 : AIR 1941 Cal 401.
47. Siraj Fatima v. Mahmood Ali, AIR 1932 All 293 : (1932) 54 All 646 (FB); Dwarika Halwai v. Sitla Prasad, AIR 1940 All 256; Desari Venkanna v. Desari, AIR 1980 NOC 82 (AP); Chunduru Pundayyah v. Rajan Viranna, ILR 45 Mad 425 : AIR 1922 Mad 273; Narayanan v. Gopalan, AIR 1960 Ker 367; Kamakshya v. Baldeo, AIR 1950 Pat 97 (FB); Iftekhar v. Beant, AIR 1946 Lah 233 (FB); Egappa v. Ramanathan, AIR 1942 Mad 384; Chunduru v. Rajam, AIR 1922 Mad 273.
48. Mahesh Chandra v. Mahindranath Das, ILR (1941) 1 Cal 477 : AIR 1941 Cal 401; Iftekhar v. Beant, AIR 1946 Lah 233 (FB).
49. Punnayah v. Viranna, (1921) 45 Mad 425; Ganganand Singh v. Maharaja Sir Rameshwar Singh Bahadur, (1927) 6 Pat 388 : AIR 1927 Pat 271; Mathura Singh v. Rama Rudra Prasad Sinha, (1935) 14 Pat 824 : AIR 1936 Pat 231; Kamakshya N. Singh v. Baldeo, AIR 1950 Pat 97 : ILR (1948) 27 Pat 441 (FB); Narayan Namboodripad v. Gopalan Nair, AIR 1960 Ker 367; Kothandarama Gramani v. Sellammal, AIR 1959 Mad 524; Venkamma v. Venkamma, (1970) 2 An LT 70, 76.
50. Krishnadas Padmanabhrao v. Vithoba Annappa, 1939 Bom 340, 41 Bom LR 59 (FB); See also State v. Rao Dhir Singh, AIR 1972 Raj 241.
51. Venkanna v. Venkamma, (1979) 2 Andh.LT 70, 76. See also Mathura Singh v. Ram Rudra Prashad, AIR 1936 Pat 231, 238; Narayanan v. Gopalan, AIR 1960 Ker 367; Kamkalshya v. Baldeo, AIR 1950 Pat 97 (FB); Iftekhar v. Beant, AIR 1946 Lah 233 (FB); Egappa v. Ramanathan, AIR 1942 Mad 384; Chunduru v. Rajam, AIR 1922 Mad 273.

Such persons are called experts.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question is, whether the death of A was caused by poison.

The opinions of experts as to the symptoms produced by the poison by which A is supposed to have died, are relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A, at the time of doing a certain act, was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law.

The opinions of experts upon the question whether the symptoms exhibited by A commonly show unsoundness of mind, and whether such unsoundness of mind usually renders persons incapable of knowing the nature of the acts which they do, or of knowing that what they do is either wrong or contrary to law, are relevant.

(c) The question is, whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A.

The opinions of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 527
2. Expert ... 529
3. Experts' evidence ... 531
4. Foreign Law ... 531
5. Science or art ... 531
6. Identity of handwriting ... 532
7. Finger Print ... 538
8. Foot-Print ... 540
9. Tracker Dog ... 541
10. Typewritten Documents ... 542
11. Ballistic Expert ... 542
12. Workability of weapon ... 544
13. Medical opinion ... 544
14. Post Mortem Report ... 547
15. Serologist's Report ... 548
16. Time of death ... 548
17. Injury ... 549
18. Poison ... 549
19. Loss of Expectation of life ... 549
20. Age ... 549
21. Paternity ... 550
22. Mental State ... 551
23. Medical certificate ... 551
24. Public Analyst ... 551
25. Chemical Examiner ... 552
    Drug offences ... 553
26. Goldsmith ... 553
27. Hair ... 554
28. Trade Mark ... 554
29. Liquor ... 554
30. Fertilizer ... 554
31. Market value ... 554
32. Crop Valuation ... 555
33. Labourers ... 555
34. Obscenity ... 555
35. Revenue stamp ... 555
36. Gazette ... 555
37. Paper ... 555
38. Duty to examine an expert ... 556
39. Conflict between two experts ... 556
40. Conflict between expert and other witness ... 557
41. Value ... 559
42. Modern Scientific Methods of Evidence ... 562
    (a) Blood groups ... 562
    (b) Blood stains ... 562
    (c) Blood or urine or breath test for determining the alcohol content in the blood ... 562
43. Automatic photographs ... 562
44. Computers ... 563
45. Tape Recorder ... 563
46. Video Tape—Television link ... 563
47. Psychiatrists—Psychologists ... 563
48. Truth Drug ... 564
49. Hypnotism ... 564

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section is an exception to the rule as regards the exclusion of opinion evidence. Opinions of experts are relevant upon a point of (a) foreign law, (b) science, (c) art, (d) identity of handwriting, and (e) finger impressions.

It is "a general rule that the opinion of witnesses possessing peculiar skill is admissible, whenever the subject-matter of enquiry is such that inexperienced persons are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without such assistance. In other words, this is so when it so far partakes of the character of a science or art as to require a course of previous habit or study to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature."[1]

Both under this section and S. 47 the evidence is of an opinion, in the former by a scientific comparison and in the latter on the basis of familiarity resulting from frequent observations and experience.

In either case the Court must satisfy itself by such means as are open that the opinion may be acted upon.[2]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (15th Edn. (2000), P. 921 Para 37-09) states as follows : "Even at common law the opinions of skilled witnesses are admissible wherever the subject is one upon which competency to form an opinion can only be acquired by a course of special study or experience. The terms on which expert evidence is admissible is governed in civil cases by the Civil Evidence Act, 1972 and the CPR (Civil Procedure Rules)."

At [page 962, para 37-46, 15th Edn. (2000)] PHIPSON states: "Though the expert must be "skilled", by special study or experience, the fact that he has not acquired his knowledge professionally goes merely to weight and not to admissibility..... Equally, one can acquire experts knowledge in a particular sphere through repeated contact with it in the course of one's work, notwithstanding that the expertise is derived from experience and not from formal training".

HALSBURY observes[3] Courts frequently have to decide upon matters requiring specialised knowledge and, in appropriate cases, a party will need to call an expert or experts in support of his case. When such a person is called as a witness in civil proceedings, his opinion is admissible on any relevant matter, including an issue in the proceedings, on which he is qualified to give expert evidence.

In Sitaram Nai v. Puranmal Sonar,[4] the Supreme Court explained the meaning of the term "opinion" in this connection. The Court said that it was laid down in Dolgobinda v. Nimai Charan Misra,[5] that what is relevant is the opinion expressed by conduct and opinion means something more than mere relating of gossip or of hearsay; it means judgement or belief, that is, a belief or conviction resulting from what one thinks on a particular question. The section does not make the evidence of mere general reputation admissible as proof of relationship. It is the conduct or outward behaviour which must be proved in the manner laid down in Section 60.

If the subject under investigation does not require specialist knowledge, expert evidence will generally be excluded.[6] Where corroborated evidence of the eye-witnesses to the stabbing incident was available, failure of the prosecution in seeking the opinion of the medical witness regarding the use of a particular weapons in the stabbing was not fatal.[7]

The opinions of skilled witnesses cannot be received when the inquiry relates to a subject which does not require any peculiar habits or course of study to qualify a man to understand it[8], e.g., similarly of fraudulent trademark.[9] In all other cases witnesses must speak only of facts and not of opinion or inferences.[10]

The Court is bound to defer to the opinion of an expert where skill and experience alone render a person a competent judge. In the case of an expert witness, there exists the tendency to support the view which is favourable to the side which employs him, so that it is difficult to get from him an independent

---

1. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s.1418, p. 902.
2. Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326.
3. 4th Ed. Vol. 17, page 61 (para 83).
4. AIR 1985 Ori 171 at 176.
5. AIR 1959 SC 914.
6. United States Shipping Board v. The St. Albans, (1931) AC 632, (PC).
7. Prem Chand v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1217 (para 22) (Del).The Court referred to Ilam Singh v. State of U.P., (1976) 4 SCC 355 : 1976 Cr LJ 1883.
8. Ibid. S. 1419, p. 902.
9. Swadeshi Mills Company Limited v. Juggi Lal, ILR (1926) 49 All 92.
10. Babuli v. State of Orissa, AIR 1974 SC 775.

opinion. An expert may revise his opinion if he finds cogent reason, and his evidence need not be disbelieved on this ground.[11]

The Court cannot substitute its own opinion for that of an expert.[12]

The word 'science' occurring in Section 45 includes experts in typewriters whose evidence is admissible under Section 45.[13]

2. EXPERT

An 'Expert' witness is one who has devoted time and study to a special branch of learning, and thus is specially skilled on those points on which he is asked to state his opinion. His evidence on such points is admissible, to enable the tribunal to come to a satisfactory conclusion.[14] The opinion of the expert is only opinion evidence. It does not help the Court in interpretation.[15] The Court is not bound to follow it blindly. The expert cannot act as a judge or jury and the final decision is to be made by the judge.[16]

An expert, in order to be competent as a witness, need not have acquired his knowledge professionally. It is sufficient so far as the admissibility of the evidence goes, if he has acquired special experience therein.[17] However, the expert must show that he is skilled and has adequate knowledge of the subject.[18]

All persons who practise a business or profession which requires them to possess a certain knowledge of the matter in hand are experts, so far as expertness is required. It is the duty of the judge to decide whether the skill of any person in the matter on which evidence of his opinion is offered, is sufficient to entitle him to be considered as an expert. Opinion (prediction as to duration of pregnancy) of an experienced obstetrician cannot be rejected merely because she is not specialised in gynaecology.[19]

It is not an inflexible principle that a person can never acquire special experience and be an expert merely on the basis of a correspondence course, even after passing an examination from a recognised institution. Whether a particular person should be treated as an expert is, in the ultimate analysis, a question of fact to be determined on a consideration of all the circumstances relating to the acquisition of special experience by a person claiming to be an expert.[20]

One who has acquired special knowledge and skill in any science is an expert. His opinion, based on observations or experiments, is relevant in cases where questions relating to his science arise.[21]

A party seeking to adduce evidence of a person under Section 45 should, in the first instance, show to the court from the evidence of such witness, that the witness is specially skilled in the particular science and then only such witness is called an expert.[22]

It is the duty of an expert to furnish the judges with the necessary criteria for testing the accuracy of his conclusions, so as to enable the judge to form his own independent judgment by application of the criteria to the facts proved in evidence.[23]

Where the prosecutrix, the victim of rape was dumb, evidence of the Principal, Government Residential School for Deaf as her interpreter was an expert evidence and her testimony with the help of

---

11. Subodh Kumar v. Soshi Kumar, AIR 1958 Cal 264.
12. T. Veerabhadrappa v. Ministry of Mines & Steel, New Delhi, AIR 1998 Kant 412 (para 9). Also see Bomma Naicken v. Chinna Gounder, AIR 1998 Mad 375 (paras 4, 8 and 9).
13. State v. S.J. Choudhary, 1996 Cr LJ 1713 (paras 15, 17 and 18) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 1491 overruling Hanumant v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1952 SC 343 : 1952 SCR 1091 and reversing Cri Revn No. 105 of 1987 (Del).
14. POWELL, 10th Edn., p. 39
15. Forest Range Officer v. P. Mohammed Ali, AIR 1994 SC 120 (para 8).
16. Law Society of India v. Fertilizers & Chemicals Travancore Ltd., AIR 1994 Ker 308 (paras 185 and 186).
17. Collector, Jabalpur v. A.Y. Jahagir Khan, AIR 1971 MP 32. See also Huding Singh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 1128 (para 8) (Ori); State of H.P. v. Jai Lal, 1999 Cr LJ 4294 (para 20) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3318.
18. State of H.P. v. Jai Lal, 1999 Cr LJ 4294 (paras 17, 18 and 20) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3318.
19. Miglani v. Miglani, AIR 1979 SC 879; See Chatt Ram v. State of Haryana, AIR 1979 SC 1890 (generally on the meaning of expert).
20. Pannalal v. State, ILR (1960) 10 Raj 1191.
21. A. Nagi Reddi v. State, (1968) 1 Andh. W.R. 178.
22. Central Excise Dept. v. Somasundaram, 1980 Cr LJ 533 (Kar).
23. Sri Sundari Davi v. Ganghram, 1979 All LJ 38.

such interpreter can be relied upon.[24] It was held that the Senior Scientific Assistant (Chemistry), Central Forensic Science Laboratory, though he does not fall in the category of officers mentioned in Section 293, Cr.P.C. is an expert in science and his opinion would be a relevant piece of evidence.[25]

An Excise Inspector who had put in twenty one years of service, had tested countless samples of liquor, and whose competence to test the contents and strength of seized liquor had not been questioned at all, was an expert within the meaning of this section.[26] If the Excise Inspector did not state how long he had been in service and how many samples he had tested, or about his qualification and experience in testing, he cannot be treated as an expert u/s. 45, and his evidence cannot be relied upon.[27]

In re.: Govinda Reddy,[28] it was held that 25 years experience in photography is enough to call a person an expert.

Microscopic evidence cannot be interfered with only because some further superior method was not adopted.[29]

Architects may be experts for the purpose of designing and building a house, but they are not experts for the purpose of giving opinion as to what would be the cost of construction in a particular year, without any data about the prices of material and wages prevalent in that particular year.[30]

Where in a case of corruption it was alleged that fraud was committed on large scale by officers of Irrigation Department in carrying out the jungle clearance work, the departmental engineer, entrusted with the job of assisting the investigating agency, could be called an "expert" in view of special knowledge acquired by him while in service.[31]

The advice given by nautical assessors is expert evidence and is admissible in Admiralty Courts on all issues of fact about seamanship.[32] The decision of the case, however, rests entirely with the Court, and even in purely nautical matters, the Court is not bound to follow the advice of assessors; but, on questions of nautical science and skill, great attention must obviously be paid to the opinion of assessors, since they are the only source of information on these points, and some reasons should be given for disregarding them.[33]

On the question whether 'fel' is a textile fabric or not, the opinion of the Indian Standards Institute is important and has to be preferred to the opinion of the traders in the affidavits filed by the petitioner.[34]

The evidence of a sub-inspector that particular words used in a slip of paper were code words for particular figures used in recording betting transactions in American futures was held not relevant u/s. 45, as he did not claim to be an expert having special means of knowledge of the meaning of those words.[35]

In regard to the proof of wills, expert's opinions on handwriting is relevant for the court to come to its own conclusion.[36]

Whether a book advocating the use of cocaine tended to deprave and corrupt has been held to be a technical matter, entitling medical men to speak.[37]

---

24. Public Prosecutor, A.P. High Court v. Lingisetty Sreenu, 1997 Cr LJ 4003 (AP).
25. Amarjit Singh v. State (Delhi Administration), 1995 Cr LJ 1623 (paras 18 and 19) (Del).
26. S.C. Batra v. State of U.P., AIR 1974 SC 639.
27. Pitambar v. State, 1975 Cr LJ 948 (All). See also M. Shafi Goroo v. State, 2000 Cr LJ 2172 (para 12) (Del)
28. AIR 1958 Mys 150.
29. Ramanathan v. State of T.N., 1978 Cr LJ 1137 : AIR 1978 SC 1204.
30. Diwanchand v. Tirathram, AIR 1972 Del 41; Amar Nath v. Union of India, 1975 Raj LR 38 (Del).
31. M.S. Reddy v. State Inspector of Police, A.C.B., Nellore, 1993 Cr LJ 558 (para 48) (AP).
32. THE CLAN LEMONT, (1946) 79 LLYOD LR 521 at p. 524.
33. Asiatic S.N. Co. v. Arabinda, AIR 1959 SC 597.
34. Porritts & Spencer (Asia) Ltd. v. Union of India, ILR (1980) 2 Delhi 1173.
35. Harakchand Radhakishen v. State, AIR 1954 MB 145.
36. Girija Kuer v. Ambika Devi, 1978 Hindu LR 61.
37. R v. Skirving, (1985) 2 All ER 705; See All ER Annual Review 1985 at p. 157. On shifting of expert evidence in personal injury cases See Sulivan v. West Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive, (1985) 2 All ER 134; (medical opinion preferred as against eye-witnesses); Purushottam v. M.P., AIR 1980 SC 1873; M.D. Jadav v. Maharashtra, AIR 1976 SC 2327; (medical report as charred bodies found reliable).

The opinion of an expert was not allowed to be rejected only because the sample taken was less than the statutory requirement, because it was otherwise sufficient for test purposes.[38]

3. EXPERTS' EVIDENCE

The expert evidence has two aspects, the data evidence and the opinion evidence. While it is undoubtedly true that the data evidence cannot be rejected if it is inconsistent to oral evidence but the opinion evidence is only an inference drawn from the data and would not get precedence over the direct eye-witness testimony unless of course the inconsistency between the two is so great as to obviously falsify the oral evidence.[39] The expert evidence is a weak type of evidence and the Courts do not consider it conclusive. It is, therefore, not safe to rely upon it without seeking independent and reliable corroboration.[40] Once the expert's opinion is accepted by the Court, it ceased to be the opinion of the expert and becomes the opinion of the Court.[41]

4. FOREIGN LAW

Foreign law is law which is not in force in India. Expert evidence cannot be admitted where a particular law is the law of the land. "The Shiah law on marriage is the law of the land and is in force in India. It can by no means be called foreign law, nor is such law a science or art within the meaning of that section (Section 45). It is the duty of Courts themselves to interpret the law of the land and apply it, and not to depend on the opinion of witnesses, howsoever learned they may be. It would be dangerous to delegate their duty to witnesses produced by either party. Foreign law, on the other hand, is a question of fact with which Courts in India are not supposed to be conversant. Opinions of experts on foreign law are, therefore, allowed to be admitted".[42]

The law in England as to the opinion of an expert on foreign law is stated by PHIPSON[43] as follows:—

"In civil cases it is now enacted that it is unnecessary that the witness be a practitioner of the system of law as to which he is to give expert testimony. He may be an academic lawyer or indeed be in any other way "appropriately qualified". This provision has not narrowed the range of experts whose testimony the Courts will accept in civil cases to which the general law otherwise applies. In all cases, the expert may be either a professional lawyer or a person peritus virtute officii, i.e., the holder of an official position which requires and therefore implies legal knowledge. Even in cases, other than those governed by the Civil Evidence Act, 1972, there is wide scope; and it is thought that evidence is admissible from any person who from his profession or business has had peculiar means of becoming acquainted with the law in question". The author gives a number of instances where opinion on foreign law was accepted.

PHIPSON[44] further states: "Experts on the subject may refer to Codes and precedents in support of their views; and the passages cited will then be treated as part of their testimony".

5. SCIENCE OR ART

These words include all subjects on which a course of special study or experience is necessary to the formation of an opinion.[45]

The study of certain customs and manners of tribes and castes, of the areas occupied by them, and of other connected matters, comes within the meaning of "science or art" in this section. The words "science or art" are to be broadly construed, the term "science" not being limited to the higher sciences, and the term "art" not being limited to fine arts, but having its original sense of handicraft, carried

---

38. Kisan v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1979 SC 1824.
39. Arshad v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 2893 (para 34) (AP).
40. S. Gopal Reddy v. State of A.P., AIR 1996 SC 2184 (para 27), following Magan Bihari Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1091 at p. 1093.
41. Manorama Devi v. Suresh, 1999 AIHC 3433 (para 36) (MP).
42. Aziz Bano v. Mohammad Ibrahim Hussain, AIR 1925 All 720 : ILR (1925) 47 All 823, 835.
43. 15th Edn. (2000), para 37-57, pages 974-975.
44. 15th Edn. (2000), para 37-58, pages 976.
45. STEPHEN'S DIGEST, 12th Edn., (1946) Art. 49.

beyond the sphere of common pursuits of life into that of "artistic" and "scientific" action. The tests which may be applied in determining whether a particular question is one of scientific nature and, consequently, whether skilled witnesses may pass their opinions upon it are: Is the subject-matter of enquiry such that inexperienced men are unlikely to prove capable of forming a correct judgment upon it without the assistance of experts; that is, does it so far partake of the character of a science or art as to require a course of previous habit or study in order to obtain a competent knowledge of its nature? Books dealing with customs and manners of different castes and tribes are admissible in evidence to prove them.[46]

Where experts are called to pronounce their opinions on scientific questions, they may refresh their memory by referring to professional treatises. The word "science" is comprehensive enough to include the opinion of an expert in footprint.[47]

Exceptional cases cited in treatises cannot overrule clear evidence before the Court[48].

The following instances of expert opinion on science and art are given in PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE[49] :

"The opinions of medical men (under which term unqualified practitioners, hospital students, and dressers have occasionally been permitted to testify, but the evidence of a research student in taxicology is not admissible on a point of medicine) are admissible upon questions within their own provinces—e.g. insanity, the causes of diseases or death, the effects of poisons, the consequences of wounds, the conditions of gestation, the effect of hospitals upon the health of neighbourhood; medical ethics; those of actuaries, or accountants familiar with the business of life insurance, as to the average duration of life with respect to the value of annuities; those of naturalists as to the ability of fish to overcome obstacles in a river; those of an expert in forestry as to the probable object with which certain plantations had been laid out; and so with other branches of science. The opinions of artists, art critics, museum officials, dealers and restorers, are admissible as to the genuineness or merit of a work of art; those of engineers as to the cause of obstruction to a harbour; those of engravers as to the impressions from a seal, or the probability that a will was written over erased pencil marks; those of officers of a fire brigade as to the cause of a fire; those of military men as to a question of military practice; those of post-office clerks as to postmarks; those of shipbuilders, marine surveyors and engineers as to the strength and construction of a ship; and, when the Court is not sitting with assessors, those of nautical men as to the proper navigation of a vessel."

6. IDENTITY OF HANDWRITING

Sections 45 and 47 of the Evidence Act prescribe the method by which signature can be proved. Under Section 45, opinion of the handwriting expert is relevant, while under Section 47 the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person who is alleged to have signed the document, is admissible. It is only if the Court is satisfied that the circumstances irresistibly lead to the inference that the person must have signed the document in question, it can legitimately arrive at a conclusion.[50] There can be other modes through which handwriting can be established, e.g. if a letter is seized from the possession of 'A' and the letter contains the name of sender as well as the name of sendee and if such sendee happens to be 'A' himself, those circumstances even without resorting to the modes indicated in Sections 45 and 47, would be sufficient to draw an inference that the author or even scribe of that letter is the sender and 'A' is the sendee of it.[51]

Both under this section and Section 47, the evidence is of an opinion, in the former by a scientific comparision and in the latter on the basis of familiarity resulting from frequent observations and experience.

Science of identification of handwriting is an imperfect one and courts must be wary in placing implicit reliance on the opinion of a handwriting expert.[52]

---

46. Mahadeo v. Vyankammabai, 1947 Nag 781 : AIR 1948 Nag 287.
47. Basudeo Gir v. State, AIR 1959 Pat 534.
48. Miglani v. Miglani, AIR 1979 SC 879.
49. 15th Edn. (2000), pages 970-971, paras 37-54.
50. Baru Ram v. Prasanni, AIR 1959 SC 93.
51. Gulzar Ali v. State of H.P., (1998) 2 SCC 192 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 605.
52. State of Maharashtra v. Sukhdeo Singh, AIR 1992 SC 2100.

"Experts may give their opinions upon the genuineness of a disputed handwriting, whether ancient or modern, after having compared it with specimens proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine; and they may also, without such comparison, but from their own general knowledge of the subject, give their opinion as to whether the handwriting is a feigned or natural hand. So their opinions are admissible as to the probable date of an ancient writing; or as to whether interlineations were written contemporaneously with the rest of a document."[53]

It is necessary that for the admission of evidence of a handwriting expert the writing with which the comparision is made should be admitted or proved beyond doubt to be that of the person alleged. Mere variation in the appearance of the signatures or handwriting does not disprove the authenticity of the signature or handwriting, because a fine or a stub pen, haste or deliberation, good or bad health, sitting or standing position, drunken or sober state of a person may radically change the appearance or quality of writing. Dissimilarity between the admitted impression of the accused and that on the document due to difference in ink and angle of the impression was held to be superfluous and not of positive impact.[54]

Typewriting also falls within the meaning of the word 'handwriting', hence the opinion of the typewriter expert is admissible in evidence.[55]

The expert opinion on handwriting can raise a suspicion as to the genuineness of a document but it is of no weight unless confirmed by other evidence. The expert must, in addition to lapse of time, take all the above factors into consideration before expressing his final opinion with regard to the signature on a disputed document.[56]

No adverse inference can be drawn from the fact that the opinion of the handwriting expert has not been obtained[57] but where other witnesses also fail to identify the signature of the accused, conviction cannot be based on the testimony of the solitary witness.[58]

If the cross-examining counsel, after putting a paper into the hands of a witness, merely askes him some questions as to its general nature or identity, his adversary will have no right to see the document, but, if the paper be used to refresh the memory of the witness, or if any question be put respecting its contents, or as to the handwriting in which it is written, a sight of the document may then be demanded by the opposite counsel.[59]

When the handwriting or documents relied upon by the prosecution was proved to be that of the accused by the expert's opinion, and the persons acquainted with the writing of the accused, and the court itself found a large measure of similarity between the signature of the accused on the documents in question and his admitted signatures, it was held that the conviction could be sustained under the Prevention of Corruption Act.[60]

The evidence of a handwriting expert, unlike that of a finger print expert is generally of a frail character and its fallibilities have quite often been noticed. The court should, therefore, be wary of attaching too much weight to the evidence of handwriting expert. Conclusions based upon mere comparison of handwriting must at best be indecisive and must yield to the positive evidence in the case.[61] It is a rule of law that it is extremely unsafe to base a conviction upon the opinion of handwriting expert without substantial corroboration, because comparison of handwriting as a mode of proof is always hazardous and inconclusive and by its very nature weak and infirm.[62] The opinion of a

---

53. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), para 37-56, page 973..

54. Arjan Singh v. Hazara Singh, AIR 1979 SC 1236.

55. State v. S.J. Choudhary, 1996 Cr LJ 1713 (paras 15, 17 and 18) (SC), overruling Hanumant v. State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1952 SC 343 : 1952 SCR 1091 and reversing Cri Revn No. 105 of 1987 (Del).

56. Govardhan Das v. Ahmadi Begum, (1953) Hyd 140 : AIR 1953 Hyd 181.

57. Srichand v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1967 SC 450.

58. State of Haryana v. Parmanand, 1995 Cr LJ 396 (para 13) (P&H).

59. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 1452, p. 925; Jarat Kumari Dassi v. Bissessur Dutt, ILR (1911) 39 Cal 245.

60. Ram Pyarelal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1980 SC 1523.

61. Bhagwan Kuar v. M.K. Sharma, AIR 1973 SC 1346; Kishore Chandra v. Babu Ganesh Prasad, AIR 1954 SC 316; Kameswar Rao v. Swhyanarayana Rao, AIR 1962 AP 178; Annapurnamma v. Saukara Rao, AIR 1960 AP 359.

62. Sudhindra Nath Dutt v. The King, AIR 1952 Cal 422; Magan Biharilal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1091, followed in S. Gopal Reddy v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 3235 (para 27) (SC); Chandreshwar Singh v. Ramchandra Singh, AIR 1973 Pat 215; K. Malaiah v. State of Mysore, AIR 1956 Mys 9; Ishwari Prasad v. Md. Isa, AIR 1963 SC 1728; Ram Chandra v. State, AIR 1957 SC 381; Shashi Kumar v. Subodh Kumar, AIR 1964 SC 529; Public handwriting expert, given in evidence, is no less fallible than any other expert's opinion, but such opinion is worthy of acceptance if there is internal or external evidence relating to the writing in question supporting the expert's view. The question in each case falls for determination on the Court's appreciation of the evidence.[63] It is not safe to treat expert evidence as to handwriting as sufficient basis for conviction; it may be relied upon, along with other various items of external and internal evidence relating to the documents in question.[64] The expert's evidence as to handwriting is opinion evidence and it can rarely, if ever, take the place of substantive evidence. Before acting on such evidence, it is usual to see if it is corroborated either by clear, direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence. Where the question was whether the will was executed on the date on which it was purported to have been executed and there were no suspicious circumstances attached to the will, it was held that the mere opinion of the handwriting expert that it was executed much later could not override the positive evidence of the attesting witness, especially when the former had not applied any chemical tests which, according to his own opinion, were essential.[65] Opinion of handwriting expert is not sufficient by itself to prove genuineness of handwriting, unless there is substantial corroboration by other evidence.[66] It may be hazardous to base a conviction solely on the opinion of handwriting expert, as the science of identification of handwriting is not so perfect. In appropriate cases, corroboration may be sought, although there is no rule of law, or rule of prudence which has crystallised into a rule of law, that opinion evidence must never be acted upon unless substantially corroborated.[67] However, the Supreme Court held that there was no rule of law, nor any rule of prudence which has crystalised into a rule of law, that opinion evidence of a handwriting expert must never be acted upon unless substantially corroborated.[68] The opinion of the handwriting expert is not conclusive but is in the nature of opinion evidence. It is, therefore, clear that a conclusion cannot be based entirely on evidence of a handwriting expert; there must be independent evidence or other cogent circumstantial evidence.[69] A conviction cannot be based upon the opinion of the handwriting experts, without corroboration, because comparison of handwriting as a mode of proof is hazardous and inconclusive, unless it is corroborated by other evidence.[70] The Court can act on the opinion of handwriting expert without corroboration.[71] But handwriting must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt and not merely on a balance of probabilities as in civil cases.[72] In cases where the reasons for the opinion are convincing, and there is no reliable evidence throwing a doubt, the uncorroborated testimony of a handwriting expert may be accepted. There cannot be any inflexible rule on a matter which, in the ultimate analysis, is no more than a question of testimonial weight.[73] An expert's opinion can be accepted without corroboration if it is well reasoned and acceptable.[74]

Though the opinion of a handwriting expert on the question of the handwriting of a person is relevant it is not conclusive and the handwriting of the person can be proved by other means also.[75]

Prosecutor, AP v. P.P. Reddy, 1978 Mad LJ (Cri) 574; Issar Nonia v. Karinan Pandey, AIR 1958 Pat 353; V.S. Abdul Sattar v. Supdt. of Police, Cochin, 1987 Cr LJ 1670; Vandavasi Karthikeya v. S. Kamalamma, AIR 1994 AP 102 (para 29).

63. Ram Narain v. State of UP, AIR 1973 SC 2200; Fakhruddin v. State of MP, AIR 1967 SC 1326; Tul Mohan Ram v. State, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 223.
64. Ramachandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381; Ablayanand Misra v. State of Bihar, AIR 1959 Pat 328; Kameshwarnath v. State, 1957 Cr LJ 276; Sriramulu Naidu v. State, 1962—1 An LT 57; Baidyanath Gosh v. Smt. Shefali Gosh, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 812.
65. Shashikumar Banarjee v. Subhodkumar Banarjee, AIR 1964 SC 529; Siddheswar Prasad Singh v. Bhaba Sundari, AIR 1978 Cal 4; Sher Bahadur v. State of Bihar, (1967) 2 SCWR 829.
66. Gotta Sriramulu Naido v. State, (1962) 1 A.L.T. 57.
67. B.K. Kutti v. State, 1984 Cr LJ 1289; Guta Sriramulu Naidu v. State of A.P., 1963 : 2 CrLJ 546 : (1962) : 1 An LT 57.
68. AIR Murarilal v. State of M.P., 1980 SC 531.
69. Altaf Hussain v. Nasreen Zohra, AIR 1978 All 515; Sunil Kumar Singh v. L.I.C. of India, AIR 1976 Cal 224; Natabar Behera v. Balakrishna Das, AIR 1987 Ori 7.
70. Maundra Chandra Lala v. Mahalukshmi Bank, 1945 PC 105; Sudendranath v. King, AIR 1953 Cal 422; Ramchandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381; Ishwari Prasad Mishra v. Mohammad, AIR 1963 SC 1728. (handwriting experts, opinion can never be conclusive because it is, after all, opinion evidence).
71. Murari Lal v. State of M.P., AIR 1980 SC 531 at 536.
72. R v. Ewing, (1983) 2 All ER 645, noted All ER Annual Rev. 1983 at 196.
73. Murarilal v. State of M.P., AIR 1980 SC 531.
74. 1978 All Cr Cases 223.
75. State of Gujarat v. Vinaya Chandra, AIR 1967 SC 778; Sridhar Jena v. State, (1970) 36 Cut. LT 1251; T. Subbiah v. Ramaswamy, AIR 1970 Mad 85; Jogendra Prasad v. Joy Kanta Roy, AIR 1971 Ass 168.

Where an expert opinion is given, the Court must see for itself and, with the assistance of the expert, come to its own conclusion whether it can safely be held that the two writings are by the same person. This is not to say that the Court must play the role of an expert, but to say that the Court may accept the fact proved only when it has satisfied itself on its observation that it is safe to accept the opinion of the expert or the witness.[76] Before forming an opinion about the genuineness of handwriting, the Court must consider the evidence of the expert and the opinion of a person familiar with the handwriting of the alleged writer of it.[77] It is unsafe for the court to rely entirely on personal comparison of the disputed signatures with the admitted signatures.[78] Evidence of handwriting expert has to be accepted after exercising great caution, and the court is given power to compare the handwritings on the questioned documents and come to its own finding, irrespective of the report given by the expert.[79] As the opinion of handwriting expert is not conclusive, the court, as a matter of prudence and caution, should hesitate or be slow to base its findings solely on such expert's opinion.[80] If the judge is not conversant with the language of the document, it is undesirable of a judge deciding the question of genuineness of the writing on his own inspection of the documents.[81] It was not advisable for the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar Council to base its conclusion purely on the basis of its own comparison of the handwriting, especially when the matter related to a charge of professional misconduct which is quasi-criminal in nature requiring proof beyond reasonable doubt.[82] Section 45 and Section 73 are not bar to a judge comparing the admitted signatures with the disputed signatures.[83] The Court can, when unaided by an expert, compare the handwritings in the disputed documents and the admitted document, with the assistance of lawyers appearing in the case.[84]

The difficulty is that expert evidence on handwriting is of a class by itself and, basically, unlike the other expert evidence, such as, on poisons or blood or finger print. Even when it comes from the best and most experienced handwriting expert, it does not carry that degree of absolute or relative certainty as the other types of experts' evidence. Though there is nothing wrong in the Court basing its conviction on the expert's evidence alone in certain cases, it is not safe to rely in every case.[85]

Where the Court's opinion agreed with the expert as to handwriting, a conviction was upheld.[86] The conviction of a guard for forging a railway receipt, only on the evidence of handwriting expert was set aside.[87]

Proof of handwriting by an expert is no proof of the facts in the document.[88] Proof of handwriting is not tantamount to correctness of contents.[89]

A handwriting expert is, after all, a witness of a particular party, who cannot be compelled to choose a witness according to the dictation of the opposite party.[90]

The evidence of the witnesses on oath that the signatures were written in their presence by the signatory, should be given preference to the opinion of the expert.[91]

The Court can direct an accused to give his specimen handwriting for purpose of establishing the same after comparison with the disputed signature, by the handwriting expert. The power can be

---

76. Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326.
77. Jogendra Prasad Singh v. Joy Kanta Roy, AIR 1971 Assam 168.
78. Saurendra Mohan Basu v. Saroj Ranjan Sarkar, AIR 1961 Cal 461 (FB); Major Stanley Hugh Barker v. Patricia May Barker, AIR 1955 MB 103 (FB); O. Bharathan v. K. Sudhakaran, AIR 1996 SC 1140 (paras 18-22), relying on State (Delhi Administrative) v. Pali Ram, AIR 1979 SC 14 and reversing EP No. 4 of 1991, Dt. 10-8-1992 (Ker).
79. Pranendra Mohandas v. Central Bank of India, AIR 1978 Cal 55.
80. Alavddin v. Sishir Kumar Datta, AIR 1989 Gau 42.
81. Cabestine Silva Bai v. Josephine, AIR 1956 Mad 566.
82. Prahlad Saran Gupta v. Bar Council of India, AIR 1997 SC 1338, relying on State v. Paliram, AIR 1979 SC 14.
83. Bisseswar Poddar v. Nabadwip Chandra Poddar, AIR 1961 Cal 300.
84. Bhupendra Narain Mandal v. Narayinlal Das, AIR 1965 Pat 332.
85. State of M.P. v. Dhananlal Moriji, (1961) 2 Cr LJ 238 MP.
86. Ram Pyarelal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1980 SC 1523.
87. Magan Bihari Lal v. Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1091.
88. Ramji Dayawala and Sons Pvt. Ltd. v. Invest Import, AIR 1981 SC 2085.
89. Ramji Dayawala Sons v. Invest Import, AIR 1981 SC 2095.
90. ILR (1968) 1 Mad 805.
91. Govardhan Das v. Ahmadi Begum, AIR 1953 Hyd 181. See also Satrangi Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 969 (para 22) (P&H).

exercised suo motu or on application of a party.[1] Where specimen of handwriting were obtained under the directions of the SDM who was neither conducting the enquiry nor was the trial fixed before him and there was no evidence to show that the accused gave the specimen voluntarily, such a lacuna affects the relevancy of the evidence of the expert and in the circumstances the specimen could not be said to mean to assist the "Court to form its opinion" as envisaged by Section 45.[2]

In obtaining a specimen handwriting, as far as possible the same type of paper, the same colour of ink and the same kind of medium as were used in the disputed handwriting should be used.[3] It would not be desirable to allow the disputed document to be handed over to the expert at a place outside the court. It may be proper and desirable to have the documents examined by the expert in the court itself, and/or he may be permitted to take photographic copies of the document, so as to ensure the safety of the document, or for preventing it from being tampered with.[4]

A clever forger will try to give the forged signature as much resemblance as possible to a genuine signature. But, the personal characteristics of the writing or signature of a particular individual are often an unfailing guide in determining the question of genuineness of writing; and it is often a difficult work for a stranger or for a forger to reproduce faithfully all such characteristics in the writings forged by him.[5]

Merely considering similarities between disputed and admitted handwriting, without comparing the dissimilarities, is not sufficient for the Court, for convicting an accused.[6] In examining the disputed documents, the true test is not the extent of the similarities observed when compared with genuine documents, as forged documents usually are good imitations of genuine documents, but the nature and extent of the dissimilarities noticed. It is that difference which exposes the true character of the documents in question.[7] Where there were consistent dissimilarities in the general features of the disputed handwriting and the admitted signature and handwriting, opinion of the expert that the disputed handwriting tallied with the specimen handwriting could not be sustained.[8] It is well-known that the handwriting experts need plenty of comparative material before they can reach a conclusion. For better appreciation, the signatures have to be magnified to an equal extent, superimposed and lines drawn to find out the angles, to measure the lengths of the various strokes, to find their taperings, and so on.[9]

A person who is not well versed in a particular language cannot testify as an expert as to handwriting.[10] Where the expert is not acquainted with the language of the script and is not competent to understand it, still his opinion is admissible, and it will be given due weight if it is confirmed by direct evidence of persons who had actually seen the signing of the document.[11]

Where the alleged admitted signature is not proved to be that of the accused and if it is compared with the disputed signatures by an expert it is of no value as it would not connect the accused person with the crime.[12] Any comparison of a disputed handwriting must be done when there is admitted or proved handwriting; otherwise it would be a case of a blind leading the blind.[13]

After a severe attack of malaria or some virulent disease, the patient may recover within a week, and there may be tremor in his hand, as compared to the signature which he may have made a week or 10

---

1. State v. Paliram, AIR 1979 SC 14; State of Mysore v. C.V. Gopala Raj, AIR 1954 Mys 117, Guru Nanak Construction Company v. Jai Bharat Steel Rolling Mills, ILR (1977) 1 Punj 565; Contra:—Babubhai v. Ishwarlal Devchand, AIR 1975 Guj 96; Kumaran Nair v. Bhargavi, 1988, Cr LJ 1000; (husband denying his signature on a letter).
2. Amarjit Singh v. State of Punjab, (1998) 8 SCC 613 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1609.
3. Abdul Gani v. Devi Lal, AIR 1960 Raj 77 : (1960) 10 Raj 152.
4. Doraiswamy Gounder v. Prayaammal, AIR 1976 Mad 66.
5. Bisseswar Poddar v. Nabadwip Chandra Poddar, AIR 1961 Cal 300.
6. (1962) 40 Mys LJ 880.
7. Raviappa v. Nilakant Rao, AIR 1962 Mys 53; Ambal Bagyan v. Ramayya Padayachi, AIR 1955 Mad 88.
8. Bhargav K. Salunkhe v. State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1228 (paras 10 and 11) (Bom), relying on Magan Bihari Lal v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1091 : 1977 Cr LJ 711.
9. Chakrapani Jagannath Prasad v. Chandoo Sahadeo, AIR 1959 MP 84.
10. Gulabchand v. Satya, AIR 1983 All 54.
11. Parbathi Sham Achary v. Mansidevi (Smt.), AIR 1977 Ori 139.
12. State of Rajasthan v. Dr. Sharma, 1983 Cr LJ 858.
13. Vembu Ammal v. Esakki Pillai, AIR 1949 Mad 419; State of Bihar v. Kailashprasad, AIR 1961 Pat 451.

days prior to the illness. Such facts also should be taken into consideration by the handwriting experts before expressing their final opinion.[14]

The comparison of handwriting is not a perfect science. Deviations in signature can arise due to natural variations and various other causes. Therefore, it would not be safe to rely solely on the testimony of the handwriting expert.[15]

Where there is overwhelmning evidence in proof of the handwriting, the opinion of the expert to the contrary is of no value.[16] Where the question was whether a pronote was forged, it was held that expert opinion could not prevail over the evidence of eye-witnesses.[17]

Though an expert's opinion is not substantive evidence, the request of a party to a suit to send the document for his opinion on the handwriting, cannot always be rejected on the ground of risk in parting with the document, if the expert is a Government Expert of State Forensic Science Laboratory.[18]

When the opinion of one expert was given, no useful purpose would be served in obtaining a second expert's opinion, as both the opinions are mere opinions and, at the most, one opinion may whittle down the former one. It is necessary for the court to come to its conclusion by comparing the handwritings.[19]

The proof of genuineness of a document is proof of the authorship of the document, and is proof of a fact like that of any other fact. It may be proof of handwriting, or the contents, or of the signature by one of the modes provided in Sections 45 and 47 of the Evidence Act. It may also be proved by internal evidence afforded by the contents of the document. The last mode of proof by the contents may be of considerable value where the disputed document purports to be a link in a chain of correspondence, some links which are proved to the satisfaction of the court; in such a situation, the person who is the recipient of the document, be it either a letter or a telegram, would be in a reasonably good position, both with reference to his prior knowledge of the writing or the signature of the alleged sender, limited though it may be, as also his knowledge of the subject matter of the chain of correspondence, to speak to its authorship.[20]

When the expert was not having special qualifications to give an opinion on the handwriting, and the books alleged to be forged were not produced before the court, to enable to form its own opinion, it was held that the accused was entitled to acquittal.[21]

Opinion sent by a handwriting expert cannot be admissible unless he is examined as a witness and he subjects himself to cross-examination.[22]

Where the disputed signatures appear to belong to a class different from the group of admitted signatures, it is certainly one of those cases where expert evidence would be of great help.[23]

In regard to the genuineness of documents, where questions of handwriting or thumb mark are in dispute, it was held that the correct opinion as to the genuineness of a signature or thumb mark could only be formed after it had been examined by the expert.[24]

The opinion of the handwriting expert can be sought for determining the age of the disputed handwriting.[25] Where it was alleged by the drawer that his cheque book was stolen by the complainant and his signature was forged by him but the cheque was dishonoured not on the ground that the signature did not match but on the ground of insufficiency of funds and the established circumstantial evidence was so patent that it led to only one conclusion that the signature on the cheque was not forged, there was

---

14. Goverdhan Das v. Ahmadi Begum, AIR 1953 Hyd 181.
15. Veenu Handa v. Narinder Kumar Handa, AIR 1984 Punj &H 99; Piara Singh v. Jagtarsingh, AIR 1987 Punj &H 93.
16. Banarsi Stores v. President of Union of India, AIR 1953 All 318.
17. Brij Basi v. Moti Ram, AIR 1982 All 323.
18. (1975) 88 Mad LW 71.
19. Girija Kuer v. Ambika Devi, 1978 Hindu LR 61 : 1978 2 APLJ (HC) 403.
20. Mobarik Ali Ahmed v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857.
21. Sripada Sinai Duclo v. State, 1976 CrLJ 145 (Goa).
22. Parvat Vedu Patil v. Sukder Shivram Patil, AIR 1956 Bom 617. See also State of Maharashtra v. Damu Gopinath Shinde, 2000 Cr LJ 2301 (paras 40 and 41) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1691.
23. Venkataswami v. Lakshminaraina Chetty, AIR 1959 AP 204.
24. Amarsingh v. Gangoo, AIR 1956 Bhopal 6.
25. Uppu Jhansi Lakshmi Bai v. J. Venkateswara Rao, AIR 1994 AP 90 (paras 7 and 8), relying on Shashi Kumar Banerjee v. Subodh Kumar Banerjee, AIR 1964 SC 529, at 537.

no need for an opinion of a handwriting expert.[26] In another case of dishonour of cheques dismissal of application for sending the disputed cheques to handwriting and fingerprint experts pending for the past two years at the belated stage of trial was upheld[27] but where the accused denied the selling of adulterated eatables and alleged that the Food Inspector had forged the signature purported to be that of the accused on the documents on which the prosecution relied in support of its allegations, it was held to be improper to refuse to send the documents for comparison to handwriting expert.[28] Admittance of the execution of a document cannot be the sole ground to reject the application for reference of the document to the handwriting expert.[29]

7. FINGER PRINT

Science of identifying thumb impression is an exact science and does not admit of any mistake or doubt.[30] The identification of finger impressions with the aid of a good magnifying glass is not difficult, particularly when the photographs of latent and patent impressions are pasted side by side, as the science of comparison of finger prints has developed to a stage of exactitude.[31]

Where an expert had given no reasons in support of his opinion, nor was it shown that he possessed special skill, knowledge and experience in the science of identification of finger prints, the Supreme Court did not consider it safe to rely upon his opinion, even if it was supposed to be admissible under Section 45 (identification of finger prints).[32]

A majority of finger prints found at a crime scene or on crime articles are partially smudged, and it is for the experienced and skilled finger print expert to say whether a mark is usable as finger print evidence; similarly, it is for a competent techinician to examine them and to give his opinion whether the identity can be established, and, if so, whether that can be done on eight or even less identical characteristics in an appropriate case.[33] The genuineness or otherwise of a signature or thumb mark can be formed only after it has been examined by an expert[34] and the thumb impression on the document in question cannot be compared by the Court itself.[35]

The court should examine the expert as to how much experience he has had by way of comparison of finger prints, as to how much literature on the subject he had studied; if the finger prints are clear enough, the court must verify the evidence of the expert by examining the finger prints with a magnifying glass, as to the similarities and dissimilarities afforded by the finger prints, before coming to a conclusion.[36] The court cannot delegate its authority to the expert, but has to satisfy itself as to the value of the evidence of the expert in the same way as it must satisfy itself as to the value of any other evidence. Though the evidence of a handwriting expert is frequently found to be faulty, the evidence of a thumb impression expert is more reliable, because with regard to finger prints, it has never been found that two finger prints are identical in all respects.[37]

In State v. Parameshwaran,[38] it was held that the practice of taking the thumb impressions of an accused under the direction of the court, and using it against him is in strict compliance with Section 45.

---

26. L.C. Goyal v. Suresh Joshi, AIR 1998 SC 2222 (para 5).

27. K. Lakshmanan v. S. Kevichandran, 2001 Cr LJ 1549 (para 10) (Mad). Application to appoint handwriting expert only at appellate stage and that too after a period of 10 years from date of filing appeal, rejected. Girish Vinayakrao Naik v. S. Shangramappa Kkandala, AIR 2001 Kant 210 (para 4).

28. Kadambala Gopala Krishna v. State of A.P., 2000 Cr LJ 797 (paras 6 and 7) (AP).

29. Resina Balakrishnan v. State Bank of Travancore, 2001 AIHC 4085 (Kant).

30. Jaspal Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1979 SC 1708; Nasib Singh v. State of Punjab, ILR (1974) 1 Punj 285; Hukum Singh v. Udham Kaur, (1969) 71 Punj LR 908; P.M. Veeravu v. Kunju Moideen, 1996 AIHC 3847 (para 5) (Ker).

31. In re : Govinda Reddy, AIR 1958 Mys 150.

32. Mahmood v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 69, 73; Md. Ekramul Haq v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 488.

33. Mohanlal v. Ajit Singh, AIR 1978 SC 1183.

34. Amarsingh v. Gangoo, AIR 1956 Bhopal 16.

35. Inum Beevi v. K.S. Syed Ahamad Kabir, 2001 AIHC 756 (para 19) (Mad) ; AIR 2001 NOC 25 (Mad).

36. Bhaluka Behara v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 172.

37. Golam Rahman v. King, AIR 1950 Cal 66; (explaining Harendranath v. Emperor, AIR 1931 Cal 441; Baluka Behara v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 172.)

38. (1952) Tra & Co. 482 (FB); reversing 1950 Tra & Co. 5.

illus. (c) and Section 73 of the Evidence Act. Also Section 5 of the identification of Prisoners Act 33/1920. Act 33/1920 authorised taking impression in court for purpose of comparison.[39]

The court will not send a document in its custody to the expert for the examination, but can allow the finger print expert to examine the document in the court and to have photographic copies of the same for his investigation.[40]

The Supreme Court held that it would be highly unsafe to convict on a capital charge without any independent corroboration of the opinion of the finger print expert.[41] The court must satisfy itself about the correctness of the conclusions by comparisons of the prints; it cannot be laid down as a rule of law that it is unsafe to have conviction on the uncorroboratd testimony of a finger print expert. The true law is one of caution.[42]

Where the finger print expert fails to give reasons for his opinion, in his certificate, but has given reasons at the time of the examination in court, and when they are not challenged in the cross-examination, his evidence was held to be admissible.[43] Setting out the reasons at length, in the report by the finger print expert, will help to clarify his ideas and would furnish a valuable guide to the parties and to the court in testing the value to be attached to the opinion. It would also be fair to the persons against whom the opinions are to be used, that the reasons for that opinion are definitely expressed.[44] It is the duty of the finger print expert to explain how he came to the conclusion. It is the duty of the court to scrutinise the evidence or make a comparison of the impressions personally. The ipse dixit of the expert should not be accepted and acted upon. It is not the moral conviction which the expert has that matters. He must rule out the possibility of all reasonable doubts about the identity of the impressions.[45] The testimony of the Director of Finger Prints Bureau, which was supported by cogent and correct reasons, can be accepted in preference to that of a private expert.[46]

The court is bound to summon the expert if the accused files an application for his examination; if no such application is filed, the grievance of the accused about the report of the expert being used without his examination in court has no substance.[47]

MARSHALL HONTS, in his Treatise "FROM EVIDENCE TO PROOF" (pages 275-287) points out some important points to be noted for purpose of appreciation of finger prints expert's evidence:—

1. No two prints, whether made by different persons or by different fingers of the same person, have ever been found identical.
2. The patterns of friction ridge on the inside of the palms or fingers, toes or bottoms remain unchanged as to the basic pattern until the body decomposes after the death. Growth of the body increases the size of the print.
3. The friction ridges—lines roughly parallel to each other produce eight basic patterns:— plain-arch, tented arch, radial loop, ulnar loop, plain whorl, double loop, central pocket loop and accidental.
4. When non-porous object is touched or gripped with sufficient pressure, this film transferred to the object in the exact pattern of the friction ridges. The film residue is called a latent finger print and may be deposited on metal, glass, wood, finished leather, plastic, soap, cheese, butter, china, apples, paper and almost any non-porous substance.

---

39. See also King-Emperor v. Kiran Bala Dassi, AIR 1926 Cal 531; Emperor v. Virammal, AIR 1923 Mad 178; Public Prosecutor v. Kanda Swami, AIR 1927 Mad 696; Emperor v. Ramarao, AIR 1932 Bom 406; Gulam Rehaman v. King, AIR 1950 Cal 66; Sheo Karain v. Rawat, AIR 1986 P&H 174.
40. Ta Narisimhan v. Narayand Chbttiar, (1968) 2 Mad LJ 48.
41. Mahmood v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 69.
42. State of M.P. v. Sitaram, 1978 MPLJ 197 : 1978 Cr LJ 1220; State v. Karu Gope, AIR 1954 Pat 131; Golam Rehaman v. King, AIR 1950 Cal 66; Emperor v. Faker Muhammed, ILR 60 Bom 187; differing from Jassa Ram v. Crown, ILR 4 Lah 236.
43. State of M.P. v. Sitaram, 1970 Mad LJ (Cri) 161 (Mys).
44. State v. Karu Gope, AIR 1954 Pat 131.
45. In re : Godavarthi Bashyakaracharyulu, AIR 1960 AP. 164.
46. (1974) 1 Cr LJ 45 (Punj).
47. Phoolkumar v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1975 SC 905.

Under this section, the reasons as well as the question given by a finger print expert, as to the identity of a palm impression, are admissible in evidence.[48]

In R. v. Court,[49] finger prints on the windscreen of a car were treated as insufficient evidence of the possession of the car.

Where photographs of impression of fingerprints taken earlier were not enough to enable the expert to come to any definite conclusion and their photographs were taken for the second time, raising suspicion about the photographs taken for the second time without cross-examining the photographer, was held to be not proper.[50] No sanctity can be attached to the evidence of the fingerprint expert where the chance fingerprints found at the scene of offence, were developed and photographed, without examining the photographer and filing of the photographs and evidence to show that the fingerprints of the accused were taken before a Magistrate.[51]

8. FOOT PRINT

The Supreme Court in Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab[52] observed: "The science of identification of footprints is no doubt a rudimentary science, and much reliance cannot be placed on the result of such identification. Evidence relating to footprints, if found satisfactory, may be used only to reinforce the conclusions as to the identity of a culprit already arrived at on the basis of other evidence.[53] The track evidence, however, can be relied upon as a circumstance which, along with other circumstances, would point to the identity of the culprit, though by itself, it would not be enough to carry conviction in the mind of the court".[54]

In a murder case, before relying on the opinion of the expert as to footprints found near the corpse of the deceased, as conclusive evidence against the accused, the Judge should form his opinion with regard to the identity of the footprints found near the corpse with the foodprint of the accused.[55]

Section 45 does not include footprints within its ambit, as it does the finger impressions. Notwithstanding this omission, the evidence of footprint expert has been admitted with the qualification that there should be other evidence to bring home the charge to the accused. The rule on the point is that the opinion of the foot print expert would not by itself suffice to base conviction on, and the rule has been applied to the testimony of other experts including experts on fingerprints.[56]

HORWILL J., of the Madras High Court observed: "The opinion of a footprint expert is not admissible as evidence. If the court is to make any use at all of footprint impressions, it must be satisfied, from a comparison of the various footprints, that they are those of the persons whose the expert says they are. The value of evidence with regard to footprints is obviously very much less trustworthy than evidence with regard to fingerprints..... With regard to footprints, on the other hand, it would seem from the evidence and from what we have been able to read from DR. HANS GROSS'S book ON CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION, that one can only compare with the general shape of footprints found, with the shape of impressions taken from the feet of the person suspected; even in this limited comparison, one has not the same certainty as one would have in comparing fingerprints, because foot impressions vary considerably according to the circumstances under which they are made. Foot prints made when a person is walking slowly or fast, or running slowly or fast, or jumping, all create differences, which are material. Moreover, a footprint taken after a person has walked a considerable distance, as was the case here when the murder was committed, is larger than a footprint taken when a person has been at rest, as was the case when 48. Emperor v. Babulal Behari, (1928) 30 Bom LR 312 : AIR 1928 Bom 158 : ILR 52 Bom 223; Bhaluka Behara v. State, AIR 1957 Ori 172 : ILR 1957 Cut 200 (thumb impression of one was disputed by the other. The court was competent to ask for specimen impressions for self-comparison); Sheo Narain v. Rahat, AIR 1986 P&H 174.

---

49. (1960) 44 Cr App R. 242.
50. Ammini v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 260 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 (para 18) (SC).
51. Manepalli Anjaneyulu v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 4375 (para 31) (AP).
52. AIR 1956 SC 415. Also see Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2960 : 1997 Cr LJ 3567.
53. Mohd. Aman v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2960 : 1997 Cr LJ 3567.
54. Bhulakiram Koiri v. State, ILR (1969) 1 Cal 39 : 1970 Cr LJ 403; State v. Sankariya, ILR (1976) 26 Raj 696 : 1977 CrLJ 684; Basudeo Gir v. State, AIR 1959 Pat 534.
55. Fakir Chand v. State, AIR 1955 MB 119 : 1955 CrLJ 1073 (FB); Fakir Chand Nandram v. State, AIR 1950 MB 76; In re : Pullayya, AIR 1941 Mad 88; In re : Goomayan, 1942 Mad 452 (2).
56. Ganesh Gogoi v. State, AIR 1955 Assam 51.

footprints were taken from the various persons in the sub-jail, including some of the accused and p.w. 10"... The learned judge then referred to John Adam's Translation of DR. HANS GROSS'S book at p. 532 which is as follows:— "Much prudence must here be exercised (in taking measurements) and nothing undertaken which shows no chances of success. On the one hand, the foot itself varies considerably, e.g., it is much smaller in cold weather or after a long march; on the other hand, it is difficult to measure, inasmuch as it is not a regular body and must be measured differently according to the parts dealt with.[57]

T.P. NAIK J., of M.P. High Court in Surajpal Singh v. State of M.P.[58] explaining the decision of the Supreme Court in Pritam Singh v. State of Punjab[59] observed: "It was however, unfortunate that it was not brought to the notice of the Court (SC) that the identification of persons from footprints has many facets and that all these facets could not be clubbed together and science of identification from footprints dubbed as rudimentary science. The judge considered in detail the subject of footprints in the light of various authorities and observed that the knowledge of footprints has been systematised all over the world and the matter is therefore undoubtedly a science and the opinion of a person specially skilled in it is relevant under Section 45.

In the above case, disputed footprints in blood near a dead body and going towards the bathroom, were compared with those of the accused taken in printers ink. The expert gave evidence giving points of nine similarities in respect of the right foot and ten in respect of the left foot; and three dissimilarities only in each case and explained the dissimilarities with reference to the different densities of blood and ink. It was held that the comparison stood the test well and under the circumstances these foot impressions in blood near the place of incident, were proved to be those of the accused. But on other facts the High Court acquitted the accused.

Where the incident took place in a ploughed field and many people had visited the sight before the arrival of the investigating officer and it was not explained whether the accused was given to wear the seized footwears when specimen moulds were prepared or not, no reliance could be placed on the result of identification.[60]

9. TRACKER DOG

In Abdul Razak Murtaza Dafadar v. State of Maharashtra[61]; the Supreme Court has expressed the opinion that in the present state of scientific knowledge, evidence of dog-tracking, even if admissible, is not ordinarily of much weight. The South African appellate decision can regard such evidence as unreliable.[62]

Evidence of tracker dog is of little importance. No adverse inference can be drawn against the prosecution simply because the tracker was not examined by the prosecutor.[63] However, it was observed that in construing the words 'science or art' a static view can no longer be tenable since expert testimony on subjects like telephony, psychiatry, identification of foot marks and tracker evidence is now admitted.[64]

Tracker dog's evidence must pass the test of scrutiny and reliability as in the case of any other evidence.[65] Genuineness of dog tracking evidence need not necessarily be tested in the restricted terms of availability or non-availability of a drawn panchnama supported by the testimony of the dog handler.[66] Where in a case of murder, the dogs of the police dog squad pointed towards the husband of

---

57. In re : Parambhan Mamadu, AIR 1951 Mad 737.
58. 1972 Cr LJ 1668
59. AIR 1956 SC 415.
60. Niranjan Lal v. State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 248 (para 17) (P&H), relying on Chandran Surendran v. State of Kerala, (1990) 3 Rec Cri R 644 : 1990 Cr LJ 2296.
61. AIR 1970 SC 283.
62. R v. Tupedo, 1960 AC 58. Such Evidnce was however received in Scotland Paterson v. Nixon, 1960 SC (J) 42, in Northern Ireland R. v. Montgomery, 1966 NI 120 and in New Zealand R. v. Lindsay, 1970 NTLR 1002. (It would however be necessary for evidence about the training skill and habits of the dog and its handler.)
63. Ramla v. State, ILR (1962) 12 Raj 144 : (1963) 1 CrLJ 387.
64. Chhat Ram v. State of Haryana, ILR (1975) 1 Punj 327.
65. Babu Magbul Shaikh v. State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2808 (Bom). See also Bhadran v. State of Kerala, 1995 Cr LJ 676 (para 24) (Ker).
66. Ashok Gavade v. State of Goa, 1995 Cr LJ 943 (para 33) (Bom), distinguishing Abdul Razak Murtaza Dafadar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1970 SC 283 : 1970 Cr LJ 373.

the victim, it was held to be not a circumstance which could exclude the possibility of guilt of any other person other than that of the accused or be compatible only with the hypothesis of the guilt of the accused/husband.[67]

10. TYPEWRITTEN DOCUMENTS

The Supreme Court observed that the High Court rightly held that an opinion of experts on a typed document namely, that a particular letter was typed on a particular machine, does not fall within the ambit of Section 45 and is inadmissible. They observed that this view of the High Court was not contested before them.[68]

Explaining the above Supreme Court case, the Punjab High Court held that whatever may have been the state of law in earlier times, in construing the words 'science or art' in Section 45, a static view can no longer be tenable since expert testimony on subjects like telephony, psychiatry, identification of footmarks and trackers evidence is now admitted. There is no reason not to accept expert testimony in regard to printed or type-script words.[69]

The Supreme Court has observed that there has been rapid development in the field of Forensic Science and the question whether the opinion of an expert in regard to type script falls within Section 45 has to be decided, as Hanumantha's case was decided only by three Judges.[70]

Opinion of a person, who claimed to be an expert on typewritten documents, to prove that two different documents were typed on the same typewriter is not admissible under this section. Such a person cannot also be permitted to point out the similarities between the documents in respect of their typing or the defects which might enable the court to come to a conclusion as to whether the documents were or were not typed on the same typewriter. It is not permissible for a court to compare photographic enlargements and measurements of the letters in two documents and to arrive at a conclusion as to whether they were typed on the same typewriter or not.[71]

11. BALLISTIC EXPERT

Where the opinion is given by the ballistic expert after conducting all necessary tests, and there is no reason to distrust his opinion, it can be accepted.[72] Where the ballistic expert stated that he came to the conclusion that the fired cartridges could not have been fired through any other firearm except the firearm recovered, because every firing pin, scrape, and breach face mark has its own individuality, it was held that the evidence of the expert could be relied upon in convicting the accused when such testimony corroborated the evidence of the eye-witnesses.[73] Where the prosecution case was that the accused shot the deceased with a gun, and there were infirmities in the evidence, and when it was suggested, whether the injuries were caused by the rifle, it was held that it was only the evidence of a ballistic expert which could settle the controversy as to whether a gun or rifle was used and whether it was used at a close range as suggested in the evidence.[74]

Where the firearms expert compared the markings on the bullet under a microscope, but had not taken the photographs, it was held that his evidence could not be rejected for mere failure to take photographs.[75] Where the ballistic expert did not take photographs of empty cartridges recovered from the scene of occurrence and did not take photographs of the test, cartridges, and he failed to state the

---

67. Surinder Pal Jain v. Delhi Administration, 1993 Cr LJ 1871 (para 33) (SC).
68. Hanumanth Govind v. State of M.P., AIR 1952 SC 343 : 1952 SCR 1091 at 1110. Also see Retnakumar v. The Registrar, High Court of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 262 (Ker).
69. Chhat Ram v. State of Haryana, ILR (1975) 1 Punj 327.
70. State v. S.J. Choudhary, AIR 1990 SC 1050.
71. Chelaji Gomaji v. Jashodharabai, (1958) 60 Bom LR 251; Emperor v. Jhabwala, ILR (1933) 55 All 1040.
72. Kalva v. State of U.P., AIR 1958 SC 180, Kishore v. State, 1967 Cr LJ 1155; Patra Bahale alias Kishan v. State, (1969) 35 Cut LT 258; 1980 Raj C 355. See also Surat Singh v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 3189 (para 16) (Del); Bhola Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 137 (para 7).
73. Kartarsingh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 349. See also Bhola Singh v. State of Punjab, 1993 Cr LJ 3904 (para 7) (SC); Yashpal v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 2038 (Raj).
74. Mohinder Singh v. State, AIR 1953 SC 415. See also Ganpat Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 1466 (para 31) (Raj).
75. Ramanathan v. State, 1978 SCC 1204 : 1978 Cr LJ 1137 : 1978 Cr LR (SC) 318, followed in S.G. Gundegowda v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 852 (para 29) (Kant).

points of similarity between the two, it was held that, in the circumstances, the opinion given by the expert was not sufficient to establish conclusively that the empty cartridges recovered from the scene of occurrence were fired from the gun recovered from the possession of the accused.[76]

It is the duty of the ballistic expert, when deposing in court about his examination of the gun and the cartridge, to satisfy the court that he has been careful in carrying out the necessary tests before giving his opinion as given in his report. When he was not cross-examined, it must be assumed that the method of examination by the expert was no longer open to doubt.[77] Where neither the accused made request for the cross-examination of the ballistic expert nor the Court found it necessary to summon him, the report of the expert was held admissible in evidence without calling him as witness.[78]

When the opinion of the ballistic expert was found to be dogmatic, rather than explanatory, and the gun, before being sent to him, was kept in police custody for a long period of more than two months, it was held that the evidence of the ballistic expert was unreliable.[79]

Where a pistol which was alleged to have been used by the accused, and the two bullets extracted from the bodies of the victims, were sent to a ballistic expert, and they were not examined by him and the prosecution did not obtain the opinion of the expert, it was held by the Supreme Court that the non-obtaining of the opinion of the ballistic expert could not shake the prosecution case in view of the other evidence in record[80] but the seizure of empty cartridges, in the absence of ballistic expert report was held to be inconsequential.[81]

Where it was found that the exit wound was not only smaller in dimension than the entry wound and was also smaller in dimension than the size of the cartridge, it was held that the injuries could not be gun shot wounds.[82]

The Supreme Court, relying on TAYLOR'S MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE (10th Edn., Vol. 1, p. 441) observed: "It is impossible to state rules as to the precise distance from which it is possible to produce marks of burning, for this depends on the quantity and nature of the powder, the method of charging and the nature of weapon. It is unusual, however, to get marks of burning beyond a yard, or a yard and half, with a shot gun, or at more than half a yard with a revolver."[83] Where the skin around the entry wounds had blackened, it indicated that it was a close range firing.[84]

Shots discharged from a smooth-bore fire arm scatter over an area that increases roughly according to the distance of the target from the gun. And the missiles do not bear the individual characteristics of the barrel as in the case of rifle arch. The pellets from a shot gun, though they can be weighed, measured and subject to chemical analysis, would not establish the identity of the gun. But the bullets from a firearm can be identified with the help of microscopic examination and expert's opinion.[85]

It cannot be laid down as a general proposition that, in every case where a fire-arm is alleged to have been used by an accused person, in addition to the direct evidence, prosecution must lead the evidence of a ballistic expert, however good the direct evidence may be and though, on the record, there may be no reason to doubt the said direct evidence.[86]

---

76. Hanuman v. State, 1974 Raj LW 159.

77. State of Bihar v. Hanuman Koeri, 1971 Cr LJ 187 (Pat); Kalva v. State, AIR 1958 SC 180.

78. Balak Ram v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 2451 (para 25) (Raj).

79. Santokh Singh v. State of M.P., 1988 Cr LJ 1583 (MP).

80. Chatar Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1976 SC 2474.

81. Bhani Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 3165 (para 22) (Raj). See also Sukhwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1601 (para 20).

82. Salim Zia v. State, AIR 1979 SC 391.

83. Santa Singh v. State, AIR 1956 SC 526.

84. Bhupendrasinh A. Chudasama v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 3790 : 1998 Cr LJ 57.

85. In re : Kodur Thimgyya, AIR 1957 AP 758; In re : Balija, AIR 1941 Mad 88; Fakir Muhammed v. Emperor, AIR 1936 Bom 151.

86. Gurucharan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 340; Kartik Harijan v. State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 2019 (para 9) (Ori); Mohan Singh v. Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 2161 (where the technical evidence was full of doubts); Ram Narayan v. Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1727 (where ballistic evidence was against the prosecution case).

It is not possible to come to a conclusion about the injury caused by gun fire by merely looking at the description of the injuries or even the photographs given by the doctors, without actually seeing the injury.[87]

An opinion of a doctor who has no elementary knowledge of ballistics and fire-arms would not be helpful in distinguishing and interpreting firearms injuries.[88]

Where the injuries were caused by pellets resulting in the death, and the question was as to the range of shot and spread of the pellets, the opinion of the ballistic expert is important particularly when the gun firing the fatal shot has not been recovered[89].

The evidence of ballistic expert, even if it is based on the conclusions reached by him on experiments made by him, may not be conclusive in nature. It is nevertheless an important piece of evidence and as opinion evidence must be acted upon if the court is satisfied about it.

It was held by the Mysore High Court that no one, whatever may be his special skill in ballistic forensics, can assert beyond doubt that the pellets found on a person who was the target of a gun shot, came out of a particular gun.[90] Where reliable eye-witnesses testify definitely to the rifle with which the accused shot the deceased, inability of the ballistic expert to connect the two fragments of the bullet with the rifle cannot necessarily lead to the inference that the bullet was not fired from the rifle.[91]

Where the seals were found to be intact, delay of one month in sending the gun to the ballistic expert for examination was inconsequential.[92]

12. WORKABILITY OF WEAPON

Mere recovery of guns from the accused does not connect them with crime. Report from the ballistic expert as to the gun being in working condition is the condition precedent.[93] Where the Double Barrel Gun, found in the possession of accused without a licence to possess the same, was of a type that it could be fired by first filling it with gun powder, no evidence of expert on armourer was necessary to find out whether it was in working condition. Evidence of a Police Officer who is trained in handling of guns would be sufficient to prove that its mechanism was in order.[94] It is not always necessary for an armourer, who had special training in firearms, to test-fire a rifle to find out its firing capability.[95] It was held by the Supreme Court that the police personnel are competent to test the workability of a weapon. However, where the weapon allegedly used in committing of the offence was neither sent to the ballistic experts nor was tested by the police personnel himself, the accused was held entitled to benefit of doubt.[96]

13. MEDICAL OPINION

Medical evidence is hardly conclusive and decisive, because it is primarily an evidence of opinion and not of fact. To rely upon the findings of the medical person who conducted the post-mortem and the chemical analyst as decisive of the matter is to render the other evidence entirely fruitless. The Court has to consider not merely medical evidence but also the other evidence and circumstances appearing on the point.[97] The doctor's evidence can never be absolutely certain on the point of time so far as duration of

---

87. Mohan v. State, AIR 1975 SC 2161.
88. Mohan v. State, AIR 1975 SC 2161.
89. A. Nagi Reddi v. State, (1968) 1 And WR 178.
90. In re : Lagama Appayya Naik, 1966 Cr LJ 483.
91. State v. Ram Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 150.
92. S.G. Gundegowda v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 852 (para 28) (Kant).
93. Lakhasingh v. State, 1994 Cr LJ 2952 (para 26) (Raj).
94. Jarnail Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1999 SC 321 : 1999 Cr LJ 453, at p. 454.
95. Sukhpal v. State of Haryana, AIR 1995 SC 578 (para 4).
96. Manoj Kumar Achhelal Brahman v. State of Gujarat, (1998) 2 SCC 354 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 636.
97. Arunkumar Banarjee v. State, AIR 1962 SC 504; relying on Stephen Seneviratne v. King, AIR 1936 PC 289; Anant Chintaman Lagu v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 500; Chacko Mathai v. State, AIR 1964 Ker 222; Mani Ram v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2530 (para 6) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2453.

injuries are concerned.[1] Medical evidence is not sacrosant and the Court can seek explanation from the concerned physician by summoning him in the witness-box.[2]

Medical opinion pointing out to alternative possibilities cannot be accepted as conclusive.[3]

Where there is inconsistency between the testimony of eye-witnesses and the medical evidence, it is no ground to discard the testimony of the eye-witnesses.[4] Where the direct evidence about assault by a particular person is satisfactory and reliable, medical evidence cannot override that because the latter is hypothetical.[5] Where the evidence of the prosecutrix, the victim of rape, was otherwise trustworthy and cogent, the opinion of the doctor that no rape was committed could not override the same.[6] Where there was a discrepancy of some hours between the opinion of the doctor and the version of the prosecution, about the time of commission of rape, it was futile for the Courts to make a detailed research on the point, and the opinion of the doctor should not have been disbelieved on that ground alone, as the doctor is in a better position to depose about the medico-legal aspects of the offence.[7]

Where there was inconsistency between the evidence of medical expert and that of the eye-witnesses relating to the distance from which gun shots were fired, it was of no significance, as other evidence was available to show that the death was caused by gun shot injury.[8] But where the expert evidence regarding the distance from which the gun was fired at was at variance with direct evidence which was beyond doubt it was held that the inconsistency carried no weight.[9] Where the expert did not express a definite opinion regarding the distance from which the shot was fired, plea of discrepancy between the medical evidence and the occular version regarding the distance was untenable.[10]

Where the husband alleged that the respondent wife was pregnant at the time of the marriage, the testimony of the doctor who was an expert in mid-wifery, but had not specialised in gynaecology, can be accepted and declaration of marriage as void, can be granted.[11]

The High Court should not substitute its opinion as to the murder weapon for that of the expert.[12] The Court should not substitute its opinion for that of the doctor regarding the nature of injuries and cause of death unless there is something inherently defective in the opinion.[13] Where the finding of the High Court was that a male is presumed to be taller than a female and, therefore, he could not have shot a female from below upwards but there was no evidence to show that the victim was shorter than the accused, it was held that the High Court was not justified in invoking such unsustainable presumption and formulate a theory on the strength thereof.[14] Where the medical opinion was that seventeen incised wounds could not be caused on the victim's body by a single blow, the finding of the High Court that there were more than one assailant with sharp cutting weapons was not baseless or perverse.[15]

The opinion of the autopsy surgeon suggesting that the death might be suicidal is an ambivalent piece of evidence and can be used only as a piece of supportive evidence.[16]

---

1. Ram Swaroop v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 808 (para 11) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 715.
2. Archana Devi v. Kaji Majibur Rahaman, AIR 1996 Cal 118 (para 3), relying on Octovious Steel and Co. v. The Endogram Tea Co. Ltd., AIR 1980 Cal 78.
3. State of U.P. v. Krishnagopal, AIR 1988 SC 2154.
4. Solanki Chimanbhai v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 484 : 1983 Cr LJ 822; Basappa Bhimappa v. State, 1961 Mys 21; Salimzia v. U.P., AIR 1979 SC 391 : (1979) 2 SCR 394; Sardul Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 626 (para 6) : AIR 1994 SC 672; Suraj Pal v. State of U.P., 1994 Cr LJ 928 (para 6) : AIR 1994 SC 748; V. Viswambharan v. State of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ 1522 (paras 21 and 22) (Ker).
5. Punjab Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1984 SC 1233. Also see Darshan Singh v. State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 364; State of Maharashtra v. Datta Maruti Salagar, 1998 Cr LJ 3756 (para 8) (Bom).
6. Ranjit Hazarika v. State of Assam, (1998) 8 SCC 635 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1725.
7. Pratap Misra v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 1307.
8. State of U.P. v. Sughar Singh, AIR 1978 SC 191.
9. Karnail Singh v. State of Punjab, 1971 SC 2119; Lakhbir Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 1374 (para 7) : AIR 1994 SC 1029.
10. Nisar Ahmad Fajmohmed Kaji v. State of Gujarat, (1998) 9 SCC 23 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 967.
11. Baldev Raj Miglani v. Urmila Kumari, AIR 1979 SC 879.
12. State of U.P. v. Shanker, AIR 1981 SC 897.
13. Matabhai Nagarbhai Raval v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 2186.
14. State of M.P. v. Udai Singh, AIR 1998 SC 198.
15. Omwati v. Mahendra Singh, AIR 1998 SC 249 : 1998 Cr LJ 401. Also see Sail Singh v. Mohinder Pal, 1998 SCC (Cri) 383; State of Bihar v. Ram Padarath Singh, AIR 1998 SC 2606.
16. Digambar Gope v. State of W.B., 1997 Cr LJ 2072 (Cal).

Doctor's evidence has to be appreciated like that of any other witness.[17]

The medical expert is not a witness of fact; his evidence is really of an advisory character given in the form of an opinion, on the facts submitted to him, and it is not to be given by reference to the facts collected independently by himself.[18]

Weapon must be shown to the expert, so as to enable him to comment whether all or any of the wounds would have been caused with it.[19]

A certificate of a doctor cannot be admitted in evidence unless the doctor is examined as a witness.[20]

The doctor's opinion in the form of a reply to certain written queries made by the Police officer cannot be accepted if the opinion was given without any reasons.[21]

Where the medical evidence falsifies both the defence and prosecution versions, it was held that the conviction was not sustainable.[22]

The medical evidence has never been considered to be substantive evidence, but has been considered as only corroborative evidence. A medical person cannot be allowed to give his opinion on matters which are within the province of the Courts to decide.[23]

Where a doctor gave an opinion that the burn injuries on the deceased were superficial, and were 40% on the person, and were the cause of the death, without mentioning the material on which he based his opinion, and when he did not further state before the Court about the material on which he had based his opinion, it was held that such opinion cannot be relied on and the accused cannot be convicted for murder[24] but where the opinion of the doctor was that the injuries in the nature of abrasions, contusions and lacerated wounds were ante-mortem injuries and that burn injuries were post-mortem injuries which could not be dislodged in the cross-examination, his opinion that the cause of death was asphyxia due to throttling, could be safely accepted. The dead body having not been referred to certain pathological test would not create any doubt regarding the doctor's opinion.[25]

In appropriate cases on a consideration of the nature of injuries and other relevant evidence, the Court can come to its own conclusion if the medical evidence is deficient.[26] Where the doctor found no other injury on the body of the deceased except small abrasions of varying sizes on the neck and fracture of hyoid bone, it was held that the deceased died due to throttling and not hanging.[27]

A medical certificate cannot be questioned on the ground that the doctor did not mention the condition of the patient as to whether he was able to move or not.[28]

When a doctor was examined as witness, his evidence has to be appreciated like that of any other witness. There is no presumption that a doctor is always a witness of truth.[29]

Where the opinions of authors were neither shown to have been given with regard to circumstances exactly similar to those in the particular case before the Court, nor were they put to a medical witness, it is not a satisfactory way of disposing of the evidence of the witness by discrediting it on the ground that

---

17. Mayur Panabhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 66. Also see Rakad Singh v. State of M.P., 1994 Cr LJ 494 (para 6) (MP).
18. Sunilchandra Roy v. State, AIR 1954 Cal 305; Rama v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 116.
19. Ishwar Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1976 SC 2423. See also K. Mallikarjuna v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 3100 (para 52) (AP). For evidence of age by radiological test see Jaya Mala v. Home Secy. Govt of J&K, AIR 1982 SC 1297.
20. Balaram v. Rukmannamma, 1953 Hyd 209.
21. Palaniswamy Vaiyapuri v. State, AIR 1968 Bom 127 (DB).
22. Milkiyatsingh v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1981 SC 1579.
23. Vinodkumar v. State of M.P., 1987 CrLJ 1541; see Section 3 under the Head Appreciation of Experts Evidence.
24. 1979 Bom Cr 507.
25. Sk. Usman Raheman v. State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 3301 (para 18) (Bom).
26. Union Territory of Mizoram v. Vanlallawama Alias Lalwma, 1977 CrLJ 1831; following Brij Bushan v. State of U.P., 1957 CrLJ 591 : AIR 1957 SC 474.
27. Neerukonda Parabrahma Murthy v. State of A.P., (1997) 11 SCC 408 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 672
28. Nityananda v. Sipra, AIR 1986 Ori 102.
29. Mayur Pannabhai Shah v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 66.

the doctor was a comparatively young man and his statements did not accord with the opinions expressed in the books.[30]

The medical opinion on non-medical matters would be only an opinion and need not necessarily be correct.[31]

In a case of ghastly murder of wife and the husband pleading insanity, the medical expert opinion should such as would assist the Court in coming to the correct conclusion as to the plea.[32] Where the accused were alleged to have assaulted the deceased with lathis and pushed him into a dry well but the medical evidence showed that there was possibility of all the injuries being caused by a fall into the well where there were pebbles and stones, the accused were acquitted.[33] Where the dead body with a ligature mark around the neck was found on the cot and not hanging, suicide theory was totally not maintainable.[34] The statement about the date of expiry given by the manufacturer on the drug is a statement about a future occurrence and cannot be treated as an opinion under Section 45 as the same is not relevant under some other provision of the Evidence Act.[35] It has been held that in medico-legal cases when a victim is brought to hospital, it is the duty of the medical officers on duty to note down whether the assailant was a known or unknown person though they are not expected to note down his name.[36]

Also see Eye-witness, under Section 3.

14. POST-MORTEM REPORT

Sufficient weightage should be given to the doctor who had conducted the post-mortem, as compared to the statements found in the text books, but giving weightage does not ipso facto mean that each and every statement made by a medical witness should be accepted on its face value even when it is self-contradictory or disagrees with the statements in the authoritative text books without assigning any reasons.[37]

Where there is a regular form prescribed for a medical report in respect of a post-mortem case, the doctor has to give a definite opinion as to the cause of death, and though the medical officer, does not suspect the death to be caused by any poison, he is not at liberty to destroy the viscera until he finally hears from the investigating officer that the viscera might be destroyed.[38]

As the post-mortem report is not substantive evidence, the court can come to an independent conclusion, from other evidence, without medical evidence.[39]

It is the duty of the doctor, in a suspected case of infanticide, to record in the post-mortem report, the data for arriving at the two main conclusions germane to such a case, viz., that the child was born alive and that it met with a violent death later.[40]

When the post-mortem report is more favourable to the accused and where there are discrepencies between the medical evidence and the inquest report, the benefit of discrepencies should be given to the accused, by accepting the post-mortem report, instead of the inquest report.[41]

Merely because a post-mortem certificate is obtained from the custody of the Government Hospital, its genuineness is not automatically proved. Non-examination of its author would be fatal to the

---

30. Bhagwan Das v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 589; relying on Sunderlal v. State, AIR 1954 SC 28; Chudimal Jain v. State of Orissa, (1984) 58 Cut LT 81.
31. Chacko Mathai v. State of Kerala, AIR 1964 Ker 222.
32. Shaik Ahmad v. State of A.P., 1996 Cr LJ 2582 (para 10) (AP).
33. Govind Narain v. State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 2598 (para 16) (SC).
34. Ram Kumar Madhusudan Pathak v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1998 SC 2732.
35. Dueful Laboratory v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 4534 (para 36) (Raj).
36. Basheer v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2173 (para 4) (Mad).
37. Mohd Zahid v. State of T.N., 1999 Cr LJ 3699 (para 24) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 2416. See also Vijay Singh v. State of M.P., 2000 Cr LJ 650 (para 22) (MP).
38. State of Maharashtra v. Mangalya Dhavu Kongil, AIR 1972 SC 1797.
39. Hadi Kisan v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 Ori 21.
40. Vidhyamati v. State, 1951 HP 82.
41. Maula Bux v. State of Rajasthan, (1983) 1 SCC 379; Chudiamal Jain v. State of Orissa, (1984) 58 Cut LT 81.

prosecution case.[42] No doubt it is the duty of the prosecution to prove the post-mortem findings in murder cases by examining the doctor who conducted the autopsy. Absence of such a proof is a drawback for the prosecution but the same was not fatal in the instant case as the accused had admitted that the death of the decease was a case of homicide.[43] Where the evidence showed that the accused stabbed the deceased on his chest and dragged the knife downward as a result of which the intestines of the victim came out of his abdomen with bleeding and the said injury was the immediate cause of his death, in the circumstances it was held that it could not be said that the nature of injury was not proved as no measurement thereof was mentioned in the post-mortem report.[44]

The Supreme Court observed: "To rely upon the findings of the medical person who conducted the post-mortem, and of the chemical analyst, as decisive of the matter is to render the other evidence entirely fruitless. While the circumstances often speak with unerring certainty, the autopsy and the chemical analysis taken by themselves may be most misleading".[45] Mere presence of ligature mark is not sufficient to prove death by strangulation. Evidence as to the effects of violence in underlying tissues is necessary.[46]

Where the accused confessed to have killed his wife by strangulation and cut off her head but the post-mortem report mentioned haemorrhage by cutting off the head to be the cause of death without pointing out any supporting symptom, it was held that in the circumstances of the case non-mention of strangulation in the post-mortem report did not falsify the confessional statement.[47] Where the post-mortem report stated that the death was homicidal and not suicidal, the Supreme Court cannot take a different view.[48]

15. SEROLOGIST'S REPORT

Where Forensic Science Laboratory report in respect to blood stains found on the weapon of the offence was not put to the accused in his statements under Section 313, Cr.P.C. and he was not given an opportunity to explain, the same could not be used against him.[49] Where the serologist's report stated that the blood on the two items of clothes was human blood and the items belonged to the accused, they connect him with crime.[50] Where the serologist and the Chemical Examiner found that the chadar (sheet) recovered at the instance of the accused, was stained with human blood, the fact that with lapse of time the classification of blood could not be determined, was not sufficient to give any benefit to the accused.[51] Where the serologist who superimposed the skull of the deceased, opined that it was of an adult human female of a certain age and the same corroborated by other evidence, it was sufficient to establish her identity.[52]

16. TIME OF DEATH

The process of digestion is not uniform in every human being; it varies from individual to individual. The degree of digestion of the contents, however, cannot always be relied upon, in determining the time of death, inasmuch as the power of digestion may remain in abeyance for a long time, as mentioned in MODI'S MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE, in states of privation, shock and coma.[53]

It would be hazardous to draw any precise inference about the time of death, on the basis of the appearance or disappearance of rigor mortis in a dead body. During winter season, especially in a frost, it is slow in disappearing.[54] Regarding the time of death, the opinion of the doctor who conducted the post-mortem examination is to be preferred to the opinion of the expert based on rigor mortis as the former

---

42. Kota Peda Nagesh v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 2051 (para 16) (AP).
43. State of U.P. v. Lakhmi, AIR 1998 SC 1007 : 1998 Cr LJ 1411.
44. Selvaraj v. State of T.N., (1998) 9 SCC 308 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1009.
45. Anant Chintaman Lagu v. State of Bombay, AIR 1960 SC 500.
46. Subhash Chand v. State of H.P., 1995 Cr LJ 3460 (para 21) (HP).
47. Vinayak Shivajirao Pol v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 1096 : 1998 Cr LJ 1558.
48. Najjam Faraghi v. State of W.B., AIR 1998 SC 682 : 1998 Cr LJ 866.
49. Dhula v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 609 (Raj).
50. Boddu Murali v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2077 (para 14) (AP).
51. Gura Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 487 (para 20) (SC).
52. State of Karnataka v. Bhoja Poojari, (1997) 11 SCC 537.
53. Aziz Khan v. State of Bihar, AIR 1964 Pat 158; Dhanna v. Kalyan Chand, AIR 1951 Raj 37.
54. State of Mysore v. Dyavegowda, AIR 1962 Mys 124.

takes into consideration the post-mortem report, notes on post-mortem report and also the rigor mortis, lividity, coolness and report of the injuries found on the person of the deceased, provided there is no evidence that he had deliberately given a wrong opinion.[55]

For fixing the probable time of death, the court cannot usurp the function of a medical expert, and it has to rely on materials supplied to it by the medical expert.[56] Where the medical evidence showed that the intestine of deceased was full of faecal matter and the accused contended that the victim's death had occurred at 6.00 a.m. and not at 3.30 p.m., since the victim was ill and all the while he was lying on the bed and there was no evidence to show the time of his last meal, the medical evidence was held not to support his contention, otherwise the dead body would not have been kept in the house upto 4 p.m.[57]

17. INJURY

Where a particular weapon is stated to be responsible for a certain injury, the Court should specifically call upon the medical witness to explain whether or not that weapon could cause the injury in question.[58]

The duty of the doctor is only to describe the wound. It is for the court to decide whether it is simple or grievous.[59]

Where the expert who has not seen the injuries, but by mere by looking at the description or dimensions of the injuries noted by other doctors, or even the photographs, stated that the injuries on the victim were probably caused by one gun fire only, it would be unsafe to place reliance on his opinion.[60] Where one doctor had actually examined the accused and noted the injuries himself and the other doctor gave his opinion on the basis of the injury report and the X-ray report even without looking at the X-ray plate, the opinion of the former was relied on.[61]

18. POISON

Where the medical evidence was that the death was due to poisoning, and it was not challenged, it was held enough to conclude that the death was by poisoning.[62]

19. LOSS OF EXPECTATION OF LIFE

Where an injured person sued, claiming damages for loss of expectation of life, while medical evidence is necessary to show that the injury has shortened his normal expectation of life, some caution may be necessary before accepting such medical evidence.[63]

20. AGE

When the report of the doctor as to the age of a girl was not placed before the Court, the affidavit by another person refering to that report was held not admissible in proof of the contents of the report.[64]

Positive evidence furnished by birth register, by members of the family, with regard to the age, will have preference over the opinion of the doctor; but, if the evi-dence is wholly unsatisfactory, and if the ossification test in the case is complete, such test can be accepted as a surer ground for determination of age[65]; but where the entry in the school register does not appear to be genuine, the medical evidence will

---

55. Tanvıben Pankajkumar Divetia v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 2193 : 1997 Cr LJ 2535.
56. Gambhir v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 1157.
57. Mohan Singh v. State of U.P., 1998 SCC (Cri) 389.
58. Tahasildar Singh v. State, AIR 1958 All 255.
59. State of Mysore v. Narayanappa, (1970) 2 Mys LJ 402.
60. Mohan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 2161.
61. Tanvıben Pankajkumar Divetia v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 2193 : 1997 Cr LJ 2535.
62. State of Orissa v. Kaushalya Devi, AIR 1965 Ori 38.
63. Vinodkumar v. Ved Mitra, AIR 1970 MP 172.
64. Md. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625.
65. Alekh Prasad v. State, 1964 CrLJ 102 (Ori); Bishwanath Ghosh v. State, AIR 1957 Cal 589; Anam Swain v. State, 1924 Ori 33; Puran Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1985 CrLJ NOC 54 (Raj); Kishorilal Raghbir Dass v. State, AIR 1957 Punj 78; Kamakshya Prasad v. State, AIR 1957 Assam 39; Anita v. Atal Bihari, 1993 Cr LJ 549 (para 5) (MP); Jitmohan Lohar v. State, 1997 Cr LJ 2842 (para 6) (Ori); S.K. Belal v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ 467 (Ori).

prevail over it.[66] Ossification test to determine the age of a person is not conclusive.[67] Rejection of the High School certificate produced to prove the age of the petitioner on the assertion of the Principal that the relevant records were missing and that of the certificate from the doctor issued after the ossification test for want of examination of the doctor, was held to be improper.[68]

Doctor's certificate as to age is no proof as to the age.[69]

If the opinion of a doctor as to the age of a person, is based on radiological test, the margin of error is two years on either side.[70] However, such a margin cannot be given when there is otherwise conclusive and decisive evidence as to the age of a person.[71] The opinion of the Radiologist cannot be preferred to the positive evidence of the entry of date of birth made in the Register of Births and Deaths immediately after two months of the date of birth of the accused.[72]

Opinion of a medical expert, basing on physical examination, and not by conducting radiological examination is of little value.[73]

A doctor's opinion as to age based on his or her height, weight and teeth does not amount to legal proof of the age of a person.[74]

Doctor's opinion, basing on probability and physical examination, is of little value.[75]

Test of epiphysis, on basis of fusing, being a scientific test, would be acceptable, to show the age.[76]

Mere presence of 28 teeth, and hair in arm pits or on the pubic region, could as well be present in a girl about the age of 16. The evidence of medical officer, if to be relied on, should bring out technical and scientific knowledge to bear upon the matter. Certificate given on examination of weight, height, breast, teeth etc., is worthless, to show the age.[77]

The High Court held that a girl was over 18 years of age, relying on a medical report of a doctor who examined the girl though that report was not before them. The Supreme Court held that the report was mere hearsay evidence and, as such, was not admissible; that in order to prove the age of the person, the primary document, viz., the medical certificate, should have been produced and, in the absence of the primary document as to the age of the person concerned, the decision of the High Court on the basis of inadmissible hearsay evidence was not correct. Though a reference to the medical certificate was made in the affidavit of the father and the statement of the police officer, it was only hearsay and not admissible according to the Evidence Act, in proof the contents of the medical certificate.[78]

21. PATERNITY

See commentary on Section 112.

The value of the blood group test is limited. It may exclude a certain individual as the possible father of a child, but cannot positively establish the paternity.[79]

---

66. Sunil Kumar v. State of U.P., 2000 Cr LJ 4687 (para 9) (All), following Brij Mohan Singh v. Priya Brat Narain Singh, AIR 1965 SC 282 and Pankaj Kumar Tripathi v. State of U.P., 1998 (2) JTC 965 (All).
67. Prem Chand v. State of H.P., 2000 Cr LJ 951 (para 24) (HP), relying on Shree Kant Shekhari v. State of H.P., 1999 (1) Sim LJ 470. See also Ram Deo Chauhan v. State of Assam, 2001 Cr LJ 2902 (para 43) (SC) : AIR 2001 SC 2231.
68. Haribans Singh v. State of Bihar, 1997 AIHC 2028 (para 4) (Pat).
69. State of H.P. v. Kala, AIR 1957 HP 42.
70. Jayamala v. Secy. to Govt. of J&K, 1982 CrLJ 1717 : AIR 1982 SC 1297.
71. Abdul Razzak v. State, 2000 Cr LJ 3921 (para 14) (All).
72. Anita v. Atal Bihari, 1993 Cr LJ 549 (para 5) (MP).
73. 1964 Cr LJ 204 (Punj). See also Kamal Kishore v. State of H.P., 2000 Cr LJ 2292 (para 15) (SC) : AIR 2000 SC 1920.
74. Emperor v. Qudrat, ILR 1939 All 871 : AIR 1939 All 708.
75. State v. Babulal, AIR 1965 Raj 90.
76. Raunki Saroop v. State, AIR 1970 Punj 450.
77. Mohmad Husain v. State, ILR (1957) 7 Raj 440; Emperor v. Qudrat, AIR 1939 All 708 : ILR 1939 All 871; Liamayum v. Manipur Administration, AIR 1962 Mani 5; Anam Swain v. State, AIR 1954 Ori 38; Md. Syedol Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark, AIR 1916 PC 242.
78. Md. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625.
79. Subbayya Gounder v. B. Subramaniyam, AIR 1959 Mad 396.

22. MENTAL STATE

Where the Medical Officer gives an opinion as to the mental condition of the accused on a particular date, basing on the testimony of witnesses as to the acts of the accused, that evidence cannot be treated as an expert opinion, and it is only his presumption.[80]

Absence of medical opinion, regarding the mental state of the person who gave the dying declaration is not always fatal to its reliability.[81]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE,[82] observes: "A is charged with murder; defence; insanity. A medical witness who has personally examined A may give his opinion that he is, or is not, insane; or, that the insanity from which A suffered was of a kind that usually prevents people from judging between right and wrong".

23. MEDICAL CERTIFICATE

Medical certificates as to the nature of injuries and the nature of the incapacity incurred by a person, though relevant u/ Section 45, must be duly proved as provided in Section 60 of the Act, by the evidence of the person who has given that opinion.[83] A medical leave certificate cannot be questioned on the ground that it did not mention the condition of the patient in detail such as whether he was able to move or not.[84]

It is common knowledge that the certificates issued by medical practitioners are often untrue, and that such certificates are issued for the mere asking, and on the payment of some nominal charges. Yet, it would not be correct to say that no medical certificate can be relied upon unless the doctor is examined, as there cannot be a general presumption that all medical certificates are false. If the other side challenges the veracity of the certificate, then the party producing it has to prove the correctness of the statement made therein. In the absence of any challenge, it should be accepted as correct.[85]

Where there was no opinion of the doctor that the injuries in question could be possible during the commission of the alleged offence of rape, conviction could not be sustained.[86] Where the Government doctor examining a victim of rape gave certificate of commission of rape on her but turned hostile during trial and tried to protect the accused, a serious view of his conduct, which amounted to perjury, was taken and the concerned authorities were recommended to take appropriate disciplinary action against him.[87] Where allegedly knife and lathi blows were delivered on the person of the deceased but the doctor specifically stated to have found only cut injuries on the body of the deceased, only the accused delivering the knife blow could be convicted and not others.[88]

Rejection of medical certificate on the ground that it was on a plain piece of paper and not on a printed form was held to be not proper when it was shown that the printed forms were in short supply in the Government hospitals in the particular district.[89]

24. PUBLIC ANALYST

The conclusion of the Central Food Laboratory is final and conclusive of the facts stated therein and not the opinion expressed therein.[90] The report of a public analyst under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act given after following the procedure prescribed, was held as per se evidence.[91]

---

80. State v. Jose Gospar Noronha, AIR 1971 Goa 3.
81. Mahammed Azeesuddin v. State of A.P., AIR 1985 CrLJ 336 (AP-DB).
82. 13th Edn (paras 27-52), page 587.
83. Municipal Corporation of Ahamadabad v. Gandhi Shantilal, AIR 1961 Guj 196.
84. Nityananda v. Sipra, AIR 1986 Ori 102 (seeking adjournment on medical basis).
85. Navnitlal v. Hasmukhlal, AIR 1988 Guj 34.
86. Sanya v. State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 2784 (para 10) (Ori).
87. S. Krishna v. State of Kerala, 1998 Cr LJ 785 (para 9) (Kant).
88. Kanhaisingh Nayak v. State, 1993 Cr LJ 2812 (para 7) (Ori).
89. Ammini v. State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 260 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 (para 17) (SC).
90. Nagar Mahapalika, Kanpur v. Ram Nivas, AIR 1964 All 349; M.A. Thomas v. P.J. Abraham, AIR 1969 Ker 146.
91. Municipal Committee v. Basakhi Ram, 64 Punj LR 949; Municipal Committee Ambala v. Basakhi Ram, AIR 1963 Punj 17; State of Gujarat v. Shantaben, AIR 1964 Guj 136; State v. Dineshkumar, 1986 CrLJ 1527 (Del); Public Prosecutor v. Malla Rama Rao, 1970 CrLJ 275 (AP).

Report of public analyst is not admissible without oral testimony of analyst.[1] If the admission of the report of the expert is not objected to, the party must be said to have waived proof of it, and not its relevance.[2] Opinion of the analyst, given as 10 carat contents of gold, without the necessary data of the tests of gold, is of no use and cannot be considered relevant.[3]

The report of the analyst is not conclusive; and, on the request of the prosecution or the defence, the Court has to summon the analyst.[4]

In regard to the cases under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, it was held that it was not possible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what particulars should be shown in the analyst's report, as the same may vary in each case. While it may be necessary to give the data regarding the proportion of the component parts in commodities like milk, ghee etc., the position may be different where the articles sold may be mis-branded or one entirely different from what they purported to be. Under the Food Adulteration Act, the Public Analyst (in the case which came up before Kerala High Court) stated that it was not "Thuvaraparippu" but Lac Dhal, and that the conclusion was arrived at as a result of microscopic examination. It was contended that it was not possible to ascertain from the certificate what the characteristics noticed by the Analyst were, and that it ought not to be relied upon; that criticism was not unfounded, and in view of the fact that the transaction was more than two years old, permission to examine the Analyst was not considered to be necessary and the accused was acquitted. It is clear from the above observation that a clear indication of the date on which the finding of the Analyst was given is necessary and that in the absence of the date, the report of the Analyst cannot be relied on.[5]

Where Freezing Point Test was recognised as a reliable method for proving addition of water to milk and the Public Analyst exposed his superficial knowledge of the subject as an expert, his testimony as an expert was not reliable.[6] It has been held that the report of unqualified Public Analyst is not admissible in evidence as a report of a Public Analyst but is admissible as a report of an expert under this section.[7]

25. CHEMICAL EXAMINER

It was held by the Supreme Court, that there was nothing wrong, in the ordinary circumstances, in taking the reports of the Chemical Examiner and Serologist without examining them as witnesses.[8] Report of a Chemical Examiner is admissible in evidence, though he is not examined.[9] Where the accused persons did not exercise their option of summoning the chemical examiner, the order admitting his report was held to be proper.[10] The report of the Chemical Examiner is admissible in eivdence, in view of Section 293(4) Cr.P.C., and it prevails over Section 45, of the Evidence Act.[11]

Deputy Director of Health Services and the Chemist are experts; they record their opinion on the scientific point involved, and it would be admissible when they are examined as witnesses.[12]

Blood stained earth found at the place of occurrence is invariably sent for chemical analysis. If it is not sent it is open to the defence to rely on the omission[13].

---

1. Raj Kishen v. State, AIR 1960 All 460; Drugs Inspector v. Chimanlal & Co., AIR 1968 MP 238 (FB); Soleman v. R. AIR 1943 Bom 445.
2. Bommidala Poorhaish v. Union of India, AIR 1967 AP 338.
3. Assistant Collector of Customs v. Pratap Rao, 1972 CrLJ 1135.
4. M.A. Thomas v. P.J. Abraham, AIR 1969 Kerala 146.
5. City Corp. of Trivandrum v. T.R. Reddiyar, (1963) 1 CrLJ 123 (Ker); City Corp. of Trivandrum v. Antony, (1963) 1 CrLJ 124 (Ker) (case of milk); see also Deendayal v. State, AIR 1956 All 520; State v. Sahati Ram, 1958 All 34; Municipal Board, Kanpur v. Badlool, AIR 1960 All 504; Gurcharan Das v. State, AIR 1957 Punj 109 (cases of adulteration of milk and pepper); Newby v. Sims, (1894) 1 Qu B 478 (Rum-hot drink); Fortune v. Hanson, (1896) 1 Qu B 202 (milk).
6. Dilip Singh v. State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 2461 (Raj).
7. Prabhudayal Agarwala v. State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 242 (Ori).
8. Thulsiram v. State, AIR 1954 SC 1; Shatrughan v. State of M.P., 1993 Cr LJ 120 (para 10) (MP).
9. State of Orissa v. Kaushalyadevi, AIR 1965 Ori 38; Bhaskaran v. State of Kerala, ILR (1967) 1 Ker 467.
10. Parshotam Lal v. State, 2001 Cr LJ 3378 (para 44) (J&K).
11. Bhagawan Dass v. State of Punjab, 1982 CrLJ 2138 (P&H).
12. Madan Mohan v. State, 1958 CrLJ 574.
13. Lakshmi Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 2263.

It is the duty of the prosecution to examine the Chemical Examiner who gave the report.[14]

Where the report of the Chemical Examiner was given without factual date and the reasons for his opinion, it had no evidentiary value.[15] Where the samples of the seized contraband remained with the police officer for three days without being noted down any where in the records and thereafter it was sent to chemical analyser, there being no satisfactory explanation to exclude possibility of tampering during the period, the certificate of the expert that the samples contained heroin must be discarded.[16]

The opinion of an experienced Chemical Examiner of the Customs Department is relevant u/Section 45, and his certificate in respect of primary gold is to be given due weight, though it did not contain particulars of the test conducted by him.[17]

Conviction based on the basis of observation of a Magistrate that the substance was opium, without any report of the chemical analysis or the opinion of the expert, is illegal.[18]

The facts of the case before the Bombay High Court, were that certain samples were seized by the Prohibition Department and sent to the chemical analyser and also to the Principal, Poddar Medical College, Bombay. The contention of the accused was that the substance that was seized was angurasava, a medical preparation with ayurvedic ingredient which generates general alcohol. The question was whether it was a prohibited substance under the Bombay Prohibition Act. Section 24-A of that Act declares that certain preparations specified therein are outside the scope of the Prohibition Act. The Principal of the Medical College stated in his report that it was very difficult to give any definite opinion in the matter. The Chemical Analyser stated in his certificate that no alkaloidal ingredient or metallic poison was detected. Dealing with the case, CHANDRACHUD J., (as he then was) held that the prosecution must establish that the liquid was not of a description mentioned in Section 24-A; that Section 129-B of the Prohibition Act was to do away with a settled rule of law that a certificate is not evidence, unless the person who has given the certificate is examined as a witness, that a certificate is nothing more than a mere opinion of the person who purports to have issued it, and opinion is not relevant until the person who has given the opinion is brought before the Court and is subjected to the test of cross-examination. The certificate of the Principal shows that it was not possible for him to find out the herbal drugs; the certificate of the analyser would not inspire confidence because he merely recorded his negative opinion, thus the prosecution failed.[19]

Where the Chemical Examiner reported that chemical and microscopical tests of the seized 'salwar' of the prosecutrix revealed the presence of semen/human spermatozoa, it was held that even in the absence of proof that the said spermatozoa was that of the accused, such a report was a strong corroborative piece of evidence.[20] Where the colour of the substance seized under the ND & PS Act was mentioned by the seizing party to be white but the chemical examiner mentioned it to be grey and the evidence showed the samples to have been received by him in a sealed, intact and in a fit condition for testing, notwithstanding the difference in colour his opinion was held to be not assailable.[21]

Drug offences.—In view of the considerable use of offences concerning drugs like heroin, the need for assistance of the scientist has increased. The precise identification of drugs can be made by 'organic mass spectro meter'.

26. GOLDSMITH

The opinion of a goldsmith can be relied upon, "They are able to find out whether a piece of metal is gold or not, by the colour of the streak produced by rubbing on a touchstone, though their assessment of purity may not be exact".

---

14. In re : Marudai, AIR 1960 Mad 370.
15. Suleman Usman v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1961 Guj 120.
16. Modh. Hussain B. Ramzan v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 1020 (para 9) (Bom).
17. M.G. Venugopalan v. Edayil Veettil Govindan, 1976 CrLJ 165 (Ker).
18. Ramapuram Amyana v. State of A.P., (1962) 1 Andh LT 116. See also Bisam Harijan v. The State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ NOC 350 (Ori); Debu v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1902 (para 3) (Ori).
19. State of Bombay v. Bhausa Hanmantsa Pawar, AIR 1962 Bom 229.
20. Madan Lal v. State of J&K, (1997) 7 SCC 677 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 1151.
21. Jagdish Budhroji Purohit v. State of Maharashtra, (1998) 7 SCC 270 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1578.

Where a goldsmith tested the metal bars seized, on a touch stone and certified the metal as gold, his testimony cannot be brushed aside on the ground that scientific tests were not carried out.[22]

27. HAIR

From the microscopic examination of the hair, it is possible to say whether they are of the same or of different colours or sizes, and the examination may help in deciding where the hairs come from.[23]

The science of comparison of hair has not attained a degree of perfection like that of finger prints.[24]

28. TRADE MARK

The opinion of a registrar of trade marks having expert knowledge in the matter of trade marks regarding the similarity between two trade marks should not be disturbed lightly.[25]

29. LIQUOR

An Excise Inspector who is well experienced, having acquired sufficient knowledge in respect of illicit liquor and fermented wash, can be treated as expert for identification of fermented wash or liquor.[26]

If an Excise Inspector's training or length of service when he had direct connection with the testing of liquor, is not proved, he cannot be treated as an expert on it.[27] If the Excise Inspector did not state how long he had been in service, and how many samples he had tested, or about his qualification and experience in testing, he cannot be treated as an expert under Section 45, and his evidence cannot be relied on.[28] Where the Excise Inspector, by mere visual observation, finds the liquid to contain a certain percentage of alcohol, and there is nothing to show that he received any training to test the liquid, it was held that, in the absence of any scientific evidence to show that the liquid was illicit liquor, the accused could not be convicted.[29]

30. FERTILIZER

An Agricultural Extension Officer of Panchayat Samithy, who is required to deal with the supply of fertilizers to cultivators and explain how it should be used by the farmers, can be treated as an expert on fertilizers, under Section 45.[30]

31. MARKET VALUE

The evidence of a person having special knowledge of the market value of land, not by profession but by experience, may be admitted as an expert evidence.[31]

In cases of land acquisition, opinion of expert is often valuable, and sometimes necessary, for the determination of the market value.[32] Where the experts inspected the property to determine its market value in 1990 whereas the material year for its determination was 1972, their evidence could not be taken into consideration.[33] Where the expert relied upon certain sale transactions which were neither proved nor their copies produced and report based on such transactions was prepared after seven years from the

---

22. Assistant Collector of Central Excise v. Sayed Mohammed, reversing AIR 1983 SC 168; VPS Mohammed v. Asst. Collector Central Excise, 1973 CrLJ 1551 (Har); Abdul Rahman v. State of Mysore, 1972 CrLJ 406; Supt. of Central Excise v. U.N. Malaviya, (1968) 1 Mys LJ 17; M.G. Venugopalan v. Edayil Veettil, 1976 CrLJ 165.
23. Kanbi Karsan Jadav v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1966 SC 821 : (1963) 2 SCJ 364.
24. Himangshu Pahri v. State, 1986 CrLJ 622.
25. K.R. Chinna Krishna Chettiar v. Ambal & Co., AIR 1970 SC 146.
26. In re : Oli, 1976 CrLJ 1339 (Mad).
27. State of Haryana v. Radheyshyam, 1977 CrLJ 528 (P&H).
28. Pitambar v. State, 1975 CrLJ 948 (All).
29. State v. Sanwalram, 1971 CrLJ 200 (Raj); State v. Madhukar, AIR 1967 Bom 61; Ram Autar v. State of U.P., 1973 CrLJ 1096 (regarding possession of charas).
30. Fatehal v. State of Rajasthan, 1978 CrLJ (NOC) 146 : 1977 Raj LW 89.
31. Collector of Jabalpur v. Nawab Ahmed, AIR 1971 MP 32.
32. State of Kerala v. Mariyamma, AIR 1969 Ker 265.
33. Special Land Acquisition Officer, Bombay v. Vishanji Virji Mepani, AIR 1996 Bom 366 (para 22) notification which was not explained, it was held that the report lacked objectivity and professional skill and could not be relied upon.[34]

Market value determined on the basis of sale deeds in registration office, is not admissible in evidence unless sale deeds are produced in the Court. Moreso, when no witness who collected information from the Sub-Registrar no the Tahsildar who issued the certificate was examined in the Court. Only the opinion of the expert has evidentiary value and of non-else.[35]

32. CROP VALUATION

The crop valuation expert's report cannot be accepted without corroboration, or without the expert deposing about the basis for his valuation.[36]

33. LABOURERS

The evidence of labourers who did certain work, as to the number of labourers who did the work, being about the facts seen by them, cannot be discarded and such evidence is not opinion evidence of an expert.[37]

34. OBSCENITY

Whether a book is obscene, depends on the interpretation of Section 292, of the Penal Code, and not on expert evidence, and the Court has to form its opinion independently.[38]

35. REVENUE STAMP

Where there was direct evidence that the pronote of 1936 was executed, affixed with stamps and signed by the executant and, on the other side, there was evidence of the expert who at that time was an Assistant Master of the Security Printing Press, stating that such stamps were not issued before 1939, but he refused to disclose, under the colour of privilege, as to what were the characteristics of such stamps which distinguished them from others, it was held that the evidence of the expert became of very doubtful utility and should not be accepted.[39]

36. GAZETTE

The statement contained in a gazette can be taken into account to discover the historical material contained therein and the facts stated therein is evidence under Section 45 and the Court may, in conjunction with other evidence and circumstances, take into consideration in adjudging the dispute in question, though it may not be treated as conclusive evidence.[40]

37. PAPER

Under Section 45, when the Court has to form an opinion upon a scientific point, the opinion on that point, of persons specially skilled in such science, is a relevant fact. The evidence as to whether a paper which contains incriminating material against the accused has been torn out from another copy is an information connected with forensic science. In such cases, opinion of expert in that science is necessary.[41]

---

34. State of Goa v. Desiderio Menezes, 1996 AIHC 3177 (para 18) (Bom). See also Govt. of Goa v. Jagannath Vamon Khalap, 1996 AIHC 3258 (para 17) (Bom).
35. Shyamlal Agarwal v. Govt. of India, 1998 AIHC 578 (para 9) (MP).
36. Mariappa Thevar v. Kaliammal, AIR 1971 Mad 198.
37. Abdulla v. State, 1977 CrLJ 1835.
38. Ranjit v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 881.
39. Ijjat Ali Talukdar v. Emperor, ILR (1960) 2 All 277.
40. Bala Shankar Maha Shankar Bhattjee v. Charity Commissioner, Gujarat, AIR 1995 SC 167 (para 22).
41. Parag v. State of Rajasthan, 1981 CrLJ 1244 (Raj).

38. DUTY TO EXAMINE AN EXPERT

There is no inflexible rule that, in every case where an accused is charged with murder caused by a lethal weapon, the prosecution can succeed in proving the charge only if an expert is examined. It is possible to finalise cases where the direct evidence is of such an unimpeachable character, and the nature of injuries disclosed by the post-mortem notes is so clearly consistent with the direct evidence, that the examination of a ballistic expert may not be regarded as essential. Where the direct evidence is not satisfactory, and where the injuries are alleged to have been caused with a gun, and prima facie, they appear to have been inflicted by a rifle, undoubtedly, the apparent inconsistency can be cured or oral evidence can be corroborated by leading the evidence of a ballistic expert. On facts, it was held that the failure of the prosecution to examine a ballistic expert has not introduced serious infirmity in the prosecution case.[42] When direct evidence is led and accepted, it is hardly necessary to consider the expert's opinion, though direct evidence can be appreciated in the light of the expert opinion.[43] Where a document was written in the presence of witnesses, and they were examined with reference to the document, it is admissible. When such direct evidence is available, the evidence of any other kind is rendered unnecessary; in such cases handwriting expert's opinion is not required.[44]

There is nothing in the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act (4 of 1887), to suggest that, in order to prove that the articles seized are "instruments of gambling", it is the duty of the prosecution to examine an expert in each and every case of gambling where instruments of gambling are seized.[45] The H.P. High Court has held that the report signed by the Junior Scientific Officer regarding the article recovered being charas, could not form the basis of conviction unless the signatory is examined.[46]

It is not necessary to examine the handwriting expert in every case of disputed handwriting.[47] Where the defendant neither included the name of the handwriting expert in his list of witnesses nor was the expert summoned at any stage of his evidence and the expert was not shown to have made comparison of the disputed documents and the signature with standard ones and made his opinion, his application for producing the handwriting expert after his evidence was closed was rightly rejected.[48]

When the dissimilarities in the signature or the handwriting between the disputed and the admitted ones are apparent, there is no necessity for the opinion of the handwriting expert.[49] Examination of handwriting expert is not necessary in every case of disputed writing, and no adverse inference can be drawn for not obtaining the expert's opinion.[50]

39. CONFLICT BETWEEN TWO EXPERTS

The Courts should not leave the question undecided merely because two doctors differ. Where they differ, the Court should rely on the evidence of the one who had superior qualifications and experience in the particular branch of medical science.[51] Where the opinion of the doctor who examined the deceased, immediately after the incident, and also conducted the post-mortem, was that the injury was caused by a sharp cutting weapon, there was no evidence that the doctor had reason to act in an unfair manner, and where the Board of Doctors constituted subsequently were unable to give opinion about the nature of the weapon, it was held that the negative evidence of the Medical Board cannot efface the positive evidence of the doctor.[52] Where a doctor who first examined the prosecutrix gave a clear opinion that it was a case of rape, and later she was examined by another doctor who stated that no opinion can be given, it was

---

42. Gurcharan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 340; State of Rajasthan v. Jawan Singh, 1971 CrLJ 1656 (Raj).
43. S.K. Ghosh v. Vice-Chancellor, Utkal University, AIR 1952 Ori 1; Gotham Construction Co. v. Amulya Krishna Ghose, AIR 1968 Cal 91.
44. State of Gujarat v. Vinayachandra, AIR 1967 SC 778; Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326; State of Assam v. Upendranath Rajkhowa, 1975 CrLJ 354 (Gau).
45. State of Gujarat v. Jagan Bhai Bhagwan Bhai, AIR 1966 SC 1633.
46. State of H.P. v. Edward Samual Chareton, 2001 Cr LJ 1356 (para 16) (HP).
47. In re : Basaraja Swami, AIR 1967 Mys 210.
48. Prahlad Ram v. O.B.C., 1999 AIHC 2737 (paras 5 and 6) (Raj).
49. K. Jagan Mohan Rao v. K. Swarup, (1972) 2 Mad LJ 77.
50. Srichand K. Khetwani v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1967 SC 450.
51. Mahendra Manilal v. Sushila Mahendra, AIR 1965 SC 364.
52. Munir Ahmad v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1989 SC 705.

held that the first doctor's opinion was to be preferred.[53] Where the doctor who examined the victim before her death found only four injuries on her body while the doctor who conducted the autopsy found six injuries, it was held that it was likely that the doctor who examined her while she was alive did not examine her thoroughly keeping her modesty in view.[54]

When there is a difference of opinion between the reports of Chemical Examiner and the Imperial Serologist, it is the duty of the prosecution to explain the difference and the mere production of the reports does not, under the circumstances, prove anything which can weigh against the accused.[55]

When there is conflict of opinions between two experts, much reliance cannot be placed, the reason being that such experts operating would normally support their respective pay-masters. Thus, all the attending circumstances have to be kept in mind, before the opinion testimony of any such expert can be accepted.[56]

As a general proposition it may be true that when the doctor has expressed two views, the one that is favourable to the accused must be taken into account. But medical evidence cannot be considered in isolation as it is based on inferences drawn from various facts present. Hence, his evidence must be taken in conjunction with all the circumstantial evidence on record.[57] Where there was a conflict of opinion between two medical witnesses, it was held that the opinion of the medical witness which supports the direct evidence is ordinarily to be accepted.[58]

Where there is a positive assertion by one expert that the signature on the will is that of the testator, and another expert casts certain doubts, and there is no positive inference by him that the signature is not genuine, it was held that the opinion of the first expert is to be accepted.[59] In a case of conflict of opinions of two handwriting experts, the opinion of the expert regarding whom the Court in one of its earlier decisions had held that he was not a competent expert in respect of handwriting and fingerprints, was rejected.[60]

Where there was a conflict between the contents of the inquest report and the Medical Evidence, it was held that the Medical Evidence should normally prevail.[61]

Where a medical witness stated that the injuries found on the deceased were homicidal, and when his attention was not drawn in the cross-examination to the passages from Modi's Medical Jurisprudence, it was held that it would not be fair to reject his opinion merely because there is another body of medical opinion which is not proved to be on identical facts or data.[62]

Medical Evidence of a doctor who treated the testatix in her last illness, on the question of her state of mind, is to be preferred to the Medical Evidence of a doctor who did not treat her.[63]

40. CONFLICT BETWEEN EXPERT AND OTHER WITNESS

Where the medical report did not specify, the number of persons who committed the rape, it was held the doctor cannot be found fault with, and the evidence of the prosecutrix that she was raped by the accused persons one after the other can be accepted.[64]

---

53. Chvdiamat Jain v. State of Orissa, 1982 Raj Cr Cases 294.
54. Sukhpal v. State of M.P., AIR 1997 SC 468. See also State Govt. of N.C.T. of Delhi v. Sunil, 2001 Cr LJ 504 (para 8) (SC).
55. Tulsiram Kanu v. State, AIR 1954 SC 1 : 1954 CrLJ 225.
56. Moharsingh v. Dindayal, AIR 1974 Punj 302. Conflict between opinions of Govt. and non-Govt. examiners, held, former more reliable, Raj Mohammad v. State of H.P., 1995 Cr LJ 810 (para 17) (HP).
57. State of T.N. v. P. Muniappan, AIR 1998 SC 504 : 1998 Cr LJ 694.
58. Piara Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 2274; Purna Palai v. State, 1987 Cr LJ 1406.
59. Manorama Srivastava (Smt.) v. Saroj Srivastava (Smt.), 1989 All 17.
60. Kumar Sales Corporation, New Delhi v. Ajit Singh, 2000 AIHC 1876 (para 8) (Del), relying on Lalit Popli v. Union of India, (1998) 75 DLT 269.
61. (1984) 54 Cut LT 81.
62. Bhagwandas v. State of Rajasthan, AIR 1957 SC 589; Sunderlal v. State of M.P., AIR 1954 SC 28; Badsha v. State, 1965 Mah LJ (notes 90).
63. Ryali Kameshwara Rao v. Suryaprakash Rao, AIR 1962 AP 178.
64. Balwant Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC. 1080.

Where there was the opinion of radiologist, and the other evidence was a birth register, school admission register and the evidence of the girl's father as to the age of the girl, it was held that the other evidence is to be preferred to the radiologist's opinion, because, owing to the variations in climatic, dietetic, hereditary and other factors affecting the people of the different States in India, it cannot reasonably be expected to formulate a uniform standard for the determination of the age by the extent of ossification and the unifying of epiphysis in the bones.[65]

Where the statement of a doctor was hypothetical, and he gave his own experience of cases, his opinion cannot be allowed to outweigh the testimony of disinterested eye-witnesses.[66] The opinion of a medical officer is, at best, an opinion, and cannot be taken as contradicting the positive evidence of the witnesses regarding the fact that the deceased took his last meal at about 4 p.m. and he was stabbed at 5 p.m.[67] In a case of accident, the question was whether it was due to the workmen having been under the influence of drink. There was detection of liquor in the stomach of the deceased, in the post-mortem and by the chemical examiner, it was held that such opinion was not enough to outweigh the evidence of eye-witnesses.[68] Evidence of expert cannot outweigh direct evidence.[69] Where there is a conflict between Medical Evidence and the oral testimony of the witnesses, the oral evidence can be accepted where such evidence is beyond reproach, and creates confidence in Court, and there is no reason for the false implication of any accused. Where the evidence is not of that character, and the Medical Evidence is not open to any doubt, it would be safe to accept Medical Evidence.[70] There is no invariable rule that the expert opinion has to be given preference over the direct testimony. Courts are not debarred from relying on direct evidence of unerring nature, in preference to the doctor's opinion. In that case, the doctor's opinion was that injuries were due to collapse of mud and brick wall. But the direct evidence negatived the very existence of such wall.[71]

Where the Medical Evidence ruled out all possibility that injuries could take place in the manner alleged by the prosecution, such evidence was important in assessing the testimony of eye-witnesses.[72] Where the medical report showed that there were four different injuries on the deceased, but the eye-witness stated that the assailant had given only one blow with a lathi, which would not explain the multiple injuries found by the doctor, the natural conclusion should be that the alleged eye-witness had not seen the occurrence.[73]

Where there was inconsistency between the medical and eye-witnesses' evidence, it was held that the conviction of the accused was unsustainable; as he was entitled to the benefit of doubt.[74]

In a trial for murder involving a charred body, the Medical Evidence did not show any injuries in the post-mortem certificate, which was issued by a doctor, but, in the inquest report, there was mention of incised injuries on some parts of the charred body. Their measurements were also given in the inquest report. The Supreme Court having repelled the contention that the doctor who performed the post-mortem examination could not have seen the injuries as the body was charred, held that the evidence of the doctor showed that, though some parts of the body were completely charred, it was possible to see and measure the incised injuries on the body, that even the panchas were able to see injuries on the bodies, and so, the inquest report containing such measurements could not be held to be unreliable.[75]

---

65. Chathu v. Govidan Kutty, AIR 1958 Ker 121 : 1958 CrLJ 637. Overruled on another point in Varadarajan v. State of Madras, AIR 1965 SC 942.
66. Erramreddi Papaanna In re, 1957 Andh LT 341; Sarbeshar Malik v. State, 1986 CrLJ 1721. See also S G Gundegowda v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 852 (para 27) (Kant); Mangal Singh v. State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 3258 (para 12) (P&H); Nafe Singh v. State of Haryana, 1996 AIHC 3825 (para 14) (P&H).
67. Basappa Bhimappa v. State, AIR 1961 Mys 21; Inder Narayan v. Rupnarain, AIR 1965 MP 107; Salmizia v. State of U.P., AIR 1979 SC 391.
68. Ladi Jaganatham v. Smt. Padmabati, AIR 1962 Ori 7.
69. Dulal Chandra Adak v. Gunadhar Patra, AIR 1998 Cal 150 (para 5).
70. Thakur v. State, AIR 1955 All 189; Bhagaban Barik v. State, (1961) 27 Cut LT 116.
71. 1973 Cut LR (Cri) 254.
72. In re : Madivaliappa Channappa, AIR 1966 Mys 142.
73. Golappa Avana v. State, 1968 CrLJ 929 : AIR 1968 Goa 72. See also In re : Madivalappa, 1966 CrLJ 672 : AIR 1966 Mys 142.
74. Aminchand v. State of H.P., 1985 CrLJ 1450.
75. M.D. Jadav v. State of Mah; AIR 1976 SC 2327.

Inconsistency between testimony of eye-witness and medical-witness is no ground to discard testimony of eye-witnesses.[76] Medical evidence can be used to repel the testimony of eye-witnesses only if it is so conclusive as to rule out even the possibility of the eye-witness version to be true.[77] Where the opinion of the doctor was that the injury in question could not be caused by the 'ranpi' but the unimpeachable evidence of the eye-witnesses was that the said injury was caused by the same weapon, it was held that in such circumstances, the medical opinion could not nullify the evidence of the eye-witnesses.[78] Where it was established that the eye-witness and the deceased were travelling in the same rickshaw and the witness stated that the victim sustained gunshot injury in the back while the medical evidence showed injury in victim's chest, it was held that in the circumstances, the High Court had rightly pointed out that the witness having seen the exit wound on the back of the victim bleeding, thought that he was hit in the back.[79]

It is not a universal principle supported by any authority that where there is a variance between the account given by the eye-witnesses and the medical evidence, the evidence of eye-witnesses must prevail.[80] Where the evidence of the eye-witnesses was that the victims were unconscious as a result of injury and the medical evidence said that they were conscious, there could not be said to be any inconsistency in both the versions merely on this ground because the victims might have gained consciousness by the time of medical examination.[81]

Where there was inconsistency between ocular and Medical Evidence, conviction cannot be based on such evidence and the accused is to be given benefit of doubt.[82]

41. VALUE

An expert is a witness of fact. His evidence is really of an advisory character. The duty of an expert witness is to furnish the judge the necessary scientific criteria for testing the accuracy of the conclusions so as to enable the Judge to form his independent judgment by the application of this criteria to the facts proved by the evidence of the case. The scientific opinion evidence, if intelligible, convincing and tested becomes a factor and often an important factor for consideration along with other evidence of the case. The credibility of such a witness depends on the reasons stated in support of his conclusions and the data and material furnished which form the basis of his conclusions.[83]

The Court is bound to defer to the opinion of an expert where skill and experience alone render a person a competent judge. In the case of an expert witness there exists the tendency to support the view which is favourable to the side which employs him so that it is difficult to get from him an independent opinion. An expert may revise his opinion if he finds cogent reason and his evidence need not be disbelieved on this ground.[84]

The Supreme Court has laid down that, although the approach has to be one of caution, there is no rule of law that the evidence of an expert can not be acted upon unless substantially corroborated.[85]

---

76. Solanki Chimanbhai Ukabhia v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 484.
77. State of U.P. v. Harban Sahai, (1998) 6 SCC 50 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 1412.
78. Prem v. Daula, AIR 1997 SC 715 : 1997 Cr LJ 838. Minor inconsistency between medical evidence and ocular evidence, ocular evidence cannot be rejected, Anwar v. State of Haryana, (1997) 9 SCC 766 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 762. Court has to come to its own conclusion, Jamunabai v. Surendrakumar, AIR 1995 MP 274 (para 15).
79. Surendra Narain v. State of U.P., AIR 1998 SC 192 : 1998 Cr LJ 359; Adya Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 3011; State of Bihar v. Ram Padarath Singh, AIR 1998 SC 2606; Surjan Mahto v. State of Bihar, 1998 SCC (Cri) 886.
80. Chiguripati Suryanarayana v. State of A.P., 1999 Cr LJ 1201, 1205 (AP).
81. Ramkishore Patel v. State of A.P., 1997 Cr LJ 207 (SC). For inconsistency between the evidence of eye-witnesses and that of the doctor, see Periasami v. State of T.N., 1997 Cr LJ 219 (SC).
82. Mohar Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1981 SC 1578.
83. State of H.P. v. Jai Lal, 1999 Cr LJ 4294 (paras 17, 18 and 20) (SC) : AIR 1999 SC 3318.
84. Subodh Kumar v. Soshi Kumar, AIR 1958 Cal 264.
85. Muralilal v. State of M.P., AIR 1980 SC 531; Citing LORD PRESIDENT COOPER in Deeci v. Edinburgh Magistrate, (1953) SC (Scotland) 34 on the importance of expert evidence, and Ram Chandra v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 381; Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326 : 1967 CrLJ 1197.

The Court can refuse to place any reliance on the opinion of an expert which is unsupported by any reasons.[86]

The competency of an expert should be established, and he should be subjected to cross-examination. Expert's opinion is not straight away admissible without examining him.[87]

If evidence of an expert is to be discarded passages from books relied on and sought to discredit his opinion should be put to him in the cross-examination.[88]

It is not permissible for a Court to substitute its own opinion to the opinion of an expert.[89] The Court cannot act as an expert by comparing the signature with the admitted one and record its findings on its own view, without taking the assistance of any expert or other material evidence provided under Section 47.[90] Where the doctor had not given his opinion regarding the nature of injury, the Court could not substitute its own opinion by usurping the functions of an expert.[91] Substitution of an opinion given by an expert by its own conclusions by the High Court is illegal.[92]

Once it becomes clear that the doctor's evidence does not go against the prosecution case that the injuries were caused on the body of the deceased by one shot from a pistol used by the accused, the absence of the ballistic expert's evidence cannot be a reason to doubt the testimony of the eye-witnesses.[93]

A medical witness who performs a post-mortem examination is a witness of fact, though he also gives an opinion on certain aspects of the case. The value of medical witness is not merely a check upon the testimony of the eye-witnesses; it is also independent testimony, because it may establish certain facts quite apart from the other oral evidence.[94]

It was held that where expert's evidence about the distance from where the gun was fired was at variance with direct testimony which was beyond doubt, the direct testimony carries weight.[95]

Where the expert gave the opinion that the dissimilarities between alleged forged lottery ticket and the genuine one are due to natural variations, and his opinion as to the difference in ink was not based on chemical examination of ink, it was held that even the expert's opinion, if admissible, is not a safe basis for finding out the offence of forgery.[96]

Where the writing on the documents relied on by the prosecution was proved to be that of the accused, not only by the expert but also by persons acquainted with the writing of the accused, and on observation by the Court, it found similarity between the disputed and the admitted handwritings, it was held that the conviction can be sustained under the Prevention of Corruption Act.[97] Evidence of handwriting expert is only corroborative of other evidence of the point at issue.[98] Where evidence of a handwriting expert is unreliable correction based on his opinion is unsustainable.[99] The general features of a handwriting, such as skill, slant, pen-pressure, spacing, etc., cannot constitute sufficient material for establishing the identity. What is required is that peculiar individual writing habits or idiosyncracies, and the presence or absence of the same in two sets of writings is a feature which is of decisive importance. A single dissimilarity can outweigh a large number of similarities. Where the handwriting expert was unable to make out any distinctive characteristics, or any other material on the basis of which the identity

---

86. Haji Md. Ekramulhaq v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1959 SC 488; State of V.P. v. Krishna Nand, AIR 1953 Vin Pra 21; State v. Kanhu Chand Barik, 1983 CrLJ 133 (Ori).
87. Balakrishna Das Agarwal v. Radhadevi Smt., AIR 1989 All 133.
88. Krishan Lal v. M.C.D., 1985 CrLJ 285 (Del).
89. State of U.P. v. Shanker, AIR 1981 SC 897.
90. P. Aswathamma v. Hotel Sathyaprakash, 2000 AIHC 4519 (paras 17 and 19) (Kant).
91. Babloo v. State of M.P., 1995 Cr LJ 3534 (para 15) (MP), relying on Gambhir v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1982 SC 1157 : 1982 Cr LJ 1243 (para 30).
92. State of U.P. v. Shanker, AIR 1981 SC 897.
93. Shambhoo v. State of U.P., 1963 ISCJ 315.
94. Nagindrabala Mitra (Smt.) v. Sunil Chandra Roy, AIR 1960 SC 706.
95. Karnail Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1971 SC 2119; expert evidence was not permitted to be led where other evidence was already there. Bai Shanta v. Union of India, 2001 Cr LJ 2152 (para 11) (Guj).
96. Chatt Ram v. State of Haryana, AIR 1979 SC 1890.
97. Ram Pyrelal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1980 SC 1523.
98. Kanailal Shaw v. Calcutta Credit Corp. Ltd., ILR (1971) 1 Cal. 103.
99. Kanchan Singh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1979 SC 1011.

could be held to be duly made out, the expert's testimony did not warrant the conclusion that it was the accused who made the writings on the documents in question.[1]

Acquittal of an accused because of the absence of the expert's opinion to prove that the offending books of the accused were reproductions of the book printed and published by the complainant, for the infringement of the copyright, was held unjustified.[2]

The report of an expert by itself is not evidence unless he is produced in Court and his evidence is tested by cross-examination.[3]

Expert's evidence is not conclusive.[4] It is the duty of the Court to come to a conclusion on a question of fact, after considering the entire evidence including that of the expert; the expert's evidence is only a piece of evidence and is not conclusive.[5]

The expert's opinion does not take away the common man's judgment, as they have a right to think and judge things from day to day experience.[6]

The Court cannot reach a conclusion solely on the evidence of the expert who visited the premises immediately after the occurrence in a mine, where the prosecution had failed to establish that the respondents had not taken all necessary steps and precautions as contemplated under the Mining Rules.[7]

The Court is not bound to accept the testimony of an expert in every case.[8]

The object of expert evidence is to assist the Court in forming its own opinions. One of the two ways in which the honesty of an expert can be tested, is to consider the number of instances in which he has given opinions contrary to the opinions of those who consult him.[9]

Where the handwriting expert had hardly done any work as an expert after 1950, and exceeded the limits as an expert and supported the appellant in matters which were not within his province, it was held that his testimony should be rejected.[10]

Opinion of an handwriting expert is not inadmissible merely because, it was also based on certain unadmitted writings.[11]

Where a bus conductor was charged for forging bus warrants to have pecuniary advantage, when there was no evidence that the accused himself used the bus warrants, and he was not found to be in exclusive possession of the bus warrant register, it was held that the evidence of the handwriting expert, when not corroborated by other evidence, cannot be the base for conviction.[12]

When an expert gives an opinion, he must place before the Court all the materials which induce him to come to the conclusion, so that the Court, although not an expert, may from its own judgment on those materials.[13] Observation of the High Court that "there is a natural tendency on the part of an expert witness to support the view of the person who called him" cannot be down-staged, for, many so-called experts have been shown to be remunerated witnesses making themselves available on hire to pledge their oath in favour of the party paying them.[14]

---

1. Jiwan Prakash Pandurang Mokashe v. State of Mah., ILR 1974 Bom 337.
2. Govt. of W.B. v. Nityagopal Basak, 1985 CrLJ 202 (Cal).
3. Bhoore Singh v. Karansingh, AIR 1935 All 142 : 37 CrLJ 117 (SB); Perumal v. S.I. Railway Co. Ltd., ILR 1937 Mad 407; Ahmedabad Municipalty v. Shantilal, AIR 1961 Guj 196.
4. Kamla Kanwar (Smt.) v. Ratanlal, AIR 1971 All 304; Devi Prasad v. State, AIR 1967 All 64; Ishwari Prasad Misra v. Md. Isa, AIR 1963 SC 1728; Nagappa Chandappa v. Nannibu, AIR 1960 Mys 220.
5. G. Husseniah Naidu v. B. Yerriah, AIR 1954 Andh 39.
6. Husan Ali v. Ganganath, AIR 1956 Assam 15.
7. State of Mysore v. Sarangapani Modaliar, AIR 1960 Mys 245.
8. Madanlal v. Amarchand, AIR 1950 Ajmer 68.
9. Devi Prasad v. State, AIR 1967 All 64.
10. Laxmi Chand Khajuria v. Ishroo Devi Smt., AIR 1977 SC 1694.
11. Saleem-ud-din v. State, AIR (1971) 1 Del 432.
12. (1985) 2 Ori LR 100.
13. Ajitrij Shivprasad v. Bai Vasumati, AIR 1969 Guj 48; Javitri Devi Alias Shanti v. State, ILR (1956) 6 Raj 1027; Premshankar Mishra v. State, 1957 CrLJ 108.
14. Gulzar Ali v. State of H.P., (1998) 2 SCC 192 : 1998 SCC (Cri) 605.

Where the report of the expert was put to the accused during his examination under Section 313, Cr.P.C., non-furnishing of the details contained in the report to the accused was not fatal to the prosecution case[15] but where the expert evidence was based on notes prepared in the exercise of the official duty whose copies were not supplied to the defence, such notes could not be relied upon.[16] Where the proof of signature was necessary to determine the controversy, application for comparison of signature by the expert cannot be disallowed on the ground of delay.[17]

42. MODERN SCIENTIFIC METHODS OF EVIDENCE

Modern Scientific methods have made revolutionary changes in the field of Expert Evidence. Some of them are given below:

See Valedictory address delivered by Hon'ble Sri. M. JAGANNADHA RAO, Chief Justice, Kerala on 2-10-1992 at the Forensic Laboratory, Trivandrum.[18]

(a) Blood Groups: See Commentary under Section 112.

(b) Blood Stains: The ABC system has been in use for grouping blood stains. Other techniques are Electrophoresis and isoelectric focussing—Apart from blood, semen and saliva samples are also being identified.

A recent technique known as 'DNA finger printing' gives to all intents and purposes accurate evidence of identity by a comparison of samples of organic material taken from a person. It can be used to identify suspects of crime where the perpetrator has left traces of organic material. The new test does not indicate a suspect; it can be applied only to a suspect already indicated otherwise. One can easily imagine a bank of test results being built up in a criminal records office.

(c) Blood or Urine or Breath Test for determining the alcohol content in the blood.—It is an offence to drive with a blood alcohol level of over a particular level. Sophisticated systems have now been invented. At present the most common method is the use of breath analysers. The person concerned is asked to stand in front of a machine and breathe out twice into it. The machine operates and brings out a piece of paper indicating the extent of intoxication. This is widely used for Motor Vehicle offences.

Stop watches and speedometers are used to find out the speed of a vehicle at a given time. In Castle v. Cross,[19] it was held that in the absence of evidence to the contrary the Courts will presume that stop watches and speedometers and traffic lights were in order at the relevant time.

43. AUTOMATIC PHOTOGRAPHS

The leading case on the use of automatic photographs is the Statue of Liberty case,[20] where a film recorded by a radar apparatus on a ship was used in a case of collision between two ships in the river Thames. It was observed in that case that if a tape-recorder were admissible a photograph taken by a radar instrument is equally admissible. The law is bound to take cognizance of the fact that mechanical means replace human effort. The case in R v. Maqsood Ali,[21] a case relating to tape recorder was relied on R v. Dodson,[22] was a case of attempted armed robbery where photographs were taken by a secret camera. It was held the photographs were relevant as to whether an offence was committed and who committed it. The jury could look into the photographs and decide whether they are of the accused. Regard must be had to the quality of the photographs, and to the change in the appearance of the accused between the time of the photograph and the time of the trial.

---

15. Raveendran v. State of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ 3562 (para 5) (Ker).
16. Vithal Mahadev Patil v. State, 1996 Cr LJ 1796 (para 11) (Kant).
17. Hariharan v. Rajendran, 2000 AIHC 4559 (para 5) (Ker).
18. Published in (1993) 1 KLJ 19 (Journals).
19. (1984) 1 WLR 1372.
20. (1968) 1 WLR 739.
21. (1965) 3 WLR 229.
22. (1984) 1 WLR 971.

Supplementary evidence of identifying witnesses is admissible. If supplementary evidence is given care must be taken in selecting an identifying witness whose acquaintance with the defendant does not stem from previous brushes with the law.[23]

44. COMPUTERS

In England under the Civil Evidence Act, 1968, it is provided that a statement provided by a computer is admissible subject to strict conditions to ensure that the information is reliable. In Myers v. D P P [24] it was held that a written record made by an unidentifiable workman of the engine and chassis number of a car by mers film was inadmissible in evidence. To get over the decision the Criminal Law Evidence Act, 1965 was passed for admitting evidence that would otherwise be excluded as hearsay subject to certain conditions. See J.C. SMITH on admissibility of statement by computer—1981 Cr Law R. 387 In R v. Wood,[25] LORD LANE C.J. observed: "The computer was rightly described as a tool. It did not contribute its own knowledge. It merely did sophisticated calculation which could have been done normally by the chemist and was in fact done by the chemist using a computer programme by Mr. Kalbe whom the crown called as a witness. The fact that the efficiency of evidence is dependent on more then one person does not make any difference in kind".

See also the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II.

45. TAPE RECORDER

There is no difference in principle between a tape-recording and a photograph provided the voice is properly identified[26]. In that case the recording was imperfect as street noises were also got recorded in the tape, not all that was said by the accused was distinguishable. It was held the tape record was inadmissible (Contra R. v. Robson,[27] where conversation was sufficiently audible and hence held admissible). Where there is a possibility of interference by the police it is not admissible.

However statements recorded without the speaker's knowledge and intention were held to have been made orally and not in a 'document' Ventouris v. Mountain (No. 2).[28]

46. VIDEO TAPE—TELEVISION LINK

In Garcim v. Amerind Investment Advisers Ltd., it was proposed that a witness in New York may be examined on oath in New York with counsel in London examining him by a video link. It was held that as the evidence of a witness abroad recorded in video tape was admissible as a 'document'. The transmission of such evidence by video link could be received.[29]

47. PSYCHIATRISTS—PSYCHOLOGISTS

In a number of cases psychiatrists or psychologists are being called to give evidence for the defence in criminal cases. Where the defence is that an accused is to be acquitted or given a reduced sentence on ground of insanity or non-insane metabolism evidence of a psychiatrist has been admitted. The expert should not however usurp the role of the judge and the jury. A doctor evidence that A was not mentally disordered but none the less he did not form any intent to commit murder was held inadmissible-1972 (56) Crl. App. R. 268. The evidence of psychologists is also admissible to assess the evidence of a witness e.g. that a witness was hysterical at the time of assault and was therefore incapable of giving reliable testimony.[30] Normally a psychologist's evidence is relevant as to the personality of a person and his mental make up. But as to how an ordinary person not suffering from any mental illness is likely to

---

23. Fowden v. White, (1982) Cr LR 588; See article of D.J. BIRCH in 1984 Cr. Law Review pp. 489-90.
24. 1965 AC 1001.
25. (1982) 76 Cr App R 23.
26. R v. Maqsud Ali, (1965) 2 All ER 464.
27. (1992) 2 All ER.
28. THE ITALIA EXPRESS, (1992) 3 All ER 414.
29. See EVIDENCE ON TELEVISION, (1992) 108 LQR, P. 561 by MARTIN DOCK RAY; COURTS ON TELEVISION, (1988) Vol. 51 MODERN LAW REVIEW, p. 593.
30. Tooley, 1965 AC 595.

react to stresses and strains of life, such evidence is not admissible.[31] In Lowery v. The Queen[32] the Privy Council had to deal with a case of murder committed by one of the two accused without apparent motive each alleging that the other was responsible for the killing. The evidence of a psychologist that one of them was immature whereas the other was agressive and the former would have been likely to be led by the latter was held admissible.

Before ordering a child to be examined by a psychiatrist, the consent of the Court should be obtained as the very examination by a psychiatrist may have an adverse effect on the child.[33]

48. TRUTH DRUG

Statements made under the influence of truth drug have generally been held not admissible.[34]

49. HYPNOTISM

Hypnotic sleep has by some scientists been said to be a condition in which the subject will give truthful answers. This method is applicable only to those susceptible to hypnotic influence. It is doubtful whether courts at the present stage of development of hypnotism would accept the evidence obtained by hypnotism.

In R. v. Ward,[35] the English Court of Appeal has laid down certain important propositions as to expert evidence collected by the prosecution for its own purpose and the disclosure thereof to the defence. The accused in this case (a lady) was convicted of the offence of causing an explosion likely to endanger life. The following propositions were laid down by the court:

(i) that the duty of forensic scientists to act in the cause of justice and not in the interests of the prosecution should be spelled out;

(ii) that there was a positive duty on expert scientific witnesses to disclose to those instructing them the records of all relevant tests, etc., and on the prosecution to make full and proper enquiries of forensic scientists and to make the resulting information known to the defence; and

(iii) that if in a criminal case the prosecution wished to claim public interest immunity for documents helpful to the defence; the prosecution was obliged to give notice to the defence of the asserted right to withhold the documents so that, if necessary, the Court could be asked to rule on the legitimacy of the claim. (From PROF P.M. BAKSHRS' LEGAL JOTTINGS, Vol. 1 No. 4 Law India page 9).

Facts bearing upon opinions of experts.

S. 46. Facts, not otherwise relevant, are relevant if they support or are inconsistent with the opinions of experts, when such opinions are relevant.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question is, whether A was poisoned by a certain poison.

The fact that other persons, who were poisoned by that poison, exhibited certain symptoms which experts affirm or deny to be the symptoms of that poison, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether an obstruction to a harbour is caused by a certain sea-wall.

The fact that other harbours similarly situated in other respects, but where there were no such sea-wall, began to be obstructed at about the same time, is relevant.

---

31. R v. Turner, (1975) 1 All ER 70.
32. (1973) 3 All ER 662.
33. In re : S an infant, (1970) 1 All ER 107.
34. Meetion v. H.M. Advocate, 1970 JC 1.
35. THE TIMES, 8 June 1992.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

In matters where the opinion of the expert is relevant, any other fact which supports or is inconsistent with that opinion, though not otherwise relevant, is relevant.

This principle is in a way contained in Section 11 of the Act, wherein it is stated that facts, not otherwise relevant, are relevant, provided they are inconsistent with any fact in issue or relevant fact; or, if by themselves, or in connection with other facts, they make the existence or non-existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable or improbable. This section is confined to the opinions of experts, which subject is elaborately dealt with under Section 45.

The opinion of an expert is open to corroboration or rebuttal. The illustrations indicate that, for this purpose, res inter alias acta is receivable.

An exception to the general rule, which lays down that evidence of collateral facts cannot be received, arises "where the question is a matter of science, and where the facts proved, though not directly in issue, tend to illustrate the opinions of scientific witnesses. Thus, where the point in dispute was, whether a sea-wall had caused the choking up of a harbour, and engineers were called to give their opinions as to the effect of the wall, proof that other harbours on the same coast, where there were no embankments, had begun to be choked up about the same time as the harbour in question, was admitted, as such evidence served to elucidate the reasoning of the skilled witnesses.[36]

In action against the owner of a vessel for running down a tug, the opinion of a marine insurance agent, who had examined the vessel and was called on behalf of the defendants, having been given to show how the collision occurred; the fact that, though the tug was insured in the witness's office, he had advised its owners not to sue the vessel, is admissible as strong corroboration of the truth of the opinion.[37]

The question being whether A died of strychnine poisoning, experts who have given their opinions as to the symptoms of such poisoning, and the A's death was caused thereby, may support such opinions by proof that other persons who were admittedly poisoned by strychnine had exhibited similar symptoms to A's, and experts whose opinion was that A had, on the contrary, died from ordinary tetanus, may prove that other persons who admittedly died from the latter cause had exhibited symptoms like A's.[38]

Opinion as to handwriting, when relevant.

S. 47. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the person by whom any document was written or signed, the opinion of any person acquainted with the handwriting of the person by whom it is supposed to be written or signed that it was or was not written or signed by that person, is a relevant fact.

Explanation.*—A person is said to be acquainted with the handwriting of another person when he has seen that person write, or when he has received documents purporting to be written by that person in answer to documents written by himself or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

ILLUSTRATION

The question is, whether a given letter is in the handwriting of A, a merchant in London.

---

36. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., s.337, p. 234: Folkes v. Chadd, (1782) 3 Doug 157. See generally Murarilal v. State of M P, AIR 1980 SC 531 at 535. (Illustration (b) is based on this).
37. Stephenson v. Tyne Commrs., (1869) 17 WR 590, cited in PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn., p. 589 (para 27-57).
38. R v. Palmer, STEPH HIST CR LAW, Vol. III p. 389, cited in PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 13th Edn, p. 590 (para 27-58). (Illustration (a) is based on this).

B is a merchant in Calcutta, who has written letters addressed to A and received letters purporting to be written by him. C is B's clerk, whose duty it was to examine and file B's correspondence. D is B's broker, to whom B habitually submitted the letters purporting to be written by A for the purpose of advising him thereon.

The opinions of B, C and D on the question whether the letter is in the handwriting of A are relevant, though neither B, C nor D ever saw A write.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope	... 566	4. Value of Evidence under this section	... 569
2. Written or signed	... 567	5. Has seen the person writing	... 570
3. Acquainted with the handwriting	... 567	6. Habitually [Explanation]	... 570

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section indicates one of the methods of proving handwriting. The handwriting of a person may be proved in the following ways:—

(1) By the evidence of the writer himself;

(2) By the evidence of a person who has seen the person, whose handwriting is in question, write.[39]

(3) By the evidence of a person acquainted with such handwriting, either by receiving letters purporting to be written by the person in answer to documents written by the witness, or under his authority and addressed to that person, or when, in the ordinary course of business, documents purporting to be written by that person have been habitually submitted to him.

(4) By the evidence of an expert in comparing handwriting. The Court must satisfy itself by such means as are open to it that the opinion may be acted upon.[40]

(5) By the Court comparing the document in question with any others proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be genuine.

(6) The Court may also direct any person present in Court to write any words or figures for the purpose of enabling the Court to compare the words or figures so written with any words alleged to have been written by such person.[41]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND 4th Ed., Vol. 17, Page 66, Para 89, it is observed: "A person's handwriting may be proved by the opinion of witnesses who are acquainted with it (Proof in a criminal case may be made in the same way as in a civil case). The knowledge necessary for this purpose may have been acquired by the witness at any time[42], having (1) seen the party write, or (2) received communications purporting to come from him[43], in answer to those addressed to him by the witness, or (3) observed documents purporting to be in the party's handwriting in the ordinary course of business.[44] Knowledge, however, acquired before or during the trial by a non-expert witness, for the express purpose of qualifying him to prove the party's handwriting at the trial, will not suffice to make the evidence admissible[45]. Testimony thus admitted is considered to be primary and not secondary in its nature, and so will not be excluded, even though better evidence of the handwriting in question is available.[46] While

---

39. In the matter of a First Grade Pleader, (1914) PR No. 18 of 1915 (Civil).
40. Fakhruddin v. State of M.P., AIR 1967 SC 1326.
41. Barindra Kumer v. Emperor, ILR 37 Cal 467, 502; Pulin Behari v. King-Emperor, 16 Cal WN 1105; see also Ganpatrao Khanderao v. Vasantarao Ganapatrao, AIR 1932 Bom 558; Khijiruddin v. Emperor, ILR 53 Cal 372; Sarojini v. Haridas, 26 Cal WN 113 : AIR 1922 Cal 12.
42. There must have been sufficient opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the handwriting in order to make the evidence admissible: R. v. O'Brien, (1911) 7 Cr App Rep 29, CCA; Pitre v. R. (1933) 1 DLR 417. See also Burr v. Harper, (1816) Holt NP 420, and Warren v. Anderson, (1839) 8 Scott 384.
43. Harrington v. Fry, (1824) IC & P 289, and see Gould v. Jones, (1762) 1 Wm Bl 384.
44. Doe d Mudd v. Suckermore, (1836) 5 A & E 703 at 730, 731; Re : Clarence Hotel, Ilfracombe, Ltd., (1999) 54 Sol Jo 117; R v. O'Brien, (1911) 7 Cr App Rep 29, CCA.
45. R. v. Crouch, (1850) 4 Cox CC 163; Stranger v. Searle, (1793) 1 Esp 13; R v. Richard, (1918) 119 LT 192 CCA.
46. Lucas v. Williams & Sons, (1892) 2 QB 113 at 116, CA, per LORD ESHER MR.

evidence of opinion or belief is admitted for the purpose of proving handwriting, where direct evidence of one who was present when the document was written is not available,[47] and familiarity with the handwriting in question may be slight[48] an opinion based on mere inference is insufficient.[49]

It has long been recognised in England as well as in this country that any writing may be proved by the opinion of any person who is acquainted with the handwriting of the person alleged to have written the document and that one of the ways in which the knowledge of a person's handwriting may be acquired is by the witness having seen, in the ordinary course of business, documents which on evidence direct or circumstantial are proved to have been written by such person.[50]

Besides the above methods, the Supreme Court has held that by internal evidence afforded by the contents of the document, the document can be proved. Where the disputed document was a link in a chain of correspondence, the person who is the recipient of the document, would reasonably, be in a good position, both with reference to his prior knowledge of the writing or the signature of the alleged sender, as also his knowledge of the subject of the chain of correspondence, to speak to its authorship.[51]

Opinion as to handwriting is hearsay and becomes relevant only if the conditions laid down in the Section 47 are first proved.[52]

2. WRITTEN OR SIGNED

This section presupposes that the document in question must either be written or signed by a person. The word 'signed' is understood as signature of the individual in the normal sense. Any form in which a person affixes his name, with intent that it shall be treated as his signature, is sufficient. A name may be signed by a mark. Initials were also held to amount to a sufficient signature.

Signing includes signature by stamping.[53]

A document wholly in the handwriting of a party is said to be an autograph or holograph; where it is in the handwriting of another person, and is only signed by the party, the signature may be called "onomastic"; where it is signed by a cross or other symbol, it is "symbolic".[54]

3. ACQUAINTED WITH THE HANDWRITING

Under this section, when the court has to form an opinion as to the handwriting of a person, the opinion of a person acquainted with the handwriting of such person is admissible. Before such admission of evidence, one has to prove that the witness is acquainted with the handwriting of such person which is in question.[55] It is not correct to say that when a handwriting expert is not examined, the court is not justified in relying upon the evidence as to handwriting coming from a person who was not only competent, but also appeared to be correct in saying that the handwriting was in the handwriting of a

---

47. See Sayer v. Glossop, (1848) 2 Exch 499; Wright v. Cobb, (1885) 1 TLR 555, DC; Carey v. Pitt, (1797) Peake Add Cas 130; Butchelor v. Honeywood, (1799) 2 Esp 715; Greaves v. Hunter, (1826) 2 C&P 477; Drew v. Prior, (1843) 5 M & Gr 264; Chant v. Brown, (1852) 9 Hare 790; Smith v. Sainsbury, (1832) 5 C&P 196; Doe d Mudd v. Suckermore, (1837) 5 Ad & El 703.
48. It is sufficient if the witness has acted on letters received from the person whose handwriting is in dispute; Harrington v. Fry, (1824) 1 C&P 289; Tharpe v. Gisburne, (1825) 2 C&P 21; R v. Slaney, (1823) 5 C&P 213; Murieta v. Wolfhagen, (1849) 2 Car & Kir 744; Ovenston v. Wilson, (1845) 2 Car & Kir 1. A signature may be proved by a witness who has only seen the surname written on some other occasion; Lewis v. Sapio, (1827) Mood & M 39, disapproving Powell v. Ford, (1817) 2 Stark 164; Willman v. Worrall, (1838) 8 C&P 380; cf. Eagleton and Coventry v. Kington, (1803) 8 Ves 438 at 476; R v. Crouch, (1850) 4 Cox CC 163 (constable and prisoner).
49. Mandas da Costa v. Pym, (1797) Peake Add Cas 144. A witness who bases his belief as to handwriting, on the contents of a paper and on other circumstances, may be asked what those circumstances are : R v. Murphy and Douglas, (1837) 8 C&P 297.
50. Bhupendra Narain Mandal v. Ek Narain Lal Das, AIR 1965 Pat 332.
51. Mobarik Ali Ahmad v. State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857.
52. Rahim Khan v. Khurshid Ahmed, AIR 1975 SC 290.
53. Shyamsunder v. Krupasindhu, (1962) Cut 501.
54. BEST 12th Edn., S. 232, p. 217.
55. Rahim Khan v. Khurshid Ahmed, AIR 1975 SC 290; Venkatachala v. B.N. Thimma Jamma, AIR 1959 SC 443 (Signature in a will); Baru Ram v. Smt. Prasanni, AIR 1959 SC 93 : 1959 SCR 1403; Bhupendra v. Eknarain, AIR 1965 Pat 332; Jasoda v. Janak, AIR 1925 Pat 787.

particular person.[56] Even the opinion evidence of a non-expert becomes good evidence to go by, if the acquaintance of such witness with the signature of the executant is proved within the meaning of Section 47, Explanation.[57]

The evidence of handwriting expert and of persons acquainted with the handwriting is relevant under Sections 45 and 47 of the Act, though the evidence in both cases is an opinion.[58]

Examination of a person acquainted with the handwriting of the executant is necessary when secondary evidence was allowed to prove the existence or contents of a lost document.[59] When the expert is unable to give a definite opinion about the disputed handwriting in a document, the evidence of the witnesses who are familiar with the handwriting of the accused cannot be rejected.[60] The wife can be regarded as a person acquainted with the handwriting of her husband, where a letter written by her husband to another woman acknowledging marital relationship with her is in question.[61]

Evidence as to handwriting of a witness who did not say he was familiar with the handwriting in question was rejected.[62]

In order, that the evidence of a non-expert witness as to the handwriting may be admissible under Section 47, it must be established that he is familiar or acquainted with that person's handwriting, though it may not be necessary to establish in the first instance as to how the witness became acquainted with such handwriting.[63]

"The witness need not state in the first instance how he knows the handwriting, since it is duty of the opposite party to explore on cross-examination the source of the knowledge, if he is dissatisfied with the testimony as it stands. It is within the power of the presiding judge and also it may be desirable to permit the opposing advocate to intervene and cross-examine so that the court may at that stage be in a position to come to a definite conclusion on adequate material as to the proof of the handwriting.[64]

See contra Hardevi v. State, 1969 All 423 in which it was held that the cross-examiner is not obliged to prove the witness's lack of acquaintance with the handwriting.

Where the witness did not state straightaway that the signatures on the document in dispute were those of the defendant, but proceeded to compare them with those in his own Bahi Account, it was held that the witness cannot be said as a person acquainted with the handwriting of the executent but attempted to play the role of an expert and, as such, his evidence must be rejected.[65]

Where an injury report of a doctor was sought to be proved by a pharmacist claiming to be acquainted with the doctor's writing, and when no single question was put in cross-examination to the pharmacist to assail his assertion and the doctor was not available to give evidence, it was held that the injury report can be proved by the pharmacist, and it is also admissible as the report bore the thumb impression of the complainant who testified about his medical examination.[66] The evidence of a Head-Master of a school where the deceased had studied, and the evidence of the father, were held sufficient to prove the letters in question which were written by the deceased.[67]

A person who knows the initials of a person signing a document is competent to swear to the document.[68] The mere fact that the handwriting of the accused has been identified and proved by a policeman is no ground to cast aside his evidence which is relevant under Section 47.[69] The person who

---

56. Tarini Kumar Pande v. State, AIR 1960 Cal 318.
57. Dalim Kumar Sain v. Nandarani Dassi (Smt.), AIR 1970 Cal 292, 209.
58. Ala Uddin v. Sishir Kumar Dutta, AIR 1989 Gauh 42.
59. Akshyanarayn Praharaj v. Mahesar Bag, AIR 1958 Ori 207.
60. Ranjit Sinha v. State, AIR 1963 Pat 262.
61. Shankeappa v. Sushilabai, AIR 1984 Kant 112.
62. Rahim Khan v. Khurshid Ahmed, AIR 1975 SC 290.
63. Umaro Chand v. Inder Chand, ILR (1971) 21 Raj 823; Shankerappa v. Sushilabai, AIR 1984 Kant 112.
64. Pusaram v. Manmal, AIR 1955 Raj 186 : ILR (1951) 1 Raj 761; Jagadish Das v. Emperor, AIR 1938 Pat 497; Shanker Rao Gangadhar v. Ramji Harjivan, AIR 28 Bom 58; Pusaram v. Manmal, AIR 1952 Raj 102.
65. Rajmal v. Islam Mahomed, AIR 1958 Raj 6.
66. Rameshwar Prasad Srivastava v. State of U.P., 1984 CrLJ 996 (All).
67. Chodimal Jain v. State of Orissa, (1984) 57 Cut LT 81.
68. 1964 Mad WN 356 : 1966 Mad LW (Cri) 217.
69. Mahendra Singh v. Manipur State, 1952 CrLJ 1518.

is accustomed to see the handwriting of the accused is a competent witness u/Section 47.[70] Where the Secretary (Medical), Delhi Administration, sanctioned the prosecution of an accused under the prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954, it was held that any person in that office, doing official acts regularly in discharge of official duties, can prove the sanction and the signature of the Secretary.[71] Opinions of persons well acquainted with the accused's handwriting, because of contact in the official work, are relevant, to identify, the accused's handwriting.[72]

An employee claiming to know the Director's signature admitted to his colleagues that certain signatures were those of the Director; it was held that he was not a competent witness to prove the signature as he was not personally acquainted with it.[73] The fact of a person receiving a letter purporting to be in reply to a letter, would be relevant under Sections 7 and 11 of the Evidence Act, but he cannot prove the handwriting of the person who wrote the reply under Section 47, as he has not seen that person write, nor has he received any communications in answer to the letters written by him in the ordinary course of business.[74]

Where the public prosecutor was ignorant of the requirements of Section 47 to prove the handwriting or the signature of the accused and therefore, he did not put any question to the prosecution witness to establish that he was familiar with the handwriting of the accused, but that omission was made good by the cross-examination of the witness and by other evidence on record, it was held that the handwriting or signature could be held to be proved.[75] The sanction for prosecution unless proved as per requirements of the Ss. 47 and 67, it cannot be termed as proved. Mere statement that the sanction was signed by the authorised person without any evidence as to the acquaintance with the signature and contents thereof, the document as such cannot be said to proved.[76]

A creditor who had himself seen the debtor writing the disputed signatures on the credit memos, was held to be a person acquainted with the handwriting, and the creditor may prove the handwriting without subjecting it to expert opinion.[77] In this category may be included cases where a person, having custody of family records, obtains familiarity with the handwriting of persons who are dead and gone.[78] In a case, one of the plaintiffs stated that the entry in an account book was in the handwriting of a Munim in the employment of the plaintiff's predecessors in interest and that he was acquainted with the handwriting of the said Munim. In the cross-examination, it was brought out that the witness was born 19 years after the death of the alleged writer; and the account book was found about 4 years before the witness gave the evidence. It was held that it could not be said that the witness was acquainted with the handwriting of the writer by the third mode provided by the section, namely, the documents purporting to be written by the Munim being habitually submitted to the witness in the ordinary course of business.[79]

4. VALUE OF EVIDENCE UNDER THIS SECTION

The Privy Council has held that comparison of writings is deemed a mode of ascertaining the truth, but it ought to be used with very great caution, 'especially when unskilled witnesses are called to make the comparison'.[80]

The opinion, based on the acquaintance with the handwriting, can be accepted, but the accepatability depends upon the facts of each case. Evidence of a person who is not an expert, is a weak form of evidence.[81]

---

70. In re : Mahalingayya Muddayya Pujari, AIR 1959 Mys 185; Akshya Narayan v. Maheshwar Bag, 1958 Ori 207.
71. State v. Brij Mohan, 1985 Raj LR 204; State of Bihar v. Ghulam Sarwar, AIR 1965 Pat 393; (case of an assistant proving the Deputy Secretary's signature) In re : Basaarajaswami, AIR 1967 Mys 210; (witness proving the signature of his superior).
72. State v. Tribikaram Bohidar, (1971) 37 Cul LT 714 : 1971 WLN 408 (Raj).
73. Kanai Lal Sham v. Culcutta Credit Corporation Ltd., ILR (1971) 1 Cal 103.
74. Prathap Singh v. State, AIR 1955 Sau 68.
75. Neelakantan Nair v. State, ILR (1972) 1 Ker 589.
76. State of M.P. v. Param, 1997 AIHC 4150 (paras 3-5) Vol. 6 (MP), relying on Sait Tarajee Khimchand v. Yelamarti Satyam, AIR 1971 SC 1865 and Suresh H. Rajput v. Bhartiben Pravinbhai Soni, 1996 Cr LJ 1621 : AIR 1996 SC 2883.
77. Girja Prasad Sharma v. Sardarlabh Singh, AIR 1977 Pat 241.
78. Pusaram v. Manmal, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 764.
79. Pusaram v. Manmal, AIR 1955 Raj 186.
80. Prasad v. Anatharam, 8 BLR 490, 502 (PC).
81. K. Sivam Achani v. State, (1985) 2 Crimes 288 (Ker).

Expert opinion is of little value when there is reliable evidence of the witnesses acquainted with the signature of a person when the signature is disputed.[82]

Section 47, deals only with the admissiblity of a variety of opinion evidence and not with its value. In a case covered by this provision, the value of the opinion, unlike that of the expert, depends upon the familiarity which a witness had acquired with the writing of another, about which the opinion is expressed, and not upon the reasons which he can advance in support of the opinion.[83]

Much reliance cannot be placed on the evidence of a non-expert witness who had seen the executant sign only once or twice about the identification of the executant's signature which had been subscribed before the witness was born.[84]

5. HAS SEEN THE PERSON WRITING

A witness ignorant of English Language is competent to prove by saying that he has seen the defendant signing the promissory note which was written in English.[85]

The fact that neither the tenant nor the scribe of the rent deeds (impugned documents) was produced in the Court is not material. A person's deposition as to their execution is sufficient, if he was present when the rent notes were executed.[86]

6. HABITUALLY [EXPLANATION]

This word means 'usually', 'generally', or according to custom. It does not refer to the frequency of the occasions but rather to the invariability of the practice. A record-keeper, who in the course of his official duty has to file papers sent to him, is competent to testify to the handwriting of a person whose papers are so filed, though the number of such papers may not be numerically great.[87]

The Nagpur High Court held that identification of handwriting from a single letter received is not sufficient, as it would not come within, the word 'habitually'.[88] In the case of a clerk who was examined to prove the letters written by the principal, it was held that, as there was no evidence that the letters written by the principal were in the ordinary course of the business habitually submitted to the clerk, the clerk cannot be said to be acquainted with the handwriting of the principal.[89]

Treasury officials to whom bills signed by a particular officer are habitually submitted in the ordinary course of business, are competent witnesses to say that the disputed signatures purported to be of that officer.[90]

Opinion as to digital signature when relevant.

[91][S. 47-A. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the digital signature of any person, the opinion of the Certifying Authority which has issued the Digital Signature Certificate is a relevant fact.]

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000 OPINION AS TO DIGITAL SIGNATURE

This new section added by the Information Technology Act provides for relevancy of the expert opinion as to the digital signature of any person. When the Court is forming its opinion about a digital signature, the opinion of the certifying authority, as provided under S. 24 of the said Act, which has issued the Digital Signature Certificate is a relevant fact.

---

82. Ramanlal Rathi v. State, AIR 1951 Cal 305.
83. Devi Prasad v. State, AIR 1967 All 64.
84. Dhani Bhai v. Neem Kanwar, AIR 1972 Raj 9, 14
85. Bhanuwarlal Tatar v. Ahmed Khan, AIR 1977 Gau 27.
86. Hafiz Abdul Basit v. Hafiz Ahmad Mian, AIR 1973 Del 280.
87. Emperor v. Ponde, (No. 2), (1925) 27 Bom LR 1031.
88. Hemraj v. Ramcharan, AIR 1934 Nag 204.
89. Hardevi Malkani (Miss.) v. State, AIR 1969 All 423.
90. (1972) 1 Cut LR (Cri) 442 (Ori).
91. Ins. by The Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92 & Sch. (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

Opinion as to existence of right or custom, when relevant.

S. 48. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the existence of any general custom or right, the opinions, as to the existence of such custom or right, of persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed, are relevant.

Explanation.*—The expression "general custom or right" includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

ILLUSTRATION

The right of the villagers of a particular village to use the water of a particular well is a general right within the meaning of this section.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 571
2. Custom ... 571
3. Likely to know ... 573
4. Wilson's manual ... 574
5. Riwaj-i-am ... 574

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section deals with the opinion as to the existence of a general custom or right when the Court has to form its opinion as to its existence. The explanation states that customs and rights common to any considerable class of persons would also come within the expression 'general custom or right'.

Opinions of persons who are in a position to know of the existence of a custom or usage in their locality are admissible.[92]

This section read with Section 60, requires that the person who holds the opinion should be called as a witness.[93]

Customary right, may be proved as provided in Sections 13, 32(4), 43 and 48 of the Evidence Act.[94]

Section 32 Cl(4) also deals with the opinion of persons as to the existence of a public right or custom, or matters of public or general interest. The difference between this Section and Section 32(4) is that under Section 32(4), such statements of opinion must have been made by a person who is dead or cannot be found etc., whereas this section does not so require, as it is the opinion of a living person who would state his opinion before the court. This section deals with a general custom or right, whereas the expression used in Section 32(4) is 'public right or custom'.

The section deals with oral evidence given in Court by the person expressing the opinion. Section 13 applies to all rights and customs, public or private, and refers to specified facts which may be given in evidence.

2. CUSTOM

As to 'custom', see comment on Section 13.

'Custom' is an unwritten law established by usage. 'Custom' should be distinguished from 'usage'. 'Usage' is a fact and 'custom' is a law. There can be usage without custom, but not custom without usage.

The word 'general' is an equivalent of the term 'public'. Under the explanation it is stated that the expression 'general custom or right' includes customs or rights common to any considerable class of persons.

The Explanation indicates that private rights are excluded from the operation of the section. Such rights must be proved by facts such as acts of ownership.

---

92. Adivalu Kirubiyugothi Fathima v. Hassan Islamail, 1997 AIHC 1818 (para 4) (Ker).
93. Amina Khatun v. Khalil-ur-Rahman Khan, (1933) 8 Luck 445 : 1933 Oudh 246.
94. Ramachandra Singh v. Pratapsingh, AIR 1965 Raj 217.

Mere user of a customary right of easement is not sufficient. A customary right differs from customary easement. To prove a customary right recognisition by the community also is necessary.[1]

A plaintiff who sets up a prescriptive right cannot succeed on the basis of a customary right. Customary rights are public rights annexed to the place in general.

One of the modes of proving a custom is through the opinion of a person likely to know its existence. His personal knowledge is only relevant for determining the weight to be attached to his evidence.[2]

Where the question was as to inheritance in tribal families, it was held that a tribal or family custom, excluding a daughter or sister from inheritance in favour of collaterals, irrespective of the character of the property, whether, it is ancestral or self-acquired, may be proved by general evidence as to its existence by members of the tribe or the family who would naturally be congnizant of its existence and its exercise without controversy, and no specific instances need be proved. Evidence of opinion of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed, is to be given.[3]

The question of private customary divorce among Jat Sikhs of Punjab arose before the High Court of Delhi. The Court said[4] : "The witness must be a person likely to know of the custom. His testimony must be based upon personal knowledge. The weight of his evidence would naturally depend upon his position and character and of persons on whose statements he formed his opinion, but he cannot be confined to instances in which he had personally known the usage or custom being exercised as a matter of fact. The Court cited the following observation of the Privy Council.[5] A tribal or family custom excluding a daughter or sister from inheritance in favour of collaterals may be proved by general evidence as to its existence by members of the tribe or family who would naturally be cognizant of its existence and its exercise without controversy. No specific instances need be proved." Reference was also made to[6], in which it was held by the Privy Council that the opinion of a witness as to the existence of a family custom based upon information derived from deceased persons is relevant. See further Munshi Das v. Mal Singh[7], where evidence of opinion was held not satisfactory.

The Supreme Court, dealing with a custom governing succession to the office of Mahant, held that the evidence of a solitary witness on behalf of the plaintiff, claiming to be present at the initiation of the plaintiff as a Chela of the deceased Mahant, was neither trustworthy nor sufficient, as one of the factors of substratum of the custom was absent, and so, the plaintiff could not claim to be installed as Mahant.[8]

It is of the essence of special usages, modifying the ordinary law of succession, that they should be ancient and invariable, and it is further essential that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence.[9]

A living person deposing as a witness may give his opinion on a family custom and may state how he derived that information from a deceased person; but it must be the expression of his independent opinion though based on hearsay and not a repetition of hearsay. The weight to be attached to such evidence would depend upon the position and character of the witness and of the persons on whose statements he formed his opinion.[10]

---

1. Radhakrishna (Smt.) v. Tukaram Pundalik, AIR 1991 Bom 119.
2. Balwinder Singh v. Smt. Gurpal Kaur, AIR 1985 Del 14; Subhani v. Nawab, AIR 1941 PC 21 : 68 IA 1; Ramachandra Singh v. Pratapsingh, AIR 1965 Raj 217.
3. Ahmad Khan v. Channi Bibi, AIR 1925 PC 267 : 6 Lah 502 : 52 IA 379; Thunthi v. Dhani Ram, AIR 1953 HP 66; Md. Alam v. Hafizan, AIR 1934 Lah 351; Bai Baiji v. Bhai Santok, ILR 20 Bom 53; Bajrangi v. Monokarnika AIR 30 All 1 : 35 IAI.
4. Balwinder Singh v. Gurpal Kaur, AIR 1985 Del. 14.
5. Ahmad Khan v. Channi Bibi, AIR 1925 PC 267.
6. Gururadhwaja Pd. v. S.P. Singh, (1900) 10 Mad LJ 267.
7. AIR 1977 SC 2002.
8. Munshi Dass v. Mal Singh, AIR 1977 SC 2002.
9. Collector of Madurai v. Muthu Ramalinga Jhevar, 12 MIA 397; Harpershad v. Sheodayal, 3 IA 259; Ramalakshmi Ammal v. Shivanantha, 14 Moo. IA 570.
10. Gururadh Waja v. Superundh Waja (PC), ILR 23 All 37 : 27 IA 238, 251; Daniraiji v. V.M. Chandra Prabha, AIR 1971 Guj 188.

3. LIKELY TO KNOW

Personal knowledge about the facts is not necessary; however, such a witness should possess sufficient experience which would go to suggest that he is 'likely to know' of the existence of the custom sought to be proved by him. A mere ipse dixit of the witness is not admissible and relevant under the Evidence Act and would not carry any evidentiary value.[11] Mere expression of opinion in regard to a custom is of no value unless the persons expressing the opinion are persons who would be likely to know of its existence if it existed. Where the witness did not point out that he was satisfied in regard to such custom, namely, the exercise of right of pre-emption, it was held that he was not likely to know of the existence of any custom of pre-emption, and so his evidence was worthless.[12] Regarding the custom of adoption in Punjab (Sind) it was held that opinion evidence of witnesses was admissible.[13] Regarding the custom and usage in a particular locality, the opinion of a document writer who writes sale deeds or other documents in respect of such custom or usage, was held admissible. A person, who had been in the habit of writing out deeds of sale, or one who had been seeing transfers frequently made, would certainly be in a position to give his opinion whether there was a custom or usage in that particular locality.[14]

The witness in question should, however, possess experiential qualification before his evidence gathers any credibility. If he fails in having this qualification he should show on what grounds his opinion is based. But if his opinion is not based on reliable information, his mere repetition of hearsay would not carry any weight.[15]

Uniformity of practice in a family for some generations, in respect of certain matters have necessarily to be proved so that the practice 'fructified into maturity'.[16]

Opinion of the witnesses in respect of crediting certain amount to charities and temples in the account books of the Chettiyar Firms, and the right claimed by the managers of the temples demanding payment on the basis of those credit entries, were held inadmissible.[17] The relevance of the opinion of the members of the Bar relating to a particular custom of Muslims adopting some customs of Hindus was held to be doubtful.[18] Where the question was in respect of a right to take water for irrigation from the springs in certain villages, the owners of the land of some other villages adduced evidence about their right basing on long user; it was held that the custom was not established by the other set of villages.[19]

The evidence that is contemplated under this section is admissible to prove, as well as to disprove, the general right or custom.

Judicial decisions recognising customs are relevant evidence[20]. When a custom has been repeatedly brought to the notice of the Courts and has been recognised by them regularly in a series of cases, it attains the force of law.[21] Any decision of a Court regarding the existence or non-existence of a custom is good evidence in other cases.[22]

Where there was no entry showing that the land was recorded as puratan patita, in favour of the villagers, but there was a record of rights, it was held that, on the opinion evidence, a presumption in favour of immemorial user can be drawn.[23]

---

11. Dani Raiji v. Vahuji Maharaj, AIR 1971 Guj 188.
12. Ram Singh v. Jit Ram, AIR 1954 HP 20.
13. ILR 1959 Punj 1285.
14. Sariatullah v. Prannath, ILR (1898) 26 Cal 184.
15. Daniraiji Vrajlalji v. V.M. Chandraprabha, AIR 1971 Guj 188.
16. Abbas Ali v. Md. Shah, AIR 1951 M.B. 92.
17. Soonirani v. Alagu Nachiyar Koil, AIR 1938 P.C. 259.
18. Advocate General of Bombay v. Gimbabai, ILR 41 Bom 181.
19. 1974 J&K L.R. 462.
20. Tulshiram v. Chunilal, (1940) Nag 149.
21. Suganchand Bhikamchand v. Mangibai Gulabchand, ILR (1941) 44 Bom LR 358 : ILR (1942) Bom 467.
22. Ram Kishore v. B. Kavindra Narain, AIR 1955 All 59. See also Adivalu Kirubiyugothi Fathima v. Hassan Ismail, 1997 AIHC 1818 (para 4) (Ker).
23. ILR 1973 Cut 1080.

4. WILSON'S MANUAL

Answers to the questions in WILSON'S MANUAL as to the Customary Law were held to be admissible under Section 48, being the opinion as to the existence of a general custom or right of persons who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed.[24]

5. RIWAJ-I-AM

The Privy Council held that the general custom of Punjab is that a daughter excludes collaterals in succession to self-acquired property of her father. And it is for the collaterals to prove variation of the custom by reason of a special custom excluding the daughters. The Privy Council refered to SIR. WILLIAM RATTIGAN'S DIGEST OF CUSTOMARY LAW, wherein it was stated that, in regard to the self-acquired property of the father, the daughter is preferred to collaterals.[25]

The Supreme Court has held that where there is a conflict between RATTIGAN'S DIGEST OF CUSTOMARY LAW, and Riwaj-I-Am, the latter would prevail.[26]

The answers to questions contained in Riwaj-I-Am are admissible under Section 48, being the opinion as to the existence of general custom or right, of a person who would be likely to know of its existence, if it existed.[27]

Opinion as to usages, tenets, etc., when relevant.

S. 49. When the Court has to form an opinion as to—the usages, and tenets of any body of men or family, the constitution and government of religious or charitable foundation, or the meaning of words or terms used in particular districts or by particular classes of people, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon, are relevant facts.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 574
2. 'Special Means of Knowledge' ... 575
3. Meaning of a word ... 576
4. Usages ... 576
5. Tenets ... 576

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section enumerates certain kinds of matters which can be proved by the opinion of persons having special means of knowledge, when the Court has to form an opinion about them. Those matters are: (1) usages and tenets of any body of men; (2) usages and tenets of a family; (3) constitution and government of any religious or charitable foundation; (4) meaning of words or terms used in particular districts; (5) meaning of words or terms used by particular class of people.

"Such persons are, so to speak, the repositories of customary law, just as the text books are the repositories of the general law."[28]

---

24. Subhani v. Nawab, 68 IA 1 : AIR 1941 PC 21.
25. Subhani v. Nawab, 68 IA 1 : AIR 1941 PC 21, see also Gopal Singh v. Ujagar Singh, AIR 1954 SC 579; Salig Ram v. Maya Devi, AIR 1955 SC 266; (Saraswat Brahmins of Gurudaspur District) (RATTIGAN'S DIGEST has been accepted as a book of unquarter of authority in Punjab).
26. Kehar Singh v. Dewan Singh, AIR 1966 SC 1555.
27. Bawa Singh v. Taro, 1951 Punj 239. (See also cases under the head Wazib-ul-Arz and Riwaj-i-Am in Commentary on Section 35; See also cases under Sections 13, and 35 under the heads Riwaz-i-Am, Wajib-ul-Arz etc
28. Jugmohandas Mangaldas v. Mangaldas Nathubhoy, ILR (1886) 10 Bom 528, 543.

2. 'SPECIAL MEANS OF KNOWLEDGE'

All that is meant by this expression is that the person must have had opportunities for acquiring knowledge of a usage or custom, and that he had acquired the necessary knowledge.[29]

The Privy Council observed: "By S. 49, when the Court has to form an opinion on (inter alia) the usages of any family, the opinions of persons having special means of knowledge thereon are also relevant. But by S. 60, if oral evidence refers to an opinion, or the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds. Their Lordships think that it is admissible evidence for a living witness to state his opinion on the existence of a family custom, and to state, as the grounds of that opinion, information derived from deceased persons, and the weight of the evidence would depend on the position and character of the witness and of the persons on whose statements he has formed his opinion. But it must be the expression of independent opinion based on hearsay, and not mere repetition of hearsay."[30]

Where a sister claimed the inherent self-acquired property of her brother under a special custom, evidence as to its existence by the members of the family or the tribe, who would naturally be cognizant of its existence and its exercise without any controversy was held admissible.[31]

The expression 'special means of knowledge' does not necessarily mean that the person giving evidence should himself engage in particular business, or that he himself should be a member of a particular class of people; it is sufficient that he has special means of knowledge regarding the meaning of the words or terms used in a particular district, or by a particular class of people. It would also be reasonable for the court to presume that the police Sub-Inspector in-charge of gambling in a particular area has special means of knowledge regarding the words used by the gamblers.[32]

Inference drawn by a particular witness is inadmissible. Under the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act, it was held that it was open to the police officer to explain the expressions or words used for gambling purposes and to explain its meaning, provided that he had special means of explaining that expression. But an inference drawn from what he had seen or heard cannot be deposed to.[33]

The evidence of a Sub-Inspector that particular words used on a slip were code-words for particular figures cannot be received under this section, as he did not claim to be an expert having special knowledge of the meaning of the words in betting transactions in American futures.[34]

Though the Sub-Inspector had not said in the chief-examination that he has special means of knowledge, or how he acquired special means of knowledge, it would not go against the admissibility of his evidence under this section, as it is open to the accused to show, in the cross-examination, that the Sub-Inspector has no special means of knowledge and therefore his evidence will not have any value.[35]

A contrary opinion was expressed on the above aspect by the same High Court, holding that the prosecution has to prove that the person has special means of knowledge before it adduces opinion evidence, in order to make it relevant under Section 49, that the opinion does not become relevant if special knowledge had not been proved: and that it is not for the defence to put questions to show that the witness had no special means of knowledge.[36]

The custom of adoption of a son of a cousin-sister was held prevailing in Punjab Jind district.[37]

---

29. Garusadhwaja* v. Saparandhwaja, ILR 23 All 37 : 27 IA 238.
30. See also Tulasiram Das v. Ramprasanna Das, AIR 1956 Ori. 41; Pratap Chandra v. Jagdish Chandra, AIR 1925 Cal 116; Chandra Choor Doo* v. Biphuti, AIR 1945 Pat 211.
31. Ahmad Khan* v. Channi Bibi, AIR 1925 PC 267 : 52 IA 379.
32. Kanubhai Prabhudas v. State of Gujarat, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 87, relying on Bibhbati Devi v. Ramendra Narayan Roy, AIR 1947 PC 19; Harilal Gordhan* v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Bom 385.
33. Charan Misri v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 666 (Guj).
34. Harak Chand Radhakishan v. State, 1954 Cr LJ 1347 : 1954 MB 145.
35. Kanubhai Prabhudas v. State of Gujarat, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 87.
36. Govindalal Bhikhabhai v. State of Gujarat, 1966 Cr LJ 830 : ILR 1965 Guj 901.
37. ILR 1959 Punj 1285.

On the question of a family custom of primogeniture, it was held that though two branches of the same family were having the custom of primogeniture, the third branch cannot rely on such custom unless it is proved by cogent evidence.[38]

The use of the word 'persons having special means of knowledge' would indicate that the opinions of living persons are relevant. It does not deal with statements of dead persons, which subject is dealt with in Section 32.[39]

The Privy Council observed: "A third feature of the suit has reference to the method of trial, the learned District Judge having been persuaded that the mode by which a British Indian Court ascertains the Mahomedan law is by taking evidence.[40]

The authority of SULAIMAN J. to the contrary[41] was cited to him, but he wrongly considered that S. 49 of the Evidence Act was applicable to the ascertainment of the law. He seems also to have relied on the old practice of obtaining the opinions of pandits on questions of Hindu law and the reference made thereto in Collector of Madras v. Mutnu Ramalinga Sathupathy.[42] No great harm, as it happened, was done by the admission of this class of evidence, as the witnesses made reference to authoritative texts in a short and sensible manner. But it would not be tolerable that a Hindu or a Muslim in a British Indian Court should be put to the expense of proving by expert witnesses the legal principles applicable to his case, and it would introduce great confusion into the practice of the Courts if decisions upon Hindu or Muslim law were to depend on the evidence given in a particular case, the credibility of the expert witnesses, and so forth. The Muslim law is not the common law of India. British India has no common law in the sense of law applicable prima facie to every one, unless it be in the statutory codes, e.g., Contract Act, Transfer of Property Act. But the Muslim law is under legislative enactments applied by British Indian Courts to certain classes of matters and to certain classes of people as part of the law of the land which the Courts administer as being within their own knowledge and competence. The system of "expert advisers" (muftis, maulavis or, in the case of Hindu law, pandits) had its day, but has long been abandoned, though the opinions given by such advisers may still be cited from the reports. Custom, in variance of the general law, is matter of evidence, but not the law itself. Their Lordships desire to adopt the observations of SULAIMAN J. in the case referred to.[43] It is the duty of the courts themselves to interpret the law of the land and to apply it, and not to depend on the opinion of witnesses howsoever learned they may be. It would be dangerous to delegate their duty to witnesses produced by either party. Foreign law, on the other hand, is a question of fact with which courts in British India are not supposed to be conversant. Opinions of experts on foreign law are, therefore, allowed to be admitted."[44]

3. MEANING OF A WORD

In a country like India where there are so many different languages, while rendering justice, the court may consult a dictionary as to the meaning of a word.[45]

Evidence relating to works that are technical is also admissible under this section.

4. USAGES

These will include usages of trade, agriculture, mercantile usage and any usage common to a body of men or family. Usages of a family will include, for instance, the custom of primogeniture, or any peculiar course of descent.

5. TENETS

This will include any opinion, principle, dogma, or doctrine which is held or maintained by a body of men. It will apply to religion, politics, science, etc.

---

38. Kameshwar Prasad Singh v. Mithilesh Kishori Devi, AIR 1964 Pat 150.
39. Prabhu Narain Singh v. Jithendra Mohan Singh, AIR 1948 Oudh 307; Pratap v. Jagdish, 1925 Cal 116.
40. Masjid Shahid Ganj v. Shiromani Gurdwara Prabhandhak Committee, AIR 1940 PC 116 at pp. 259-261 : 67 IA 251.
41. Aziz Bano v. Muhammad Ibrahim Husain, ILR 47 All 827, 835.
42. 12 MIA 397, 436-439.
43. 47 All 823, 835.
44. Kandam Soren v. Jitan Hembrom, AIR 1973 Pat 206.
45. Beja v. Emperor, AIR 1914 Lah 539 (2) : 16 CLJ 33 (Punj).

Opinion on relationship, when relevant.

S. 50. When the Court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship, of any person who, as a member of the family or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is a relevant fact:

Provided that such opinion shall not be sufficient to prove a marriage in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869), or in prosecutions under Sections 494, 495, 497 or 498 of the Indian Penal Code (XLV of 1860).

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) The question is, whether A and B were married.

The fact that they were usually received and treated by their friends as husband and wife, is relevant.

(b) The question is, whether A was the legitimate son of B.

The fact that A was always treated as such by members of the family, is relevant.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and Scope ... 577
2. Opinion expressed by conduct ... 577
3. Special means of knowledge ... 580
4. Existence of relationship ... 581
   - (a) Marriage ... 581
   - (b) Adoption ... 582
   - (c) Relationship as son and daughter ... 582
   - (d) Joint family ... 583
   - (e) Mahantship ... 583
   - (f) Other relationship ... 583
   - (g) Legitimacy ... 583
   - (h) Pedigree ... 583
5. Sections 50 and 32(5) ... 584
6. Such opinion not sufficient to prove marriage under statutory provisions [Proviso] ... 584

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that when the court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another, the opinion expressed by conduct by any person who, as a member of the family, or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the subject, is relevant as to the existence of such relationship.

Two things are necessary to make the evidence of a witness relevant under this section:—

(1) the witness must have special means of knowledge with regard to existence of the disputed relationship, either as a member of a family, or otherwise; and

(2) the witness must depose to his own conduct towards the person whose relationship is in dispute;[1]

The opinion may be of a member of the family or an outsider, but he must have special means of knowledge.

The provisions of this section are in accordance with the English Law.

However, general reputation which is admissible according to English Law, to prove relationship, is not admissible under this Section. Thus, the scope of this section appears to be more restricted.[2]

2. OPINION EXPRESSED BY CONDUCT

Opinion means something more than mere retelling of gossip or of hearsay; it means judgment or belief, that is, a belief or a conviction resulting from what one thinks on a particular question. Now, the

---

1. Maghi Singh v. Harnam Kaur, 1979 Hindu LR 189.
2. Lakshmi Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, AIR 1937 PC 201; Ramadhar Chaudhary v. Janki Chaudry, AIR 1956 Pat 49; Kunjilal v. Subalal, AIR 1952 M.B. 12; Gopalrao Shakarrao v. Sampatrao, 1962 MP LJ (notes) 147; Chandulal v. Bibi Khatemonnessa, AIR 1943 Cal 76; Balaram Das v. Jayakrushna Das, AIR 1972 Ori 141.

"belief" or conviction may manifest itself in conduct, or behaviour, which indicates the existence of the belief or opinion.[3]

The Supreme Court in Dologobinda Paricha v. Nimai Charan Misra[4] approving the views expressed by TAYLOR ON EVIDENCE 8th Edn., Section 584, observed:— "The essential requirements of Section 50 are:— (1) There must be a case where the court has to form an opinion as to the relationship of one person to another; (2) in such a case, the opinion, expressed by conduct, as to the existence of such relationship is a relevant fact; (3) but the person whose opinion expressed by conduct is relevant must be a person who, as a member of the family, or otherwise, has special means of knowledge on the particular subject of relationship. In other words the person must fulfil the conditions laid down in the latter part of the section. If the person fulfils that condition, then what is relevant is his opinion expressed by conduct. Opinion means something more than mere retelling of gossip or of hearsay; it means judgment or belief, that is, a belief or a conviction resulting from what one thinks on a particular question. Now the 'belief' or conviction may manifest itself in conduct or behaviour which indicates the existence of the belief or opinion. What the Section says is that such conduct or outward behaviour, as evidence of the opinion held, is relevant and may, therefore, be proved. We are of the view that the true scope and effect of Section 50 of the Evidence Act had been correctly and succintly put in the following observation made in Chandulal Agarwala v. Khalilar Rahman[5]. "It is only 'opinion as expressed by conduct' which is made relevant. This is how the conduct comes in. The offered item of evidence is 'the conduct', but what is made admissible in evidence is 'the opinion', the opinion as expressed by such conduct. The offered item of evidence thus only moves the court to an intermediate decision; its immediate effect is only to move the court to see if this conduct establishes any opinion of the person, whose conduct is in evidence, as to the relationship in question. In order to enable the court to infer the 'opinion', the conduct must be of a tenor which cannot well be supposed to have been willed without the inner existence of the 'opinion'.

When the conduct is of such a tenor, the Court, only gets a relevant piece of evidence, namely, the opinion of a person. It still remains for the Court to weigh such evidence and come to it own opinion as to the factum probandum "as to the relationship in question." We also accept as correct the view that Section 50 does not make evidence of mere general reputation (without conduct) admissible as proof of relationship.[6] It was further observed: "Such conduct or outward behaviour must be proved in the manner laid down in Section 60; if the conduct relates to something which can be seen, it must be proved by the person who saw it; if it is something which can be heard, then it must be proved by the person who heard it, and so on. The conduct must be of the person who fulfils the essential conditions of Section 50, and it must be proved in the manner laid down in the provisions relating to proof. It appears to us that the portion of Section 60, which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called to prove his opinion does not necessarily delimit the scope of Section 50, in the sense that opinion expressed by conduct must be proved only by the person whose conduct expresses the opinion. Conduct, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself whose opinion is evidence under Section 50, or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion; and as the testimony must relate to external facts which constitute conduct and is given by persons personally acquainted with such facts, the testimony is in each case direct within the meaning of Section 60. This, in our opinion, is the true inter-relation between Section 50 and Section 60 of the Evidence Act.....While we agree that Section 50 affords an exceptional way of proving a relationship, and by no means prevents any person from stating a fact, of which he or she has special means of knowledge, we do not agree with HUTCHINS J when he says[7] that the Section seems to imply that the person whose opinion is a relevant fact cannot be called to state his own opinion as expressed by his conduct and that his conduct may be proved by others only when he is dead or cannot be called. We do not think that Section 50 puts any such limitation."

---

3. Dolgobinda v. Nimai Charan, AIR 1959 SC 914. Such opinion can be substantiated by the person holding the opinion or by the evidence of any other person. Champa Devi v. M.S. Singh, AIR 1981 Pat 103.
4. 1960 SCJ 879 : AIR 1959 SC 914, followed in Surendra Singh v. Ramdayal Sao, 1996 AIHC 5522 (paras 5 and 6) (Pat).
5. ILR (1942) 2 Cal 299, 309.
6. Lakshmi Reddi v. Venkata Reddi, AIR 1937 P.C. 201.
7. Queen Empress v. Subbarayan, ILR (1885) 9 Mad 9, 11.

The above proposition that the conduct or outward behaviour must be proved in the manner laid down in Section 60 was followed in.[8]

In Sitaram Nai v. Puranmal Sonal[9] the Supreme Court explained the meaning of the term "opinion" in this connection. The court said that it was laid down in Dolgobinda Parich v. Nimai Charan Misra[10] that, what is relevant is the opinion expressed by conduct, and opinion means something more than mere relating of gossip or of hearsay; it means judgment or belief, that is, a belief or conviction resulting from what one thinks on a particular question. The section does not make the evidence of mere general reputation admissible as a proof of relationship. It is the conduct or outward behaviour which must be proved in the manner laid down in Section 60.

A member of the family can speak, in the witness box, of what he has been told and what he has learned about his own ancestors, provided what he says is an expression of his own independent opinion (even though it is based on hearsay derived from deceased, not living, persons), and is not merely a repetition of the hearsay opinion of others, and provided the opinion is expressed by conduct. His sources of information and the time at which he acquired the knowledge (for example, whether before the dispute or not) would affect its weight but not its admissibility.[11]

The expression 'opinion expressed by conduct' means a conduct which is expression in outward behaviour of the opinion entertained as to relationship.[12]

The two illustrations under this section amply explain the true scope and extent of this section.

It is only "opinion as expressed by conduct" which is made relevant under Section 50; the opinion as to the existence of such relationship and not 'the opinion as to such relationships' that is to be proved. The persons whose opinion is made evidence by this section must be shown to have special means of knowledge on the subject.[13]

A Full Bench of the Punjab High Court, in Amarsingh v. Chhajusingh[14] (majority view) held that the witness appearing in Court need not, in all cases, confine his testimony to his own conduct as expressive of his own opinion, with regard to the existence of the disputed relationship; he may extend it to the conduct of others. What is relevant under Section 50, and can be proved, is conduct or outward behaviour of the person who has special means of knowledge; the opinion which that person holds is merely the outflow of his conduct; thus, material evidence is of conduct, which can be of the witness himself or of another person regarding whose conduct the witness has deposed; it is from the conduct, as established on evidence, that the court has to form its opinion as to relationship; it is not necessary that the person whose conduct leads to opinion, relevant under Section 50, must appear as a witness, or that he must be dead before someone else can prove that conduct in terms of Section 50.

Evidence of general reputation, which is a cumulation of perception testimonies, heard and gathered and reduced to an assertion to court, is not admissible, but the opinion or belief of a person, specially competent in this respect, as expressed by his conduct in outward behaviour, is relevant. It is this conduct which can be tendered in evidence, and the Court is to examine whether such conduct is based on the opinion held by the person[15]. The word 'conduct' is not necessarily limited to the conduct of the relations of the person, whose relationship is in dispute, but is wide enough to include the conduct of the witness who was giving his opinion about the existence of such relationship.[16]

---

8. Fulkalia (Smt.) v. Nathu Ram, AIR 1960 Pat 480; Ramadhar Chaudhary v. Janki Chaudhary, AIR 1956 Pat 49; Bhogal v. Bibi Nabihan, AIR 1963 Pat 450; Balaram Das v. Jayakrushna Das, AIR 1972 Ori 141; Virsa Singh v. Biswanath, AIR 1971 Punj 362; Shanker Lal v. Vijai Shanker Shukla, AIR 1968 All 58; Ganeshnarayan Singh v. Jadunandan Singh, AIR 1969 Pat 82; Md. Ayub Khan v. Abdus Samad Khan, 1969 B.L.J.R. 932; Ajaib Singh v. Mann Singh, (1968) 70 Punj LR 83; Sitaram Nai v. Puranmar Sonal, AIR 1985 Ori 171.
9. AIR 1985 SC 171 at 176.
10. AIR 1959 SC 914.
11. Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain, AIR 1954 SC 601; Ramadhar v. Janki, AIR 1956 Pat 49.
12. Ramadhar Chaudhary v. Janki Chaudhary, 1956 Pat 49; Natabar Parchha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1952 Ori 75; Chunna Kumar v. Mukat Behari, AIR 1934 All 117; Chandulal v. Bibi Khatemonnessa, 1943 Cal 76.
13. Kariappa v. N. Jayamma, (1966) 1 Mys. LJ 235.
14. AIR 1973 Pun 213.
15. Chandu Lal Agarwala v. Khalilar Rahman, ILR (1942) 2 Cal 299.
16. Nidhiram v. Munej, ILR (1954) Cut 547; Sm. Fulkalia v. Nathuram, ILR (1960) Pat 891 : AIR 1960 Pat 480; Shriram Sardarmal v. Gourishankar, AIR 1961 Bom 136.

The opinion which is relevant under Section 50 is "Opinion expressed by conduct which is expression in outward behaviour of the opinion entertained as to relationship."[17]

Conduct, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved by testimony of the person himself whose opinion is evidenced under Section 50 or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion. It is not necessary that in every instance where a witness proves relationship, he must also prove exhaustively all the instances of the family conduct, in support of that relationship. The devolution of family property is often a very valuable evidence of conduct within the meaning of Section 50.[18]

The conduct of a deceased offering 'neonda' at the time of the marriage of his brother's daughter falls within the purview of Section 50, as the evidence of conduct showing relationship is relevant.[19]

The Evidence Act does not contain any provision making the evidence of general reputation admissible as proof of relationship.[20]

What is made admissible in evidence under Section 50 is an opinion. In order to enable the Court to infer the opinion, the conduct must be of a tenor which cannot well be supposed to have been willed without the inner existence of the opinion. The conduct must be proved in accordance with the law relating to proof. Section 50 deals with the relevancy of a particular fact, and it is only 'opinion as expressed by the conduct' as to relationship of one person to another, which is made relevant. This section, to some extent, allows evidence somewhat akin to 'reputation evidence'.[21]

Opinions to the existence of a relationship between the deceased and his grandfather is not opinion expressed by conduct and is not admissible under this section.[22] The witness must also testify that he had special means of knowledge as to the existence of the relationship, when he expresses the opinion by conduct.[23]

3. SPECIAL MEANS OF KNOWLEDGE

When oral evidence is adduced to establish relationship, it must be of an opinion given by any person having special means of knowledge as a member of the family, or otherwise.[24] The opinion of Karna Garu as to relationship was admitted because he was holding high respect in the family for fifty years.[25]

Where the plaintiff proved the entire genealogy though he had no personal knowledge of every step in the sense that he did not know each one of the persons named by him, the Supreme Court held that personal knowledge was not necessary in such cases; that what is true about a member of a family is also true of a person, though not a member of the family, who has a special means of knowledge about the relationship of the parties; but it should be an expression, based on his own independent opinion, though it is based on hearsay derived from the deceased, and that opinion must be expressed by conduct. The words 'or, otherwise' contemplate such a case.[26] Where in a suit for partition the plaintiff claimed to be the daughter of one of the head members of the genealogical branches of the parties and the evidence of the witnesses was based on relationship and knowledge and if the plaintiff's claim was allowed the shares of the witnesses in the suit property was to be proportionately minimised, her claim was entitled to

---

17. Ramadhar v. Janaki, AIR 1956 Pat 49.
18. Bhogal Paswan v. Bibi Nabihan, AIR 1963 Pat 450; see also Seshammal v. Kup Panaiyyangar, AIR 1926 Mad 475; Bhogal Paswan v. Bibi Nabihan, AIR 1963 Pat 450; Brundebon Barbal v. Sasimani Bewa, (1973) 1 Cut. W.R. 402.
19. Nikka Singh v. Nachhattar Singh, (1980) 2 Punj. LR 308.
20. Lakshmi Reddy v. Venkata Reddi, AIR 1937 PC 201; Kunjilal v. Subalal, AIR 1952 MB 12; Shivalal v. Jootha, AIR 1952 Raj 167; Bishwanath Gosain v. Dulhin Lal Muni, AIR 1968 Pat 481; Dolgobinda Paricha v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914; Balaram v. Jayakrushna AIR 1971 Ori 141.
21. Bhagawathi Ummini v. Raman Kutti, AIR 1976 Ker 34.
22. Dukh Haran Triwari v. Dulhin Bihasa Kuer, AIR 1963 Pat 390.
23. Gurubari Debi v. Sokuri Debi, ILR 1966 Cut 193.
24. Baruni Behera v. Padan Behera, AIR 1987 Ori 187.
25. Gobinda Das v. B. Rout, AIR 1958 NOC 154 (Ori).
26. Sitaji v. Bijendra Narain, AIR 1954 SC 601; Ramadhar v. Janki, AIR 1956 Pat 49; Natabar v. Mimai Charan Misra, AIR 1952 Ori 75; Kunjilal v. Subhalal, AIR 1952 MB 12; Shivolal v. Jootha, AIR 1952 Raj 167; Lakshmi Chand v. Anandi, AIR 1933 All 130.

be allowed.[27] In the absence of some special circumstances under which the co-villager and the neighbour of the owner of the land could form the opinion about family relationship of the members of the owner of the land their evidence was not sufficient to infer their family relationship specially when they had no relationship with the family of the owner of the land.[28]

The person expressing an opinion should state his source of information and the time at which he acquired the knowledge, to show that he had special means of knowledge.

The special means of knowledge which the section speaks of are means which the person whose opinion is sought to be proved must have. The language of the section does not warrant the interpretation that such means must be had by the witness who proves the opinion in question.

4. EXISTENCE OF RELATIONSHIP

The expression 'existence of any relationship' in this clause includes any statement which implies non-existence of such relationship between two persons.[29] Evidence of concubinage is evidence of non-existence of relationship of marriage and is admissible under Section 50.[30]

(a) Marriage.—Where the evidence is that a man and a woman were treated as husband and wife for a number of years, a presumption can be drawn that they were lawfully married. But, this presumption from long cohabitation, is rebuttable.[31] Where a man and woman were recognized by all persons concerned as man and wife, and they were so described in certain documents, and their daughters were married respectably as in the case of legitimate children, it was held that the facts afforded a strong presumption in favour of the validity of the marriage[32] and examination of the family members or persons having special knowledge about their relationship was not necessary.[33] Where a woman had lived for a number of years in close association with a man, and had children who were acknowledged by the man as born to him, and the villagers also treated them as wife and husband, it was held that there was a presumption of legitimacy, because vice and immorality are not usually attributed to such association.[34] Where there was a Nika marriage with a testator who later executed a will but did not mention the wife's name, it was held that the circumstances of omission of the wife's name was a piece of evidence against the marriage.[35] The evidence showing that the couple was living as husband and wife was held sufficient, notwithstanding the absence of evidence regarding the performance of sampradhan and Saptapadi.[36]

The evidence of friends and neighbours of the parties can be received showing the reputation and treatment as to how a man and woman conducted themselves as husband and wife.[37]

In proof of marriage under the Hindu Marriage Act, reputation and conduct is receivable under Section 50.[38]

The mere fact that there was an earlier marriage subsisting cannot be considered sufficient to rebut the presumption of a marriage arising out of long cohabitation and repute. However, if there is a statute such as Madras Bigamy Prevention Act, or the Hindu Marriage Act, a second marriage cannot be presumed from long cohabitation and repute, as such a marriage cannot be recognised in law.[39] Where a woman on the death of the husband, remarried another person in the same family, it was held that the

---

27. Gourhari Das v. Santilata Singh, AIR 1999 Ori 61 (paras 12 and 13).
28. Sankhali Dhal v. Nilamani Dei, AIR 1994 Ori 298 (para 11).
29. Ramadhar Chaudhury v. Janki Chaudhury, 1956 Pat 49; Suba Raut v. Dindayal Chaudhury, AIR 1941 Pat 205; (this view may not be correct in view of AIR 1959 SC 914).
30. Subarna v. Arjuno, AIR 1951 Ori 337.
31. Gokuel Chand v. Parvin Kumari, AIR 1952 SC 231 : 1952 SCR 825; S. Sethurathnam v. Lucy Basrora, (1977) 2 M.L.J. 141 : 1977 Hind LR 566; Ningu Vithu Bamani v. Sadashiv Ningu Bamani, AIR 1987 Bom 27; (if children have been born, presumption is in favour of their legitimacy).
32. Moujilal v. Chandrabati Kumari, ILR 38 Cal 700 (P.C.).
33. Milkhi Ram v. Milkhi Ram, AIR 1996 HP 116 (para 15).
34. Shivalingiah v. Chowdamma, AIR 1956 Mys 17.
35. Hazi Saboo Siddick v. Ayesha Bai, ILR 27 Bom 485 (PC).
36. Sadhumandal v. Sarathi Balamandal, 1985 Cr LJ 979 (Cal).
37. 1970 Kashmir LJ 78.
38. Shankerappa v. Sushilabhai, AIR 1984 Kant 112; Neelakantappa v. Amabamma, ILR 1985 Kant. 3969; (1986) 1 Kant. L.J. 41.
39. Raghuvir Kumar (minor) by next friend and mother Kamla Kumari v. Shanmughavadivu (Smt.), AIR 1971 Mad 330 burden lay heavily upon the defendants who challenged the validity of the marriage, to prove that there had been no marriage in law.[40] Where the first marriage of a person was admitted, and the witness did not depose as to the factum of the second marriage or that he and another were living as man and wife, it was held that the evidence of the witness fell short of the requirement under Section 50, as he did not have special means of knowledge.[41]

Where the eye-witnesses depose as to the performance of the marriage between the parties, the conduct evidence under Section 50 may not be necessary.[42]

Opinion expressed by conduct of persons who had special means of knowledge may be sufficient to prove the fact of marriage in the proceedings under Section 488, Cr. P.C.[43]

Opinion as to relationship under the main part of Section 50, does apply in considering the question in proceedings under Section 125, Cr. P.C., as to the existence of the relationship of marriage between the parties. Any person who, as a member of the family, or otherwise, has a special means of knowledge regarding the subject of relationship of husband and wife between two persons can speak in such proceedings.[44]

(b) Adoption.—In regard to an ancient adoption, evidence that the boy was treated for a long time as the adopted son at a time when there was no controversy, is sufficient to prove the adoption, although evidence of actual giving and taking is not forthcoming.[45] The evidence of a farm-servant who was present as a conch-blower, as to the adoption ceremony and as to the fact of A's calling B as his father and B's wife as his mother, was held admissible in evidence in regard to the question whether or not A was the adopted son of B, in a partition suit.[46] For establishing that the plaintiff's husband A, was the son of the defendant's father B, the testimony of the plaintiff's elder brother who gave her in marriage to A and of B's family-barber, was held admissible to prove the relationship.[47] Regarding proof of adoption, the evidence of a relative or an immediate neighbour of the adoptive parents, that they heard A addressing the parents as father and mother is relevant, as the opinion is expressed by conduct and they had special means of knowledge of knowing as to the existence of relationship.[48] Where the question was whether M was the adopted son of B, a document executed by the widow of B stating that B had taken M in adoption during his life time was held admissible under Section 50.[49]

Where a witness stated simply that A was the son of B and that A and B used to treat each other as father and son, was held not admissible, as it was not an opinion expressed by conduct.[50]

(c) Relationship as son and daughter.—The question was whether A was the son of B, and whether B was the daughter of C and D, another daughter of C and D, against her own interest, made an admission that A was the son of B who was her sister; it was held that the evidence was admissible under Section 21 as an admission and also under Section 50, as the daughter was admittedly a member of the family who had special means of knowledge.[51] Where the plaintiff stated, in her evidence, that her grandmother was saying that the plaintiff was the daughter of the house, it was held that to that extent, her evidence was relevant under Section 50.[52]

In a case where the dispute was whether A was the daughter of B, the opinion expressed by a third person C, who attended the marriage of A at which B acted as Kanyakarta, was held inadmissible for the

---

40. Rewa Widow of Dhoudusingh v. Galharsingh, AIR 1961 MP 164.
41. Laxmi Sahuani v. Maheshwar Sahu, AIR 1985 Ori 11.
42. Veikuntam Manikyamma v. Puppala, AIR 1971 Ori 49.
43. K.J.B. David v. Nilamoni Devi, AIR 1953 Ori 10; Venajakshamma (Smt.) v. P. Gopalakrishna, AIR 1970 Mys 305; Mohit Kumar Mukherjee v. Hera Mukherjee, 1981 Cr LJ (NOC) 48 (Cal). See also Ajay Chandrakar v. Ushabai, 2000 AIHC 1292 (para 5) (MP) : AIR 2000 NOC 32 (MP).
44. Neelakantappa v. Ambamma, (1986) 1 Kant. LJ 41 : ILR 1985 Kant 3969.
45. Balinki Padhano v. Gopal Krishna Padhano, AIR 1964 Ori 117.
46. Jaghabandhu Senapathy v. Bhagu Senapathy, AIR 1974 Ori 120.
47. Mahadeo Mahapatra v. Sora Dibya AIR 1973 Ori 1; relied on Ulla Dei v. Malli Bewa, (1967) 33 Cut LT 740.
48. Jankhi Bewa v. Chandra Majhi, (1973) 39 Cut. LJ 635.
49. Manraj v. Rameshwar, 1969 Raj L.W. 507.
50. Ajaib Singh v. Mann Singh, (1968) 70 Pun. LR 83.
51. (1959) 1 Ori. J.D. 352.
52. Jyotirmoyee Debi v. Durgadas Banerjee, AIR 1976 Cal 238.

reason that the single occasion as spoken to by C could not be taken to establish the special means of knowledge of relationship.[53]

(d) Joint family.—Section 50 can be applied to prove that a person is a member of a Hindu Joint Family, but the opinion of witnesses must be expressed by conduct as to the existence of such relationship and the witness must have special means of knowledge on the subject.[54] Where the plaintiff claimed share in the joint family of the defendant who denied the plaintiff's paternity but the marriage between the plaintiff's mother and the defendant was not disproved and the school records of the plaintiff showed the defendant's name as father, it was held that the opinion of the Headmaster of the school who produced the school records was relevant in deciding the relationship between the parties.[55]

In a suit for partition, it is open to the plaintiffs to give evidence regarding the jointness of the parties if such evidence fulfils the condition of Section 50, as an expression of opinion by conduct.[56]

(e) Mahantship.—In the case of a person claiming Mahanthship, evidence of a solitary witness claiming to have been present at the initiation of the plaintiff as a Chela of the deceased Mahanth was held to be neither trustworthy nor sufficient, as he had no special means of knowledge about the custom of succession to Mahanth.[57]

(f) Other relationship.—A nephew of D deposed that T addressed D as "Phuphar", and that D himself told him that T's father was his wife's brother. Regarding the relationship between T and D, which was in dispute, it was held that the opinion of the nephew of D, supported by T's conduct, is relevant under Section 50.[58] Evidence of a witness that he was a cousin of the plaintiff's father, and he accompanied the barat of the marriage of the plaintiff's father was held admissible as opinion on relationship expressed by conduct.[59]

Oral evidence of a witness, who has no special means of knowledge and whose evidence is of the nature of hearsay, about the name of the grandfather of the deceased, is not opinion expressed by conduct as to the existence of relationship between the deceased and his grandfather.[60]

(g) Legitimacy.—Evidence of a person's wife and his brothers, acknowledging the defendant in a suit as the legitimate son and his mother as the legitimate wife was held admissible.[61]

Law presumes in favour of marriage and against concubinage. Long cohabitation raises a rebuttable presumption of wedlock. Where the father and son filed a suit and, in the plaint, father described the son without stating as to whether the son was an illegitimate son, it amounts to an acknowledgement that the son was legitimate. That the defendants did not challenge the legitimacy is an important circumstance in favour of the legitimacy of the son. In a subsequent title suit, the father and another son described that son as illegitimate. It was held that the statement in the subsequent title suit is also admissible, but it would not outweigh the acknowledgement of legitimacy made in the earlier suit. Acknowledgement and repudiation of legitimacy, both being conduct, are admissible in evidence under Section 50.[62]

But acknowledgement, where there is proof of the fact that there was no marriage, would not be of any use.[63]

(h) Pedigree.—On a question of pedigree, family conduct is admissible to prove relationship; and the treatment of friends and neighbours may be received as presumptive proof of marriage. The opinion on behalf of a family, regarding relationship, may be inferred from the family conduct, e.g., distribution of family property; tacit recognition of relations. While, there is no doubt that a mere opinion about relationship, based on general repute, and not supported by conduct, will not be admissible under Section 50 of the Evidence Act, it is not necessary that, in every instance where a witness proves relationship, he

---

53. Ulla Dei v. Malli Bewa, ILR 1967 Cut 430.
54. Shriram Sardarmal v. Gourishankar, AIR 1961 Bom 136.
55. M B. Gangadharappa v. Bommagondappa, 1999 AIHC 2512 (paras 7 and 8) (Kant).
56. Ramesh Sao v. Kamala Sao, AIR 1969 Pat 329.
57. Munshidas v. Malsingh, AIR 1977 SC 2002.
58. Ajmer Singh v. Jangir Singh, AIR 1952 Pepsu 76.
59. Gurvek Singh v. Balbir Singh, 1977 Cur LJ (Civil) 256 (Punj).
60. Dukh Haran Tiwari v. Dulhin Bihasa Kuer, AIR 1963 Pat 390.
61. Shivlingiah v. Chowdamma, AIR 1956 Mys 17.
62. Sheodhar Prasad v. Jagdhar Prasad Singh, AIR 1964 Pat 316.
63. Mohabbat Ali Khan v. Md. Ibrahim Khan, AIR 1929 PC 135; Habibur v. Altaf, AIR 1922 PC 159.

must also prove exhaustively all the instance, of family conduct in support of that relationship. The quantum of evidence must necessarily vary with the facts of each case.[64]

5. SECTIONS 50 AND 32(5)

A statement of a witness on the question of relationship may be admissible either under Section 32(5) or under this section. Where the witness has heard the existence of relationship from persons who had special means of knowledge, and the statements were made before the dispute arose, then it is admissible under Section 32(5). Where the witness gives his opinion as to the relationship, though after the dispute has arisen, it is admissible under this section if he, as a member of the family, or otherwise, has special means of knowledge, and the opinion is expressed by conduct.

A statement made by persons not having special means of knowledge though not admissible under Section 50 may be relevant under Section 32(5) of the Act, provided the witness states that he had the information from a deceased person, long before the dispute.[65]

Where the plaintiff claimed certain property of 'K' on the basis of inheritance but the proof adduced of his relationship was of general reputation, and was not in accordance with Section 32(5) or in accordance with Section 50, it was held that, in the absence of any express provision in the Act, making the evidence of general reputation admissible as proof of relationship, the evidence could not be accepted.[66]

A member of a family can depose as to what he has been told about his ancestors, provided what he says is an expression of his own independent opinion, based on information derived from deceased persons, and the opinion is expressed by conduct, i.e., offering of Fatheha, etc.[67] It is necessary for a witness on the question of pedigree, to say, that he heard the relationship from a deceased person, so as to fulfil the conditions of Section 32(5). However it is permissible, in limited cases where the witness had no direct knowledge about the relationship by blood, to give evidence of statements ascertained by him from other persons about such relationship.[68] According to Section 50, a person, as a member of a family, or any other person having special means of knowledge of the relationship, can express his opinion by his conduct. Under Section 32(5) of the Evidence Act, in limited cases, a witness having no direct knowledge about the relationship by blood, can give evidence of the statements which he got from other persons about such relationship. The only qualification is that such statements which he heard from others must have been made before the dispute arose.[69]

6. SUCH OPINION NOT SUFFICIENT TO PROVE MARRIAGE UNDER STATUTORY PROVISIONS [PROVISO]

The proviso indicates that opinion on relationship cannot be sufficient to prove a marriage, in proceedings under the Indian Divorce Act, or in prosecutions for bigamy, adultery and enticing away a married woman. In such cases, the fact of the marriage must be strictly proved in the regular way.[70] In a case, where the charge is commission of adultery, the prosecution has to prove independently the marriage of the individual concerned.[71] Where the parties to a second marriage are Hindus, when the ceremony of Saptapadi is not proved, no presumption can be drawn that all ceremonies must have been performed from the mere presence of a priest. For the offence of bigamy the second marriage must be clearly proved under the proviso.[72] Evidence of relationship is not sufficient, without proof of second marriage, to warrant a conviction for the offence of bigamy under Section 194, Indian Penal Code.[73]

---

64. Natabar Parichha v. Nirmi Charan Misra, AIR 1952 Ori 75.
65. Bujhawan Singh v. Shyama Devi, AIR 1964 Pat 301.
66. Abdul Rahman v. Alima Khatun, (1980) 1 Cal LJ 403 : 84 Cal WN 539.
67. Dawood Bibi v. Abu Bakker, AIR 1972 Mad 228.
68. Chunna Kunwar v. Lala Mukat Beharilal, AIR 1934 All 117.
69. Sheojee Tiwary v. Prema Kuer, AIR 1964 Pat 187.
70. Empress v. Putambur Singh, ILR (1879) 5 Cal 566, FB; Wadhwa v. Fatteh Muhammad, (1893) PR No. 5 of 1894 (CR).
71. (1961) 2 Guj L.R. 256.
72. Phankari v. State, AIR 1965 J.K. 105; Sivarams Suppu v. State, 1962 Ker LT 487.
73. 1955 Raj LW 504.

For an offence under Section 497 or 498, Indian Penal Code, the marriage between the complainant and the woman involved must be proved clearly.[74]

The proviso to Section 50 does not make the opinion evidence relating to marriage either irrelevant or inadmissible. The only effect is that in a prosecution under Section 494, I.P.C., the factum of marriage cannot be held proved on opinion evidence.[75]

Under the proviso, the principles which govern the proof of first marriage also govern the proof of second marriage, which has to be established in the case of offence of bigamy.[76]

Section 125, Cr. P.C. would not come within the ambit of the proviso to Section 50 of the Evidence Act. The proviso to Section 50 was held not applicable to contempt proceedings in a case where a wife obtained an injunction against the husband from entering into a second marriage, and contempt proceedings were initiated for the disobedience of the order.[77]

Grounds of opinion, when relevant.

S. 51. Whenever the opinion of any living person is relevant, the grounds on which such opinion is based are also relevant.

ILLUSTRATION

An expert may give an account of experiments performed by him for the purpose of forming his opinion.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Where the opinion of an expert is receivable, the grounds or reasoning upon which such opinion is based may also be inquired into. Opinion is no evidence, unless the reason is assigned for such opinion. The correctness of the opinion can be estimated better in many instances when the reasons upon which it is based are known. If the reasons are frivolous or inconclusive, the opinion is worth nothing. An Excise Inspector is an expert on the question whether a certain liquid is illicit liquor or not; but, before he is in a position to give such opinion as an expert, he has to examine it and has also to furnish the data on which his opinion is based. His bald statement that the contents of the bottles were illicit liquor is not sufficient to prove that fact.[78] Though, Excise Inspectors may be treated as experts in their own branch, and they may be able to distinguish liquors, it is the duty of the court to ascertain from them the grounds on which their opinion is based, in order to come to its own conclusion as to the correctness or otherwise of the opinion given by them.[79] In a case of offence of forgery where the opinion of a handwriting expert was relied on, it was held that the reasons or the ground for the opinion had to be given to the accused.[80] A report of a Government analyst is not admissible unless he is examined. It is highly desirable that his report should contain full and complete reasons and take the place of evidence which he would give if he is called to court as a witness; then only it becomes relevant under this section.[81]

CHARACTER WHEN RELEVANT

In civil cases character to prove conduct imputed, irrelevant.

S. 52. In civil cases the fact that the character of any person concerned is such as to render probable or improbable any conduct imputed to him is irrelevant, except in so far as such character appears from facts otherwise relevant.

---

74. Chandra Bhahadur v. State of Sikkim, 1978 Cr LJ 942 (Sik).
75. Rabindra Kumar Bhattachari v. Smt. Prathiva Bhattacharjee, 1970 Cr. LJ 838 : AIR 1970 Tripura 30.
76. Mutyala Pardeshi v. Subbalakshmi, 1962 A.P. 311.
77. Bhonrilal v. Kaushaliya, AIR 1970 Raj 83.
78. Gobardhan v. State, AIR 1959 All 53; Ramkaran Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Nag 13; Titli v. Alfred Robert Jones, AIR 1934 All 273.
79. Paltu Matabadal v. State of M.P., AIR 1961 MP 5; Ramkaran Singh v. Emperor, AIR 1935 Nag 13; Gobardhan v. State, AIR 1959 All 53.
80. Himatlal Ratilal v. State of Gujarat, 1971 Cr LJ 165 (Guj).
81. Gajarani v. Emperor, AIR 1933 All 394; Drugs Inspector, M.P. v. Chimanlal and Co., 1968 MP 238 (FB). (U/ Drugs Act), 1968 Cr LJ 1561 (FB).

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

In civil cases, evidence of the character of any party to the suit, to prove the probability or improbability of any conduct imputed to him, is irrelevant.

"In respect of the character of a party, two distinctions must be drawn, namely, between the cases when the character is in issue or is not in issue, and when the cause is civil or criminal. When a party's general character it itself in issue, whether in a civil or criminal proceeding, proof must necessarily be received of what that general character is, or is not. But when general character is not in issue, but is tendered in support of some other issue, it is, as a general rule, excluded. So, in civil proceedings, evidence of character to prove conduct imputed is declared by the Act to be irrelevant (s. 52). The two exceptions to this rule are, that, in civil proceedings, evidence of character as affecting damages, is admissible (s. 55); and in criminal proceedings...the fact that the person accused is of a good character, is relevant, but the fact that he has a bad character is, except in certain specified cases, irrelevant (ss. 53 and 54)".[82]

The general exclusion of character evidence is based on grounds of public policy and fairness, since its admission would surprise and prejudice the parties by raking up the whole of their careers, which they could not possibly come into court prepared to defend.[83] The business of the Court is to try the case, and not the man; and a very bad man may have a very righteous cause.[84]

In HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, Para 50, Page 38, it is observed: "When a party's character, which in this context means his reputation, is not directly in issue in the proceedings, but evidence of it is tendered in proof of some other fact, it is generally excluded."[85]

In HALSBURY 4th Edn., Vol. 17, Para-52, Page-38, it is observed: "In certain circumstances, evidence of reputation is admissible for the purpose of establishing a person's good or bad character. The admission of evidence of reputation is now largely confined to defamation actions, where what is relevant will depend upon the terms of the pleadings. Where damages are at large, the bad character of the plaintiff in such actions may be proved in chief, in mitigation of damages, irrespective of the right to cross-examine. In general, in civil cases, evidence as to character and reputation is not admissible to bolster a party's case, although it may certainly be relevant in cross-examination, for example, as to credibility."

In BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Section 251, P. 241) it is stated that the exclusion of evidence of character mentioned in this section is based on the principle of law, that the evidence adduced should be alike, directed and confined to the matters which are in dispute, or which form the subject matter of the investigation.

In BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Ed., Section 256, P. 245) it is stated further: "To admit character evidence in every case, or to reject it in every case, would be equally fatal to justice; that to draw a line or to define with precision where it ought to be received and where it ought to be rejected, is as embarrassing a problem as any Legislature can be called upon to solve."

The general rule is that the evidence as to the character of a person is irrelevant in a civil case.[86]

In a suit, the contention was that certain pronotes had been obtained from the insolvent while he was under the influence of drink, and it was found to be baseless. It was held in that case, that mere general bad character of the insolvent would be quite irrelevant in a civil case for proving want of consideration for the pronotes.[87]

---

82. WOODROFFE AND AMEER ALI'S EVIDENCE, 10th Edn., Vol. II, P. 718.
83. Queen v. Rowton, (1865) 34 LJ (MC) 57.
84. WIGMORE, 135.
85. Narracott v. Narracott and Hesketh, (1864) 33 LJPM & A 61 at 62. In general, evidence cannot be led in chief to bolster up the credibility of witnesses: see R V Turner (1975) 1 All ER 70 at 75 : (1975) 2 WLR 56, 61, CA, per LAWTON LJ; cf. Lowery V R (1974) AC 85 : (1973) 3 All ER 662, PC.
86. Jagannath Prasad v. Ram Chandran, AIR 1952 All 408.
87. Abdul Shakur v. Kotwaleswar Prasad, AIR 1958 All 54 reversed on another point in Official Receiver v. Abdul Shakoor, AIR 1965 SC 920; See also Debendra Chandra Mondal v. Ratan Mitra, AIR 1984 Cal 316.

Where a first wife filed a suit for maintenance, the husband in his written statement made some allegations of unchastity against the second wife, that suit was dismissed as not maintainable. Later, a daughter filed a suit for declaration of title, raising a question whether the second wife was unchaste; when the previous written statement in the maintenance suit was sought to be filed to show that the second wife was unchaste, it was held that the character of the second wife was not relevant in the title suit.[88]

In this section the expression 'the character of any person concerned' is used. Therefore, it may appear to include persons who are called as witnesses, but the content of the section refers only to the parties to the proceedings.

This section has no bearing on a case where the veracity of a witness is in question. This is governed by Section 146, under which a witness can be cross-examined to shake his credit, by injuring his character. Character evidence may not be relevant to decide an issue, in a case, but cross-examining counsel is given liberty under this section, for the purpose of shaking the credit of a witness, to put questions to him affecting his character. Section 155 prescribes the manner of impeaching the credit of a witness. Sections 52 and 155 deal with different matters. Section 52 prohibits character evidence in regard to the subject matter of the suit. Section 155 cannot, therefore, be construed as an exception to Section 52.[89]

Section 52 excludes evidence of character from being given only for the purpose of rendering probable or improbable any conduct imputed to the party. But, when the facts which are relevant otherwise than for the purpose of showing character are proved, and those facts raise inferences concerning the character of a party to the suit, such facts become relevant not only to prove the facts for which they were directly tendered, but also for the purpsoe of showing the character of the party concerned. In such a case it is open to the court to form its own conclusion as to the character of the party, and as to the effect of such character on the conduct imputed to the party.[90]

2. CHARACTER

Explanation to Section 55 states that "In Sections 52, 53, 54 and 55 the word 'character' includes both reputation and disposition; but except as provided in Section 54, evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition was shown."

'Character' is a combination of the peculiar qualities impressed by nature or by habit of the person, which distinguish him from others.[91]

The evidence of character relates either (a) to character of witnesses, or (b) to character of parties. Character of a witness affects his credit and is always material, as it helps the court to come to the conclusion whether his evidence should be treated as trustworthy. Questions touching the character of a witness are allowed to be put to a witness who comes to give evidence in a case.

STEPHEN in his introduction (pp. 167, 168) observes: "Evidence of character is, generally speaking a makeweight, though there are two classes of cases in which it is highly important: (1) Where conduct is equivocal, or even presumably criminal. In this case, evidence of character may explain conduct and rebut the presumptions which it might raise in the absence of any such evidence. A man is found in possession of stolen goods. He says he found them and took charge of them to give them to the owner. If he is a man of very high character this may be believed. (2) When a charge rests on the direct testimony of a single witness and on the bare denial of it by the person charged. A man is accused of an indecent assault by a woman with whom he was accidentally left alone. He denies it. Here a high character for morality on the part of the accused would be of great importance."[92]

In criminal cases, previous good character relevant.

S. 53. In criminal proceedings, the fact that the person accused is of a good character, is relevant.

---

88. Lakshmamma v. E. China Appayya, (1970) 2 And. W.R. 94.
89. Guntaka Hussenaiah v. Busetti Yerraiah, AIR 1954 Andhra 39.
90. NORTON, 230.
91. WEBSTER.
92. See also commentary to the explanation in Section 155.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

The principle upon which good character may be proved is that it affords a presumption against the commission of crime. Thsi presumption arises from the improbability, as a general rule as proved by common observation and experience, that a man who has uniformly pursued an honest and upright course of conduct will depart from it and do an act so inconsistent with it. Such a person may be overcome by temptation and fall into crime, and cases of that kind often occur; but they are exceptions. The rule is otherwise; the influence of this presumption from character will necessarily vary according to the circumstances of different cases.[93] Character evidence is a very weak evidence; it cannot outweigh positive evidence in regard to the guilt of a person.[94]

In a case the appellant was convicted for a criminal breach of trust under Section 409, Penal Code, and for conspiracy under Section 120-B, Penal Code. In order to show the good character of the appellant, before the trial court, two great men of our country Sri Sreeprakasha and Jawaharlal Nehru were examined on behalf of the defence. Dealing with the relevancy of good character in the criminal proceedings SUBBARAO. J., on behalf of the Bench of the Supreme Court held that the evidence of those witnesses for the defence established that, in their opinion, the accused was a man of intergrity, sincerety and simplicity; that the question is as to the evidentiary value of good character of an accused in a criminal case. The relevant provisions are in Section 53 and explanation to Section 55 of the Evidence Act; it is clear from the said provisions that the evidence of general reputation and general disposition, is relevant in a criminal proceeding under the Indian Evidence Act, unlike in England, evidence can be given both of general character and general disposition; disposition means the inherent qualities of a person; reputation means the general credit of the person amongst the public. There is real distinction between reputation and disposition; a man may be reputed to be a good man, but in reality he may have bad disposition. The value of evidence as regards disposition of a person depends not only upon the witnesses' perspicacity but also on their opportunities to observe a person, as well as a person's cleverness to hide his real traits; but a disposition of a man may be made up of many traits, some good and some bad, and only evidence in regard to a particular trait with which the witness is familiar would be of some use....But, in any case, the character evidence is a very weak evidence; it can not outweigh the positive evidence in regard to the guilt of the person. It may be useful in doubtful cases to tilt the balance in favour of the accused, or it may also afford a back ground for appreciating his reaction in a given situation. It must give place to acceptable positive evidence. The opinion expressed by the witnesses does credit to the accused; but, in our view, in the face of the positive evidence, we have already considered, it cannot turn the scale in his favour."[95]

This section is based on the English Law.

STEPHEN in "GENERAL VIEW OF THE CRIMINAL LAW OF ENGLAND" states: "Though general evidence of bad character is not admitted against the prisoner, general evidence of good character is always admitted in his favour. This would, no doubt, be an inconsistency, justifiable or atleast intelligible, on the ground of the humanity of English Law, if such evidence was not often of great importance as tending to explain conduct."[96]

In HALSBURY 4th Edn. Vol. 17, Para-51, page-38 it is stated: "It is not in general permissible, in a criminal case, for the prosecution to adduce evidence that the accused either bears a bad general reputation in the community, or has a natural disposition to commit crimes of the class charged.[97]

---

93. WIGMORE 123. Affidavit of a senior lawyer certifying previous good character of accused, an Assistant Public Prosecutor, of no use in circumstances of case. Kasam Abdulla Hafiz v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 1451 : 1998 Cr LJ 1422.
94. Bhagwan Swarup v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 682. Also see Uday Kumar v. State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 4622 (SC).
95. Bhagawan Swaroop v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 682.
96. Cited in FIELD'S LAW OF EVIDENCE, 11th Edn., Vol. 3, P. 2570.
97. R v. Butterwasser, (1948) 1 KB 4 : (1947) 2 All ER 415, CCA; R v. Rowton, (1865) 34 LJMC 57; R v. Cole, (1810) Judge's Note printed in (1946) KB at 544.

The accused nevertheless, is permitted to adduce or give evidence of his good reputation (See CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. II, para. 368), and if he thus puts his character in issue, the prosecution may attack it.[1]

PHIPSON (13th Edn., page 236, paras 13-07) states: "In all truly criminal trials, however, the defence is entitled to lead evidence of the good character of the defendant, subject to the right of the prosecution to call evidence in rebuttal."

PHIPSON (15th Edn. (2000), page 237, paras : 17-04) states further: "Although, as a matter of decision, Rowton was concerned only with evidence in rebuttal, it laid down general rules with regard to the admissibility of evidence of the accused's good character, rules which have never been expressly doubted and which have, from time to time, been explicitly applied or endorsed.[2] The principle emerging from that case may be summarised as follows:

(i) The character witness called on behalf of the accused can give evidence of the general reputation of the accused for good character, but not of his individual opinion as to the accused's disposition.[3]

(ii) As the best character is often the least talked about, the witness may even give negative, instead of affirmative, evidence on the subject. "The testimony of a witness that he has never heard anything against the accused in relation to the particular element of character is admissible and even cogent testimony on the point."

(iii) Such a witness may not be examined in chief as to particular facts.

(iv) The character proved must be of the specific kind impeached, e.g., honesty where dishonesty is charged, good character in other respects being irrelevant.[4]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (13th Edn., page 240, paras : 13-12) further states: "Good character is not a defence, for no-one would then be convicted, as everyone starts with a good character. The defendant is, however, entitled to rely on the fact that he is of previous good character as making it less likely that he would have committed the offence. If there is any room for doubt, his good character may be thrown in the scales in his favour". The rules set out here have not always been strictly observed, and at times considerable latitude has been allowed to the defence, particularly in regard to allowing character witnesses to testify as to their own opinion of the accused's character (i.e. disposition). The old rules were however recently reaffirmed.[5]

PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE (13th Edn. page 241, paras : 13-14) again states: "The accused was enabled to give evidence on his own behalf by Section 1 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1897." Section 1(f)(ii) of that Act makes provision for the consequences for the parties if the accused "has personally or by his advocate.....gives evidence of his good character; This clearly envisages that the accused might himself give such evidence."

The fact that the accused is of good character is relavent in weighing the probabilities in a doubtful case, but it can be dispensed with in cases where the prosecution case has not been proved.[6]

Previous bad character not relevant, except in reply.

S. 54. In criminal proceedings the fact that the accused person has a bad character is irrelevant, unless evidence has been given that he has a good character, in which case it becomes relevant.

Explanation 1.*—This section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.

---

1. See CRIMINAL LAW, Vol. II (paras 369, 388) et seq.
2. 1865 Le & Ca 520 : 34 L.J.M.C.
3. Accused may equally elicit such evidence from a prosecution witness, R. v. Shrimpton, (1851) 3 C.&K. 373, CCR.
4. A good example is R. v. Shrimpton, (1851) 3 C.&K. 373 CCR. See also R. v. Turner, (1817) 32 St. Tr. 957, 1007-1008.
5. R v. Redgrave (1981) Crim. L.R. 556 (CA) (discussed post 13-15).
6. Data Xivae Naigue Desai v. State, AIR 1967 Goa 4 (FB).

Explanation 2.*—A previous conviction is relevant as evidence of bad character.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 590
2. 'Unless evidence has been given that he has a good character' ... 592
3. Bad character, a fact in issue [Explanation 1] ... 592
4. Previous conviction relevant as evidence of bad character [Explanation 2] ... 594

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

Evidence of bad character of an accused person (of whose good character evidence has not been given) is not relevant under this section, for the purpose of raising a general inference that the accused is likely to have committed the offence charged. Such evidence is irrelevant and cannot be legally admitted in evidence whether elicited by the prosecution or by the defence.[7] In criminal cases bad character of the accused is irrelevant unless evidence was given that he has a good character.[8]

The Supreme Court has held that, in the Indian system of Law, an accused starts with a presumption of innocence; his bad character is not relevant, unless he gives evidence of good character in which case, by way of rebuttal, evidence of bad character may be adduced.[9]

The description of the accused as a law-breaker amounts to evidence of character. The Supreme Court excluded it.[10]

A man's guilt is to be established by proof of the facts alleged, and not by proof of his character; such evidence might create prejudice but not lead a step towards substantiation of guilt.[11]

Where the accused caused the death of a person, when he tried to rape her; it was held that she was entitled for an acquittal as she had every right to save her honour even by causing death, under self defence, and her alleged immoral character is of no consequence.[12]

HALSBURY[13] has observed: "It is not, in general, permissible, in a criminal case, for the prosecution to adduce evidence that the accused either bears a bad general reputation in the community, or has a natural disposition to commit crimes of the class charged. The accused, nevertheless, is permitted to adduce or give evidence of his good reputation; and if he thus puts his character in issue, the prosecution may attack it".

If a man has been punished for his previous crime, it is manifestly unfair that in every future trial (upon charges of which he may of course be quite innocent) his whole past career should be raked up.[14]

In criminal cases, to prove that the defendant committed the crime charged, evidence may not be given either that he: (1) bore a bad reputation in the community or (2) has a disposition to commit crime of that kind, or (3) had no other occasions committed particular acts of the same class evincing such a disposition.[15]

---

7. M. Myin v. King Emperor, (1908) 5 LBR 4; Emperor v. Gangaram, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1274.
8. Ramlakhan Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1977 SC 1936; Shyama Charan Sriramsaran v. State, AIR 1969 All 61; Eswarappa v. State of Karnataka, (1977) 1 Kant. LJ 52; Chacko v. State, 1970 Ker LT 358 : 1970 Ker. L.J. 193; Indernath Guha v. State, (1979) 83 Cal. W.N. 248 : (1979) 1 Cal. L.J. 119.
9. Ramlakhan Singh v. State of U.P., AIR 1977 SC 1936.
10. Ram Lakhan v. U.P., AIR 1977 SC 1936.
11. Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, ILR (1915) 42 Cal 957.
12. State of Orissa v. Nirupama Panda, 1989 Cr LJ 621 (Ori).
13. 4th Edn., Vol. 17 (para 51), Page, 38.
14. PHIPSON 13th Edn. (para 13-07).
15. PHIPSON 13th Edn. (para 13-07).

At common law, evidence in rebutted must be of the same kind and subject to the same limits as that to which it is an answer, i.e., it must not relate to specific instances and must relate to the general reputation of the accused.[16]

Where the bad character of the accused is not in issue, the constant reference to the accused as a goonda, is entirely irrelevant, and if it is allowed, it is bound to adversly affect the accused so far as the charge against him is concerned.[17] In a criminal proceeding, the fact that the accused person had a bad character is irrelevant unless evidence has been given that he has a good character in which case it becomes relevant. Thus evidence suggestive of the accused's bad character is not admissible. To call an accused a goonda or a rough person is surely prejudicing the jury against him. If the Court pointedly drew the attention of the jury in summing up the case at more than one place that the accused was a goonda the jury's verdict is vitiated.[18]

The history sheet of an accused person, kept in the police station, is not admissible in proof of a man's character, as it is based on hearsay.[19]

The court has a paramount duty to see that inadmissible evidence, especially about the previous bad character of the accused in a criminal case, is not brought out, even though, the defence lawyer may have overlooked the rule of evidence on the subject.[20]

The prohibition does not, in any way, affect evidence which is required to prove a motive for the crime or which is otherwise relevant.[21]

The Privy Council dealt with a case where a couple was tried and found guilty of the murder of an infant child whose body was found buried in their garden. There was no evidence that either the husband or the wife had killed the child. Before the trial Court, evidence of finding bodies other than the body of the child was given besides the evidence of others who had entrusted their children to that couple in the past and the children were not thereafter heard of. The Privy Council observed: "It is undoubtedly not competent for the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment, for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that the accused is a person likely from his criminal conduct or character to have committed the offence for which he is being tried. On the other hand, the mere fact that the evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible, if it be relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be so relevant if it bears upon the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental, or to rebut a defence which would otherwise be open to the accused."[22]

The decision in Makin's case was reaffirmed by the House of Lords in Harris v. Director of Public Prosecutions.[23]

In Sardul Singh v. State of Bombay[24] while accepting the principle in Makin's case, the Supreme Court observed: "It is well-settled that the evidence in rebuttal of a very likely and probable defence on the question of intention can be let in by the prosecution as part of its case. To anticipate a likely defence in such a case, and to give evidence in rebuttal of such defence, is in substance nothing more than the letting in of the evidence by the prosecution of the requisite criminal intention beyond reasonable doubt".

Makin's case was followed by LORD SUMMER in Thompson v. R,[25]; by LORD GODDARD in R v. Sims,[26] by VISCOUNT SIMON in Harris v. D.P.P.[27].

---

16. PHIPSON 13th Edn. (para 13-17).
17. Nimoo Pal Mujumdar v. State, 1955 Cal 559.
18. Babulal v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 693.
19. Kamal Kanto v. State, AIR 1959 Cal. 342.
20. Kandur Kasta v. State, (1962)28 Cut. L.T. 185.
21. Jagwa Dhanuk v. King-Emperor, ILR (1925) 5 Pat 63.
22. Makin v. Attorney General New South Wales, (1894) A.C. 57, approving of the decision in Reg v. Geering, (1849) 18 L.J.M.C. 215; Reg. v. Grey, (1866) 4 F&F 1102.
23. (1952) 1 All ELR 1044 : AIR 1952 AC 694.
24. AIR 1957 SC 747 : 1957 SCJ 780, 801.
25. 1918 AC 232.
26. (1946) 1 KB 531, 537.
27. (1952) AC 694.

A was a salt agent, and B was his employee, who was entrusted with the duty of allotting the appropriate quantity of salt to each retail dealer. B was convicted for contravention of the Salt Act, where A was convicted for abetting B; evidence was let in to show that A knew about B's illegal transaction and connived with B. The Privy Council held that such evidence was relevant, both on the principal charge as well as the charge of abetting, in view of Section 14 or 15 of the Act, because it showed an intention to aid the commission of the offence and an intentional omission to put a stop to an illegal practice.[28]

Where an objection was taken that the evidence of bad character was allowed in evidence to the prejudice of the accused, it was held by the Supreme Court, that the evidence which disclosed certain unpleasant things about the accused in the past, was examined by the Courts below, in order to ascertain the motive for the murder, and not for the purpose of determining whether the accused were persons of bad character likely to commit murder.[29]

Where the question was about the dishonest intention of the accused, it was held that the previous judgment convicting the accused for the same offence is relevant and admissible to prove such an intention.[30]

The Bombay High Court in Lakshmandas v. State[31], held "Prima facie Section 54, cannot be given overriding effect; the section itself is not so worded as to be directly contradictory to Sections 7, 8, 9, 11, 14 and 15. What is made inadmissible is the evidence of bad character.....If the evidence of bad character is relevant under Section 14 or Section 15, merely because it might show previous misconduct of the accused, it is not inadmissible because of Section 54. In other words Section 54, would not control the other sections".

If evidence is otherwise relevant, it is not rendered inadmissible under this section, merely because it shows bad character or the commission of offence other than the offence with which the accused is charged.[32]

It was held, in a criminal case of defamation, that the accused, apart from denying or attempting to justify the alleged imputation, was entitled to rebut the complainant's case when the imputation was likely to harm his reputation; he could do that by showing that the complainant's reputation. in view of certain acts of omission or commission, was already at a low ebb; he was also entitled to show that the complaint was not bona fide.[33]

2. 'UNLESS EVIDENCE HAS BEEN GIVEN THAT HE HAS A GOOD CHARACTER'

Where the accused has attempted to show his good character in his own aid under the preceding section., the prosecution may in rebuttal offer evidence of his bad character. The accused, by going into his own character, gives a challenge to the prosecution. The prosecution, therefore, is at liberty to rebut his claim that he has a good character; otherwise the court would be misled.

3. BAD CHARACTER, A FACT IN ISSUE [EXPLANATION 1]

The explanation states that this section does not apply to cases in which the bad character of any person is itself a fact in issue.[34]

Evidence of reputation or disposition must be confined to the particular traits which the charge is concerned about. Thus, it would be useless to offer evidence of a prisoner's reputation for honesty on a charge of cruelty, or of his mild disposition on a charge of theft. Reputation for honesty would be relevant on a charge of theft, and a merciful disposition on a charge of cruelty.[35]

---

28. Srinivasa Mall v. Emperor, AIR 1947 PC 135.
29. Mangal Singh v. State of Madhya Bharath, AIR 1957 SC 199.
30. Mohan Singh v. Gopal Singh, AIR 1961 Mani 43 : (1961) 2 Cr LJ 787.
31. AIR 1968 Bom 400.
32. Saroj Kumar Chakrabarti v. Emperor, ILR (1932) 59 Cal 1361 : AIR 1932 Cal 474.
33. Munnalal v. D.P. Singh, AIR 1950 All 455.
34. Khilawan v. Emperor, 29 Cr. LJ 1009 : AIR 1928 Oudh 430. See also Prithvi Singh v. State of U.P., 2001 Cr LJ 4424 (paras 5 and 6) (All).
35. NORTON, 234.

In Noor Mohammad v. King[36] following Makin's case[37] it was held that "Before an issue can be said to be raised, which will permit the introduction of evidence obviously prejudicial to the accused, it must have been raised in substance, and the issue so raised must be one to which the prejudicial evidence is relevant.....The prosecution cannot credit the accused with fancy defence, in order to rebut them at the outset with some damning piece of prejudice. If the evidence of bad character is introduced in order to establish a relevant fact which cannot be proved aliunde, then the evidence is admissible.[38]

In cases of binding over proceedings for keeping good behaviour under sec 109, and 110, Cr.P.C., and in proceedings for the offences of dacoity u/Section 400, 401, Indian Penal Code, the bad character of the person involved would be a fact in issue.

In case of binding over proceedings u/Section 109, 110, Cr.P.C., the fact that a person is a habitual offender under Section 117, Cr.P.C. (old) (present Section 116) has to be proved. The general reputation of the person involved in such proceedings under Section 110, Cr.P.C. can be allowed.[39]

In a charge under Section 400, I.P.C., it must be established:

(1) That there was a gang associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity; and

(2) that the accused belonged to the gang, that is to say, the association of the accused with the gang was not casual but was intended to be habitual, Hence 'habit' is a fact in issue, to be proved for the purpose of establishing both the aforesaid ingredients of the offence. As habit is equivalent to character, it may be reasonably said that the character of an accused is itself a fact in issue for proving the charge under Section 400, I.P.C. The explanations 1 and 2 to Section 54 of the Evidence Act are attracted, and previous convictions, not only in respect of dacoities but also in respect of other offences such as theft, burglarly and other offences under Section 109 and 110, Cr.P.C., may be admissible.[40]

The observation that under Sections 400 and 401, Indian Penal Code, the character of an accused itself is a fact in issue for proving a charge under Section 400, was not accepted by the Gujarat High Court.[41]

In cases under Sections 400 and 401, Indian Penal Code, general bad character of accused is not a fact in issue. The fact in issue in a case under Section 401, Indian Penal Code, is a particular trait of bad character, viz. association for the purpose of habitually committing offences of robbery or theft; evidence can be given of that particular trait of bad character, but not of general bad character. In such cases, evidence cannot be given that the accused is a murderer or an immoral person or a cheat.[42]

In Bonai v. Emperor,[43] the evidence of previous conviction was admitted in a trial for the offence under Section 401, IPC, as evidence of habit and not as evidence of character, because in such cases habit has to be proved.[44]

It is submitted that the latter view is correct.

At the trial of the accused for committing or conspiring to commit a dacoity, it was sought to be proved by the prosecution that some of the accused were closely associated with the approver, and the object of that association had been the commission of thefts and other discreditable acts. It was held that the evidence was irrelevant either (a) to show the bad character of the accused; or (b) under S. 14 to show the existence of relevant state of mind, since a tendency to commit theft does not throw any light on the existence of an intention to commit or to conspire to commit a particular dacoity; or (c) under S.

---

36. 1949 P.C. 161.
37. 1894 A.C. 57.
38. See also Gopal v. The Crown, AIR 1950 HP 18.
39. In re : Perne Maila Rai, AIR 1938 Mad 591.
40. Bhima Shaw v. State, AIR 1956 Ori 177.
41. Bai Chaturi v. State, AIR 1960 Guj 5.
42. Bai Chaturi v. State, AIR 1960 Guj 5; relying on Bhona v. Emperor, ILR 38 Cal 408; Emperor v. Thukaram Malhari, 14 Bom LR 373; Mothiram Hari v. Emperor, AIR 1925 Bom 195.
43. ILR 38 Cal 408.
44. Emperor v. Thukaram Malhari, 14 Bom LR 373; Moti Ram Hari v. Emperor, AIR 1925 Bom 195, and Bai Chaturi v. State, AIR 1960 Guj 5, the same reasoning was adopted.

11 to show the nature and character of the association[45] for association for the purpose of committing petty thefts does not render probable the existence of a conspiracy to commit dacoity. For what it is worth, the evidence is admissible to show close association with the approver and thus to support his statement that a conspiracy existed in fact.

In cases of defamation, which is an offence under Section 499, Indian Penal Code, the Patna High Court held that reputation was not at all a necessary fact to be proved in a charge under Section 500, Indian Penal Code, and hence it did not become a fact in issue; the accused is not entitled to ask questions in general, concerning the character or reputation of the complainant, so as to show that it was already of such a type that the news item or correspondence complained of could not lower it further and hence the publication by the editor did not bring him within the mischief of Section 500, I.P.C.[46]

4. PREVIOUS CONVICTION RELEVANT AS EVIDENCE OF BAD CHARACTER [EXPLANATION 2]

A previous conviction is not admissible in evidence against the accused, except where he is liable to enhanced punishment under S. 75 of the Indian Penal Code, on account of previous conviction, or unless evidence of good character be given, in which case the fact that the accused has been previously convicted of an offence is admissible as evidence of bad character.[47]

A previous conviction may also be relevant under S. 8 as showing motive. It may also become relevant within the meaning of S. 14, Explanation 2, when the existence of any state of mind, or body, or bodily feeling, is in issue or relevant.[48] It may also be relevant under S. 43, See illustration (e).

The A.P. High Court has held that only after conviction of the accused, the charge for the previous conviction has to be framed for giving enhanced punishment. In such cases, the prosecution has to prove the previous conviction of the accused. The trial judge may, at his discretion, proceed or refrain from proceeding, with the trial on the charge of previous conviction.[49]

But, in assessing punishment, the Court may take into consideration the accused's character and antecedents or the state of crime in the country or locality.[50]

Character as affecting damages.

S. 55. In civil cases, the fact that the character of any person is such as to affect the amount of damages which he ought to receive, is relevant.

Explanation.*—In Sections 52, 53, 54 and 55, the word "character" includes both reputation and disposition; but, except as provided in Section 54, evidence may be given only of general reputation and general disposition, and not of particular acts by which reputation or disposition were shown.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that the character of any person is relevant when it affects the amount of damages which he ought to receive. This section applies only to civil cases. In this connection, see Section 12, which states that in suits in which damages are claimed, any fact which will enable the Court to determine the amount of damages which ought to be awarded, is also relevant. So, in all cases where the Court is to determine the quantum of damages, evidence of character would become relevant. Thus Section 55 is a corollary to Section 12 in cases where damages are claimed. It is in civil cases, where the

---

45. Emperor v. Wahiduddin (No. 1), (1929) 32 Bom LR 324, 54 Bom 524.
46. Devbrata Shastry v. Krishna Ballabh, AIR 1954 Pat 84.
47. Emperor v. Duming, (1903) 5 Bom LR 1034; Teka Ahir v. The King Emperor, (1920) 5 Cr LJ 706.
48. Emperor v. Alloomiya, (1903) 5 Bom LR 805 : ILR 28 Bom 129;
49. In re : Kamya, AIR 1960 A.P. 490.
50. King-Emperor v. Nga Ba Shein, (1928) 6 Ran 391, FB.

question of amount of damages to be awarded to the plaintiff arises, that the character of the plaintiff becomes relevant.[51]

In civil cases, good character, being presumed, may not be proved in aggravation of damages, but bad character is admissible in mitigation of damages, provided that it would not, if pleaded, amount to a justification. For example, in cases of defamation, the general bad reputation of the plaintiff may be proved. In cases of breach of promise of marriage, the plaintiff's general character for immorality is relevant. In cases of seduction, evidence of the general character for immorality on the part of the person seduced is relevant. The argument in favour of considering reputation is that the person should not be paid for the loss of that which he never had.

In actions for defamation, the fact that the plaintiff is shown to have bad reputation which can not be made worse is no answer, except to prove mitigation of damages.

2. EVIDENCE AS TO CHARACTER [EXPLANATION]

The word 'character' includes both reputation and disposition. 'Reputation' means what is thought of a person by others, and is constituted by public opinion. 'Disposition' respects the whole frame and texture of the mind. It comprehends the springs and motives of actions. 'Temper' influences the action of the moment, 'disposition' is permanent and settled; 'temper' may be transitory and fluctuating. It is possible, and not infrequent, to have a good disposition with a bad temper, and vice versa.[52]

In WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY, the meaning of the word 'character' is given as the peculiar qualities impressed by nature or by habit on the person, which distinguish him from others; these constitute his real character. The qualities which he is supposed to possess constitute his estimated character or reputation."

'Character' is what a person actually is, where as 'reputation' is what neighbours would say what he is. In other words 'reputation' is what is reputed. Thus, reputation involves certain amount of hearsay. As an exception to the hearsay rule, evidence of reputation can be given, under specific circumstances mentioned in this section. Reputation, though based on hearsay, has to be distinguished from 'rumour'. The Punjab High Court, observed: "Reputation, being the community's opinion, is distinguished from mere rumour in two respects. On the one hand, reputation implies the definite and final formation of opinion by the community; while rumour implies merely a report that is not yet finally credited. On the other hand, a rumour is usually thought of as signifying a particular act or occurrence, while a reputation is predicated upon a general trait of character; a man's reputation, for example, may declare him honest, and yet to day rumour may have circulated that this reputed honest man had defaulted yesterday in his accounts."[53]

The Allahabad High Court has held that general repute must necessarily consist largely of "hearsay" evidence; the reputation of a person means what is generally said or believed about his character; a witness may despose; "I believe the accused to be an habitual thief, and that is what persons of the neighbourhood generally say about him.": Such evidence is admissible as evidence of general repute; so far as the witness gives his personal opinion, the evidence is not hearsay; so far as the witness gives the opinion or the statements of other persons, his evidence must in a sense be 'hearsay'. A witness can only know the opinion of other persons by hearing them and say what they think; for that reason the evidence of general repute necessarily consists largely of 'hearsay evidence', i.e., of statements of what persons other than the witness say or believe about the character of the accused.[54]

The Madras High Court has held that, in one sense, the evidence of general repute is hearsay, but it is hearsay of a particular kind which is made admissible by Section 117, Cr. P.C. (old). It is not necessary that the witness who speaks to the general reputation of the person must be a resident in the

---

51. D. Shashi v. K.B. Sahay, ILR (1953) 32 Pat 276.
52. CRABB'S SYNONYMS, p. 323; See Bhagwan Swarup v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1965 SC 682. For distinction between 'reputation' and "rumour", see Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1961 Punj 215, at p. 226. See also commentary under Section 53. Bhagwati Swroop's case.
53. Harbhajan Singh v. State, AIR 1961 Punj 215.
54. Emperor v. Kumera, AIR 1929 All 650.

same place; a stranger can find out what the general repute of a person is and he is competent to testify to that fact.[55]

The Calcutta High Court has held that reputation includes both character and disposition, and the disposition is not the less proven because it appears on the face of the facts deposed to by the plaintiff, or is a proper inference from those facts.[56]

In R v. Rowton[57] (as per the majority view), the opinion of a witness given on his own personal experience, was excluded regarding the disposition of the accused charged for indecent assault, as character connotes only general reputation.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH in R v. Davidson[58] however, held that the personal experience of a witness or his opinion based on it is admissible. The inclusion of the expression 'disposition' in this section is based on the dissenting opinion and the reasons given therein, in R v. Rowton's case.

In FIELD'S LAW OF EVIDENCE, 11th Edn., Page: 2592, it is observed: "Under the Evidence Act both "reputation" and "disposition" have been included in the definition of "character" and Sir James Stephen deliberately, made a departure from the law in England".

SIR JAMES STEPHEN in his Digest Note to the History of Criminal Law (Vol. 1 P. 450) observed: "This subject is considered at length in R v. Rowton"[59] One consequence of the view of the subject taken in that case is that a witness may with perfect truth swear that a man who, to his knowledge, has been a receiver of stolen goods for years has an excellent character for honesty, if he has had the good luck to conceal his crime from his neighbours. It is the essence of successful hypocrisy to combine a good reputation with a bad disposition, and according to R v. Rowton[60] the reputation is the important matter. The case is seldom, if ever, acted on in practice. The question always put to the witness to character is: 'what is the prisoner's character for honesty, morality or humanity as the case may be, nor is the witness ever warned that he is to confine the evidence to the prisoner's reputation. It would be no easy matter to make the common run of witnesses understand the distinction".

---

55. In re : Perne Maita Rai, AIR 1938 Mad 591; see also Wahid Ali v. State, 6 Cr LJ 1 (witness need not be a man of immediate neighbourhood of the accused).
56. Englishman v. Lajpatray, ILR 37 Cal 760; Devbrata Shastry v. Krishna Ballabh, AIR 1954 Pat 84.
57. (1865) 34 L.J.M.C. 57.
58. 31 How. St. Tr. 99.
59. I.L. & C. 520.
60. I.L. & C. 520.

PART II

ON PROOF

CHAPTER III

FACTS WHICH NEED NOT BE PROVED

Fact judicially noticeable need not be proved.

S. 56. No fact of which the Court will take judicial notice need be proved.

Facts of which Court must take judicial notice.

S. 57. The Court shall take judicial notice of the following facts:—

(1) All laws in force in the territory of India;

(2) All public Acts passed or hereafter to be passed by Parliament of the United Kingdom, and all local and personal Acts directed by Parliament of the United Kingdom to be judicially noticed;

(3) Articles of War for the Indian Army, Navy or Air Force;

(4) The course of proceedings of Parliament of the United Kingdom, of the Constituent Assembly of India, of Parliament and of the Legislatures established under any laws for the time being in force in a Province or in the State;

(5) The accession and the sign manual of the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland;

(6) All seals of which English Courts take judicial notice: the seals of all the Courts in India, and of all Courts out of India established by the authority of the Central Government or the Crown Representative: the seals of Courts of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction and of Notaries Public, and all seals which any person is authorised to use by the Constitution or an Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom or an Act or Regulation having the force of law in India;

(7) The accession to office, names, titles, functions and signatures of the persons filling for the time being any public office in any State if the fact of their appointment to such office is notified in any official Gazette;

(8) The existence, title, and national flag of every State or Sovereign recognised by the Government of India;

(9) The divisions of time, the geographical divisions of the world, and public festivals, fasts and holidays notified in the official Gazette;

(10) The territories under the dominion of the Government of India;

(11) The commencement, continuance and termination of hostilities between the Government of India and any other State or body of persons:

(12) The names of the members and officers of the Court, and of their deputies and subordinate officers and assistants, and also of all officers acting in execution of its process, and of all advocates, attorneys, proctors, vakils, pleaders and other persons authorized by law to appear or act before it;

(13) The rule of the road on land or at sea.

In all these cases, and also on all matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference.

If the Court is called upon by any person to take judicial notice of any fact, it may refuse to do so unless and until such person produces any such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to do so.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope ... 598
2. Take Judicial Notice ... 599
3. "all laws in force in the territory of India" [Clause (1)] ... 599
   Notification ... 600
4. Customary law ... 602
5. Personal law [Clause (2)] ... 602
6. Articles of War [Clause (3)] ... 603
7. Legislative Proceedings [Clause (4)] ... 603
8. Clause (5) and First part of clause (6) ... 604
9. Seals [Clause (6)] ... 604
10. Accession of Office etc. [Clause (7)] ... 604
11. Existence and title of State [Clause (8)] ... 604
12. Division of time, World geographical divisions and public festivals etc. [Clause (9)] ... 604
13. Indian territories [Clause (10)] ... 605
14. Hostilities with Govt. of India [Clause (11)] ... 605
15. Members and Officers of Court [Clause (12)] ... 606
16. Rule of the Road and matters of public history [Clause (13)] ... 606
    (a) 'The rule of the road on land or at sea' ... 606
    (b) Matters of Public history etc. ... 606
17. Not exhaustive ... 607
    Judicial notice cannot be taken of ... 608
18. Price of land ... 609
19. Building regulations ... 609
20. Banks ... 609
21. Pay scales ... 609
22. Academic sessions ... 610
23. Educationsl System ... 610
24. Notorious Facts ... 610
25. Smuggling ... 610
26. Illegal immigration ... 611
27. Inaction ... 611
28. Propaganda by government ... 611
29. Satsangi ... 611
30. Gherao ... 611
31. Academic Distinction ... 611
32. Matters of common knowledge ... 611
33. Personal knowledge of the judge ... 612
34. Averment of applicant ... 612
35. F.I.R. ... 613
36. Evasion of Stamp Duty ... 613
37. Newspapers ... 613

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Part I of the Act deals with what facts may, and what facts may not, be proved in a civil or criminal case. Part II deals with the question of what sort of evidence must be given of a fact which has to be proved. Part-III shows the manner in which a fact in issue or relevant fact must be proved.

All facts in issue and relevant facts must be proved by evidence, either oral or documentary. To this rule there are two exceptions; (a) facts judicially noticeable; and (b) facts admitted.

Section 56 states that a fact judicially noticeable need not be proved, whereas Section 57 enumerates in clauses 1 to 13, the facts which have to be judicially noticed and which need not be proved. The penultimate paragraph in Section 57 states that in all the cases enumerated in clauses 1 to 13, and on matters of public history, literature, science or art, the Court may resort, for its aid, to appropriate books or documents of reference. The last paragraph of Section 57 states that it may refuse to take judicial notice of any fact, even if a person calls upon the court to do so, until such person produces may such book or document as it may consider necessary to enable it to take judicial notice.

In the cases of the facts dealt with by these sections, the Judge's belief in their existence is induced by the general knowledge acquired, otherwise than in particular proceedings before the Court and independently of the action of the parties therein. The meaning of the section will, however, be apparent, if we consider together with this section the last words of Section 57. What these two provisions really come to this. With regard to the facts enumerated in Section 57, if their existence comes into question, the parties who assert their existence, or the contrary, need not, in the first instance, produce any evidence, in support of their assertions. They need only ask the Judge to say whether these facts exist or not, and if the Judge's own knowledge will not help him, then he must look the matter up; further, the judge can, if he thinks proper, call upon the parties to assist him. But, in making this investigation, the Judge is emancipated entirely from all the rules of evidence laid down for the investigation of facts in general. He may resort to any source of information which he finds handy and which he thinks will help him. Thus he may consult any book or obtain information from a bystander. (MARKBY 49).

2. TAKE JUDICIAL NOTICE

This expression means recognition, without proof, of something as existing, or as being true. Judicial notice is based upon the very obvious reasons of convenience and expediency; and the wisdom of dispensing with proof of matters within the common knowledge of every one has never been questioned.

The expression "taking the judicial notice of law" means that the court is duty bound to find out the law and apply it to the facts of the case, even though the parties or their counsel fail to produce such law.[1]

"Judicial notice is the cognisance taken by the Court itself of certain matters which are so notorious, or clearly established, that evidence of their existence is deemed unnecessary. (STEPHEN, in the first two editions of the Digest, described these as "facts which need not be proved," but in later editions calls them "facts proved otherwise than by evidence.")[2]

3. "ALL LAWS IN FORCE IN THE TERRITORY OF INDIA" [CLAUSES (1)]

Under this clause the court is bound to take judicial notice of all laws in force in the territory of India.

The expression "All laws in force in the territory of India" has not been defined in the Evidence Act, or in the General Clauses Act, 1897; however, the expression "Indian Law" is defined in Section 3(29) of the General Clauses Act, 1897, as follows:—"Indian Law" shall mean any Act, Ordinance, Regulation, Rule, Order or Bye-law which, before the commencement of the Constitution, had the force of law, in any Province of India or part thereof, and thereafter has the force of law in any Part A State or Part C State or Part thereof, but does not include any Act of Parliament of the United Kingdom or any Order in Council, Rule or other Instrument made under such Act".

Article 13(1)(a) of the Constitution defines 'Law' as including "any Ordinance, Order, Bye-law, Rule, Regulation, Notification, Custom or Usage having, in the territory of India, the force of Law".

The term 'existing law' has been defined in Art. 336(10) of the Constitution thus: "Existing Law" means any Law, Ordinance, Order, Bye-Law, Rule or Regulation, passed or made before the commencement of this Constitution by any Legislature, Authority of person having power to make such Law, Ordinance, Order, Bye-Law, Rule or Regulation". It is pertinent to note that Art. 372 of the Constitution speaks of the continunance of "all the laws in force in the territory of India".

It was held by the Supreme Court that there is no material difference between an 'Existing Law' as defined in Art. 366(10) and "a law in force"; that the words "law in force, as used in Art. 372, are wide enough to include not merely a legislative enactment but also any regulation or order which has the force

---

1. Mazhar Ali v. Hakimuddin, AIR 1965 Pat 489; Shyamlal v. Munnilal, AIR 1972 Punj 199.
2. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 5 (para 1-11).

of law; that an order must be a legislative one and not an executive order before it can come within the definition of law.[3]

Order of the Governor General u/s. 94(3) of the Government of India Act 1935.[4]

In HALSBURY'S Law of England (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 100, page 73) it is stated: "They (the judges) are also bound to take notice of all Public Acts of Parliament, and of all Acts of Parliament whatever passed since the year 1850, unless the contrary is expressly provided in the Act in question. Government orders and statutory instruments are not judicially noticed unless, as is common, provision is made for them to be so noticed". The Court should take judicial notice of the Acts of the Parliament.[5]

Under our legal system and jurisprudence based on the Constitution, "law" is not limited to legislative enactments; all forms of delegated legislative power and all orders and notifications made and issued under statutory powers which are legislative in nature, amount to law, and judicial notice can be taken of them. A statutory order or notification will be legislative in nature if, in substance, it adds o, supplements, modifies or amends a statute, or exempts certain matters from its operation; that rules, regulations, notifications and orders, made or issued in the exercise of legislative power, mus be distinguished from the instruments bearing similar names but made in exercise of executive power. An order or notification, made or issued in exercise of non-statutory power, or in exercise of statutory power which is purely executive in nature will have no legislative content and will not amount to "law".[6]

Relying on notification under 71(1) of Telegraph Wires (unlawful possession of Act).[7]

The Bombay High Court has held that, in the absence of the authenticated copies of Bare Acts, legislations, rules and other statutory instruments having the force of law, the citizens cannot be expected to know the law and it would be difficult for the Courts to act upon the mandate of the Section 57(1) and 78. Appropriate directions were issued to the State and Union Governments and other authorities.[8]

Notification.—A notification issued under a specific provision in an Act of the legislature has the force of law as if made by the legislature itself.[9]

Notification issued by the President of India under Art. 258 of the Constitution, entrusting the functions of the Central Government, under the Land Acquisition Act 1894, to the Commissioners of Divisions in the State of Bombay, amounts the law.[10]

Similarly, a notification issued under Section 139 of the Bombay Prohibition Act, authorising the Government to exempt certain intoxicants has "the force of law as if made by the legislature itself".[11]

A notification under Section 27 of the Bihar and Orissa Excise Act of 1915, imposing a countervailing duty on foreign liquor was held to be "existing law" within the meaning of Article 305 of the Constitution.[12]

It was held that the notification under Section 4 of the U.P. Sales-tax Act, 1948, authorising the Government to exempt certain kinds of transactions from Sales-tax, had the force of law.[13]

---

3. Edward Mills Co. Ltd. v. State of Ajmer, 1955 SCR 735 at 746 : AIR 1955 SC 25.
4. State v. Gopal Singh, AIR 1956 MB 138 (FB); Shamlal v. Munnilal, AIR 1972 Punj 199; State v. Ramchandran, AIR 1977 MP 68 (FB); approving State v. Gopal Singh, AIR 1956 MB 138 (FB); State v. Gopalchand, AIR 1957 MP 145; and overruling Mathura v. State, AIR 1954 Nag 296; Mazhar v. Hakimuddin, AIR 1965 Pat 489.
5. Nityanand Sharma v. State of Bihar, AIR 1996 SC 2306 (para 18).
6. State of M.P. v. Ramchandran, AIR 1977 MP 68 (FB).
7. Lachmi Narain v. Union of India, AIR 1976 SC 714; Edward Mills Co. Ltd. v. State of Ajmer, AIR 1955 SC 25; Madhaorao v. State of M.B., AIR 1961 SC 298; Jayantilal Amaratlal v. F.N. Rana, AIR 1964 SC 648; Kailash Nath v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 790; Saraswati Industrial Syndicate Ltd v. Union of India, AIR 1975 SC 460. Overruling Mathuradas v. State, AIR 1954 Nag 296; State Bank of Travancore v. K. Vinayachandran, AIR 1989 Ker 302; State of H.P. v. Nilam Das, AIR 1952 HP 74.
8. Sanjeev M. Gorwadkar v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1997 Bom 303.
9. State of Bombay v. F.N. Balasara, AIR 1951 SC 318; State v. V.P. Enadeen, AIR 1971 Ker 193 (FB); State of M.B. v. Gopalsingh, AIR 1956 MB 138 (FB); overruling Pannalal v. State, AIR 1953 MB 84; Secy. Malabar Market Committee v. A.V. Bapputty, (1962) 2 Cr LJ 549 (Ker).
10. Jayantilal Amaratlal v. F.N. Rana, AIR 1964 SC 648.
11. State of Bombay v. F.N. Balsara, AIR 1951 SC 318.
12. Kalyani Stores v. State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1686.
13. Kailash Nath v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 SC 790.

A notification issued by the Government, fixing prices, is in the nature of a legislative measure.[14]

So are the Bye-laws formed by Market Committee u/s. 19 of Madras Commercial Crops Markets Act in exercise delegated power.[15] Orders relating to delimitation of constituencies amount to law, after the publication of the orders.[16]

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact of different municipalities levying on varying basis, some on the weight of the material and others on ad valorem basis, on the prices of goods.[17] Judicial notice has to be taken of the notifications published in the gazettee relating to acquisition of intermediary estates under Section 4 of the West Bengal Estates Acquisition Act.[18] State of the law prevailing at the time of passing of a provision can be taken note of by the courts while interpreting the expression "Charitable purpose".[19]

The expression "delegated legislation" includes even the so called "conditional legislation", for it has also the content, however small and restricted, of the law making power itself.[20]

The following are some instances of notifications or rules of which judicial notice was taken:

(i) The Army regulations and ordinances issued by the Government of India.[21]

(ii) Notification of the appointment of a Drug Inspector under Section 21, Clause (1) of the Drugs Act of 1940.[22]

(iii) A rule made under rule 225 of Printing Manual published by the Government of Madras providing for return of old and obsolete stamps to Government Press on receipt of new ones.[23]

(iv) A notification issued by the Government, declaring Malas to be socially and educationally backward class.[24]

(v) Rules of business, made under Art. 166(3) of the Constitution, or Statutory Rules, and certified copies thereof.[25]

(vi) Notification under the Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, issued by the Government, empowering the Municipal Commissioner to act as a Local Health Authority.[26]

(vii) A notification issued under Section 11(b) and Section 123(2) of the Customs Act.[27]

(viii) A notification relating to the orders of the Ruler of Gwalior State, published in various issues of the Government Gazette.[28]

(ix) Kalambandis of the erstwhile Gwalior State were in the nature of orders or regulations, having the force of law, and were continued under Art. 372 of the Constitution.[29]

---

14. Saraswathi Industrial Syndicate Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1975 SC 460.
15. Public Prosecutor v. Illur Thippayya, AIR 1949 Mad 469; Tek Chand v. Firm Amarnath Basheshardas, AIR 1972 Punj 46.
16. Meghraj v. Delimitation Commission, AIR 1967 SC 669.
17. Municipal Board of Abu Road v. Jaishiv, AIR 1988 SC 338.
18. Union of India v. Nihar Kanta Sen, AIR 1987 SC 1713.
19. Addl. Commer. of I.T., Gujrat v. Surat Art Silk Cloth Manufacturers Association, AIR 1980 SC 387.
20. Lachmi Narain v. Union of India, AIR 1976 SC 714.
21. Union of India v. Govindraj, 1962 Mys LJ (Supp) 254; Dhanpat v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 All 40.
22. Ramlagan Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1960 Pat 243.
23. 1969 Mad LW (Cri) 68.
24. Chaitram v. Sikinder Choudhary, AIR 1968 Pat 337.
25. Management of the Advance Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Gurudasmal, Supdt. of Police, AIR 1969 Del 330.
26. Food Inspector v. V. Velayudhan, 1987 Cr LJ 1137; See also State of Kerala v. V.P. Enaden, AIR 1971 Ker 193 (FB); Jamshedpur Notified Area Committee v. C.L. Mahton, AIR 1965 Pat 176; Abdulla Haji v. Food Inspector, (1967) 2 Cr LJ 1719 (FB)(Ker); Food Inspector Calicut v. Velayudhan, 1980 Ker LT 138 : 1980 Mad LJ (Cri) 505.
27. S. Nagarajan v. Vasanthakumar, 1988 Cr LJ 1217 (Ker).
28. Ramji Raja (Smt.) v. Puncham Singh, AIR 1959 MP 269.
29. Madhaorao Phalke v. State of M.B., (1961) 1 SCR 957 AIR 1961 SC 298.

4. CUSTOMARY LAW

In HALSBURYS LAWS OF ENGLAND (4th Edn., Vol. 17, Para 101, Page 74) it is observed: "The court will take judicial notice of usages which are embodied in the law merchant, and of commercial and other usages which have been proved sufficiently often in the courts of law".

The Privy Council held that when a custom or usage, whether in regard to a tenure or contract, or a family right, is repeatedly brought to the notice of the Court, of a country, the Court may hold that custom or usage to be introduced into the law without the necessity of proof in each individual case. It was observed: "Material customs must be proved in the first instance by calling witnesses acquainted with them, until the particular custom has, by frequent proof in the Courts, become so notorious that the Courts take judicial notice of them."[30]

The ordinary rule is that all customs, general or otherwise, have to be proved. But, when a custom has been repeatedly recognized by the Courts, it passes into the law of the land and the proof of it then becomes unnecessary, under Section 57(1) of the Act. In Punjab, the expression "general custom" has really been used in this sense, namely, that the custom has by repeated recognition by the Courts become entitled to judicial notice.[31]

Collaterals succeed in non-ancestrel property.[32]

The Muslim Law of pre-emption has long been judicially recognised, as existing among the Hindus in Bihar State.[33]

Regarding the custom of succession in Punjab, the right of an unmarried daughter in preference to the mother's right to her deceased son's property, as per para 23 of RATTIGAN'S DIGEST, was recognised by the Supreme Court. Similarly, the daughters are entitled to succeed the property of their father, and their mother is not so entitled.[34]

The customary right of an illegitimate son for maintenance in an impartible estate has been taken judicial notice of.[35]

When custom is recognised by Courts, it would form part of the law of the land. A right to drain off the surplus water through a particular vent or channel is in the nature of a customary right and judicial notice can be taken and proof of it need not be given.[36]

The Courts can take judicial notice of customary right of privacy prevailing in U.P. and Oudh; however, it was held that the party who pleads the custom of privacy should lead evidence to show that it is generally prevalent and commonly recognised in Kutch.[37]

A report made by an officer, containing customary law applicable to a particular community, is admissible in evidence.[38]

5. PERSONAL LAW [CLAUSE (2)]

For ascertaining the personal law of the Hindus the method adopted is by reference to an authoritative text and judicial decisions. Previously, the opinion of pandits also used to be taken, but

---

30. Effuah Amissan v. Effuah Krabah, AIR 1936 PC 147.
31. Ujagar Singh v. Jeo, AIR 1959 SC 1041, relying on Abdul Hussain Khan v. Mrs. Bibi Sona Dero, AIR 1917 PC 181; Gangadhara v. Suryarao, ILR 41 Mad 778 (PC); Bawa v. Tharo, AIR 1951 Simla 239; Sukhwant v. Balwant, AIR 1951 Punj 242; Jangir Singh v. Sucha Singh, ILR (1971) 2 Punj 133. Also see Gurubasawwa v. Irawwa, AIR 1997 Kant 87.
32. Hemraj v. Mathra Das, AIR 1952 Punj 177.
33. Jadulal Sahu v. Janki Koer, ILR 39 Cal 915 (PC).
34. Harchand Sing v. Mohinder Kaur, AIR 1987 P&H 138.
35. Chelladorai v. Varagunarama Pandiya; Chinathambiar, AIR 1961 Mad 42.
36. Kasi Vishwehwara Venkata Sastrulu v. Satyanarayana Murthy, (1964) 2 An WR 39.
37. Nihal v. Bhagwan, AIR 1935 All 1002; Baqridi v. Rahim Bux, AIR 1926 Oudh 352; Gokul v. Radho, ILR (1888) 10 All 358; Syed Habib v. Kamal Chand, AIR 1969 Raj 31; (custom in Rajasthan) Jivraj v. Keshavji, AIR 1952 Kutch 22.
38. Tula Ram Sah v. Shyam Lal Sah, ILR (1924) 49 All 848 : AIR 1925 All 648.

later, it was held by the Privy Council, in Musjid Sahidganj v. Gurudwar,[39] that the opinion of the Pandit is not now admissible. In Collector of Madurai v. Muthuramalings,[40] judicial notice was taken of the customs of different schools in respect of the law of adoption, by referring to sworn translation of Sanskrit works embodying Hindu Law.

The court is bound to take judicial notice under Section 57(1) of the Evidence Act, of Mohammedan Ecclesiastical Law.[41]

However, it was held that the parties setting up a custome under Muslim Law have to prove it when such a custom is pleaded.[42]

The court can take judicial notice of the fact that:

(a) Islam is an accepted religion of a large number of citizens in India and outside India.

(b) Koran is the basis religious text or scripture of Islam.

(c) The followers of Islam believe that Koran is of divine origin, being relation made by God to Muhammed, the Prophet of Islam.

(d) The Koran is considered to be Holy Book by the followers of Islam.[43]

6. ARTICLES OF WAR [CLAUSE (3)]

Courts would take judicial notice of the Articles of War contained in the Indian Army Act 46 of 1950, the Indian Navy Act 34 of 1934 reads with Act 29 and 300 Victoria C 109 and the Air Force Act 45 of 1950.

7. LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS [CLAUSE (4)]

The Courts are bound to take judicial notice of the prorogation of the Parliament and Legislatures and presume the regularity of those actions.[44] A proclamation of emergency, approved by the resolution of both Houses of Parliament can be taken note of judicially; its publication in the Parliament debates is sufficient, and there is no necessity for its publication in the official gazette.[45] Judicial notice has to be taken of such matters as the reports of the Parliament Committee and of such other facts as must be assumed to have been within the contemplation of the Legislature when an Act was passed, and it is legitimate to look at the state of law prevailing at the time of passing of any provision.[46]

The Court takes judicial notice of the law and customs of Parliament, the existence and extent. It is observed: "Courts will take judicial notice of the following signatures; the royal sign manual, and the signatures of the principal Secretaries of State; those of the judges of the superior Courts to any judicial or official document, of the judges and registrars exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction, and of persons before whom depositions are taken.

Notice will also be taken of the signatures of certain persons in respect of the winding up of companies, of the signatures of persons empowered to administer oath or do notorial acts abroad, and of signatures on various public and official documents. In addition, many particular documents are admissible in evidence without proof of the authenticity of the signature they bear."

Under this clause the Court is bound to take judicial notice of the name and signature of the District Magistrate, and there is no need for the prosecution to prove the same if it is contained in the order of sanction to prosecute a person.[47]

---

39. 1940 PC 16.
40. 1940 PC 16.
41. R. v. Ram Zan, ILR (1885) 7 All 461.
42. Gani Dar v. Raji, AIR 1961 J&K 31.
43. Chandmal Chopra v. State of W.B., 1988 Cr LJ 739.
44. State of Punjab v. Satyapal Dang, AIR 1969 SC 903 : (1969) 1 SCR 478.
45. Baburao Alias D.P. Samant v. Union of India, AIR 1988 SC 440; Swadeshi Cotton Mills v. Sales-tax Officer, AIR 1965 All 86.
46. Additional Commr. of Income-tax v. Surat Art Silk Manufacturing Association, AIR 1980 SC 387.
47. State of Pepsu v. Gurudevsingh Harnamsingh, AIR 1956 Pepsu 11; Dhanpat v. State of U.P., AIR 1960 All 40; Gayadin v. State of U.P., AIR 1958 All 39; State v. Janjgir Singh, AIR 1954 Pepsu 84; Raghbir Singh v. State of

The signature of an officer to a document showing that some of the officers under him are conferred certain powers privileges of each House of Parliament and the order and course of the proceedings therein and the clearly established privileges of the Crown, e.g., the privileges in relation to the Royal Palaces. (Halsburys' Laws of England 4th Edn., Vol. 17, page 73, para 100).

The debates in Parliament or the Legislative Councils are only evidence of what was stated by the speakers therein and are not evidence of the facts contained in the speeches.[48]

8. CLAUSE (5) AND FIRST PART OF CLAUSE (6)

These relate to the pre-independence period of the country.

9. SEALS [CLAUSE (6)]

A power of attorney given under the seal of a notary public comes within Section 57(6) for taking judicial notice.[49]

The expression "notary public" includes notary public of foreign countries also.[50]

A notification under Section 14 of the Notaries Act is not essential, and a presumption can be drawn regarding the genuineness of the seal of the notary public in the foreign country, though it is rebuttable.[51]

10. ACCESSION TO OFFICE ETC. [CLAUSE (7)]

In HALSBURY'S LAW OF ENGLAND (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 110, can be taken judicial notice of [matters stated in this Cl. (7)].[52]

Judicial notice shall be taken of the endorsement of sub-registrar about the execution of the documents, and his signature.[53] Judicial notice of the signatures of the Secretaries to the Government on any instrument can be taken, under this clause.[54] A true copy of a gazette notification can be received in evidence of the other party does not object to its admissibility as secondary evidence.[55]

11. EXISTENCE AND TITLE OF STATE [CLAUSE (8)]

All Courts must take judicial notice of the existence and title of every State or Sovereign recognised by the Government of India.

Section 84(2) of C.P.C. 1908 states: "The Court shall take judicial notice of the fact that a foreign State has or has not been recognised by the Central Government."[56]

12. DIVISION OF TIME, WORLD GEOGRAPHICAL DIVISIONS AND PUBLIC FESTIVALS ETC. [CLAUSE (9)]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND (4th Edn. Vol. 17, para 104, page 76) it is observed: "The almanac is established by statute, and was previously recognised by the common law. The Court will take judicial notice of the succession of years, months and days, of the years of each soverign's reign and the years in the calendar to which they correspond, and of the days of the week upon which the days in the calender fall.

Haryana, (1968) 70 Punj LR 318; Kaliprasad Upadhya v. Emperor, AIR 1954 Pat 59 : 23 Pat 475 (signatures of secretary to the Government) In re : Cholancheri Ayammal, AIR 1923 Mad 600 : 24 Cr LJ 403; Abdul Rahman v. State of Mysore, 1972 Cr LJ 406; (Signature of Collector of customs).

48. Strickland v. Bannia, AIR 1935 PC 34.
49. Performing R. Society Ltd. v. I.M.P. Restaurant, AIR 1939 Bom 347.
50. Jugraj v. Jaswant, AIR 1971 SC 761; National & Grindlay's Bank v. World Science News, AIR 1976 Del 263; Rajesh Wadhwa v. Dr. Sushma Govil, AIR 1989 Del 144; (sealed by the notary public in U.S.A.).
51. Rajesh Wadhwa v. Dr. Sushma Govil, AIR 1989 Delhi 144 supra.
52. Abdul Rahman v. State of Mysore, 1972 Cr. LJ 406; (Collector of customs under the Customs Act).
53. Radha Mohun Dutt v. Nripendranath Nandy, AIR 1928 Cal 154.
54. Kali Prasad Upadhya v. King-Emperor, AIR 1945 Pat 59 : ILR (1944) 23 Pat 475.
55. State v. V.P. Enadeen, AIR 1971 Ker 193 FB.
56. See Triccam Panachand v. Bombay-Baroda & Central Railway, ILR (1885) 9 Bom 244; Mighell v. Sultan of Jahore, (1894) 1 QBD 149.

An expression of time in any Act of Parliament, deed or other legal instrument means Greenwich meantime, unless otherwise specifically stated, but judicial notice is taken, if necessary, of the fact that a place lies east or west of Greenwich, and therefore has a time different from Greenwich time, although not of the times at which the sun rises and sets."

The phrase 'divisions of time' includes also Indian eras. Thus Samvat, Saka, Hindi Bengali, Hijari and Jalus eras, will be judicially noticed. The court is bound to take judicial notice of the holidays notified in the Official Gazette of any Local Government.

In regard to a suit filed on the re-opening day after the vacation for the Courts, it was held that the Court has to take judicial notice of the public holidays notified in the gazette, according to Order 7, Rule 6, C.P.C., and the Court would not be justified in dismissing the suit, though the limitation had expired for filing the suit during the vacation for the courts.[57]

It was held that the Court has to take judicial notice of corresponding dates of the Indian and Gregorian Calendars.[58]

Under Section 24 of the Limitation Act, all instruments should be deemed to be with reference to Gregorian Calendar.

The court can take note of the fact that all polling days were declared as holidays, to enable the employers to allow their employees to exercise their franchise.[59]

13. INDIAN TERRITORIES [CLAUSE (10)]

Under Art. 1(2) and (3) of the Constitution, the territory of India shall consist of the territories of the States and the Union Territories specified in the First Schedule and such other territories as may be acquired. Under Art. 2, Parliament may by law admit into the Union or establish new States. The Indian Courts must take judicial notice of the territories of the dominion of the Government of India, and if there has been a cession of territory they must take notice of that and they must do so independently of the gazette, which is part of the Session but only evidence of the cession.[60] The court can take judicial notice of the fact that by 19th December, 1961, the territories of Goa, Daman and Diu were completely liberated from colonial rule.[61] The Court can take note of whether a particular territory is part of India or not.[62]

14. HOSTILITIES WITH GOVT. OF INDIA [CLAUSE (11)]

In HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 106, page 78) it is stated: "Judicial notice will be taken of a state of war that exists or has existed between the United Kingdom and any other country; and, possibly, of a state of war existing between two foreign countries, where the fact is recognised by the British Government.

Judicial notice may also be taken of the circumstances in which a war involving the United Kingdom is or was carried on, but not of the date of any particular operation or engagement".

In HALSBURY'S LAW OF ENGLAND (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 157, page 115) it is also observed: "Where the Court acts upon a certificate by the secretary of state as to the existence or non-existence of a state of war, or as to the sovereign status of a foreign power or individual, the proper view is that it is not receiving evidence, but is taking judicial notice".

---

57. Tekchand v. Palto, AIR 1920 Nag 200; Gyansingh v. Budha, AIR 1933 Lah 558; Ramjiraja v. Puncham Singh, AIR 1959 MP 269.
58. Abdulla Shah v. Md. Yukub, 1938 Lah 558.
59. Inayathullah Khan v. Diwanchand Mahajan, AIR 1959 MB 58.
60. Masihan Saheb v. Chief Commissioner, Pondicherry, AIR 1962 SC 797; Damodar v. Deoram, ILR (1876) 1 Bom 367 (PC).
61. Cipriano Negredo v. Union of India, AIR 1969 Goa 76; Rev. Mons. Sebastlao Francisco Xavier dos Remedios Monteiro of Candolim v. State, AIR 1968 Goa 17.
62. Bhansali v. Union of India, AIR 1973 Raj 49.

15. MEMBERS AND OFFICERS OF COURT [CLAUSE (12)]

Under this clause, the court has to take judicial notice of the members and officers of the Court and of all advocates and attorneys who are authorised by law to appear before the Court. Under the Advocates Act 25 of 1961, legal practitioners have to get themselves enrolled in the High Court before they are allowed to practice.

Judicial notice was taken of the fact that in 1966-67 there had been for the District of 24 Paraganas in West Bengal a Public Prosecutor appointed generally.[63]

16. RULE OF THE ROAD AND MATTERS OF PUBLIC HISTORY [CLAUSE (13)]

(a) 'The rule of the road on land or at sea'.—This means the rule that horses and vehicles of all description should keep to the left side of the road. At sea, the rule is that ships and steam-boats, on meeting, should port their helms, so as to pass on the port or left side of each other; steam-boats should keep out of the way of sailing ships; and every vessel overtaking another should keep out of its way.

The Court can take note of what actually happens when 'bundh' is called out.[64]

(b) Matters of public history etc.—On all matters of public history, literature, science, or art, the court may resort for its aid to appropriate books or documents of reference. Thus ancient facts of public nature and published works of history can be relied upon for finding the meaning of a "math".[65]

The question whether a particular village was granted to a particular person by a former ruler is not a matter of public history within the meaning of this section.[66]

The section does not appear to have the effect of absolving the parties from any rules governing the proof of facts on which they deserve to rely. This section does not say how any fact, historical or otherwise, is to be proved by the parties, but gives the Court plenty to resort for its aid the appropriate books or documents of reference on matters of public history.[67]

Sources of common knowledge may be obtained by reference to Encyclopaedia, and the list of text books given therein, but details obtained from such sources require usually to be established by experts.[68]

Dictionaries may be referred, to ascertain the meaning of the words.[69]

The Courts can refer to articles in journals and books by authors acquainted with the expert matter of such articles, though they are living.[70]

The Court is entitled to refer to authoritative works for meaning of names and terms used in a particular religion, and dealing with the history and beliefs of that religion.[71]

There are innumerable instances where courts have referred to books and documents. A few examples of some of the books referred to by Courts are given below:—

'WILSON'S Glossary'.[72]

"Castes and Tribes of Southern India" by THURSTON.[73]

---

63. Raj Kishore Rabidas v. State of W.B., AIR 1969 Cal 321.
64. Bharat Kumar K. Palicha v. State (FB), AIR 1997 Ker 291.
65. Swami Harbans Chari Ji v. M.P., AIR 1981 MP 82.
66. Kishanlal v. Sohanlal, ILR (1955) 5 Raj 191 : AIR 1955 Raj 45.
67. Englishman Ltd. v. Lajpat Rai, ILR (1910) 37 Cal 760.
68. United States Shipping Board v. The Ship St. Albans' AIR 1931 PC 189.
69. The Coca-Cola Co. of Canada Ltd. v. Pepsi Cola Co. of Canada Ltd., AIR 1942 PC 40.
70. Madho Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1978 Pat 172 (FB).
71. Sardar Dayal Singh v. Tulasidar Tarachand, AIR 1945 Sindh 177.
72. Thakooranee Dassi v. Bisheshur, 3 WR 29 (FB).
73. Subramanya Chettiar v. Kumarappa Chettiar, AIR 1955 Mad 144.

RUSSELL'S Castes and Tribes and the Report of 1931 Census Vol. 20.[74]

History of 'Hydraulic Stowing in India' by N. BARRACLOUGH.[75]

Under the last paragraph, the Court is given the discretion to refuse to take judicial notice of any fact, unless the person calling upon the Court to take judicial notice of such facts produces such book or document as may be necessary to enable it to do so.[76]

17. NOT EXHAUSTIVE

The list of facts mentioned in the Section 57, of which the Court can take judicial notice, is not exhaustive. Indeed, the purpose of the section is to provide that the Court shall take judicial notice of certain facts, rather than exhaust the category of facts of which the Court may, in appropriate cases, take judicial notice. Recognition of facts, without formal proof, is a matter of expediency, and no one has ever questioned the need and vision of accepting the existence of matters which are unquestionably within public knowledge.[77]

STEPHEN in his DIGEST (7th Ed., Notes to XXVI to Article 58 at p. 179) has observed: "It may be doubted whether an absolutely complete list could be framed, as it is practically impossible to enumerate everything which is so notorious in itself, or so distinctly recorded by public authority that it would be sperfluous to prove it".

The following are some instances where the court took judicial notice of facts which do not fall within clauses 1 to 13:—

The Supreme Court held that the court can take judicial notice of the fact that many of the industrial workers are illiterate; hence, where a previously prepared signed statement of a witness was read over to the workmen and they were asked to cross-examine the witness then and there, it amounted to non-compliance with the rules of natural justice.[78]

Judicial notice can be taken of the low expectation of life of hill tribes.[79]

The Court can take judicial notice about: Communal disturbances or other disturbances in the country.[80]

Communal disturbances in 1947 after partition of India.[81]

Explosive ferment of mounting hatred on both sides of Radcliffe line—in 1947.[82]

Disturbances in Andhra Province after death of Potti Sriramulu in connection with formation of Andhra Province.[83]

Government of India's white paper on Punjab Agitation.[84]

Disturbances in August 1942.[85]

---

74. Nathulal Salikram v. Rangoba Narbad, AIR 1952 Nag 133; Mahadeo Dewanna v. Vyan Kamma Bai, AIR 1948 Nag 287; Meji Jiyibai v. Tabu, AIR 1933 Nag 274; Dshwari Prasad v. Raj Hari Prasadrai, AIR 1927 Pat 145.
75. Nimcha Coal Company Ltd. v. Sriniwas Goenka, ILR (1968) 2 Cal 402.
76. Public Prosecutor v. Thippayya, ILR 1949 Mad 371 : AIR 1949 Mad 459.
77. Onkarnath v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1977 SC 1108; Englishman v. Lajpatrai, ILR (1910) 37 Cal 376 : (1961) 2 Cr LJ 272; Jit Singh Mohar Singh v. Municipal Committee Khanna, ILR (1960) 1 Punj 803.
78. Keshoram Cotton Mills v. Gangadhar, AIR 1964 SC 708.
79. Pati Soura v. State, ILR 1970 Cut 1165.
80. Shivnath Rajram v. Union of India, AIR 1965 SC 1666.
81. Ishar Dass v. Smt. Chetni Bai (1970) 72 Punj LR 17; M/s. Khaki Mal Hukum Chand v. Great American Insurance Co. Ltd., New Delhi, AIR 1960 Punj 523.
82. Union of India representing Southern Railway v. M/s. Natabarlal Jayashankar, AIR 1963 Ori 66.
83. Salig Ram v. Emperor, AIR 1943 All 26; (disturbances in August 1942); Sukhdev Singh v. Union Territory of Chandigarh, AIR 1987 P&H 5 (FB).
84. Jubba Mallah v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Pat 58.
85. Kedar v. Emperor, AIR 1944 All 94.

Judicial notice should be taken of the fact that, after the partition, entry of any citizen of India into the territory now in Pakistan, is regulated by permits and visas, and of the fact that cash or produce could not be taken from one Dominion to another without insurmountable difficulties.[86]

Judicial notice was taken of the fact that the war with Pakistan started in June 1965.[87]

The Court can take judicial notice of the prices of commodities, general level of wages, and the appointment of Wage Board.[88]

In a case claiming adequate escalation in pension by the erstwhile Burma Shell Staff Pensioners, the Supreme Court, held that when the Burma Shell, which was having a pension fund, was taken over by the Government and when other similar companies having no fund granted a steep escalation of pension the court can take judicial notice of the loss of purchasing power of a rupee and whether the pensioners would be entitled to a hike in pension.[89] The Court can take judicial notice of the fact of inflation resulting in fall in purchasing power of money and consequent rising of cost of commodities for enhancing maintenance allowance.[90]

Court can take judicial notice of the enormous increase of the rents of buildings throughout the country, particularly in urban areas.[91]

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that many a time prescribed registers are not available and so they are kept in non-prescribed way and many a time even a case diary is not maintained in the prescribed form.[92]

Courts were justified in assuming, without formal evidence, that a railway strike was imminent on a particular day, and that a strike paralysing the civil life of the Nation was undertaken by a section of workers on another date.[93]

Court can take judicial notice of different ages of retirement in several services in the country.[94]

Late fee is generally charged from members who use the club premises beyond the schedule time. Such charge is usual in most of the clubs and judicial notice of the fact can be taken.[95]

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact, that the cancer ward attached to the Kamala Nehru Maternity Hospital is a separate hospital under the same management.[96]

The court can take note of the fact judicially that Harijans are socially, educationally and economically backward.[97]

Judicial Notice cannot be taken of :

(i) the fact whether a particular railway track which was laid on the land belongs to the Central Government.[98]

(ii) of a notification issued by the Textile Commissioner.[99]

---

86. Harisingh v. Dewani Vidhyawati, AIR 1960 J&K 91.
87. State of Assam v. Bansyidhar, AIR 1981 SC 1957.
88. Kamali Metals & Alloys Ltd. v. Workmen, AIR 1967 SC 1175.
89. Bharat Petroleum Management Staff Pensioners v. Bharat Petroleum Corp. Ltd., AIR 1988 SC 1407; Ramalakshmi Ammal v. Seeniya Pillai, AIR 1977 Mad 34.
90. Dhan Raj v. Kishni, 1998 Cr LJ 1312 (para 7) (Raj).
91. Rattam Arya v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1986 SC 1444; Oswal v. Subbaiah, AIR 1992 SC 184.
92. State of M.P. v. Dhirendra Kumar, AIR 1997 SC 318.
93. Onkar Nath v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1977 SC 1108.
94. Life Insurance Corp. of India v. S.S. Srivastava, AIR 1987 SC 1527.
95. State of A.P. v. K. Satyanarayan, AIR 1968 SC 825.
96. State of A.P. v. K. Satyanarayan, AIR 1968 SC 825.
97. Bishnu Charan Swain v. Secretary Works & Transport Department, 1974 Ori 115 (DB); relying on Chitra Ghosh v. Union of India, AIR 1970 SC 35.
98. Manik v. Divisional Superintendent, Central Railways, 1971 Mah. LJ 468.
99. Pannalal v. State, AIR 1953 M.B. 84; see contra Public Prosecutor v. Kamakshi Ammal, 1983 Mad. LJ (Cri) 617.

(iii) of a notification under the Forest Act, declaring an area as a reserved forest, as it is an executive character. Proof of it by production of Gazette, or its certified copy, coupled with proof of its publication in the Gazette, has to be given.[1]

(iv) it is not open to the court to take judicial notice of the Clearing House Rules.[2]

18. PRICE OF LAND

Increase in the price of urban and rural lands, after 1958, while valuing lands for compulsory acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act can be taken judicial notice of.[3]

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell land, or for damages for breach of contract, it was held that the court can take judicial notice of the rise in prices and the exact rate of the increase.[4]

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that the rise in the prices of lands near about a developing town is a continuous and unending phenomenon, while determining the market value.[5]

After the partition of Bengal in 1947, Judicial notice has to be taken of the increase in the land value in Calcutta.[6]

The court can take judicial notice of the general appreciation in land value and the general principles of assessment as recognised by the courts, while fixing the market value under the Land Acquisition Act.[7]

The court is entitled to take judicial notice of facts which are of general knowledge, e.g., that the land value differs in different towns in which municipalities are established, that different types of mills and factories required different types of buildings, and that the buildings of mills and factories are of different age, and the value of a building decreases with its age.[8]

19. BUILDING REGULATIONS

The Court can take judicial notice of the Building Regulations which are made in public interest and apply them to a case.[9]

20. BANKS

The practice of charging interest on the amount overdrawn is so common with the banks that the court is justified in taking judicial notice of that practice.[10]

21. PAY SCALES

In cases of claims for compensation under the Motor Vehicles Act, the court can take judicial notice of enhancement in pay scales and pension of Government servants, while awarding compensation to a deceased Government servant.[11]

---

1. Anthony v. Forest Range Officer, 1978 Mad. L.J. (Cri) 74 (Ker); Chako Pyli v. State, 1966 Ker. L.J. 76 : 1966 Ker. L.T. 102; Executive Officer v. M. Bharatan, 1967 Ker. L.T. 161.
2. Brahma Shumsher Jung Bahadur v. Chartered Bank of India, 1956 Cal 399 (Australia & China).
3. 83 Mad L.W. 621; Modi Spg. & Wvg. Mills v. Virendra, (1998) 5 SCC 718; Land Acquisition Officer, Revenue Devisional Officer v. L. Kamalamma, (1998) 2 SCC 385; State of M.P. v. M/s. Ahad Brothers, 1999 AIHC 3504 (paras 10 and 11) (MP).
4. Sau Shantabai v. Manak Chand Ratan Chand Raka, AIR 1988 Bom 82.
5. Puran v. State of Haryana, AIR 1986 Punj & Hariya 305. Also see Gulabi v. State, AIR 1998 HP 9.
6. Prabodh Chandra Mukherjee v. Pashupathi Mukherjee, (1967) 71 Cal W.N. 649; Mahmudabad Properties Ltd. v. Commissioner of I.T., 1971 Tax. LR 845 (Cal); (rise in price of lands between 1954 and 1961.
7. State of Orissa v. Dhunda Gram, AIR 1978 Ori 74.
8. Lokamanya Mills Barai Ltd. v. Barai Municipal Council, AIR 1968 Bom 229.
9. 3 ACES, Hyderabad v. Municipal Corporation of Hyderabad (FB), AIR 1995 AP 17 (para 24).
10. U.P. Union Bank Ltd. v. Dinanath Raja Ram, AIR 1953 All 637.
11. Bimalkumar Das v. Parijata Bewa, AIR 1987 Ori 146.

22. ACADEMIC SESSIONS

The court can take judicial notice of uncertainty about the commencement and termination of academic sessions.[12]

23. EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that the educational system in the State (here Bihar) has virtually crumbled and serious allegations are made frequently about the manner in which the system is worked.[13] The High Court can take judicial notice that the State Government alone cannot take effective measure for imparting education to the children of the country.[14]

24. NOTORIOUS FACTS

The court can take judicial notice of what are known as notorious facts. But the condition regarding communal disturbances in a particular State at a particular time is a matter of opinion and somewhat controversial. Controversial facts cannot be considered notorious facts. Judicial notice cannot be taken of such facts.[15]

The holocaust of 1950, on both sides of the border, and crossing thereof by a vast mass of humanity, leading to an agreement known as Nehru-Liaquat Ali agreement, are notorious facts which the court can take judicial notice of.[16]

Where communal feelings are exploited, violence would invariably erupt sooner or later, whether such violence is advocated or not. The courts are justified in taking judicial notice of such a notorious fact.[17]

The court can take judicial notice that Kohima in Nagaland is a disturbed area[18] or a certain area is terrorist-stricken.[19]

Court can take judicial notice that the Central Government is located at New Delhi.[20]

The court took note of the drought in the western part of Orissa, for three or four years.[21]

Information available as to who was Bhindranwale and what he stood for, can be taken judicial notice from the Government of India's White Paper on Punjab agitation.[22]

25. SMUGGLING

The court can take judicial notice of extensive smuggling of gold along the West Coast of South India.[23]

Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that Sambalpur district is a surplus district as regards rice, and that there was extensive smuggling from that district to the adjacent States such as Bihar and Central Provinces.[24]

---

12. Basanta Kumar Behera v. State of Orissa, AIR 1988 Ori 124.
13. Managing Committee of Rajo Sidheshwar High School v. State of Bihar, AIR 1996 Pat 19 (para 6).
14. Debasish Kar Gupta v. State of W.B., AIR 1999 Cal 300 (para 7).
15. Abida Khatoon v. State of U.P., AIR 1963 All 260; (condition in U.P. in Feb., 1950) Jay Engineering Wroks Ltd v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1968 Cal 407; Chait Ram v. Sikandar Choudhary, AIR 1968 Pat 337.
16. United Bank of India v. Narayan Chandra Ghose, (1970) 74 Cal. W.N. 150.
17. Md. Ishaq v. State of U.P., AIR 1957 All 782.
18. Masha Angami v. Govt. of Manipur, AIR 1968 Manipur 23.
19. Abdul Malik v. State of U.P., AIR 1994 All 376 (para 13).
20. P.N. Films Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1955 Bom 381.
21. Golaprai Jain v. Gouranga Meher, AIR 1969 Ori 266.
22. Sukhdev Singh v. Union Territory Chandigarh, AIR 1987 P&H 5 (F.B.).
23. Devichand Jestimall Co., Bangalore v. Collector of Central Excise, Madras, 1960 Mad 281.
24. Sheonath v. State of Orissa, AIR 1953 Ori 53.

26. ILLEGAL IMMIGRATION

The Court can take judicial notice of the wide spread of malaise of illegal immigration and the exploitation of the youngones by unauthorised recruiting agents. Judicial notice can also be taken of the tragedy which occurred on the night intervening 24th and 25th November, 1996 in which 280 immigrants including 170 Indians, who were being illegally ferried, met their watery graves on their journey from Malta to Cicily.[25]

27. INACTION

Where Agra Development Authority had an income of 20 lakhs only in 1993-94 from toll tax charged from the visitors to Taj Mahal, the Court can take judicial notice of its inaction in preservation of the Taj and the cleanliness of Agra city.[26] Judicial notice of inaction of Bihar Government in not imparting training to untrained primary school assistant teachers recruited three years ago was taken and time-bound direction was given to Government to ensure their training.[27]

28. PROPAGANDA BY GOVERNMENT

Propaganda by the State Government, calling upon the people to help it in finding out corruption and promising them protection against prosecution for being accomplices, can be taken judicial notice of by the Court.[28]

29. SATSANGI

Judicial notice has to be taken of the fact that there is a flourishing colony of Satsangi at Agra.[29]

30. GHERAO

Court can take judicial notice regarding Gheraos and that the attitude of the Government towards Gherao met with adverse reaction in many quarters.[30]

31. ACADEMIC DISTINCTION

The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that many blind persons have made a name for themselves and have acquired great academic distinctions.[31]

32. MATTERS OF COMMON KNOWLEDGE

The court is entitled to take judicial notice of matters with which men of ordinary intelligence are acquainted and to act upon its general knowledge of local affairs.[32] The mortgage of the properties of the Indian Iron and Steel Company with the World Bank is a fact of common knowledge and public history, and the judge can take judicial notice that a particular sale deed of the Company was in the custody of the World Bank.[33] Judicial notice can be taken of the fact that law and order situation has deteriorated over years and is fast worsening.[34] Where the question was as to the justification for dispensing with an enquiry u/s. 5-A of the Land Acquisition Act when acquiring land for a road bridge, it was held that the court can take judicial notice of the traffic congestion which is likely to create a tense situation when accidents occur.[35] The Supreme Court can take judicial notice that a majority of writ petitions are filed

---

25. M.D.K. Immigration Consultant, Chandigarh v. Union of India, 2000 Cr LJ 252 (para 12) (P&H).
26. M.C. Mehta v. Union of India, (1998) 8 SCC 711.
27. Ram Vijay Kumar v. State of Bihar, (1998) 9 SCC 227.
28. Public Prosecutor v. Audinarayana Chetti, AIR 1953 Mad 481.
29. Comr. of I.T. Lucknow v. Radhaswami Satsangh Sabha, AIR 1954 All 291.
30. Jay Eng. Works Ltd. v. State of W.B., AIR 1968 Cal 407.
31. Jai Shankar Prasad v. State of Bihar, AIR 1993 Pat 22 (para 11).
32. Madho Singh v. State of Bihar, AIR 1978 Pat 172.
33. ILR (1967) 2 Cal 604.
34. Shashi Nayar v. Union of India, AIR 1992 SC 395.
35. Alogsius (Lt. Col.) v. State of Karnataka, AIR 1992 Kant 241.

merely for obtaining interim orders.[36] The Ramayan is sacrosant to Hindus. Rama, Krishna, Brahma, Mahatma Gandhi, to mention only a few, are held in the highest esteem by them. These are matters of common knowledge and court can take judicial notice of them.[37] The Court may take judicial notice of the fact that in Haryana there has not only been green and white revolution but an industrial revolution also.[38] The Court can take judicial notice of the absence of judicial complexes and inconvenience caused to all. The Govt. should focus attention towards construction of necessary judicial complexes.[39] The Court can take judicial notice of the fact that ordinarily in certain cases one person looks after the case.[40]

Taking judicial notice of the scarcity of dwellings, the Calcutta High Court held that a dwelling house cannot be acquired without providing alternative accommodation.[41] The extent to which, and the process by which, an accurate topographic plan can be produced from a pictorial delineation of a scene are not matters of common knowledge, though such questions have long occupied attention of men of science.[42]

33. PERSONAL KNOWLEDGE OF THE JUDGE

The Supreme Court has held that in assessing the value of oral evidence, the judge is bound to call upon his experience of life.[43] A judge can rely on the information gained by him from the other cases which he has heard during his service.[44]

A judge cannot decide on taking cognizance of an offence, based on his personal knowledge.[45] The Andhra Pradesh High Court held that use of personal knowledge of facts, while judging a case, will be a travesty of justice.[46]

There is a difference between the personal knowledge of a judge as a private man and his knowledge as a judge; he can make use of his experience as a judge by taking judicial notice of facts transpiring in the court.[47] The judge cannot use knowledge of facts which came to him from other sources. A judgement based on such facts, other than legal evidence, would not be in accordance with law.[48]

The Madras High Court observed: "A judge must be allowed to use even his knowledge of concrete private facts, provided he mentions his knowledge to the parties, and they do not object to his deciding the case; and he must be allowed of course to use historical, scientific, political, or otherwise, in coming to his conclusion. The only restriction that should be imposed upon the judge is that he should not import knowledge obtained by mere rumour or hearsay of concrete facts with the particular case before him for arriving at a conclusion.[49]

34. AVERMENT OF APPLICANT

Where in a accidental claim petition involving the death of the victim, compensation was granted to the victim's wife and minor son but not to the applicant dependent aged mother, in appeal in absence of any material to the contrary, the Court took notice of the mother's averment and rectifying the award, granted compensation to her also.[50]

---

36. Asst. Collector of Central Excise v. Dunlop India Ltd., AIR 1985 SC 330.
37. Lalai Singh Yadav v. State of U.P., 1976 Cr LJ 98 (SB) (All).
38. Atam Prakash v. State of Haryana, AIR 1986 SC 859.
39. District Bar Association, Kurukshetra v. State of Haryana (FB), 1997 AIHC 3983 (para 16) Vol. 6 (P&H). The Court referred CW No. 10428 of 1995, Dt. 27-3-1996 (P&H).
40. Shivshankar v. Sarjeet Singh, 2001 AIHC 1131 (para 8) (MP).
41. Bamandas Mukerjee v. State of W.B., AIR 1985 Cal 159.
42. United States Shipping Board v. The Ship 'St. Albans', AIR 1931 P.C. 189.
43. Chaturbhuj Pande v. Collector of Raigarh, AIR 1969 SC 255.
44. Fazal Begum v. Hakim Ali, AIR 1941 Lah 22.
45. Chabilal Gurung v. Krishna Bahadur Grung, 1984 Cr. LJ 1433.
46. Seshareddy v. China, AIR 1958 A.P. 595.
47. Chattra Kumari v. Mohan Bikram Shah, AIR 1931 Pat 114.
48. Durgaprasad Singh v. Ram Dayal Choudhary, ILR 38 Cal 153.
49. Lakshmayya v. Sri Rajah Varada Raja Apparao Bahadur, ILR (1912) 36 Mad 168
50. Gowramma v. Nagappa, 1998 AIHC 1693 (para 3) (Kant).

35. F.I.R.

The fact whether the FIR was sent to the Public Prosecutor and the concerned Magistrate, must be proved like any other fact and is not a matter of which judicial notice can be taken.[51]

36. EVASION OF STAMP DUTY

The Court would not be justified in taking judicial notice of the practice of under valuation for evading stamp duty in the absence of any evidence, though the practice is prevalent.[52]

37. NEWSPAPERS

The facts stated in a newspaper are in the nature of hearsay and so inadmissible, unless the maker is examined, judicial notice of facts stated therein can also not be taken.[53]

Facts admitted need not be proved.

S. 58. No fact need be proved in any proceeding which the parties thereto or their agents agree to admit at the hearing, or which, before the hearing, they agree to admit by any writing under their hands, or which by any rule of pleading in force at the time they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings:

Provided* that the Court may, in its discretion, require the facts admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admissions.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle and scope	... 613	6. Admission of documents	... 617
2. Implied admission	... 615	7. Unstamped and unregistered	... 618
3. Admission must be clear and specific	... 616	8. At the hearing	... 618
4. Admission must be taken as a whole	... 616	9. Admission in criminal cases	... 619
5. Compromise	... 616	10. Court's discretion [Proviso]	... 619

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Admissions by parties before suit are dealt with in Section 17, et seq. This section deals with admissions at or before the hearing.

No proof need be given of facts which the parties or their agents agree to admit at the hearing, or which, before the hearing, they agree to admit by writing under their hands, or which, by any rule of pleading in force at the time, they are deemed to have admitted by their pleadings.[54]

The object of this provision is to save time and expense at the trial.[55]

Admissions which are contemplated under this section are:

(1) Admissions in the pleadings (Order VIII, Rule 5, C.P.C.) or by way of answers to the interrogatories (Order XI, Rule 22, C.P.C.).

(2) Admissions which can be implied from the pleadings.

(3) Admissions by way of agreement in writing before the hearing, or by giving notice to admit (Order XII, C.P.C.).

---

51. Birsingh v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 59.
52. Tata Chemicals Limited, Bombay v. Sadhu Singh, AIR 1994 All 66 (para 22).
53. Laxmi Raj Shetty v. State of Tamil Nadu, AIR 1988 SC 1274 at p. 1290 : 1988 (3) SCC 319. See also Amal Kumar Chatterjee v. State of U.P., 1999 AIHC 3901 (para 3) (All).
54. See Maung Po Kin v. Maung Shwe Bya, ILR (1923) 1 Ran 405.
55. John Over v. Muriel, AIR 1925 Bom 231.

(4) Admissions by a party or his lawyer at the time of hearing.

A Court, in general, has to try the questions on which the parties are at issue, and not those on which they are agreed. Admissions which have been deliberately made for the purpose of the suit, whether in the pleading or by agreement, will act as an estoppel to the admission of any evidence contradicting them.[56]

It is with the object of doing away with the necessity of proving documents or facts admitted, that admissions are obtained, and the party unreasonably refusing or neglecting to admit any documents or facts, when called upon to do so, may be ordered to pay the costs of proof. Where the defendant admitted in his written statement that his father was married to the plaintiff's mother according to Henga custom, he was not allowed subsequently to contradict it.[57]

The Supreme Court has observed: "Admission in pleading, or judicial admissions, admissible under Section 58, made by the parties or their agents at or before the hearing of the case, stand on a higher footing than evidentiary admissions. The former class of admissions are fully binding on the parties that made them and constitute waiver of proof. They by themselves can be made, the foundation of the rights of the parties. On the other hand, evidentiary admissions which are receivable at the trial as evidence are by themselves not conclusive; they can be shown to be wrong."[58]

When the execution of a document is admitted there is no need to prove the instrument.[59]

Admissions may be judicial admissions or extra-judicial admissions. Section 17 of the Act deals with admissions which are in the nature of extra-judicial admissions. They are binding on the party against whom they are set up, only to a certain extent, except in cases where they operate as, or have the effect of, estoppel, in which case they would be fully binding and may constitute the foundation of the rights of the parties.[60]

An admission in a pleading means an admission of an averment by the opposite party.[61]

When the defendant does not file any written statement, it does not amount to an admission of the facts stated in the plaint. Sir John Beaumont held that if there was no pleading of the defendant, it is obvious that it can contain no denial or no admission.[62]

But after the amendment of Order VIII, Rule 5, C.P.C. in 1976, adding clause 2 to Rule 4, on the failure of the defendant to file a written statement, the court can take that the allegations in the plaint are admitted by the defendant and pronounce a judgement.

Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or not stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted. The court may in its discretion require any fact so admitted to be proved otherwise than by such admission (O. VIII, R. 3, Civil Procedure Code). Where a document is not admitted in the pleadings but only at the trial in evidence, the document must be proved.[63]

In a case the mother of the minor children executed a sale in respect of a piece of land in persuant to an agreement for sale executed by the deceased father and one of the minor children, challenging the sale deed for want of Court's permission, as a witness admitted and there was a recital to that effect in the sale deed too that a small building left by their deceased father was reconstructed with the amount received from the impugned sale deed which fetched rent and the trial Court gave a finding to that effect adding that the rental so received was the only source of maintenance and education of the minor

---

56. Burjorji Cursetji Panthaki v. Mundherji Kuverji, ILR (1880) 5 Bom 143, 152.
57. Rasamani Das v. Patrabala Devi, AIR 1981 Gau 42.
58. Nagin Das v. Dalpat Ram, AIR 1974 SC 471; Nilkant Laxman Joshi v. Raghu Mahadu 1918 Bom 167.
59. Javerchand v. Pukhraj Swurana, AIR 1961 SC 1655; Narayana Raja v. Chawaraju, AIR 1968 SC 1276; Narayan v. Gopal, AIR 1960 SC 100; Nagabai v. Shamarao, AIR 1956 SC 593; Ajodhya Prasad v. Bhawanishankar, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB); Sundaram v. Rukmani, AIR 1975 Mad 83; Gopi Kishan v. Bajrang Lal, 1996 AIHC 4064 (paras 13 and 14) (Raj).
60. Ajodhya Prasad Bhargawa v. Bhawanishankar Bhargawa, AIR 1957 All 1 (FB); Abdul Aziz v. Mariyam Bibi, AIR 1926 All 710; John Over v. Muriel, AIR 1925 Bom 231.
61. Latufallah Khudabaksh Khan v. Md. Sidik, AIR 1946 Sind 117.
62. Shriram Surajmal v. Shriram Jhunjhun Wala, AIR 1936 Bom 285. See also Ross & Co v. Scriven, AIR 1917 Cal 269; Narinder Singh v. C M. King, AIR 1928 Lah 769; Gobind Gorki v. Baldeo Ram, AIR 1930 Pat 293.
63. Maung Wala v. Maung Shwe Gon, ILR (1923) 1 Ran 472.

children. The High Court upheld the finding and held that prior permission of the Court was not required. In such circumstances, the High Court's order remanding the matter to trial Court to record further evidence to prove that the sale proceeds were utilised as mentioned above was not sustainable.[64] Where the tenant admitted before the Court that there was a lease for a specified period on a monthly rental of the specified sum and the lease was admitted to be a valid lease in his written statement, he could not resile from that position.[65] Where the tenant filed objection to the notice and admitted its receipt, it need not be proved by producing oral evidence.[66]

2. IMPLIED ADMISSION

The Supreme Court has held that under Order VIII, Rule 5, C.P.C., the facts, if not admitted specifically, or by necessary implication or not stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted, except as against a person under disability.[67]

The doctrine of implied admission can only be invoked when a party on whom the burden lies, fails to state facts in support of his plea or when the facts specifically alleged by a party in support of his plea are not denied by the other party. Further, the doctrine of implied admission can be invoked only against a party who is under an obligation to allege certain facts. It cannot be invoked where there is express evidence to the contrary. The failure on the part of a party to discharge the burden which lies upon him, gives rise to an assumption against him.[68]

A general denial of the allegations does not relieve the plaintiff of the obligation to prove the essential facts.[69]

Where the allegations in a plaint are not controverted in the written statement, the allegations need not be proved.[70] When no case is put forward by the defendant in his written statement that the date of birth mentioned by the plaintiff in his plaint was wrong, the defendant cannot be allowed to dispute the correctness of the plaintiffs date of birth. The plaintiff is entitled to a decree on the basis of the admission of the defendant, where the original of a mortgage deed on foot of which a suit was brought which was admitted by the defendant was lost and the copy was not properly proved, it was held that there was no need to tender formal evidence regarding the loss of the original or the contents of the copy.[71] In an action for infringement of patent, the defendant admitted that the drug which he prepared and sold was the very drug in respect of which plaintiff's have obtained their patent, it was held that the facts admitted need not be proved.[72] Where in a suit for recovery of money, and the plaintiff relied on a letter written by the defendant to save the suit from the bar of limitation, the defendant simply stated that the suit is not saved by the letter from the bar of limitation, and did not deny the letter in his pleading, it was held that the letter must be taken as admitted and no proof need be given of the letter by the plaintiff.[73]

The Supreme Court observed:[74] "It is true that in divorce cases, under the Divorce Act of 1869, the court usually does not decide merely on the basis of the admissions of the parties. This is a rule of prudence and not a requirement of law. That is because parties might make collusive statements, admitting allegations against other, in order to gain the common object that both desire, for personal reasons. A decision on such admissions would be against public policy, and is bound to affect not only the parties to the proceedings but also their issues, if any, and the general interest of the society. Where, however, there is no room for supposing that parties are colluding, there is no reason why admission of parties should not be treated as evidence, just as they are treated in civil proceedings. The provisions of the Evidence Act and the Code of Civil Procedure provide for courts accepting the admissions made by

---

64. Thatchara Bros. v. M.K. Marymol, (1999) 1 SCC 298.
65. Rajendra Pratap Singh v. Rameshwar Prasad, (1998) 7 SCC 602.
66. Life Insurance Corporation of India v. Advani & Co., 2001 AIHC 421 (para 6) (All).
67. Mahendra Manilal Nanavathi v. Sushila Mahendra Nanavathi, AIR 1965 SC 364 : (1965) 1 SCJ 88, 793.
68. Manmohan Das v. Bahauddin, AIR 1957 All 575.
69. Hardayan Gorodia v. Gahgadhar, AIR 1963 Cal 500.
70. Bhawani Das v. The Kayestha Pesthashala Allahabad, 1977 All LJ 897; Rameshwar Dayal v. State of H.P., AIR 1954 HP 21.
71. Bahadur Shah v. Mulk Raj, AIR 1934 Lah 898; Hikmatullah Khan v. Abdul Axim Khan, AIR 1921 All 218; Mohd. Zafar v. Zahur Hussain, AIR 1926 All 741 Mad; Chuni Kaur v. Udai Ram, ILR (1883) 6 All 73.
72. Farbwerke Hoechst etc. v. Unichem Laboratories, AIR 1969 Bom 255.
73. Lakshminarayan v. Chinni Ramgirdharilal, ILR 41 Bom 89, Emperor v. Jaiwham Damkerji, AIR 1916 Bom 103.
74. Mahendra Manilal Nanavathi v. Sushila Mahendra Nanavathi, AIR 1965 SC 364 : (1964) 1 SCR 267.

the party and requiring no further proof in support of the facts admitted". In that case, the trial court based its finding on the admission of the wife and also other evidence that the child was conceived by the petitioner before the marriage. But the High Court, after reversing the finding, sent back the case to record a finding on the question whether the child was conceived after the marriage. The Supreme Court, held that the High Court was not right in remitting the case for a finding and that the court can base its decision on the basis of the admissions of the parties.

A party is not bound by an admission in his pleading except for the purpose of the suit in which he pleaded; that admission is not binding in any other suit or for all time.[75]

Where a party produces the previous admission of his opponent in writing, the fact admitted need not be proved by other evidence.[76]

3. ADMISSION MUST BE CLEAR AND SPECIFIC

The admission of a party in respect of a fact must be clear and specific, in order to dispense with the proof of it.[77]

In an earlier suit, when the present plaintiff was a minor, it was stated that the minor left the joint family with his mother. After attaining majority, the plaintiff filled a suit for the partition of the Joint Family property; it was held that the admission in the earlier suit was not binding, as it was not clear and specific, and the onus of proof of exclusion was on the opposite party.[78]

The admissions which are to be relied on must be sufficient to cover the entire claim of the plaintiff and relieve him of the necessity of relying on the document; if admissions are indefinite or insufficient to cover the entire claim, then the plaintiff has to prove his claim in the ordinary way by producing the original document or its copies.[79]

The pleading of the party should not be construed strictly.[80]

4. ADMISSION MUST BE TAKEN AS A WHOLE

SIR BARNES PEACOCK, in a Full Bench Case in Poolin Peharee v. Watson & Co., (9 Suth. W.R. 190 (F.B.)), reiterating the principle announced by him in the earlier case reported in Sooltan Ali v. Chand Bibi, (9 Suth. W.R. 130) held that, while the court of law in entitled to accept a part of the evidence of a witness and to reject another part, a pleading cannot be dissected but must be taken or left alone, as a whole; that when a party in a written statement made certain admissions favourable to the plaintiff but denied other fact even though they were favourable to him, and asserted other facts which were unfavourable, the plaintiff, if he wanted to avail himself of the admissions, had to take not only the first set of facts as truly stated but also the second set of facts.[81]

Where the defendant admitted his thumb mark on the Khata, but stated that it was obtained by exercise of undue influence, it was held that it was not possible to spell out any admission of liability on the part of the defendant, and as the admission was qualified, it was not sufficient to fasten the liability on the defendant.[82]

5. COMPROMISE

When both parties come before the court and are agreed in stating that the suit has been adjusted, then the court has no option (except perhaps an inherent power to prevent its proceedings from being

---

75. Ramabai Shrinivas v. Govt. of Bombay, AIR 1941 Bom 144.
76. Ajodhya Prasad Bhargawa v. Bhavanishankar Bhargawa, AIR 1957 All 1 (F.B.).
77. Marudanayagam Pillai v. Sola Pillai, AIR 1965 Mad 200; Ajodhya Prasad Bharghawa v. Bhavani Shanker Bhargawa, AIR 1957 All 1 (F.B.).
78. Marudanayagam Pillai v. Sola Pillai, AIR 1965 Mad 200.
79. Peareylal v. Kunwar Hiradevi Rani, AIR 1941 All 150.
80. Bharat Fire & General Insurance Ltd. v. Parameshwari Prasad Gupta, AIR 1968 Del 68.
81. See also M.M. Nanavati v. Sushila, AIR 1965 SC 364 : Matabhoy Mulla v. Mujji Haridas, AIR 1915 PC 2 : 42 I.A. 103, 109; Calcutta National Bank Ltd. v. Rangarom Tea Co. Ltd., AIR 1967 Cal 294; Fateh Chand Murlidhar v. Juggilal Kamlapati, AIR 1955 Cal 465; Gangaram v. Hetram, AIR 1965 Raj 47.
82. Gangaram v. Hetram, AIR 1965 Raj 47.

used to work substantial injustice) but to record it[83] but this section would not apply where the alleged compromise was found to have been reached after passing of the order by the Court and thus the Court's order was not based on the alleged compromise.[84]

Where the parties entered into a compromise, there is an express or implied admission of the facts concerned in the proceedings, by either party, and if the court is satisfied about the existence of a statutory ground for eviction, the court may pass a decree for eviction on the basis of the compromise. A consent decree for possession, based upon a compromise in a previous case and which showed the existence of a statutory ground of eviction, can take the shape of evidence or an admission which is the best proof of facts and can be made the foundation of the rights of parties.[85]

From the compromise incorporated in the decree, the court's satisfaction about the existence of statutory ground for eviction, can be presumed.[86]

If an agreement of discharge or satisfaction be admitted in the pleadings, and hence no question of proof by oral or documentary evidence arises by virtue of this section, such compromise cannot be said to be inadmissiable for want of registration.[87]

6. ADMISSION OF DOCUMENTS

Formal proof of a document, even when it is required to be proved in a certain way (e.g., by calling the persons who have attested it. see Section 68, infra) may be waived by any of the parties whose interest it may affect, although such waiver does not affect the legal character of the document or its validity.[88]

In the case of a will, where its execution or attestation, is not in dispute, there is no necessity to comply with the requirement of calling at least one attesting witness.[89]

Where a will was referred to in a document the execution of which was admitted it was held that the admission did not extend to the execution of the will. The attestation of the will was not proved and hence it was held that execution of the will could not be held to be proved.[90] Where the plaintiff himself accepted the execution of the will but questioned its legal validity in respect of certain properties, Section 58 would be applicable and not Section 68.[91]

Where a tenant admitted the receipt of notice of determination of tenancy but alleged that the notice was bad in law as, instead of the copy of the original, the copy made out from the copy of the notice only had been filed by the landlord, it was held that the burden lay on the tenant to prove the invalidity of the notice, and he should have filed the original notice which he had received to substantiate his point that the notice was bad in law.[92]

When a document is marked on admission, without reservation, the contents are not only evidence, but are taken as admitted and cannot be challenged; but, where documents are marked on admission, dispensing with formal proof, the contents are evidence but the party admitting is free to challenge the contents.[93]

The admission of a document is admission of facts contained therein.[94]

---

83. Surendra Nath v. Tarubala dasi, 1930 PC 158;' Md. Azizullah Khan v. Md. Noorullah, Khan 1930 Nag (FB).
84. Jiria Devi v. Chhatiya Devi, AIR 2000 SC 3542 (para 6).
85. Nagindas v. Dalpat Ram, AIR 1974 SC 471, Sita Kueri v. Basisth Narain, AIR 1985 Pat 158.
86. Digambar Narayan v. Gajanan Laxman, ILR 1977 Bom 2482 : (1976) 78 Bom LR 252.
87. Ramchandra Sau v. Kailashchandra Patra, (1931) 58 Cal 532.
88. Baijanath Singh v. Mussammat Biraj Kuer, ILR (1922) 2 Pat 52 : AIR 1922 Pat 514; Arjun Sahu v. Kelai Rath, ILR (1922) 2 Pat 317.
89. Thayyullathi Kunhikanan v. Kalliani, AIR 1990 Ker 226 (DB).
90. Purnabai v. Ranchoddas, AIR 1992 AP 270.
91. Valluri v. Kopparthi, AIR 1994 AP 284 (paras 9 and 10), reversing AS No. 2259/86 Dt. 7-6-1990 (AP). See also Narendra Kumar v. Vishnu Kr. Nayyar, AIR 1994 Del 209 (para 9).
92. Manikant Tiwari v. Baburam Dixit, AIR 1978 All 144.
93. Lionel Edwards Ltd. v. State, AIR 1967 Cal 191.
94. Sitaram Motilal v. Santaru Prasad, AIR 1966 SC 1697; Lionel Edwards v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1967 Cal 191.

Where a consent is given by a party only to exhibit a document, the consent does not amount to an admission of its contents, and the party has a right to show by cross-examination that the document is not genuine.[1]

A document which is not a public document, or is not admitted, cannot be exhibited and looked into unless it is proved by oral evidence or otherwise.[2]

In a mortgage suit, on the basis of the mortgage executed by the Karta of a Hindu Joint Family on behalf of all the members including minors, when the Karta admitted execution, it was held such admission would not relieve the mortgagee of the necessity to prove its execution against the minor; though the minor is liable to discharge the debt as the debt was incurred for family necessity.[3]

Where the execution of a gift deed was admitted in the written statement and the document was marked with the consent of the parties, the contents of the said document need not be proved.[4]

7. UNSTAMPED AND UNREGISTERED

Even though execution of the document is admitted in the pleading, no relief can be granted on the basis of the admission when the document is insufficiently stamped, in view of the bar under sec 35 of the Stamp Act as it would amount to acting upon an unstamped document.[5]

However the Supreme Court held that once a document was marked as an exhibit and the trial proceeded, the document cannot be challenged on the ground of improper stamp.[6]

In a case on the basis of a registered mortgage deed for recovering an amount, the defendant pleaded an agreement modifying the terms of the written contract under the mortgage deed, for taking a lesser sum, than was due. It was held in the case that, as the subsequent agreement modifying the terms of the written contract has to be proved, oral evidence is not admissible under proviso 4 to Section 92 of the Act. However, if the agreement is admitted by the other party, then the court is not precluded from acting upon such agreement under Section 58, by dispensing with the proof of the agreement.[7]

Where in a suit filed on the basis of a document inadmissible for want of registration, the defendant admitted the execution of the document, but denied that the suit property was conveyed to the plaintiff, under it, it was held there was no admission as to contents of the document and the suit has to fail in the absence of the original.[8]

Where a sale deed of immovable property worth more than Rs. 100 was unregistered, it was held that as the defendant had admitted the sale deed in the pleading, no further proof is required under Section 58, and Section 91, does not come into play.[9] In a case where a party admitted the document but pleaded its invalidity for want of registration, it was held that such admission can not be used to bind the party who has made an admission only of the genuineness of the document.[10]

8. AT THE HEARING

The Privy Council, in Madhusudan v. Chandrabati,[11] held that the statement or the notes of the presiding judge at the trial, whether it be in a criminal or civil case, are conclusive as to what had taken

---

1. Janjay Cotton Co v. M/s. Omprakash, AIR 1973 Bom 40.
2. Satish Mohan Bindal v. State of U.P., AIR 1986 All 126.
3. Nageshwar Prasad v. Bachhu Singh, AIR 1919 Pat 411; Brahmanand v. Kanduri Charandas, AIR 1959 Ori 125.
4. Meda Rama Krishna Reddy v. Nainar Nammasivayya Prabhakar Reddy, 1996 AIHC 3946 (para 10) (AP) distinguishing V.A.A. Nanar v. A. Chettiar, AIR 1972 Mad 154; Purushothama Reddias v. Perumal, AIR 1972 SC 608 and A.V.S.Perumal v. Vadivelu Asari, AIR 1986 Mad 341.
5. Dewan Chand Barbar v. Jay Pee Finance Corporation AIR 1977 J&K, 61; Ylsodammal v. Janaki Ammal; AIR 1968 Mad 294 overruling Alimane Sahibna v. Subbarayudu, AIR 1932 Mad 693; Ponnuswami Chettiar v. Kailasam, AIR 1947 Mad 422; and following Achyuta Ramana v. Jagannathan, AIR 1933 Mad 117; Bishnu Kala v. Bishnu Maya, AIR 1980 Sikkim 1; (Unregistered mortgage deed) Chenabasapa v. Lakshman Remachandra, ILR (1894) 18 Bom 639; Sohanlal v. Raghunath, AIR 1934 Lah 606.
6. Pukhraj Surana v. Jayer Chand, AIR 1961 S.C. 1655; reversing Pukhraj Surana v. Jayer Chand, AIR 1957 Raj 47.
7. Mallappa v. Malum Naga Chetty, ILR 42 Mad 41 (FB) : AIR 1919 Mad 833.
8. Jadavrai Lalji v. Jadvji Bapubhai, AIR 1951 Kutch 91.
9. Ganda Singh v. Bhan, AIR 1923 Lah 310.
10. Shriram Sardarmal v. Gourishankar, AIR 1961 Bom 136.
11. AIR 1917 PC 30.

place at the trial; neither the affidavits of by-standers nor of jurors, nor the notes of the counsel, nor of shorthand writers are admissible, to controvert the notes or the statement of the judge.[12]

Where the parties, counsel admitted the copy of the sale deed of his client, it was held that there was no necessity to summon the original sale deed, or to seek permission of the court to lead secondary evidence to make it admissible in evidence.[13]

9. ADMISSION IN CRIMINAL CASES

In STEPHEN'S DIGEST (Art. 60) it is stated: "The present section appears to allow an accused person to admit at the trial such facts as he pleases to admit." The Madras High Court held that, except the plea of guilty by the accused, other admissions dispensing with proof are not allowed in the criminal trial.[14] It is not in accordance with the usual practice to accept a plea of guilt which would have the natural consequence of a sentence of death on the accused.[15]

Admissions or consent of an advocate for dispensing with proof are not binding on the accused, to his prejudice.[16] In a criminal case, the lawyer has no implied authority to make admissions against the accused, though the accused is entitled to have the benefit of the plea set-up by the lawyer.[17]

Any admission by an accused about the execution of a document, whether filed in the form of a written statement, or in answer to the question under Section 342, Cr. P.C. (old = 313 New Cr. P.C.) cannot be utilised to fill up a gap in the evidence of the prosecution, and it would not relieve it of the necessity of proving the document.[18]

However, in a case of detaining a married woman with a criminal intent, it was held that the statement of the accused under Section 313, Cr.P.C., admitting that the woman was married, can be taken into consideration under Section 58[19]

10. COURT'S DISCRETION [PROVISO]

The proviso to this section gives ample power to the court to exercise its discretion, requiring the parties to prove these facts though they are admitted in the proceeding. When the court is of the opinion that an admission was obtained by fraud or on any other ground, it can, in the exercise of its discretion, under the proviso, require the proof of the facts otherwise than by admission.[20]

In a suit for ejectment, the defendant did not deny the title of the plaintiff, but stated that he was not liable to be ejected. The trial court did not frame any issue but ordered ejectment. The High Court, on appeal, held that, in spite of the law of non-traverse, in view of the proviso to Order VIII, Rule 5, C.P.C., it is the duty of the court to determine the title of the plaintiff by framing an issue, to meet the ends of justice, and remanded the case to the lower court.[21]

---

12. R v. Pestonji, (1873) 10 Bom H.C.R. 75; Venkatesayya v. Md. Ghouse, AIR 1944 Mad 450; Nagabhushanam v. Jagganaiakalu, 49 M.L.J. 671 : AIR 1925 Mad 1031.
13. Bhagawan Singh v. Kalu, ILR (1978) 2 Punj 15.
14. Raja Gopala v. Tirupathia Pillai, AIR 1926 Mad 426.
15. Hasaruddin v. Emperor, AIR 1928 Cal 775; Laxmaya v. R, 19 Bom LR 3561.
16. Bansilal v. R, AIR 1928 Bom 241; In re : Rangappa, ILR (1936) 59 Mad 349 : (proof of postmortem report).
17. Ngaba Sein v. R, AIR 1936 Rang 1; Trikam v. State, AIR 1969 Goa 69.
18. Mohideen v. Emperor, ILR (1904) 27 Mad 238; Emperor v. Chinnappayan, ILR (1906) 29 Mad 372; Jeremiah v. Vas, ILR (1912) 36 Mad 457; Basanta v. Queen-Empress, ILR 26 Cal 49; Hardevi Malkani v. State, AIR 1969 All 423; Aunavi v. State, AIR 1961 Mad 851; S.C. Mitter v. State, AIR 1950 Cal 435.
19. Sonu Pujari v. Arjun Bissoyi, ILR (1980) 1 Cut 251.
20. Oriental Life Assurance Co. v. Narasimha, ILR 25M 183 at 205 : 11 M.L.J. 379; See also Muniyappa v. Vellachami, 1918 Mad, W.N. 853.
21. Biswanath Das v. Debiprosad Paul, AIR 1978 Cal 533; following Satyes v. Manmohini, AIR 1914 Cal 842.

CHAPTER IV

OF ORAL EVIDENCE

Proof of facts by oral evidence.

S. 59. All facts, except the [1][contents of documents or electronic records], may be proved by oral evidence.

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000 PROOF OF FACTS BY ORAL EVIDENCE

The insertion of the words 'electronic records' by the above mentioned Act puts them in the purview of exceptions to be proved by oral evidence.

2. PRINCIPLE

Oral evidence has been defined by the Act to be all statements which the Court permits or requires to be made before it by witnesses in relation to matters of fact under inquiry (Section 3). All facts except the contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence. This section is not happily worded. Contents of documents may be proved by oral evidence under certain circumstances, viz., when evidence of their contents is admissible as secondary evidence.

Where a fact may be proved by oral evidence, it is not necessary that the statement of the witness should be oral. Any method of communicating thought, which the circumstances of the case or the physical conditions of the witness demand may, in the discretion of the court, be employed. Thus a deaf-mute may testify by signs, by writing, or through an interpreter. So where a dying woman who was conscious, but without power of articulation, was asked whether the defendant was her assailant, and, if so, to squeeze the hand of the questioner, the question and the fact of her affirmative pressure were held admissible in evidence.[2] A woman whose throat had been cut was unable to speak owing to the nature of the wound. She was fully conscious and able to understand what was said to her, to make signs and to nod her head slightly. She was asked whether it was the accused who had cut her throat, and she nodded her head. She died afterwards. It was held that evidence as to signs made in answer to questions put to her was admissible.[3]

Oral evidence, if worthy of credit, is sufficient, without documentary evidence, to prove a fact or title. However, documentary evidence will prevail over oral evidence.[4]

It is a cardinal rule of evidence that, where written documents exist, they must be produced, as being the best evidence of their own contents.[5] Where a lease was not reduced to writing, oral evidence to prove the same was held to be a primary evidence.[6]

Where oral testimony is conflicting, much greater credence is to be given to men's acts than to their alleged words, which are so easily mistaken or misrepresented.[7] Where there was contradictory oral evidence as to who took the deceased to hospital, the accused was given benefit of doubt.[8] The whole testimony of the witness, swearing in favour of one party at one time and after some time in favour of the

---

1. Substituted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).
2. Queen-Empress v. Abdullah, (1885) 7 All 385 FB
3. Chandrasekera alias Alisandiri v. The King, AIR 1937 A.C. 220, 39 Bom LR 359; For the meaning of 'Evidence', 'Proved' see commentary on Section 3 of this Act.
4. V.S. Nagaraja Shetty v. M.N. Krishna, 1996 AIHC 2904 (para 8) (Kant).
5. Dinomoyi Debi v. Roy Luchmiput Singh, (1879) 7 I.A.8.
6. Kashiram v. State, AIR 1996 MP 246 (para 10).
7. Meer Usudulah v. Mussumat Beeby Imaman, (1836) 1 MIA 19, 42, 43.
8. Ravirajan v. State, 1998 Cr LJ 3086 (para 6) (Mad).

other party in the same proceedings, was liable to be rejected.[9] In cases of contradictions in the oral testimony of witnesses, the court has to look to the documentary evidence, in order to see on which side the truth lies.[10]

Before acting upon the evidence of a witness, the credibility of the witness has to be tested, both intrinsically and extrinsically, as perjury is rampant.[11]

When the question is about the service of a notice, proof of its contents, along with proof of its issue and service, has to be established. About the contents of the notice, there cannot be any oral evidence. They can only be proved either by primary evidence or by adducing secondary evidence under Section 61. Under Section 63(5), secondary evidence can be given by oral accounts of the contents of the notice by some person who had himself seen it. So far as the proof of issue and service are concerned, those facts can be proved by oral evidence.[12]

Where goods sent by rail at owners' risk rate, were short delivered, it was held that to show short delivery the consignee has to produce a certificate obtained under Section 74-C(2) of the Railways Act, and the oral statement to that effect is inadmissible.[13] Oral evidence regarding possession was not relied upon where the documentary evidence and the written statement of the Tahsildar showed that the petitioners were never in continuous possession of the land in dispute.[14]

The word 'contents' in Sections 59 and 61, leaves no room for doubt that, when a document is proved in a manner laid down in the Evidence Act, the contents of that document are also proved. To require that the writer of the document should be called to give evidence, is to import in regard to documentary evidence, a rule laid down in Section 60 which applies only to oral evidence. However, when the contents of a document contain some matter which may be hearsay, that matter cannot be said to be "contents of the document"[15]

In a case, the question was whether rexine bearing railway marks seized from the accused was of the railway stores; it was held that the seized rexine was a 'document' within Section 59 of the Evidence Act, and that proof of it by secondary evidence was governed by Sections 64 and 65 of the Act.[16]

The effect of Sections 59, 61, 63(5) and 65 read together, is that the contents of a lost document may be proved by oral evidence, when such evidence is admissible as secondary evidence.[17]

Oral evidence must be direct.

S. 60. Oral evidence must, in all cases whatever, be direct; that is to say—if it refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it;

if it refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it;

if it refers to a fact which could be perceived by any other sense or in any other manner, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he perceived it by that sense or in that manner;

if it refers to an opinion or to the grounds on which that opinion is held, it must be the evidence of the person who holds that opinion on those grounds:

Provided that the opinions of experts expressed in any treatise commonly offered for sale, and the grounds on which such opinions are held, may be proved

---

9. Vaidhya Bal Krishan v. Dist. Magistrate, Jodhpur, 1998 AIHC 3260 (para 19) (Raj).
10. Ramdhandas v. Ramkishondas, AIR 1946 PC 178; Regarding appreciation of oral evidence see commentary on Section 3.
11. Mohanth Bhagawan v. G.N. Bhagat, AIR 1972 SC 814.
12. Arunkumar v. Union of India, AIR 1964 Pat 338; a case of notice under Section 7. Administration of Evaquee Property Act of 1950.
13. Union of India v. Ramkumar Agarwala, AIR 1967 Pat 447.
14. Mohammad Rahim v. State of Rajasthan, 2000 AIHC 1533 (para 7) (Raj).
15. Bhima Tima Dhotre v. The Pioneer Chemical Co. : AIR 1968 Mah. LJ 879 (1968) 70 Bom. LR 683.
16. A.K. Yadav v. State of Bihar, AIR 1973 Cr. LJ 756 (Pat).
17. Fuljari Lal v. Ramsarup, AIR 1953 MB 177.

by the production of such treatises if the author is dead or cannot be found, or has become incapable of giving evidence, or cannot be called as a witness without an amount of delay or expense which the Court regards as unreasonable:

Provided also* that, if oral evidence refers to the existence or condition of any material thing other than a document, the Court may, if it thinks fit, require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 623
2. Hearsay ... 623
3. General ... 627
4. Facts which could be seen ... 627
5. Facts which could be heard ... 627
6. Facts which could be perceived by any other sense ... 628
7. Opinion ... 628
8. Opinion expressed in any treatise [Proviso 1] ... 629
9. Evidence regarding any material thing [Proviso 2] ... 630
10. Circumstantial evidence ... 630

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section states that oral evidence must be direct in all cases. What is direct evidence is also indicated by saying that if the evidence refers to a fact which could be seen, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he saw it, and, if the evidence refers to a fact which could be heard, it must be the evidence of a witness who says he heard it. Similarly, in regard to a fact that can be perceived by any other sense or manner, the witness should say that he perceived it. If the evidence refers to an opinion, he should say that he holds that opinion on certain grounds. In the case of opinion of experts in any treatise, it can be proved by production of that treatise. If the evidence refers to existence of any material things, other than a document, the Court, if it thinks fit, may require the production of such material thing for its inspection.

This section, subject to the proviso, excludes opinions given second-hand. The use of the word 'must' in the first clause of the section imposes a duty on the court to exclude all oral evidence that is not 'direct', whether the party against whom it is tendered objects or not.[18]. The word 'direct' is opposed to mediate or derivative or 'hearsay'.

Where the documentary evidence which could have been available was not produced, the plaintiff could not rest his case on oral evidence which was against the record produced by the defendants.[19] Where a plaintiff proved his case through his son who did not produce the general power of attorney executive by his father in his favour, the son's evidence was rejected.[20]

This section is based on the principles of 'Best Evidence'. It is a cardinal rule of evidence that the best available evidence should be brought before the court. Sections 60, 64 and 91 of the Evidence Act are based on this rule.[21]

2. HEARSAY

The term 'hearsay' is used with reference to what is 'done or written', as well as to what is 'spoken', and, in its legal sense, it denotes that kind of evidence which does not derive its value solely from the credit given to the witness himself, but which rests also, in part, on the veracity and competence of some other person. That this species of evidence is not given upon oath, that it cannot be tested by cross-examination, and that, in many cases, it supposes some better testimony which might be adduced in the particular case, are not the sole grounds for its exclusion. Its tendency to protract legal investigations to

---

18. Stoke's Anglo-Indian Codes, Vol. II, 889, f. note 7.
19. Banarsi Das v. Brig. Maharaja Sukhjit Singh, AIR 1998 SC 179.
20. A.M. Hussein v. M.M. Manginmani, 2001 AIHC 3216 (para 8) (Kant).
21. In re : Vadlamudi Kutumbarao, AIR 1957 A.P. 595. See also Pradeep Kumar Agarwal v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 76 (para 3) (Ori).

an embarrassing and dangerous length, its intrinsic weakness, its incompetency to satisfy the mind of the existence of the fact, and the frauds which may be practised with impunity under its cover, combine to support the rule that hearsay evidence is "inadmissible".[22]

The word 'hearsay' is used in various senses. Sometimes it means whatever a person is heard to say; sometimes it means whatever a person declares on information given by some one else; sometimes it is treated as nearly synonymous with 'irrelevant'.[23]

The Law in England is stated by PHIPSON as follows:—(15th Edn. (2000), page 629, para 25-01) : "It was a fundamental rule of evidence at common law that hearsay evidence is inadmissible. The rule has now been virtually abolished for civil proceedings by the Civil Evidence Act, 1995, and even in criminal cases, there are now many statutory exceptions. There remain many situations where hearsay evidence is inadmissible, and many others where, though it is admissible, the question of whether or not hearsay is relevant to determine whether procedural preconditions for its admission have been satisfied or to the weight to be attributed to it. It therefore remains of the first importance to see what evidence is prima facie inadmissible on the ground that it infringes the hearsay rule."

(26-06, page 633) : "No single principle can be assigned as having operated to exclude hearsay generally, or from any ascertainable date".

"In more recent times, rejection, even where such evidence was the "best" obtainable has been based on its relative untrustworthiness for judicial purposes, owing to (1) the irresponsibility of the original declarant, whose statements were made neither on oath, nor subject to cross-examination; (2) the depreciation of truth in the process of repetition; and (3) the opportunities for fraud its admission would open; to which are sometimes added (4) the tendency of such evidence to protract legal inquiries; and (5) to encourage the substitution of weaker for stronger proofs. The absence of an oath and of cross-examination, however, appear to be the only essential objections; even the production of the witness being valuable mainly as a means of ensuring cross-examination, and only secondarily as affording an opportunity for observing demeanour. The latter advantage, indeed, is in many cases waived without entailing the rejection of the evidence."[24]

The Select Committee in their Report observed: "This provision, taken in connection with the provisions of relevancy contained in Chap. II will, we hope, set the whole doctrine of hearsay in a perfectly plain light, for their joint effect is that:— (1) the sayings and doings of third persons are, as a rule, irrelevant, so that no proof of them can be admitted; (2) in some excepted cases they are relevant; (3) every act done or spoken which is relevant on any ground must (if proved by oral evidence) be proved by someone who saw it with his own eyes or heard it with his own ears".

Even the domestic tribunals have to exclude hearsay evidence though there is no necessity for them to follow the rules of evidence.[25]

"Derivative or second-hand proofs are not receivable as evidence in cause..... Instead of stating as maxim that the law requires all evidence to be given on oath, we should always say that the law requires all evidence to be given under personal responsibility i.e., every witness must give his testimony, under such circumstances as expose him to all the penalties of falsehood, which may be inflicted by any of the sanctions of truth.....The true principle therefore appears to be this—that all second-hand evidence, whether of the contents of a document or of the language of a third person, which is not connected by responsible testimony with the party against whom it is offered, is to be rejected".[26]

Derivative or second-hand evidence is excluded owing to its infirmity as compared with its original source.

Evidence of a statement made to a witness by a person, who was not called as a witness, may or may not be hearsay. It is hearsay and inadmissible when the object of the evidence is to establish what is contained in the statement. It is admissible if such evidence proposed is to establish the factum of the

---

22. TAYLOR, 12th Edn., S. 570, p. 363.
23. STEPHEN'S Introduction, J.D. Jain v. Management, State Bank of India, AIR 1982 SC 673.
24. PHIPSON 13th Edn., p. 332 (para 16- 06).
25. State of Haryana v. Ramachander, AIR 1976 Punj 381 (FB).
26. BEST, 12th Edn., ss. 493, 494, pp. 415, 416.

statement and not the truth of the statement as there is a distinction between proving the factum of a statement and proving the truth of the statement.[27]

Where a witness told a material fact to another, but himself resiled from it in the witness-box, narration of the other was rejected as hearsay.[28] A married woman was alleged to have committed suicide. Evidence of her father was that her neighbours, who turned hostile, had told him that some sound of quarrel was coming from the house of the deceased on the fateful night. Such evidence was ruled out as hearsay. But the fact that the neighbours gave him some information which prompted him to rush to the police and they did not deny to have given him some information or having met him, such part of evidence would not be hit by the rule of exclusion of hearsay evidence.[29]

Similarly, where the question was whether J was driving the bus at a particular time, no eye-witness was produced, and the witnesses were telling the court what others had told them, their evidence was not allowed.[30] A witness was not able to depose as to the factum of second marriage or that the defendant was living with another girl as man and wife; the court held that the evidence fell short of the requirements of Section 60.[31] An adoption which was neither ancient, nor there was an eye-witness or documentary account of it, the court said that the proof of adoption failed.[32] The accused was charged with buggery and murder of a 12-year-old boy. His defence was that he had engaged in an act of intercourse with the boy's consent and then left him unharmed, but he was murdered shortly afterwards by another person M, whom he described and also stated that M had been telling about this to others. The evidence was rejected as hearsay. The court of appeal stated the question of law as to whether a confession by a third person could be cited by the accused; without considering the question, their Lordships upheld the exclusion of the evidence.[33]

Statement of witnesses, based on information received from others, is inadmissible.[34] Where the testimony of the witness is entirely hearsay and on some matters, it was hearsay of hearsay, it was held not admissible.[35] The respondent before the Supreme Court deposed to what transpired between one Saxena and the Superintendent Engineer. The Supreme Court omitted this part of respondents evidence from consideration as hearsay.[36]

Regarding a map drawn by a draftsman in regard to a scene of occurrence, the Supreme Court held that the evidence of the draftsman is not hearsay when the eye-witnesses were called and they stated that they showed the different spots to the draftsman, and insofar as the distances were concerned, the draftsman himself had measured them and he swore in the witness-box that the distances shown in the map were correct.[37] A statement by a prosecution witness A was made to another witness B. A was examined earlier and B was examined later. When A was examined, he was not asked about the statement made by him to B, but B was made to say about the statement. A's statement to B was sought to be made use of by the prosecution. The Supreme Court held that, in the absence of an opportunity to A to explain his statement it was inadmissible.[38] Where an informant, who informed the police that certain accused would be following, in a taxi, a truck carrying prohibited liquor and that 'P' was manager of the truck, was not examined, it was held that the evidence of a police officer who spoke to the receipt of information was inadmissible.[39] Where the evidence was that, after the occurrence of dacoity, the police

---

27. J.D. Jain v. Management, State Bank of India, AIR 1982 SC 673; Delhi Municipality v. P.O. Labour Court, ILR (1972) 2 Del 653; State of M.P. v. Gangabai, ILR 1969 MP 1014 : AIR 1980 SC 818.
28. Yasin Gulam Haider v. State of Maharashtra, (1979) 4 SCC 600; Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.
29. Balram Prasad Agrawal v. State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 1830 : 1997 Cr LJ 1640. The Court referred to J.D. Jain v. Management of State Bank of India, AIR 1982 SC 673 and Subramaniam v. Public Prosecutor, (1956) 1 WLR 965.
30. Jaddoo Singh v. Malti Devi, AIR 1983 All 87 (DB).
31. Laxmi Sahnami v. Maheshwar Sahu, AIR 1985 Ori 11.
32. Sauney Majhi v. Duli Dei, AIR 1985 Ori 22 (DB).
33. R v. Blastland, (1985) 2 All ER 1095 noted in All ER Annual Review 1985.
34. 1964 All WR (HC) 481.
35. Chakrapani v. Chandoo, AIR 1959 MP 84.
36. Laliteshwar Prasad v. Bateshwar Prasad, (1966) 2 SCJ 241, 247 : AIR 1966 SC 580.
37. Santa Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 526.
38. Awadh Behari Sharma v. State of M.P., AIR 1956 SC 738.
39. B. Gangaram v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1983 SC 906 : 1983 Cr LJ 1276; See also Nihal Singh v. Rao Birendra Singh, (1970) 3 SCC 239.

patrol went round and ascertained whether the accused was in a house, it was held to be hearsay.[40] A statement contained in a site map prepared by an investigating officer was held inadmissible.[41] The Supreme Court has also held similarly in Girish Yadav v. State of M.P.[42] A history sheet maintained by the police in respect of a man's character is hearsay evidence, as it is based on information and is admissible.[43] A and B were tried separately, in the trial of A, a witness deposed that B told him that A had stabbed the deceased. It was held that as B was not tried along with A, B should have been produced as a witness. In the absence of B's evidence, the statement of the witness was only hearsay.[44]

The statement of a witness that the deceased had told him of a rumour that Rs. 50,000 was offered by one R to kill the deceased, is hearsay against R; it is not also admissible as a dying declaration, as it was not as to the cause of his death or any circumstance which resulted in his death.[45] Hearsay evidence about the loss of a document is not admissible.[46] Where a conductor was charged for misappropriation of amount collected from passengers without issuing tickets, any evidence let in without examining the passengers, would be hearsay evidence.[47] The evidence of A relating what M told N which had been passed on by N to A, is hearsay, and therefore, inadmissible.[48] Where the witnesses, who had no manner of personal knowledge regarding certain matters stated that the deceased had told them about those matters their evidence is only hearsay evidence.[49] Where a boy was taken in adoption soon after his birth, his evidence as to the ceremony of giving and taking is hearsay evidence.[50] Where the question of relationship of one person with another is in issue and the witnesses produced to prove that relationship neither speak from personal knowledge nor disclose their source of knowledge about such relationship, their evidence is merely hearsay and cannot establish the disputed relationship.[51] Where the plaintiff deposed that his deceased mother gave the names in respect of the family pedigree, the statement was held inadmissible as it was hearsay and was also not covered by Section 32(5).[52]

There is no rule against including hearsay in an FIR to the police.[53] The rule of exclusion of hearsay evidence is relaxed in cases where marriage or relationship of one person to another has to be proved.[54]

Regarding family relationship, a witness deposed that he belonged to the village of the plaintiff's maternal grand-father and saw the plaintiff always accompanying his mother to that village; it was held that such evidence was admissible as it was from the personal knowledge of the witness.[55]

Where the question was whether a woman was a prostitute, running a brothel, it was held it need not necessarily be proved by direct evidence, that is, by the testimony of persons who had direct dealing with the woman.[56]

The statement about the date of expiry given by the manufacturer on the drug is at best a statement about a future occurrence and such a statement can never be based on the personal knowledge as required by the Section 60 and hence, is inadmissible under this section.[57] Where by way of a contradiction the hostile witness stated in the cross-examination that he had stated before the police that

---

40. Md. Jamsher Tadvi v. State, AIR 1956 Bom 186.
41. Satya v. State, AIR 1958 All 746.
42. 1996 Cr LJ 2159 (para 14) (SC) : AIR 1996 SC 3098, following Cri Appeal No. 489 of 1985, Dt. 12-3-1996 (SC).
43. K.K. Das v. State, AIR 1959 Cal 342.
44. In re : Krishnan, AIR 1953 Mad 400.
45. Ramakrishna Roy v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 231.
46. (1961) 2 Guj. LR 610.
47. Tarolchansingh v. State of Punjab, 1975 Lab IC 986 (Punj); (checking inspector's report) Jagroop v. R, AIR 1952 All 276; (enforcement squad inspector's evidence,
48. Amarsingh v. Madanmohan Lal, AIR 1956 Raj 58; Raghunath Devi v. Samad Gashru, AIR 1952 J&K 29; State v. Tapas Kumar, 1985 Cr LJ 871.
49. R Fr Benedict v. State of Kerala, ILR (1967) 2 Ker 21 : 1967 Mad LJ (Cri) 569.
50. Debi Prasad v. Tribeni Devi, AIR 1970 SC 1286.
51. Jawal Mal v. Achal Das, (1953) 4 Raj 33.
52. Kamalambai v. Srinivasa Odayar, (1968) 2 Mad LJ 487.
53. V.S. Iyer v. State of Kerala, ILR (1967) 1 Ker 640.
54. 1969 All WR (HC) 579.
55. Gurnek Singh v. Balbir Singh, 1977 Cur. L.J. (Civil) 256 Punj.
56. Seetharamamma v. Sambasiva Rao, AIR 1964 A.P. 400.
57. Dueful Laboratory v. State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 4534 (para 36) (Raj).

the people of the locality knew that the accused was a hired contract killer, his statement was held to be not a substantive evidence.[58]

3. GENERAL

The expressions 'saw it', 'heard it', and 'perceived it', in clauses 2, 3 and 4 of the section mean 'saw the fact deposed to', 'heard the fact deposed to', and 'perceived the fact deposed to'.

4. FACTS WHICH COULD BE SEEN

Where the question was in respect of a marriage and there was no documentary evidence in support of the alleged marriage, it was held the persons who attended the marriage could give direct evidence.[59] The statement in the inquest report, which is based on the actual observation of the witness at the spot, being direct evidence, is clearly admissible under Section 60.[60] It has been held that the observation report of the Investigating Officer stating that the floor in bus in question appeared to have been washed, should have been proved like any other document.[61] Matters in the inquest report, found by the investigating officer, are not hit by Section 162, Cr. P.C., and are admissible under Sections 60 and 61 of the Act.[62] Where the question was whether the complainant was an officer in the office of the Food Inspector at the time when he made the complaint, evidence of witnesses that he was the officer at that time is relevant and it would be direct evidence. If that evidence is challenged the order of appointment may be produced.[63]

The facts mentioned in a Panchanama, which is not a substantive evidence of the facts therein, have to be proved by the testimony on oath of the Panchas, who had seen those facts.[64]

In order to prove a statement of an eye-witness given to the police, the evidence of the person who recorded the statement is necessary to identify the person who made the statement.[65]

What the witness actually saw and heard as to what a mob was doing and saying, is admissible as direct evidence to prove the nature of the assembly. But his opinion and impression that the assembly appeared to be unlawful is not admissible.[66]

5. FACTS WHICH COULD BE HEARD

A written information is not evidence. If it is desired to make the matter contained in it evidence, a person who can directly testify to such matter must be produced.[67] A news item, without any further proof of what had actually happened, through witnesses, is of no value. It is at best second-hand secondary evidence. Such news item cannot be said to prove itself, although it may be taken into account with other evidence if the other evidence is forcible.[68] A news report about a statement in a Press Conference held by a Chief Minister, is not admissible but can be proved by filing affidavits of persons who heard the statement.[69] Regarding the report of speeches made, which were published in a newspaper, though mere tendering the newspaper as proof of the speeches is not admissible, still they can be proved by the persons who had made the speeches or the persons in whose presence such speeches are made, or by the reporter of the newspaper who was present when the speeches were made and who had sent the report to be published in the paper.[70]

---

58. Bullu Das v. State of Bihar, (1998) 8 SCC 130.
59. Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal, AIR 1927 PC 15.
60. Rameshwar Dayal v. State of U.P., AIR 1978 SC 1558.
61. K. Mallikarjuna v. State of A.P., 1995 Cr LJ 3100 (para 52) (AP).
62. Rameshwar Patra v. State, (1979) 47 Cut LT 171 (DB).
63. State of Kerala v. U.P. Evadeen, AIR 1971 Ker 193 (FB).
64. Kanbi Bhavan v. Ismail Mamad, AIR 1955 Sau 32.
65. Md. Ishaq Madari v. Emperor, AIR 1942 Lah 59.
66. Jogi Raut v. Emperor, AIR 1928 Pat 98; see also Ganapathi Aiyar v. Sakarayappa Mudliar, AIR 1929 Mad 187.
67. Mi Huak v. King Emperor, (1907) 4 LBR 121; Lal Singh v. The Crown, ILR (1924) 5 Lah 396.
68. S.N. Balakrishna v. Fernandez, AIR 1969 SC 1201; Priya Gupta v. General Manager, N.E. Railways, AIR 1959 All 643; Hajarilal v. State, AIR 1953 HP 41; (Newspaper report is not one of the documents referred to in Section 78(2) by which proceedings of the Legislature may be proved) Harbhajan Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1961 Punj 215.
69. Curcharam Panchayat v. Lt. Governor, AIR 1972 Goa 1.
70. Khilumal Topandas v. Arjundas Tulasidas, AIR 1959 Raj 280.

In a case of murder, the witness who was present at the place of occurrence stated that he saw the wife of the accused running out of the house and heard her saying that the accused had killed the children and was also going to kill her; he further stated that he was told by the wife of the accused's brother that the accused was killing the children. It was held that the latter part of the statement was not hearsay and was admissible as relevant fact u/Section 60.[71]

A witness proving the information must state in the court what the information was, and that a mere formal proof of the memo of information, by proving the signatures of the police officers who recorded the information would not be sufficient.[72] Where A, in his deposition, refers to a talk he had with B (the accused), who said he had a scuffle or fight with the deceased C, A who heard it can speak about it, and that would be direct oral evidence in respect of that fact. If A then spoke to D, who says that in the court, that would be hearsay, and would not fall under Section 60 of the Evidence Act. Such evidence of D can however become admissible under Section 157, to corroborate the testimony of A, but this can arise only if A's evidence of such a fact is to be corroborated.[73] Where a witness, who is a relative and neighbour of the accused, stated that he heard the daughter of the accused shouting that her father was assaulting her mother, it was held that his evidence was direct evidence.[74]

Where the question was 'where the ancestor of the plaintiff was born', and the ancestor died half a century before the suit, and no direct evidence was available on that question, it was held that the statement of the plaintiff that her mother had told her that the ancestor was born in Coorg was relevant and was not entirely inadmissible as hearsay.[75]

Where the witnesses had deposed that in their presence the parties had negotiated an oral agreement, it would be too hypertechnical to contend that the witnesses should not only state that in their presence negotiation for oral agreement was held but they had heard the talks between the parties.[76]

6. FACTS WHICH COULD BE PERCEIVED BY ANY OTHER SENSE

The state of mind of a person may be proved directly by the person himself by giving evidence of his own mental feelings or indirectly by other witnesses speaking to the outward expression of the condition of the person at the time (res gestae), by circumstantial evidence of facts which lead to an inference as to the person's state of mind.

If a person watching the conduct of the members of a family, though he is not a member of that family, gives evidence, he can be treated as a person with special means of knowledge and such evidence is admissible under Section 60.[77]

7. OPINION

Evidence regarding expert opinion must be given orally, and a mere report or certificate given by an expert cannot be evidence unless a statute so provides. If a party does not object to its admission, the party can be said to have waived proof of it and not its relevance.[78]

Where the report of a doctor who examined a girl, about her age was not produced but a reference to it was made in an affidavit of another person; it was held the affidavit was not admissible and the opinion given has to be proved by the doctor.[79] Where the post-mortem report was produced by the record clerk

---

71. Muni Lal Gupta v. State, 1988 Cr LJ 627 (Del).
72. Kammu v. State, ILR (1964) 14 Raj 715; In re : Seetha Rami Reddi, AIR 1939 Mad 766; Md. Salabat v. Emperor, AIR 1937 Lah 475.
73. Kahbi Vaghji v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 Guj 11.
74. Tulsiram v. State of Maharashtra, 1984 Cr LJ 209 (Bom-DB).
75. Alicia v. Percival Felix Pinto, (1967) 2 Mys. L.J. 210.
76. Achutananda Baidya v. Prafullya Kumar Gayen, AIR 1997 SC 2077.
77. Ganesh Naraian Singh v. Jadunandan Singh, AIR 1969 Pat 82; Amarsingh v. Chhaju Singh, AIR 1973 Punj 213 (DB)
78. B. Poornaish v. Union of India, AIR 1967 AP 338.
79. Md. Ikram Hussain v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625; State of Mysore v. Kantappa, (1964) 1 Mys LJ 393; (post mortem certificate given by the doctor) State v. Sadhu Ram, AIR 1963 Punj 142; (Report of chemical examiner which was found to be vague).

of the hospital and the doctor who conducted the post-mortem was not examined, the said report was not admissible.[80]

The conduct or outer behaviour under Section 50, must be proved in the manner laid down in Section 60. The portion of Section 60 which provides that the person who holds an opinion must be called to prove his opinion does not necessarily delimit the scope of Section 50. Conduct, as an external perceptible fact, may be proved either by the testimony of the person himself, whose opinion is evidence under Section 50, or by some other person acquainted with the facts which express such opinion.[81]

Mere production of medical report is inadmissible as evidence, to prove the illness of a witness.[82] A report of the Probation Officer as to the previous conviction of an accused cannot be admitted without examining the concerned officer.[83]

Opinion evidence as to handwriting is hearsay and becomes relevant only if the condition laid down in Section 47 of the Evidence Act is first proved.[84]

Where a witness stated that a signature seemed to have been erased, it was held that, as the witness was not an expert, his opinion evidence cannot be allowed.[85]

Opinion expressed by conduct with regard to the determination of relationship is admissible.[86]

Mere opinion of a witness as to relationship is not admissible.[87] General reputation, without proof of conduct, is not admissible as proof of relationship.[88] A school teacher who admitted a boy into the school and was giving lessons and marking attendance, cannot express any opinion on the boy's paternity, and such evidence is not direct.[89]

8. OPINION EXPRESSED IN ANY TREATISE [PROVISO 1]

The first proviso is a departure from the rule of English Law, under which medical and other treatises are not admissible, whether the author is alive or not. Any scientific text-book commonly offered for sale is admissible in evidence under the circumstances mentioned in the proviso. Section 45 refers to the evidence of expert witnesses who may be examined in court, Section 38 refers to books on law.

The Supreme Court, dealing with the question of when the quickening of a child in the womb is perceptible to the mother, adopted the opinion expressed in a treatise, "obstetrics and gynaecology" by Dugald Baird and 'Manual of Obstretrics' by Edan and Holland. The Supreme Court preferred the opinion therein to the statements contained in Modi's Medical Jurisprudence.[90]

In India, even if the expert is not examined in court, the court is entitled to consider and act upon the opinions of experts, contained in treatises.[91]

Opinion of a living authority as to usages and tenets in respect of a family or a body of men, contained in a treatise, is not admissible.[92]

"History of Hydraulic Stowing in India" by N. BARRACLOUGH was held to be a treatise by an expert and as a document of reference under Section 57, even though it may not be admissible under

---

80. Vijender v. State of Delhi, (1997) 6 SCC 171 : 1997 SCC (Cri) 857.
81. Dologobinda v. Nimai Charan Misra, AIR 1959 SC 914; Shankarlal v. Vijayshanker, AIR 1968 All 58.
82. Govindrarajulu v. Lakshmi Raj Ammal, AIR 1961 Mad. 158; Srischandra Nandy v. Annapurna, AIR 1950 Cal 173; Shaukat Hussain v. Sheodayal, AIR 1958 MP 350; (report of health officer).
83. Pedru v. State of Kerala, 1958 Cr. LJ 175 (Ker).
84. Rahim Khan v. Khurshid Ahmed, AIR 1975 SC 290.
85. Rayma Jusab v. State of Gujarat, (1965) 2 Cr. LJ 448.
86. Bishwanath Goasain v. Dulhim Lalmuni, AIR 1968 Pat 481; Fukalia v. Mathuram, AIR 1960 Pat 480.
87. Amarsingh v. Chhaju Singh, AIR 1973 Punj 213 (FB); Hadibandhu Malik v. Chandra Sekhar Behera, AIR 1973 Ori 141.
88. Md. Ayub Khan v. Abdus Samad Khan, 1969 B.L.J.R. 932.
89. Shanker Lal v. Vijayshanker, AIR 1968 All 58.
90. Mahendra Manilal Nanavati v. Sushila Mahendra Nanavathi, AIR 1965 SC 364.
91. John Howe v. Charlotte Howe, AIR 1916 Mad 338 (FB).
92. Kandan v. Jitan, AIR 1973 Pat 206.

Section 60, first proviso, as not satisfying the tests of being offered for sale, and the author being dead or unavailable.[1]

9. EVIDENCE REGARDING ANY MATERIAL THING [PROVISO 2]

This proviso enables the court to require the production of a material thing for its inspection. Under Section 165 the court has power to direct the production of any document or thing, in order to discover or to obtain proper proof of relevant facts.

Private trade marks exhibited in a case are material things within the meaning of the section.[2]

Where, according to medical witness, the injuries on the victim might have been caused by a flexible rod, and no such rod was recovered, but the prosecutor showed some flexible rod to the court, it was held that there was nothing to show that the rod shown by the public prosecutor, was similar to that alleged to have been used by the accused and that in the absence of production of the material thing, it was not proper to accept the medical evidence.[3]

10. CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

Section 60 does not exclude circumstantial evidence of a thing (fact) which would be seen, heard and felt.[4]

As against direct evidence postulated by Sections 60, 62 and 63 of the Act, there is another type of evidence known as circumstantial evidence which would also be legal evidence, but the concept of what is known as hearsay evidence, is entirely different. Though hearsay evidence is inadmissible to prove a fact, it does not necessarily preclude evidence as to a statement, having been made upon which certain action was taken or certain results followed.[5]

Hearsay evidence which ought to have been rejected as irrelevant, does not become admissible as against a party merely because his counsel fails to take objection when the evidence is tendered.[6] It is the duty of the court to disallow hearsay evidence, even if it is not objected to by the parties or their advocates.[7] A judge cannot admit inadmissible evidence though he feels that it would throw light upon the issue.[8]

---

1. Nimcha Coal Co. Ltd. v. Srinivasa Goenka, ILR (1968) 2 Cal 402.
2. T. Nooroodeen Sahib v. Charles Sowden, 15 M.L.J. 45.
3. Amalesh Chandra v. State, AIR 1952 Cal 481.
4. Makbul Ahmed v. Abdul Rahman, AIR 1952 Cal 494.
5. State Bank of India v. J.D. Jain, 1979 Lab. IC 1041.
6. Lim Yam Hong v. Lam Choon & Co., AIR 1928 PC 127 : (1927) 30 Bom LR 757 (PC)
7. Munishwar Datt v. Indra Kumari, AIR 1963 Punj 449; Rayma Jusab v. State of Gujarat, (1965) 2 CrLJ 448 (Guj)
8. Mahani Dasi v. Pareshnath Thakur, AIR 1954 Ori 198.

CHAPTER V

OF DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Proof of contents of documents.

S. 61. The contents of documents may be proved either by primary or by secondary evidence.

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

Documentary evidence means all documents produced for the inspection of the Court (Section 3). Documents are of two kinds: public and private. Section 74 gives a list of documents which are regarded as public documents. All other documents are private (Section 75). The production of documents in courts is regulated by the Civil Procedure Code and the Criminal Procedure Code.

The contents of documents must be proved either by the production of the document which is called primary evidence, or by copies or oral accounts of the contents, which are called secondary evidence. Where there is documentary evidence, oral evidence is not entitled to any weight.[1] The section lays down that the contents of documents may be proved either by primary or secondary evidence; this means that there is no other method allowed by law for proving the contents of documents.[2] The documents should be duly proved by the person who issued them and if the documents virtually go on record by consent undisputed during trial, the defendent would be precluded from disputing their contents at the appellate stage.[3]

Primary evidence is evidence which is required to be given by law first. Secondary evidence is evidence which may be given in the absence of the better evidence which the law requires to be given first, when a proper explanation is given of the absence of that better record. Primary evidence is defined in Section 62 and secondary evidence, in Section 63.

Where the landlord did not produce the rent roll maintained by him it was held that the tenant could produce the order sanctioning mutation and the payment of rent to the landlord as proof of mutation in the rent roll.[4]

The proceedings under the Mysore (Personal and Miscellaneous) Inams Abolition Act are not judicial, and so the production of the documents in such proceedings is not strictly governed by the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act.[5]

When the prosecution wants to invoke a particular notification to prove that a private forest in question has been constituted into a protected one, it should produce the gazette in which notification has been published or its certified copies, as it would be the primary evidence in the case.[6] The affidavit of a candidate cannot be said to be a sufficient proof of his correct age.[7] Photocopy is not admissible.[8] Unsigned telegram, unless confirmed by a signed application, representation or an affidavit, cannot be considered.[9] Where the names of two accused persons and use of swords and soda water bottles, not mentioned in the Emergency Police Report, were subsequently interpolated in the F.I.R. as a result of

---

1. Murarka Properties (P) Ltd. v. Beharilal Murarka, AIR 1978 SC 360.
2. Ram Prasad v. Raghunandan Prasad, ILR (1885) 7 All 738, 743.
3. Karnataka Power Corporation Ltd. v. M/s. Shaik Basha Transport & Civil Contractor, 2000 AIHC 4428 (para 6) (Kant).
4. Chandranath v. Tusharika Devi, AIR 1958 SC 521.
5. State of Mysore v. P.T. Muniswamy Gourda, AIR 1971 SC 1363.
6. Jaigopal Singh v. Divisional Forest Officer, AIR 1953 Pat 310.
7. Kripa Shankar v. Gurudas, AIR 1995 SC 2152 (para 5).
8. Ramesh Verma v. Lajesh Saxena, AIR 1998 MP 46 (para 12).
9. District Magistrate v. G. Jothisankar, 1993 Cr LJ 3677 (paras 9 and 10) (SC) : AIR 1993 SC 2633.

afterthought, it was held to be most fatal to the prosecution case and it was likely that the informant had not seen the incident.[10]

Mere making of a document as an exhibit does not dispense with the proof of its contents.[11] It must be proved in accordance with law.[12] However the mode of proof being a question of procedure may be waived by the party against whom the document is sought to be proved by giving consent, meaning thereby that the said party waives his right to get the document formally proved but by that way the truth of the contents of the document cannot be said to have been proved, if the facts stated therein are in issue.[13] In a case of non-production of an attesting witness, to prove the contents of the document, on the ground that he was a leper, it was held that the ground was not proper as he could be examined on commission.[14] Executant of a document must be produced or his affidavit filed.[15]

In regard to the notice under Section 7 of the Administration of Evacuee Property Act of 1950, it was held that proof of its contents, along with proof of its issue and service, has to be established.[16]

Proof of the contents of a document by merely proving the signature or handwriting of the author thereof, is not permissible.[17]

Where the report of a doctor regarding the age of a girl was not before the court it was held that an affidavit of a third person referring to the report was not admissible in proof of the contents of the document.[18] The adoption deed showing adoption of a man who was over age and that too unregistered, was held to be not admissible in evidence to prove adoption.[19]

It is well-settled that the documents do not by themselves prove the contents therein. Proof of the contents has to be given by cogent evidence.[20] Where the copy of deposition of a person recorded in another criminal case was relied on by the Court to disbelieve the presence of the eye-witness at the time of occurrence in the instant case but the person concerned was not examined, it was held that the copy of deposition was wrongly relied on.[21] Where the document sought to be relied upon by the defendant, was neither signed by the scribe nor confronted to the plaintiff for admission, it could not be admitted in evidence.[22] Balance sheets relating to accounts do not prove themselves, and the facts mentioned therein have to be proved by evidence, after giving an opportunity to the opposite party to contest the correctness of such evidence by cross-examination.[23] When an attestor and scribe were not examined, it was held that such non-examination cannot by itself lead to an inference that the document was not executed when the executants admit its execution.[24] Mere consent of a party to exhibit the document does not amount to an admission of its contents. A party has a right by cross-examination to show that the document is not genuine.[25] The correctness of the contents of a letter cannot, and does not, stand proved even if it is admitted that letters have passed between the parties.[26] Where in a case involving death by electrocution, the report of the Electrical Inspector was based on the information given by another person but neither the original report was produced nor the informant was examined, no reliance could be placed on the version of that person or the report.[27]

---

10. D.D. Suvarna v. State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 3602 (paras 17 and 18) (Bom).
11. Sait Taraji Khimchand v. Satyam, AIR 1971 SC 1865.
12. John Mithalal Desai v. Dineshbhai K. Vora, 1998 AIHC 1894 (para 15) (Guj).
13. John Mithalal Desai v. Dineshbhai K. Vora, 1998 AIHC 1894 (para 13) (Guj).
14. Ramakrishna Panda v. Arjuno Padhano, AIR 1963 Orissa 29.
15. Ram Jawai v. Shakuntala Devi, AIR 1993 Del 330 (para 19).
16. Arunkumar v. Union of India, AIR 1964 Pat 338.
17. M. Yusuf v. D. AIR 1968 Bom 112 but subsequently same High Court held contrary to it in Cynthia Martin v. Prembehari Makhanlal Yadu, 1998 AIHC 966 (para 13) (Bom).
18. Md Ikram Hussa v. State of U.P., AIR 1964 SC 1625.
19. Rakhi v. 1st Addl District Judge, Firozabad, AIR 2000 All 166 (para 9) : 2000 AIHC 3482.
20. Rajwatidevi v. Joint Director Consolidation, Government of Bihar, AIR 1989 Pat 66.
21. Pammi v. Government of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 1998 SC 1185 : 1998 Cr LJ 1617 (para 17) (SC).
22. Debendro v. Prabhakar Sahu, 1998 AIHC 4838 (para 5) (Ori).
23. Management of Postal R.M.S. Co-op. Society v. Workmen, ILR (1963) 2 Punj 28 relying on, Petlad Turkey Reddye Works v. Dyer and Chemicals Workers Union, AIR 1960 SC 1006.
24. Surender Reddy v. Govt. of A.P., (1979) 1 An WR 416.
25. Sanjay Cotton Co. v. Omprakash, AIR 1973 Bom 40.
26. Hoare Miller & Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, (1961) 65 CWN 1206.
27. Asa Ram v. M.C.D., AIR 1995 Del 164 (para 10).

Factum of mortgage or passing of consideration is not 'contents of a document' within the meaning of Section 61; proving of the factum of mortgage is not the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage; nor is proving the consideration for the mortgage, the same thing as proving the terms of the mortgage, both aspects have to be proved by evidence.[28] When the document was produced from proper custody, it was held that the document was properly proved.[29] Objection to the mode of proof of contents of the document must be raised before the document is admitted by court and marked as an exhibit on record.[30] In compensation proceedings under the Rajasthan Land Acquisition Act, if no objection was taken by the Government side when certified copies of some sale deeds were tendered, objection cannot be taken in the appellate stage. When the certified copies were issued under Section 57 of the Registration Act, it was held they were admissible under Section 51A of the Rajasthan Act.[31]

A document, evidencing partition, giving no description of the property falling to the shares of the respective parties, is not a partition deed, hence it was admissible in evidence without registration to show the severance of the joint status of the parties.[32] Where an agreement to purchase certain property was subsequently abandoned and a suit was filed for the recovery of the money advanced, it was held that though the document was unregistered, it was admissible as evidence.[33]

Where the counsel of a party admitted the document to be marked as exhibit, it was held that the contents of the document should be held to be admitted as correct.[34]

2. SHAM DOCUMENT

Where in consequence of a deed of agreement between the parties, the respondent conducted a business of agency in the appellant's shop and received commission, the parties maintained accounts and filed returns before various public or statutory authorities which revealed the nature of business conducted, the said agreement could not be said to be a sham document.[35]

3. DOCUMENT—INTERPRETATION OR CONSTRUCTION OF

In interpretation or construction of a document, inescapably extrinsic evidence and the surrounding circumstances from totality of the case are to be considered.[36]

Where it was found that the real intention gathered from the words of endorsement on the reverse of the promissory notes was only 'endorsement' and not 'assignment', the promissory note would not require any stamp duty for the purpose of admitting them in evidence.[37] A partition deed divided the joint family properly equally between the father and the three sons. The first portion of the deed clearly stated that a sharer had the right of alienation including gift, exchange etc. and the second portion stated that the share of the father was to be divided equally among his sons after his death. It was held that the later portion could not be read to cancel the effect of the first portion as to the right of the sharer to alienate his share and that only life estate was created in favour of the father. The gift deed executed by the father was held to be valid.[38]

---

28. Panchia v. Harnath, ILR (1958) 8 Raj 459, see also Banga Chandra v. Jagat Kishore, AIR 1916 PC 110 (recitals as to legal necessity).
29. Mohanlal v. Kumari Babbi, (1967) 69 Punj LR 578.
30. Sri Chand Gupta v. Madanlal, 1972 All LJ 635; P.C. Purushothama v. Perumal, AIR 1972 SC 608; Gopaldas v. Thakurji, AIR 1943 PC 83.
31. State of Rajasthan v. Jeo Raj, AIR 1990 Raj 90. See also Tata Chemicals Limited, Bombay v. Sadhu Singh, AIR 1994 All 66 (para 9).
32. Purnabashi Mishra v. Raj Kumari Mishra, AIR 1995 Ori 284 (para 8).
33. R. Vishwanatham Setty v. T. Lakshminarasamma, 2000 AIHC 4982 (paras 5 and 6) (AP).
34. A. Rahiman v. M. Wabber, (1973) 1 Mys LJ 376 : 197 Cr LJ 1483. Contra : truth or correctness of contents to be ascertained from evidence, Life Insurance Corporation of India v. Narmada Agarwalla, AIR 1993 Ori 103 (para 11).
35. Liberty Sales Services v. M/s. Jakki Mull and Sons, 1997 AIHC 2368 (paras 11 and 13) (Del).
36. Reddi Demudu v. Kannuru Demudamma, 1996 AIHC 4983 (para 9) (AP).
37. Mulji Mehta & Sons v. C. Mohan Krishna, AIR 1997 AP 153.
38. Jaggavarapu Krishna Reddy v. Jaggavarapu Chittemma, 1998 AIHC 3834 (paras 5, 8-10) (AP).

Primary evidence.

S. 62. Primary evidence means the document itself produced for the inspection of the Court.

Explanation 1.*—Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document.

Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it.

Explanation 2.*—Where a number of documents are all made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

ILLUSTRATION

A person is shown to have been in possession of a number of placards, all printed at one time from one original. Any one of the placards is primary evidence of the contents of any other, but no one of them is primary evidence of the contents of the original.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 634
2. Executed in several parts [Explanation 1] ... 634
3. Counterparts ... 635
4. Carbon copy [Explanation 2] ... 635
5. Tape records ... 636
6. Photograph ... 636
7. Printed copies ... 636

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE

This section defines primary evidence to mean the document itself produced for the inspection of the court. Where a document is executed in several parts, each part is primary evidence of the document. Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart is primary evidence, as against the party executing it. Where a number of documents are made by printing, lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest. Where they are copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Primary evidence is the evidence which the law requires to be given first.

Section 91 of the Act states that, when the terms of the contract or a grant or any other disposition of property, have been reduced to the form of a document and, in all cases where any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no evidence shall be given in proof of those terms except the document itself, or secondary evidence, if it is allowed by law. Explanation (2) of Section 91 says that, where there are more originals than one, one original needs to be proved. Under Section 62 where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it. Explanation (2) says that if the documents are made by one uniform process as in the case of printing, lithography or photography each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest, but copies of a common original are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

2. EXECUTED IN SEVERAL PARTS [EXPLANATION 1]

Sometimes each party to a transaction wishes, for the sake of convenience, to have a complete document in his own possession. To effect this, the document is written out as many times over as there are parties, and each document is executed, i.e., signed or sealed, as the case may be, by all the parties. Any one of them may be produced as primary evidence of the contents of the documents.

An award, partitioning certain joint family property among three brothers, was prepared in quadruplicate, and all the four documents were scribed by a professional scribe and signed by all the arbitrators, every page having been initiated. The main document was written on a stamp paper of higher denomination and it was left with one of the arbitrators; the other three copies were scribed on stamp paper of lower denomination and each of the three was given one copy. It was held that as all the documents contained the signatures of the scribe and the arbitrators, each one was original and not a mere copy, subject to the rule of secondary evidence.[1]

3. COUNTERPARTS

A document is executed in counterpart when there are two parties to the transaction. Thus, if the transaction is a contract between A and B, the document is copied out twice, and A alone signs one document, whilst B alone signs the other. A then hands to B the document signed by himself, and B hands to A the document signed by himself. Thus, as against A, the document signed by A is primary evidence, whilst, as against B, the document signed by B is primary evidence. If there are two contemporary writings, the counterparts of each other, one of which is delivered to the opposite party, and the other preserved, as they may both be considered as originals, and they have equal claims to authenticity, the one which is preserved may be received in evidence, without notice to produce the one which was delivered.[2] Where a document is executed in counterpart, each counterpart being executed by one or some of the parties only, each counterpart is primary evidence as against the parties executing it. (Section 63 Cl. 4).

When a deed is prepared in two or more identical forms, the part signed by the grantor is the original and the other parts are 'counterparts'.

A copy is defined as a document which is an accurate and full representation of the original.[3]

Where there was dissolution of partnership by an agreement of the partners, and the copy of the original signed by every one of the partners was handed over to each partner, it was held that the copy will not come under any of the categories of Section 63, and it is a counterpart within the explanation (1) of Section 62.[4]

In the case of agreements executed in duplicate, it is only when each of the instruments is duly signed by the party to be bound by it and delivered to the other, that the documents are termed as counterparts. It is only then that each is evidence against the party executing it, and those in privity with the executing party, and each is secondary evidence of the other.[5] Where the disputed document was purported to have been executed by the plaintiff but did not bear his signature nor it was delivered to the defendants, it could not be termed a counterpart.[6] Where there was no evidence to show that the original partition deed was with the borrower, the bank was held to be justified in accepting its duplicate from him as a collateral security for loan.[7]

Where there was a claim for exemption in respect of sales to registered dealers, it was held that exemption cannot be granted without production of declaration forms, and the counterfoil of declaration forms cannot be regarded as counterparts within the meaning of Section 62 of the Evidence Act.[8]

4. CARBON COPY [EXPLANATION 2]

Where a carbon copy was made by one uniform process, of a certificate of a doctor, given in discharge of his professional duty, and his attendence could not be procured without considerable delay and expense, the copy was held admissible as primary evidence within Exp. (2) of Section 62.[9]

Two wills in identical language were prepared by the process of typing, in which the second copy was obtained by carbon impression. Both were duly executed and attested. Both were held to be original,

---

1. Kruttivasa v. Malati, AIR 1959 Ori 113.
2. Philipson v. Chase, (1899) 2 Camp 110.
3. Jayarama v. Ramanatha, 1976 Mad 147.
4. Jayaram Iyer v. Ramanatha Iyer, AIR 1976 Mad 147.
5. Katihar Jute Mills Ltd. v. Calcutta Match Works Ltd., AIR 1958 Pat 133.
6. Shiv Kant Pandey v. Ishwari Singh, AIR 1997 Raj 155.
7. State Bank of Travancore v. Velayudhan Pillai Bhaskaran Nair, AIR 1996 Ker 32 (paras 8, 9, 12 and 13).
8. Kedarnath Jute Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Commercial Tax Officer, (1962) 13 Sales Tax cases 138.
9. Prithi Chand v. State of H.P., AIR 1989 SC 702.

and one was not considered a copy of the other. The fact that the testator inserted a remark on one of them "true copy" would not alter their character.[10]

Carbon copies of the permits written in hand were issued on behalf of the Central Government Officer, as a general practice, to the licencees for transport of tobacco; they also showed evidence of payments of duty, and there were counter-foils. It was held that the carbon copy was admissible as primary evidence of what it contained for the purpose of comparison of handwriting.[11]

Where a carbon copy of a search list, with certain ink writings on it, was produced, it was held that a mere glance at the document would show that, even apart from the ink writings, the whole of it could not have been made by one uniform process and so it would not satisfy the requirement of Section 62 and, therefore, not admissible.[12]

5. TAPE RECORDS

A tape record is primary and direct evidence of the matter recorded.[13]

See also commentary under head 'Tape Recording' in Section 3 and Section 7.

6. PHOTOGRAPH

When reliance is placed on a photograph, it would be primary evidence.[14] The person taking photographs and developing them has to come to the witness-box and depose about both the facts.[15] When a photographer deposed about his taking the photograph and developing it into a negative by himself, it was held that the negative becomes admissible in evidence, but in the case of an enlarged print, the position is different for no print on enlargment can be admitted in evidence without its negative being produced and proved by the photographer.[16]

7. PRINTED COPIES

Where the plaintiff sent printed notices and the press owner was examined, it was held that the notice was proved.[17]

Secondary evidence.

S. 63. Secondary evidence means and includes—

(1) certified copies given under the provisions hereinafter contained;

(2) copies made from the original by mechanical processes which in themselves ensure the accuracy of the copy, and copies compared with such copies;

(3) copies made from or compared with the original;

(4) counterparts of documents as against the parties who did not execute them;

(5) oral accounts of the contents of a document given by some person who has himself seen it.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) A photograph of an original is secondary evidence of its contents, though the two have not been compared, if it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

(b) A copy, compared with a copy of a letter, made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original.

---

10. Kamala Rajamanikkham v. Sushila Thakur Dass, AIR 1983 All 90.
11. Sriramulu Naidu v. State, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 546 : (1962) 1 ALT 57.
12. Makhan Lal v. State, AIR 1958 Cal 517.
13. Rama Reddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162.
14. P.L. Shah v. State of Gujarat, 1982 Cr LJ 763 (Guj-DB).
15. Ghewarlal v. Munni Lal Goyal, 1997 AIHC 3413 (para 7) (Raj), relying on Heera Devi v. Bhabha Kantidas, AIR 1977 Gau 31.
16. Laxman v. Ganpati Ansuya Bai, AIR 1976 Bom 264, relied on in Ghewarlal v. Munni Lal Goyal, 1997 AIHC 3413 (para 7) (Raj).
17. Chhaganram v. Naginlal, ILR 1966 Guj 900.

(c) A copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original is secondary evidence; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

(d) Neither an oral account of a copy compared with the original, nor an oral account of a photograph or machine copy of the original, is secondary evidence of the original.

SYNOPSIS

1. General ... 637
2. Certified Copies [Clause (1)] ... 638
3. Copies prepared by mechanical process [Clause (2)] ... 640
4. Counter Foils ... 640
5. Photographs ... 640
6. Carbon copy ... 641
7. Tape records ... 642
8. Copies made from or compared with original [Clause (3)] ... 643
   Copy ... 643
9. Copies of copies ... 645
10. Counterparts [Clause (4)] ... 645
11. Oral accounts [Clause (5)] ... 646
12. Registration Copy ... 647

COMMENTS

1. GENERAL

This section describes what constitutes 'secondary evidence'. 'Secondary evidence' is evidence which may be given under certain circumstances, in the absence of better evidence which the law requires to be given first.

Secondary evidence means and includes:—

(1) Certified copies;

(2) Copies made from the original by mechanical processes, and copies compared with such copies;

(3) Copies made from or compared with the original;

(4) Counterparts of documents, as against the parties who did not execute them;

(5) Oral accounts of the contents of a document by a person who has seen it.

Clauses 1 to 3 deal with copies of documents.

This section is exhaustive in regard to the kinds of secondary evidence admissible under the Act. The expression "means and includes in Section 63" makes it clear that the five clauses referring to secondary evidence are exhaustive Obviously, drafts of the award, from which the award is faired out do not come under any of the clauses (1), (2), (4) & (5); they do not come under clause (3) of the section. However the drafts could be admissible as secondary evidence, if there be evidence to show that they were compared with the original A piece of written paper cannot be admitted as secondary evidence of the contents of the document simply by its being called a draft.[18]

In a case where the original lease deed was filed by the party in a certain office, it was held that secondary evidence can be given in two ways, viz., oral evidence of persons who were present at the time when the lease was granted, or the production of the copy of the original document, duly certified by the officer; but a copy of the original kept by the party cannot be given as a secondary evidence.[19] It was held that any recitation in the judgement about the pleadings is no evidence of what the pleading contains and cannot be treated as secondary evidence.[20] Similarly, a statement of a witness abstracted from a judgement is not secondary evidence.[21] An abstract translation which is a summary of a document or even a complete translation would not come within the meaning of this section.[22]

---

18. Girdhar Prasad v. Ambika Prasad Thakur, AIR 1969 Pat 218.
19. ILR 1951 Hyd 74.
20. Surya Narayan v. Ratanlal, AIR 1952 Hyd. 34.
21. Saradamba v. Pattabhiramayaih, AIR 1931 Mad 207.
22. Md. Sulaeman v. Hariram, ILR (1940) 21 Lah 363.

A news item, without any further proof through any witness of what had actually happened is of no value. It is at best a second-hand secondary evidence.[23] The news item published in the newspaper without bringing on record the name of the correspondent sending such news or information on the basis of which it was published, cannot be relied upon.[24] Newspapers are not secondary evidence of the facts mentioned by them, unless the correspondent who made the report is examined.[25] Newspaper reports, advertisements or messages are not themselves evidence of the contents thereof and are not admissible unless original manuscript is produced and proved by the concerned person.[26] News items published in daily newspapers cannot ex facie be taken to be of such authenticity which may warrant initiation of an action in the proceedings under Article 226 of the Constitution.[27]

Where the terms of a document were sought to be proved by a judgment containing a translation thereof in a suit which was not between the same parties or their representatives in interest, it was held that neither the translation of the document nor the statement in the judgment was secondary evidence of the contents of the document.[28]

Where the existence of the document was proved from the facts mentioned in the plaint and the reply of the defendants, permission to lead secondary evidence on the ground of loss of the document was held to be proper.[29] Where the document in question is merely a receipt and not a bill of exchange or a promissory note, the permission to lead secondary evidence cannot be refused on the ground of inadmissibility of the primary evidence on account of it being insufficiently stamped as it can be admitted in evidence on payment of penal stamp duty under the Stamp Act.[30] Where the original document is inadmissible as being not duly stamped, secondary evidence of its contents cannot be allowed to be received.[31]

However, secondary evidence cannot be made admissible mechanically. Sufficient reason for non-production of the original document must be shown.[32] Where the tenant filed the xerox copy of the money receipt without substantiating his plea that the original was lost and the xerox copy was authentic, refusal to accept the xerox copy in evidence was held to be proper.[33]

2. CERTIFIED COPIES [CLAUSE (1)]

Section 76 defines the expression "certified copies".

See also Sections 77, 78, 79 and 86.

The correctness of certified copies will be presumed under Section 79; but that of other copies will have to be proved. This proof may be afforded by calling a witness who can swear that he had compared the copy tendered in evidence with the original, or with some other person read as the contents of the original and that such is correct.

A copy of the Municipal record which is not issued in accordance with the requirements of the Municipal Act, is not relevant.[34]

If a registered sale deed is not available, for any reason, certified copy thereof could be adduced as secondary evidence; other evidence if received would always be of a very weak character.[35] Where the

---

23. Samant N. Balakrishna v. George Fernandez, AIR 1969 SC 1201.
24. Manmohan Singh v. State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 3695 (para 14) (P&H).
25. Bawa Sarup v. R. AIR 1925 Lah 299; Sangappa Anandappa v. Shivamurthi Swamy, AIR 1961 Mys 106; Khilmul Topandas v. Arjundas Tulsidas, AIR 1959 Raj 280.
26. Quamarul Islam v. S.K. Kanta, AIR 1994 SC 1733 (paras 47 and 48). See also C. Sivanandan v. State, AIR 1995 Ker 354 (para 9).
27. Sudha Gupta v. State of Madhya Pradesh (FB), 1999 Cr LJ 1742, at p. 1752 (MP).
28. Jagannath v. Secretary of State, AIR 1922 Mad 334.
29. Sobha Rani v. Ravi Kumar, AIR 1999 P&H 21 (para 4).
30. Kundan Mal v. Nand Kishore, AIR 1994 Raj 1 (para 39).
31. Shiv Kant Pandey v. Ishwari Singh, AIR 1997 Raj 155.
32. John Mithalal Desai v. Dineshbhai K. Vora, 1998 AIHC 1894 (paras 12 and 13) (Guj).
33. Anand Kumar Singhal v. Banarsi Lall, 1998 AIHC 2287 (para 9) (Sik).
34. Ganesh Prasad v. Badri Prasad Bhola Nath, AIR 1980 All 361.
35. Nambai v. Gitabai, AIR 1958 SC 706; State of Rajasthan v. Jeoraj, AIR 1990 SC 90; Land Acquisition Officer v. V. Venkata Rao, AIR 1991 AP 31 (FB); K.M. Shaffi v. Dayamathi Bai, 1999 AIHC 4071 (para 22) (Kant), relying on Kalyan Singh v. Smt. Chhoti, AIR 1990 SC 396, holding G.C. Papanna v. Kenchamma, II R 1998 Kant 3450 per incuriam and distinguishing Sital Das v. Sant Ram, AIR 1954 SC 606.

applicant for probate does not have the original will, he can file a certified copy along with his application in order to comply with Section 276 of the Succession Act.[36] When the original was proved to be lost or destroyed or detained by the opponent or third person who does not produce it after notice, secondary evidence is admissible by production of a certified copy of the document.[37] When the non-availability of the original registered adoption deed has been explained, a certified copy of the document is admissible in evidence.[38] Copies of registered documents are admissible as secondary evidence where the person in whose custody the original should be swears that they are not with him though there is no evidence as to the loss or otherwise of the original.[39] When a registered sale deed is copied in the book under the Registration Act, which is a public document, the certified copy of the sale deed issued by the Registrar's Office can be admitted as secondary evidence.[40] Certified copy of a moneylender's license is admissible licence.[41] When the execution of the original was proved from the endorsement of the registrar, the certified copy was held to be admissible[42] but where service of the original letters upon the defendant was not proved, their copies carried little evidentiary value.[43] A deposition can be proved by a certified copy but the fact that is the deposition of the deponent himself has got to be proved aliunde.[44]

Though a certified copy of a document (sale deed) is as good as the original, and its correctness is presumed, mere registration is not proof of its execution. The execution, i.e., the signature of the executant, must be proved to be in his handwriting, and the contents of the certified copy must be proved in the ordinary way.[45] A certificate issued by a registrar is to some extent evidence of the execution of the document, and the admission of the signature before the registrar by the executant can be evidence of the execution of the document.[46] Reliance can be placed on the recitals of the true copy of the document mentioning amicable partition issued from the office of the Sub-Registrar bearing his seal and signature, particularly in view of the conflicting oral evidence.[47]

Certified copies of the Rules of Business made under Article 166(3) of the Constitution are admissible in evidence and judicial notice has to be taken of those rules as they are statutory rules.[48]

Under Section 63 read with 79 of the Act, a certified copy of a document can be admitted without any formal proof.[49]

In the case of a sale deed of 1896, when the party failed to prove the loss of the original but produced a certified copy, for proving the contents of the document, it was held that mere production of a certified copy would not be sufficient to justify the presumption of due execution of the original under Section 90.[50] A certified copy is sufficient secondary evidence under Section 63, of the existence, and contents of the deed, but not of its execution, which must be proved as required under Section 68 of the Evidence Act.[51]

Where the existence of a document was admitted, it was held that, by such admission, secondary evidence furnished by a certified copy assumes the character of primary evidence.[52]

---

36. Rajrani Shegal (Smt.) v. Parshottam, AIR 1992 Del 134. See also Chatra Pratap Singh v. Tulsi Prasad, 2000 AIHC 4031 (para 6) (MP).
37. Sanatan Mohanty v. Baidhar Rout, AIR 1986 Ori 66; S.K. Moula-Buksh v. Dharam Chand Raniwalla, (1961) 65 Cal WN 881.
38. Kartar Singh v. Dasaundha Singh, 1972 Cur LJ 130 (Punj).
39. Hutchegowda v. Chennigegowda, AIR 1953 Mys 49.
40. Rama Chandra Mahji v. Humbai Majhi, AIR 1989 Ori 27.
41. Shivalingarah v. Chandrasekhara, AIR 1993 Kant 29. See also K. Shivalingaiah v. B.V. Chandrashekara Gowda, AIR 1993 Kant 29 (para 18).
42. 1970 Pat LR 342.
43. J Patel & Co. v. National Federation of Industrial Co-operatives Ltd., AIR 1996 Cal 253 (para 8).
44. State v. Abdul Qaywm Anwari, ILR 1956 Hyd 436.
45. Lourembam Hernant Singh v. Laishram Angabal Singh, AIR 1979 Gau 68.
46. Gurbux Singh v. Bishan Dass, AIR 1970 Punj 182.
47. Monoranjan Paul v. Narendra Kumar Paul, AIR 1994 Gau 64 (para 11).
48. Management of the Advance Insurance Co. Ltd. v. Gurudasmal, Supdt. of Police, AIR 1969 Del 330.
49. 1970 All WR (HC) 69.
50. Sardaran (Mst.) v. Sunderlal Baldeo Prasad, AIR 1968 All 363.
51. Brajraj Singh v. Yogendrapal Singh, AIR 1952 MB 146, relying on Sheikh Karimullah v. Gudar, AIR 1925 All 56; Dy. Commissioner of Partabgarh v. The Universal Film Co. Ltd., AIR 1950 All 696.
52. Lakshmi Kanto Roy v. Nishi Konto Roy, (1967) 71 Cal WN 362.

3. COPIES PREPARED BY MECHANICAL PROCESS [CLAUSE (2)]

This clause deals with copies prepared by mechanical process and copies compared with such copies. In the former case, as the copy is made from the original it ensures accuracy. To this category belong copies by photography, lithography, cyclostyle, carbon copies. Section 62 explanation (2) states that, where a number of documents are made by one uniform process, as in the case of printing, lithography, or photography, each is primary evidence of the contents of the rest; but where they are all copies of a common original, they are not primary evidence of the contents of the original.

Illustrations (a) concerns the first Part of Clause (2). It deals with a photograph of an original, and it is admissible under this section though the copy and the original have not been compared, provided it is proved that the thing photographed was the original.

Illustrations (b) states that a copy compared with a copy of a letter made by a copying machine is secondary evidence of the contents of the letter, if it is shown that the copy made by the copying machine was made from the original. This refers to the second part of Clause (2).

Illustrations (c) says that a copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original is secondary evidence; but the copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.

Copies of copies kept in a registration office, when signed and sealed by the registering officer, are admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the originals.[53]

When the prosecution does not establish that the copies in question were made from originals by mechanical process, no reliance can be placed by the prosecution on those copies.[54]

Letter press copies and photographs of writings are secondary evidence.

4. COUNTER FOILS

The counter foils of rent receipts being an admission in favour of the landlord are not admissible against the tenant.[55]

5. PHOTOGRAPHS

HALSBURY[56] states: "Photographs properly verified on oath by a person able to speak to their accuracy are generally admissible to prove the identity of persons, or of the configuration of land as it existed at a particular moment, or the contents of a lost document."

"X-ray photographs are admissible in evidence to determine the extent of a physical injury or disease, provided it is proved that the photograph is a photograph of the person injured or diseased. The person who took the photograph should be called, unless his evidence is dispensed with by consent".

PHIPSON[57] states: "A copy made by a copying machine is regarded only as a secondary evidence of the original. And printed, lithographed and photographed copies—though, as we have seen, primary evidence of each other's contents—are merely secondary evidence of the common original.....the accuracy of a photographic copy, particularly of external objects, must, like that of a map or plan, be established on oath, to the satisfaction of the judge, either by the photographer or by someone who can speak to its correctness. Where the photograph is tendered merely as a general representation of physical objects, slighter proof will be required than when matters of detail are all-important, as in cases of disputed handwriting. In a criminal case, a photograph has been held admissible to show the permanent and material structure of a house, but not the interior disposition of the furniture, etc., which was required to be proved by witnesses".

---

53. Section 57(5), Act XVI of 1908.
54. Subramanya v. State, (1976) 1 Kant LJ 178 : 1975 Mad LJ (Cri) 31.
55. Minati Sen v. Kalipada Ganguly, AIR 1997 Cal 386, distinguishing Idandas v. Anant Ram Chandra Phadke, AIR 1982 SC 127.
56. 4th Edn. Vol. 17 (para 224), p. 158.
57. 13th Edn. Page 892 (para 36-17).

A photographic picture cannot be relied on as proof in itself of the dimensions of the depicted object or objects, and cannot be made properly available to establish the relative proportions of such objects, except by evidence of personal knowledge or scientific experience to demonstrate accurately the facts sought to be established.[58] Photographs, and particularly photographs of persons, taken several hours after the death are very unsafe guides for gauging the build and strength of a person, because the physical and chemical changes that follow physical violence and death make this obvious.[59]

Whether a photograph, is a correct reproduction of the original depends on many facts such as correctness of the lens, the state of the weather, the skill of the operator, the colour of the impression, the purity or the chemical accuracy of forming the angle at which the original was inclined to the sensitive plate, the possible fraud of the operator, etc. The magnified photographic copies of it can be safely received in evidence even without examining the photographer, as the accuracy of the copies can be readily tested by comparison with the original if necessary. That as shown in Illustrations (a) the negatives and the photographic prints are secondary evidence of the original (cheque) which is the primary evidence.[60]

The accuracy of the photographic copies, particularly of external objects, as shown in the photograph, is to be established on oath, to the satisfaction of the court, either by the photographer or some one who can speak to their accuracy.[61] Before admitting a photograph, the person who took the photograph has to be examined, and he should produce the negative.[62]

A photostat copy of a letter is a piece of secondary evidence, and it can be admitted in case original is proved to have been lost or not immediately available, for given reasons; it is not conclusive proof in itself of the truthfulness of the contents contained therein.[63] Photostat copies of documents should be accepted in evidence after examining the original records as genuineness of a document was a fundamental question.[64] The witness can be shown and questioned as regards the xerox copy of the document on record and the same will not amount to admission of the said document in evidence. If the witness admits the signature thereon, an objection can be raised at that time before the Court that the document, being a copy, could not be exhibited.[65] In a case where the photostat copy of the original was produced, and there was no proof of its accuracy or of its having been compared with, or its being true reproduction of, the original it was held that the photostat copy cannot be considered as secondary evidence, as necessary foundation for its reception was not laid.[66] A photostat copy of a document is not admissible as secondary evidence unless proved to be genuine or the signatory accepts his signature.[67]

Where a photostat copy of a document was endorsed by the counsel of the party as a true copy, it was held that it may be received as secondary evidence.[68] Photostat copy of a rent note, though not compared with the original, is admissible as secondary evidence.[69]

6. CARBON COPY

A carbon copy of a signature is a piece of secondary evidence within the meaning of Section 63(2) of the Evidence Act, being a copy made by a mechanical process which ensures its correctness.[70] In a claim petition, the original insurance policy was not filed by the owner of the vehicle. He did not object

---

58. United States Shipping Board v. The Ship 'St. Albans', AIR 1931 PC 189, 194.
59. In re : Shivanna, AIR 1955 Mys 17.
60. Brahma* v. Chartered Bank of India, AIR 1956 Cal 399.
61. Latino Andre* v. Union Government, AIR 1968 Goa 132.
62. Sabera Begum* v. G.N. Ansari, 1979 Bom CR R 110 (Bom).
63. 1978 JKLR 107. See also Ram Pal Singh v. Syndicate Bank, AIR 2000 P&H 296 (paras 5 and 7).
64. Govt. of A.P. v. Karri Chinna Venkata Reddy, AIR 1994 SC 591 (para 2). See also Northland Traders v. Bank of Baroda, AIR 1994 All 381 (para 5).
65. Ahmedabad New Textile Mills v. Rajubhai Dalchandbhai, AIR 1999 Guj 148 (para 4).
66. British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. Shanmugha Vilas Cashew Industries, Quilon, ILR (1974) 2 Ker 150.
67. Subarna Barik* v. State of Orissa, AIR 1976 Ori 236.
68. British India Steam Navigation Co. Ltd. v. Shanmugha Vilas Cashew Industries, ILR (1974) 2 Ker 150.
69. Ratan Sharma v. Ambesedar Drycleaners, AIR 1997 Raj 75, distinguishing Chandanbai v. Jagjiwanlal, AIR 1958 Raj 110. See also D. Sarasu v. Jayalakshmi, 2001 AIHC 2484 (para 11) (Mad).
70. Nityananda Roy v. Rashbehari Roy, AIR 1953 Cal 456.

to the genuineness of the printed copy of the policy giving particulars filed by the Insurance Company. He could not be allowed to raise objection that the same could not be read as evidence.[71]

7. TAPE RECORDS

In the case of a tape-recording, which was referred to by the petitioner in support of his assertions as regards the substance of what passed between him and the Chief Minister of Punjab on several matters, there was no denial of the genuineness of the tape-record; and there was also no assertion that the voices of the persons were not those which they purported to be. On those facts, the Supreme Court held that the tape-recordings can be legal evidence by way of corroborating the statement of a person who deposes that the other speaker and he carried on that conversation, or even of the statement of the person who may depose that he overheard the conversation between the two persons and that what they actually stated had been tape-recorded. What weight is to be attached will depend on other factors which may be established in a particular case.[72]

In Yusuf Alli Osmail v. State of Maharashtra,[73] it was held that if a statement is relevant, an accurate tape-record of the statement is also relevant and admissible; that the time and place and accuracy of the recording must be proved by a competent witness, and the voices must be properly identified; that one of the features of magnetic tape-recording is the ability to erase and re-use the recording media; that, because of this facility of erasure and re-use, the evidence must be received with caution, and the court must be satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that the record has not been tampered with.[74]

The Supreme Court held that the tape itself is primary and direct evidence of the matter recorded, that it is admissible not only to corroborate under Section 156 of this Act but also for contradiction under Section 155(3) for testing the veracity of the witness under Section 146(1), and for impeaching his impartiality, under exception (2) of Section 153.[75]

Where the voice is denied by the alleged maker thereof, recording of a voice of a witness for comparison with, and identification of the earlier recorded voice is neither expressly nor impliedly prohibited under any statute.[76]

Statements in the tape-recorder can be admitted after proving that they were accurately recorded.[77] A previous inconsistent statement recorded on the tape-recorder is admissible for the purpose of contradiction.[78]

Where the cassette containing the speech of the returned candidate in the election, tape-recorded by the police officer, was tendered in evidence by the election petitioner but how and why it came to be recorded and how the petitioner came to know about it, was not explained by him, it was not relied upon as a piece of evidence.[79]

The Supreme Court observed:[80]

"The conditions for admissibility of a tape recorded statement may be stated as follows:—

1. The voice of the speaker must be duly identified by the maker of the record or by others who recognise his voice. In other words, it manifestly follows as a logical corrollary that the first condition for the admissibility of such a statement is identification of the voice of the speaker. Where the voice has

---

71. Amrit Kaur v. Chaman Lal, AIR 1994 HP 21 (para 18).
72. Partap Singh v. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 72 : (1964) 4 SCR 733, on appeal from Partap Singh (Dr.) v. State of Punjab, AIR 1963 Punj 298; Mahabir Prasad Verma v. Dr. Surinder Kaur, AIR 1982 SC 1043 followed in State v. Ravi, 2000 Cr LJ 1125 (para 56) (Del).
73. AIR 1968 SC 147 : (1967) 3 SCR 720.
74. Ziyauddin Burhanuddin Bukhari v. Brijmohan Ramdas Mehra, 1975 SCR (Sup) 281 : AIR 1975 SC 1788; Malkani v. State, (1973) 2 SCR 417 : AIR 1973 SC 157; R. Venkatesan v. State, 1980 Cr LJ 41 (Mad), Sumitra v. Calcutta Dyeing Co., AIR 1976 Cal 99; relying on R v. Robson, (1972) 2 All ER 699; R v. Maqsud, (1965) 2 All ER 464; R v. Stevenson, (1971) 1 All ER 678; Ram Singh v. Col. Ramsingh, AIR 1986 SC 3.
75. Ramareddy v. V.V. Giri, AIR 1971 SC 1162 : (1971) 1 SCR 399.
76. Dial Singh v. Rajpal, AIR 1969 P&H 350.
77. Manindra Nath v. Biswanath, 67 Cal WN 191.
78. Rupchand v. Mahabir, AIR 1956 Punj 173.
79. Quamarul Islam v. S.K. Kanta, AIR 1994 SC 1733 (paras 56t and 57).
80. Ram Singh v. Col. Ram Singh, AIR 1986 SC 3 at p. 11. See also K.S. Mohan v. Sandhya Mohan, AIR 1993 Mad 59 (paras 13 and 14).

been denied by the speaker, it will require very strict proof to determine whether or not it was really his voice.

2. The accuracy of the tape-recorded statement has to be proved by the maker of the record by satisfactory evidence, direct or circumstantial.

3. Every possibility of tampering with or erasure of a part of a tape recorded statement must be ruled out, otherwise it may render the said statement out of context and, therefore, inadmissible.

4. The statement must be relevant according to the rules of the Evidence Act.

5. The recorded cassette must be carefully sealed and kept in safe or official custody.

6. The voice of the speaker should be clearly audible and not lost or distorted by other sounds or disturbances".

A taped conversation, not compared with the voice, was not allowed as evidence.[81]

8. COPIES MADE FROM OR COMPARED WITH ORIGINAL [CLAUSE (3)]

Copy.—Copies made from the original, or copies compared with the original, are admissible as secondary evidence. A copy of a copy, when compared with the original, would be receivable as secondary evidence of the original. [Illustrations (b)].

A copy of a certified copy of a document, which has not been compared with the original, cannot be admitted in evidence, such a copy being neither primary nor secondary evidence of the contents of the original.[82]

When a document is an accurate or true and full reproduction of the original, it would be a copy.[83]

To admit secondary evidence, it is not sufficient to show merely that the original document is lost; the secondary evidence itself must be of the nature described in Section 63. A "true copy" of a document will not be admissible under Section 63, unless it is shown that it had been made from or compared with the original.[84]

Ordinary copy of a sale deed cannot be admitted as secondary evidence[85] but copies of sale-deeds of acquired land are admissible in evidence, provided the parties to the document are examined to prove the document.[86]

The Supreme Court, dealing with Section 14 of the Arbitration Act, explained the meaning of the expression "signed copy of award" and observed: "Signing means writing one's name on some document or paper; so long as there is the signature of the arbitrator or umpire on the copy of the award filed in court, and it shows that the person signing, authenticated the accuracy or correctness of the copy, the document would be a signed copy of the award; it would in such circumstances be immaterial whether the arbitrator or umpire puts down the words "certified to be true copy" before signing the copy of the award above his signature; when a document is an accurate or true and full reproduction of the original, it would be a copy".[87]

Where the plaintiff, in a suit for ejectment, produced a copy of the notice to quit, in proof of the fact that the notice was valid, and the original was in possession of the other party, and the plaintiff swore that it was a true copy of the original, it was held that it was not necessary that the scribe of the copy should be produced, that any one who had heard the original and the copy read out to him, might swear that the contents of the two were identical, and it would be admissible.[88]

Where a handwritten copy of the adoption deed was tendered in evidence, in the absence of evidence as to who made the copy, from what it was made, or whether it was compared with the original, it must be disregarded.[89]

---

81. Joginder Kaur v. Surjit Singh, AIR 1985 PH 128.
82. Ram Prasad v. Raghunandan Prasad, ILR (1985) 7 All 738, 743; Narasimham v. Babu Rao, AIR 1939 Mad 340.
83. Hindusthan Construction Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 526 : (1967) 1 SCR 843.
84. Parekh Brothers v. Kartick Chandra Saha, AIR 1968 Cal 532.
85. Kalyan Singh v. Chhoti, AIR 1990 SC 396.
86. Spl. Deputy Collector, Madras v. P. Mathusoothanan, 2000 AIHC 3010 (paras 13 and 14) (Mad).
87. Hindusthan Construction Co. Ltd. v. Union of India, AIR 1967 SC 526 : (1967) 2 SCJ, 219.
88. Babulal v. Gangasaran, AIR 1952 All 48.
89. Laxman Ganpati v. Anusuyabi, AIR 1976 Bom 264.

Section 63(3) refers to two types of copies:

(1) A copy made from the original;

(2) A copy compared with the original.

A copy falling under either of the two heads will be admissible as secondary evidence.[1]

The original dying declaration was lost. A head constable who maintained a copy testified to its accuracy. This was allowed as corroborative evidence.[2]

A certificate as to the date of birth, on the basis of an entry in the register of a church, maintained in the regular course, is not admissible.[3] Where a copy of report which was typed by a typist was not a copy typed by him nor was it a carbon copy it was held not admissible as secondary evidence.[4] An abstract translation or a complete translation of a document is not 'copy made from and compared with the original' within the meaning of this clause.[5] A copy of the original letter addressed by the Government to the Commissioner, prepared privately by a party at the time of inspection of relevant file, was held not secondary evidence of the original letter.[6] Where a defendant did not state anywhere in his evidence or produce evidence that the document tendered is a copy made from the original, or that it was compared with the original, and when he failed to prove by evidence the conditions for invoking Section 63, it was held that the document tendered could not be received as secondary evidence under Section 63(1) or (2) or (3) of the Evidence Act.[7] Where a printed copy purports to bear the signature of the candidate's agent in an election, it was held that the candidate's signature does not establish the fact that he really signed it. when the original was not produced by the printer and proprietor of the press where the copies were printed.[8]

When a document was admitted without objection, it was held that omission to object to its admission implied that it was a true copy, and it was not open to the appellate court to consider whether the copy was properly compared with the original or not.[9]

An entry in a deed-writer's register, which contains all the essential particulars contained in the document itself and is also signed or thumb marked by the person executing the document amounts to a copy and is admissible in evidence.[10]

Where a draft of a document is made and on that basis an original is prepared it was held that the draft cannot be treated as secondary evidence.[11] but the Kerala High Court has held that a draft can be accepted in evidence if there is proof that the original has been prepared without any corrections and that it is an exact copy of the draft.[12] The Allahabad High Court has similarly held that Section 63 is not exhaustive of all types of secondary evidence. It, therefore, allowed the draft notice from which the final notice was prepared to be produced as secondary evidence.[13]

It is not necessary for the proof of the bye-laws of a company, that the original copy of the bye-laws bearing any mark of approval of the Board of Directors be produced. The bye-laws can be proved by other evidence.[14]

---

1. Harijiwan Sahu v. Jairam Sahu, AIR 1989 Pat 96.
2. Aher Ram Gova v. State of Gujarat, 1979 Cr LJ 1081 : AIR 1979 SC 1567.
3. Harendra Nath Burman v. Suprova Burman, AIR 1989 Cal 120.
4. R.M. Pandye v. Automobile Products of India Ltd., AIR 1956 Bom 115.
5. Muhammad Suleman v. Hari Ram, ILR (1940) 21 Lah 363.
6. Nurmahamed v. Md. Abdul Karim, AIR 1970 Manipur 7.
7. Patel Maganbhai v. Patel Ishwar Bhai, AIR 1984 Guj 69.
8. Ghayar Ali Khan v. Keshav Gupta, AIR 1959 All 264.
9. Chhatra Kumari Debi v. Parbati Kuer (Mst.), AIR 1936 Pat 600; Latchayya Subudhi v. Seetaramayya, AIR 1925 Mad 257; Kedarnath v. Pradhan, AIR 1937 Nag 13; Ramlochan Misra v. Pandit Harinath Misra, AIR 1922 Pat 565; Basanta Kumar Das v. Bihayak Das & Ors 1974 Cut LT 1214; Padman v. Hanwanta, AIR 1915 PC 111
10. Sant Ram v. Ghasitaram, ILR 1956 (9) Pun 193.
11. Devichand v. Hari Kishan Das, (1952) 2 All 531.
12. P. Kunhammad v. Moosankutty, AIR 1972 Ker 76.
13. Lachcho v. Dwari Mal, AIR 1986 All 303.
14. Dalmia v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1821.

9. COPIES OF COPIES

Illustration (c) lays down in express language that "a copy transcribed from a copy, but afterwards compared with the original is secondary evidence; but a copy not so compared is not secondary evidence of the original, although the copy from which it was transcribed was compared with the original.[15] A copy of a copy is held admissible if the prepared copy is compared with the original, or a copy of the original is taken by means of a mechanical process.[16] The certified copies of sale-deeds are admissible in evidence but they cannot be relied upon without examining the persons connected with the same and the parties thereto.[17] A genuine copy of the original can be looked into as secondary evidence under Section 63 but not a copy of a copy.[18] A copy of a copy can be admitted in evidence by consent of the parties, as it is open to the opposite party to dispense with strict proof of the document.[19]

A copy of a copy is inadmissible when the original itself was not accounted for satisfactorily.[20]

However, a copy of a copy which was kept in the Registration Office and signed and sealed by the registering officer, as required under Section 57(5) of the Registration Act, is admissible for proving the contents of the original.[21]

A record printed in the High Court is not a copy made from or compared with the original but only copy of a copy. In the absence of evidence that the printed copy had been compared with the original, it could not be treated as secondary evidence of the original under Section 63(3).[22] A copy of the office copy of a sale deed, issued by an official receiver, cannot be taken to be a certified copy and therefore inadmissible under Section 63(3).[23] Where a document is a copy of the copy, and the person who made that copy does not give evidence, the document is inadmissible.[24] Where a person made a pencil copy from the original and a fair copy was made from that pencil copy, it was held that the copy of the copy is neither admissible nor could be proved.[25] Where the original mortgage deed was unregistered it was held that secondary evidence by a copy of a copy of the mortgage deed was not admissible.[26]

The decision in Alapathi Narasinhaw v. Ailoori Baburao[27] distinguished an earlier Madras decision in Ganapathi Aiyar v. Sankasayappa Mudliar[28], on the ground that the earlier practice was that the printing was being done by the Government Printing Press and before the final order for striking was given the proofs were compared with the original, but later the practice was changed into comparison of the proof with the typed copies sent to the press.

10. COUNTERPARTS [CLAUSE (4)]

A tenant filed receipts issued by the landlord to show that the lease granted to him was a yearly one. When the landlord wanted to show that it was a monthly tenancy, by tendering the counterfoils of receipts, it was held by the Supreme Court that the entries in the counterfoils, being an admission in his own favour, were not admissible against the tenant, and they cannot be called counterparts of the lease.[29]

---

15. Krishna Subala Bose (Smt.) v. Dhanapati Dutta, AIR 1957 Cal 59; Suganchand v. Balchand, AIR 1957 Raj 89; Rajendra Narayana Singh Dev v. Biharilal Chakravarthy, AIR 1932 Pat 157; Commissioner of Wakfs v. Kawah, 58 Cal WN 533; Badrunnisa Begum v. Mohamooda Begum, AIR 2001 AP 394 (para 5).
16. Hanuman Box Agarwalla* v. *Bibhuti Prosad Singh, AIR 1950 Assam 17.
17. A.P.S.R.T.C.* v. *P. Venkaiah, AIR 1997 SC 2600.
18. Aswini Kumar* v. *Union Territory of Tripura, AIR 1969 Tri 26.
19. Narasayya* v. *Krishnamurthi, AIR 1928 Mad 1255.
20. Mahadeva v. Virabasava, AIR 1948 PC 114; Raja Neelard Singh v. Naseeb Singh, 6 WR 80.
21. Suganchand* v. *Balchand, AIR 1957 Raj 89.
22. Subrahmanya Sastry v. Lakshmi Narasamma, AIR 1958 A.P. 22; relying on Narasimham v. Babu Rao, AIR 1939 Mad 40.
23. Ramagopal Naicker v. Muthu Krishna Ayyar, AIR 1957 Mad 1.
24. Suganchand v. Balchand, AIR 1957 Raj 89; Narendra v. Rajendra, AIR 1941 Cal 526.
25. Union of India v. Omprakash Gupta, ILR (1969) 2 Punj 473.
26. Yasin Baig v. Haranarayan Agarwalla, ILR 1970 Cut 711.
27. AIR 1939 Mad 40.
28. AIR 1929 Mad 187.
29. Idandas v. Anant Ramachandra, AIR 1982 SC 127.

11. ORAL ACCOUNTS [CLAUSE (5)]

Secondary evidence includes, according to clause (5), oral accounts of the contents of a document, given by some person who has himself seen the original document.[30]

But, a written statement of the contents of a copy of a document, the original of which the person making the statement has not seen, cannot be accepted as secondary evidence.[31]

The Privy Council in Ma Mi v. Kallander,[32] explained the import of Clause (5) thus: "It means that the oral evidence of the contents of the document must be given by some person who has seen the contents, that is, to say, who had read the document. Evidence that the witness saw the document and heard it read out by someone else is only hearsay, so far as the contents are concerned, and does not fulfil the requirements of Section 60 as to the oral evidence generally."[33]

A person who is unacquainted with the language (Persian character in that case) in which the document was written, cannot read the document and so cannot give secondary evidence.[34]

The Privy Council, in Munnalal v. Mst. Kashibhai[35] held that the statement as to the contents of a document by a witness who has not himself read the document, is not secondary evidence of the contents of the document, within the meaning of Section 63(5) of the Act.[36]

The clause does not necessarily mean that a witness who is called to give evidence as to a lost document must have himself read the document. He would be a competent witness if he, having physically seen the document, had the contents thereof read out or explained to him.[37] Secondary evidence of an endorsement on a railway receipt can be given by a witness who had himself made it or seen it.[38] Where an attesting witness proved the contents of a will, it was held that the evidence was good secondary evidence within Section 63(5), when the original had been lost.[39]

Where the original of a survey and settlement report which was based on a Jamabandi, was not produced and was not admitted or exhibited in evidence, it was held that the report cannot be treated as secondary evidence of the contents of the Jamabandi.[40] It was held that oral evidence of a witness, for proving entries in a diary which was neither tendered as evidence nor was one maintained by him, is not admissible. Even if the witnesses used the diary for refreshing his memory, his evidence is inadmissible, as the diary did not amount to a document as contemplated by Section 63.[41] In regard to the computation of the market value of an acquired land, on the basis of sales during the past 5 years, evidence of the person who prepared a sales statement is not admissible as secondary evidence of the sale deeds.[42]

In respect of the contents of a lost document, it was held that the effect of Sections 59, 61, 62(5) and 65 read together, is that the contents of a lost document may be proved by oral evidence, when such evidence is admissible as secondary evidence.[43]

---

30. Ma Mi v. Kallander Ammal (No. 2), (1926) 54 IA 61 : 29 Bom LR 800 : ILR 5 Ran 18 : AIR 1927 PC 15.
31. Kanayalal v. Pyarabai, ILR (1882) 7 Bom 139.
32. AIR 1927 PC 16 : 54 IA 61 at 65.
33. Kallander Ammal v. Ma Mi, ILR 2 Rang : 1924 R 363; affirmed, see also Trimbak Narayan v. Yadorao Shankar Rao, AIR 1940 Nag 116; Mangilal v. Ram Dayal, AIR 1951 Ajmeer 21; Ghure v. Chatrapal, 23 IC 11; Ramji Das v. Mihin Lal, AIR 1923 All 441.
34. Ramkrishna Panda v. Arjuno Padhano, 1963 Ori 29.
35. AIR 1947 PC 15.
36. See also Dalu v. Juharmal, AIR 1952 Raj 91; Katihar Jute Mills v. Calcutta Match Works, AIR 1958 Pat 133.
37. Mehin Lal v. Ramji Das, ILR (1924) 47 All 13. (This decision can be no longer be good law in view of the above Privy Council decision.)
38. J.S. Basappa v. Provincial Government of Madras, AIR 1959 AP 192.
39. Deorao Amrita v. Raibhan Sambhaji, AIR 1954 Nag 357. See also K R Rajalakshmi Devi v. K R Chandrasekhar, 1998 AIHC 1397 (paras 28, 29, 31, 32 and 36) (Kant).
40. Surendra Nath v. Kamakihya Narayan Singh, AIR 1930 PC 45.
41. Khemchand Premchand v. Dalhousi Jute Co. Ltd., ILR (1968) 1 Cal 277.
42. Collector of Raigarh v. Chaturbhuj Panda, AIR 1964 MP 196; Kishna Lal v. Sohan Lal, AIR 1955 Raj 45.
43. Fuljari Lal v. Ram Sarup, AIR 1953 MB 177.

12. REGISTRATION COPY

Where the plaintiff took steps to produce original will but it was not produced by the parties in whose possession it was, it was held that the registration copy of the will which she filed, was admissible in evidence as secondary evidence.[44]

Proof of documents by primary evidence.

S. 64. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases hereinafter mentioned.

SYNOPSIS

1. General principle ... 647
2. Objection to proof ... 650
3. Section 64 & 91 ... 650
4. Document ... 650

COMMENTS

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES

This section is based on the best evidence rule, subject to certain exceptions contained in some of the sections of the Evidence Act following this section. Documents must be proved by primary evidence except in the cases provided by the succeeding sections. This section has to be read along with Sections 61, 62 and 65 to 67.

STEPHEN in his Introduction (at page 144) has observed: "Primary evidence is required as a rule, but this is subject to seven important exceptions in which secondary evidence may be given."[45]

The provisions of Sections 60, 64 & 91 of the Evidence Act are based on the cardinal rule that the best available evidence should be brought before the court.[46]

A written document can only be proved by the instrument itself. It is a general rule, that if a person wants to get at the contents of a written document the proper way is to produce it, if he can. "Where the contents of any document are in question, either as a fact directly in issue, or a subalternate principal fact, the document is the proper evidence of its own contents. But where a written instrument or document of any description is not a fact in issue, and is merely used as evidence to prove some fact, independent proof aliunde is receivable. Thus, although a receipt has been given for the payment of money, proof of the fact of payment may be made, by any person who witnessed it.... So, although where the contents of a marriage register are in issue, verbal or other evidence of those contents is not receivable, the fact of the marriage may be proved by the independent evidence of a person who was present at it[47]".

In PHIPSON[48] it is stated : "The present rule (corresponding to Section 64) applies only to proof of the contents of documents and not to cases involving their existence or identity, e.g., proceedings for conversion, detention, negligent, loss or theft, for here there is no distinction between a document and other articles, and the plaintiff is not bound to put it in, eventhough the defendant may be willing to produce it."[49]

This section only refers to the method of proof of the terms of a contract, grant or disposition of property. It does not exclude secondary evidence altogether, in proof of the transaction itself.[50]

The Privy Council in Easwara Moorthy v. Emperor observed: "Sections 62, 64 and 65 of the Evidence Act define the only evidence which the law permits in order to prove a warrant of arrest, and that is, under Section 62 of the Act, production of the original order, or, under the conditions specified in Section 65, of a certified copy. A warrant of arrest is a public document which affects the personal

---

44. Sakunthala v. Vijayalakshmi, 2001 AIHC 273 (para 15) (Mad).
45. They are referred to in clauses (a) to (g) of Section 65.
46. In re : Vadlamudi Kutumba Rao, AIR 1957 AP 595.
47. BEST, 12th Edn., S. 223, p. 209; Balbhadhar Prasad v. The Maharaja of Bettia, ILR (1887) 9 All 351, 356.
48. 15th Edn. (2000), para 41-04, page 1104.
49. Bucher v. Jarrett, 3 B. & P. 143.
50. Makhdumun (Mst.) v. Saiyed Altaf Hussain, AIR 1922 Pat 222; Kamal Kant Azad v. Emperor, AIR 1944 Pat 354.

liberty of the subject. The statute as quoted above, prescribes its form. It has to bear the appropriate signature and seal. Any laxity of proof might have serious consequences. It might, for instances, lead to error as to the identity of the person to be apprehended. Secondary evidence, other than a certified copy, would not necessarily, or even obviously, show that the statutory form had been complied with.[51]

The Supreme Court, in Purushothama Reddiyar v. Perumal[52], held that the documents may either be proved by witnesses or marked on admission, that, when it was marked on admission without any reservation, the contents also are to be taken as admitted; in evidence though the document may not be conclusive evidence. The result is that the contents cannot be challenged by way of cross-examination or otherwise. It is not open to a party to object to the admissibility of the documents as they were marked as exhibits without any objection from such party.[53]

When a document is relied on by a party, definite proof of its genuineness has to be given.[54]

The contents of a sale deed can only be proved by the executant. If he is not examined, it would be inadmissible, though proof of his signature is offered.[55] Where neither the sale-deeds nor the certified copies thereof were exhibited in the Court, mere oral evidence of those transactions were inadmissible.[56] Where the correctness of the contents of a document is in issue, they should be proved by calling the executant of the document or its writer. The contents of the document cannot be proved by a witness, though he is acquainted with the signature or the handwriting of the person who signed and wrote the document, but has no personal knowledge about the contents.[57] Merely because certain personal letters were tendered in evidence and exhibited, there is no reason why their authorship should be taken as what it purports to be, when persons conversant with such handwriting and signatures have not been produced at the trial.[58] In a case where the accused was suspected of complicity in kidnapping a minor girl, a letter written by him to his wife was intercepted. At the trial, the letter was read as evidence without proof. It was held that however valuable the letter is for the purpose of investigation, or for tracing the girl or the accused, as there was no proof of it, it cannot be read in evidence.[59] In the absence of proof regarding the entry in the mutation register, the copy from an entry in the document writers register was held inadmissible.[60]

Where a party relies upon an entry in an account book, the original account book must be produced before the court as primary evidence in proof of the entry.[61] When a prosecution is based on an order promulgated by the Government under the Madras Maintenance of Public Order Act 1 of 1947, it was held that proof of an order appearing in a newspaper was not sufficient and the original order or its certified copy must be filed.[62] Where a party claimed a particular property was joint family property, on the ground that it was purchased from the sale proceeds of a land belonging to the joint family, and he did not produce the sale deed of the land, or the extracts from the land records showing the existence of the joint family property, but offered oral evidence, it was held that the oral evidence cannot be accepted.[63] Entries in the pahanies filed by the defendant showing him as cultivator of the land in dispute, would constitute evidence for proof of the factum of his possession in the absence of evidence led to nullify the same.[64]

---

51. Easwaramuthi v. Emperor, 71 IA 83 at 91 : AIR 1944 PC 54.
52. AIR 1972 SC 608.
53. Bhagat Ram v. Khetu Ram, AIR 1929 PC 110; followed see also Harnath Malhotra v. Dhanoo Devi Agarwala, AIR 1975 Cal 98; Land Acquisition Officer DIS Cuttack v. Madan Gajendra, (1975) 41 Cut LT 869; Maharao Shri Madan Singh v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1969 Guj 270: is no longer good law in view of P C Purushothama v. S Perumal, AIR 1972 SC 608; State of Kerala v. Mariamma Abraham, AIR 1969 Ker 265.
54. Kamal Narayan v. Ram Kishorelal, AIR 1958 MP 246.
55. Prakash Cotton Mills Pvt. Ltd. v. Municipal Commissioner, AIR 1982 Bom 387.
56. Chintaman v. State of Maharashtra, AIR 1997 SC 448.
57. Madholal Sindhu v. Asian Assurance Co. Ltd., AIR 1954 Bom 305; Bhageerathi Amma v. Govinda Kurup, 1962 Ker LT 858; Yusuf (Md.) v. D, AIR 1968 Bom 112; Sita Ramachandra Mahaprabhu v. Madano Maharana, AIR 1968 Ori 217.
58. Hazara Singh v. Attar Kaur, AIR 1976 Punj 24.
59. Kan Kanwari (Mst.) v. State of Rajasthan, 1957 Cr LJ 688.
60. Gurnam Singh v. Ass Kaur (Smt.), AIR 1977 Punj 103.
61. Parasnath Hiralal v. Kishanlal Chunilal, AIR 1965 All 189.
62. In re : Kottapalli Ragahaviah, AIR 1953 Mad 780.
63. Krishnakumar Sinha v. Kayastha Pathshala, Allahabad AIR 1966 All 570.
64. Mohd. Kareemuddin Khan v. Syed Azam, 1997 AIHC 2561 (para 11) (AP).

A will cannot be rejected on the ground that the particulars of the preparation of the draft or whatever happened prior to the final will being prepared were not forth-coming.[65]

Where a document was executed by more than one person, it was held that, when it was proved, mere refusal of execution by some of the executants does not imply necessarily that the document is not genuine.[66]

Oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant, unless and until the party proposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document, or unless the genuineness of a document produced is in question.[67]

The tape-record of a wife was lodged as proof of her mental disorder. She was sitting in the court as a respondent. No effect was made to compare her voice with the tape. The tape was not allowed to be used as evidence or for shaking her credit in cross-examination.[68] Where the xerox copies of the documents pertaining to previous proceedings before the SDO were produced in the suit in which the SDO and the Govt. were parties but they did not take any objection regarding their authenticity, the documents would be admissible.[69]

Where the parties have admitted the contents of the document, either in their pleadings or during the course of the proceedings, the opposite party can rest on admissions alone and he need not produce and prove the original document.[70] In a later case[71], it was held that such admissions of the party must be sufficient to cover the entire claim of the opposite party, to obviate the necessity of relying on the document or any portion of it. When a document is marked by consent, it means that the party consenting is willing to waive his right to have the document in question proved. Formal proof is not required when the document is marked by consent.[72] But consent does not have the effect of dispensing with the proof of the truth or otherwise of the contents.[73] Where the report of the Central Forensic Science Laboratory expert was admitted in evidence without objection regarding its mode of proof, the same could not be objected to at any later stage of the case or in appeal.[74] Where certain certificates were given by the plaintiff to the defendant, and the statements therein were not challenged by the defendant as incorrect, the maker of the statements need not testify to their correctness.[75] But where primary evidence was available, certified copy was held to be inadmissible.[76]

Will cannot be rejected for non-production of its draft or on the ground that the particulars of preparation of draft or whatever happened prior to final will being prepared were not forthcoming.[77]

In a prosecution for defamation, based on a letter written by the accused, it was held that merely because of the admission of the letter by the accused under Section 342, Cr.P.C. (now S. 313) examination, the prosecution was not relieved of its duty to prove the letter by primary evidence.[78]

Section 87(3), Cr.P.C. does not rule out the requirements of Section 64 of the Evidence Act.[79]

---

65. Janardan Badrinarayan Patel v. Ambalal Himatlal, AIR 1999 Guj 162 (para 13.4).
66. Rangaraju* v. *Sulochana Ammal, AIR 1971 Mad 280.
67. Where there is documentary evidence, oral evidence is not entitled to any weight . Murarka Properties Pvt. Ltd. v. Beharilal Murarka, AIR 1978 SC 300.
68. Jogindra Kaur* v. *Surjit Singh, AIR 1985 P&H 128.
69. Vithu Hira Mahar v. State of Maharashtra, 1999 AIHC 4295 (para 63) (Bom).
70. Zafar (Md.) v. Zahur Husain, AIR 1926 All 741; Hikmatullah Khan v. Abdul Azim Khan, 1921 All 218; Chuni Kuar v. Udairam, ILR 6 All 73; Sharda Talkies (Firm) v. Madhulata Vyas, AIR 1996 MP 68 (para 20).
71. Pearay Lal* v. *Kunwar Rani Hiradevi, AIR 1941 All 150.
72. Perumal* v. *Vadivelu Asari, AIR 1986 Mad 341.
73. Karupanna Thevar* v. *Rajagopala Thevar, (1974) 2 MLJ 260.
74. Amarjit Singh v. State (Delhi Administration), 1995 Cr LJ 1623 (Del), following Phool Kumar v. Delhi Administration, AIR 1975 SC 905 : 1975 Cr LJ 778. See also Vijay Kumar v. State, 1995 Cr LJ 2599 (para 9) (Del).
75. Bengal Corp. Pvt. Ltd. v. Commissioner for the Port of Calcutta, AIR 1971 Cal 357.
76. Butu Naik* v. *Saraswati Devi, AIR 1998 Ori 119 (para 5).
77. Janardan Badrinarayan Patel v. Ambalal Himatlal, AIR 1999 Guj 162 (para 13.4).
78. Panna Lal* v. *State of U.P., AIR 1969 All 423.
79. P.K. Gupta* v. *State of W.B., 1973 Cr LJ 1368 (Cal).

2. OBJECTION TO PROOF

Regarding proof of a document, the objection has to be raised at the time when the document was tendered in evidence. It cannot be allowed to be raised at any subsequent stage or appellate stage.[80] In a case where a document was admitted and acted upon by two courts, a plea as to the insufficiency of proof could not be allowed to be taken in second appeal.[81]

Objection to the mode of proof of the document must be taken at the trial, before it is sought to be tendered or marked and admitted in evidence.[82] A deed of adoption was produced before the trial court, without any objection by the opposite party as to its mode of proof. Objections cannot be raised in appeal.[83]

3. SECTIONS 64 & 91

There is a difference between Section 64 and Section 91. Section 64 deals with the mode of proof of the document itself, and the contents of the document which may be proved by tendering the document itself as primary evidence or by secondary evidence contained in Section 65. Section 91 refers to cases where the terms of a contract or of a grant or any other disposition of property have been reduced to the form of a document, and in all cases in which any matter is required by law to be reduced to the form of a document, no parol evidence shall be given in proof of the terms of such contract, or disposition of property or grant, except by tendering the document itself.

4. DOCUMENT

For the meaning of document see definition of 'document', under Section 3 and the commentary under that head.

Cases in which secondary evidence relating to documents may be given.

S. 65. Secondary evidence may be given of the existence, condition or contents of a document in the following cases:—

(a) when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession or power—of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved, or of any person out of reach of, or not subject to, the process of the Court, or of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after the notice mentioned in Section 66, such person does not produce it;

(b) when the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved or by his representative in interest;

(c) when the original has been destroyed or lost, or when the party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time;

(d) when the original is of such a nature as not to be easily movable;

---

80. Annapurna Sahuani v. Narendra Prasad Sahu, AIR 1967 Ori 129; Mira Bai v. Jai Singh, AIR 1971 Raj 303; Gopal Das v. Sri Thakurji, AIR 1943 PC 83; Maharaja Shree Mills v. Union of India, AIR 1960 Raj 92.

81. Ram Dass v. Board of Revenue U.P., AIR 1967 All 481. See also Ramesh Ramrao Hate v. Parvez B. Bhesania, 1997 AIHC 2521 (para 9) (Bom).

82. Mira Bai v. Jai Singh, AIR 1971 Raj 303; Chandanbai (Mst.) v. Jagjaiwanlal, AIR 1958 Raj 110; Employers in relation to Central Bank of India v. General Secretary, Bihar Provincial Bank of India etc., ILR (1967) 46 Pat 1086; Basanta Kumar Das v. Binayak Das & Ors., (1974) 40 Cut LT 1214.

83. Amar Singh v. Tej Ram, AIR 1982 P&H 282.

(e) when the original is a public document within the meaning of Section 74;

(f) when the original is a document of which a certified copy is permitted by this Act, or by any other law in force in India, to be given in evidence;

(g) when the originals consist of numerous accounts or other documents which cannot conveniently be examined in Court and the fact to be proved is the general result of the whole collection.

In cases (a), (c) and (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible.

In case (b), the written admission is admissible.

In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible.

In case (g), evidence may be given as to the general result of the documents by any person who has examined them, and who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

SYNOPSIS

1. Principle ... 651
2. Non-production of document to be accounted for ... 652
3. Document—means ... 653
4. Original shown in possession but not produced [Clause (a)] ... 654
5. Person out of reach or not subject to process of the court ... 655
6. Legally bound ... 656
7. Notice under Section 66 ... 656
8. Existence of original admitted in writing [Clause (b)] ... 657
9. Original destroyed or lost [Clause (c)] ... 658
10. Criminal proceedings ... 661
11. Contempt proceedings ... 662
12. Lost will ... 662
13. Original not easily moveable [Clause (d)] ... 663
14. When original is a public document or whose certified copy is legally permitted [Clauses (e) and (f)] ... 663
15. Documents of which a certified copy is permitted under law ... 665
16. Originals consisting of several accounts or can't conveniently be examined [Clause (g)] ... 665
17. Objection to secondary evidence ... 666
18. Execution must be proved ... 666

COMMENTS

1. PRINCIPLE AND SCOPE

This section enumerates the seven exceptional cases in which secondary evidence is admissible. Under it, secondary evidence may be given of the contents of a document in civil as well as in criminal proceedings.

HALSBURY (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 9 and page 10 observes: "In the unavoidable absence of the best or primary evidence of documents, the court will accept secondary evidence. This is evidence which suggests, on the face of it, that other and better evidence exists. A party tendering it ought, therefore, to show that he is unable to obtain the best evidence. Public and judicial documents are usually proved by copies, without accounting for the absence of the originals.

There are no degrees of secondary evidence, and once it has been shown that, for example, a private document cannot be produced for reasons which admit the giving of secondary evidence, the contents may be proved by any type of secondary evidence, for example, by the production of a copy which can be proved to have been correctly made from the original, a counterpart, or a draft, by sworn oral testimony as to the contents of the document, or as authorised by statute. Statements of a deceased person as to the contents of documents may also be admissible". Where the applicant sought to produce a document after eight years of the institution of the suit and that too was a photocopy and not the original, the same could not be admitted in evidence.[1]

The application seeking permission to produce secondary evidence must give full details necessary to attract the provisions and be supported by a proper affidavit.[2]

2. NON-PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENT TO BE ACCOUNTED FOR

HALSBURY (4th Edn., Vol. 17, para 138, page 102) observes: "Secondary evidence of the contents of private document is inadmissible, if primary evidence is available. Before secondary evidence is tendered, it is therefore usually necessary to account for the absence of the original document; and for this purpose proof that primary evidence is not available may be required".

BEST ON EVIDENCE (8th Edn. p. 416) states: "It is a general and well-known rule that no secondary evidence of a document can be received until an excuse such as the law deems sufficient, is given for non-production of the primary evidence".

The section also says that in cases falling under Clauses (a), (c) & (d), any secondary evidence of the contents of the document is admissible.[3] In the case of clause (b), the written admission is admissible. In the case of Clause (e) & (f), certified copies of the document, and no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible. That means parol evidence cannot be adduced as secondary evidence in cases falling under clause (e) or (f). So far as Clause (g) is concerned, secondary evidence may be given by any person who has examined them or who is skilled in the examination of such documents.

Secondary evidence of the contents of a document cannot be admitted without the non-production of the original being first accounted for in such manner as to bring the case within one or other of the cases provided for in the section.[4]

The Privy Council, in Babu Anand Biharilal v. M/s. Dinshaw and Co.[5], held that unless the conditions laid down in any one of the clauses of this section are satisfied, no secondary evidence in lieu of primary evidence can be received.[6]

The question of proof, by secondary evidence, as to the use of a document is not one of fact but of procedure.[7]

It is incumbent on the person who tenders secondary evidence to show that it is admissible; the question of admissibility is ordinarily for the court of first instance.[8] The Privy Council, in Rani Haripria Debi (Smt.) v. Rukmini Debi,[9] held that the question whether or not a party to a suit had laid sufficient foundation to entitle him to tender secondary evidence in the place of primary evidence, is a matter of fact, to be judicially determined by the court of first instance which tries the case; its conclusion should not be overruled except in a clear, case of miscarriage.[10] Before invoking the provisions of this section for adducing secondary evidence foundation must be first laid for its reception by fulfilling the conditions laid in the clauses of this section.[11]

Where there is no 'document' signed by the parties, much less a registered document, as evidence of partition, there is no question of the plaintiff adducing secondary evidence of the contents of it, within

---

1. Arati Bhargava v. Kavi Kumar Bhargava, AIR 1999 Del 280 (paras 6-8).
2. State of Rajasthan v. Khemraj, AIR 2000 SC 1759 (paras 2 and 3).
3. Sanathan Mohanty v. Baidhar, 1986 Ori 66.
4. Krishna Kishori Chowdhrani v. Kishori Lal Roy, ILR (1887) 14 Cal 486 : 14 IA 71; Md. Zafar v. Zahur Hussain, ILR (1926) 49 All 78; AIR 1926 All 741; Womesh Chandar Ghose v. Shama Sundari Bai, ILR (1881) 7 Cal 98; Hana v. Lokumal, ILR 1943 Kar 420; John Mithalal Desai v. Dineshbhai K. Vora, 1998 AIHC 1894 (paras 12 and 13) (Guj); Paramjit Kaur v. Sat Kartar Singh, 1998 AIHC 3470 (para 3) (P&H); Sukhjinder Kaur v. Gurdip Kaur, 1998 AIHC 3957 (para 3) (P&H).
5. AIR 1946 PC 24.
6. See also In re : Raghauiah, AIR 1953 Mad 780.
7. Jagadish Chandra Deo v. Gour Hari Mahato, AIR 1936 PC 258.
8. Abdul Razack v. Ma U, (1898) 2 UBR (1897-1901) 382, secondary evidence was not allowed where the primary was on record; Kirpal Singh v. Kartaro, AIR 1980 Raj 213.
9. AIR 19 Cal 438, 442 (PC).
10. See also Sookram Sookul v. Ramlal Sookul, 9 WR 248; Ningama v. Ramappa, 5 Bom LR 708; Pandappa Mahalingappa v. Shiva Lingappa, AIR 1946 Bom 193; Chuhamal v. Hazi Rahim Bakhsh, AIR 1924 Lah 303.
11. Sitaldas v. Sant Ram, AIR 1954 SC 606.

the meaning of Section 65. In such circumstances, there is no bar to the admission of oral evidence to prove the alleged partition.[12] Where the original documents were not produced, and no foundation was laid for establishing the right to give secondary evidence, the question of admitting secondary evidence would not arise.[13] Where the fact that the original adoption deed was with the plaintiff was not proved, it was held that secondary evidence was not admissible.[14] Where the production of certain documents was not granted under O. XI, R. 14 by the trial Court, rejection of the application to produce secondary evidence in respect of those documents is no material irregularity and illegality.[15]

An order allowing secondary evidence of the contents of the document without compliance with the provisions of Section 65 is illegal.[16]

Section 65 cannot be invoked where a party, being in possession of the document, does not produce it. Where the document not having been produced by a party at all during the relevant periods, he cannot be permitted to produce it from his own possession at the stage of arguments in the High Court. The reason for this is that, if he had produced it in the trial court, the opposite party would have had the opportunity to put forward his contention[17] but where the photocopies, sought to be exhibited, were compared with the originals prior to framing of charge and the plaintiffs in possession were ready to produce them during recording of statements, the order allowing their exhibition without their originals was not improper.[18]

The doctrine of privilege is based upon public interest which is not to suffer for individual gain. If litigants obtained copies of privileged documents surreptitiously, such documents shall not be looked into as secondary evidence of the document.[19]

Under Section 65, secondary evidence is to be given only to prove the existence, condition or contents of a document, and nothing more beyond that.[20]

Section 45-F of the Banking Companies Act of 1949, as amended, is not a provision in derogation of the provisions of Section 65 of the Evidence Act, but it is in addition thereto.[21]

Section 87(3) of Criminal Procedure Code does not rule out the requirements of Section 65 of the Evidence Act.[22]

Assuming that the commercial tax officer acts, as a court as defined by the Evidence Act, while taking evidence, which he is authorised to take, he can admit secondary evidence of the contents of a document which is lost or destroyed.[23]

This section proceeds on the basis that primary evidence is itself admissible.[24]

3. DOCUMENT—MEANS

'Document' means a document admissible in evidence. If a document is inadmissible in consequence of its not being registered, or not being properly stamped, secondary evidence cannot be

---

12. Tahir (Md.) v. Sardar Bano (Mst.), AIR 1952 All 782.
13. Roman Catholic Mission v. State of Madras, AIR 1966 SC 1457. See also Kashinath v. Union of India, ILR (1973) 2 All 362; Phoolchand v. L. Puranchand, ILR (1962) 1 All 671; Basanti v. Pohlu, AIR 1952 Bilaspur 13; Kaloo Ram v. Gangadass, ILR 1963 13 Raj 1090; Alicia v. Percival Felix Pinto, (1972) 2 Mys LJ 210; Kunhammad v. Moosankutty, 1972 Ker 76.
14. Laxman Ganpati v. Anusuyabai, AIR 1976 Bom 264.
15. Dropadi v. Mahagraha Bhagwat Singh, AIR 1995 Raj 138 (para 4).
16. Laxmi Narain v. Parmanand, 1978 Raj LW 411.
17. Anantha Raghuram Arya v. Rajah B. Naga Chaya Devamma, AIR 1958 A.P. 418, 422.
18. Prem Kumari v. Sushil Kumari, AIR 2000 Raj 415 (para 5).
19. Jaffarul Hossain v. Emperor, AIR 1932 Cal 468; Bento Souza v. Francis, 1058 Cal; Dinbai Dinshaw v. Dominion of India, AIR 1951 Bom 72.
20. Gulab Chand v. Sheo Karan Lall Seth, AIR 1964 Pat 45.
21. Calcutta National Bank Ltd. v. Sonapur Tea Co. Ltd., AIR 1957 Cal 9.
22. P.K. Gupta v. State of W.B., 1973 Cr. LJ 1368 (Cal).
23. Kedarnath Jute Manufacturing Co. Ltd. v. Commercial Tax Officer, (1959) 10 STC 241.
24. K. Muhammed v. Nani, 1970 Ker. LJ 356.

given of its existence.[25] A party should not be allowed to prove a copy of an unstamped original deed and use it as secondary evidence either on due payment of penalty into the court or upon its endorsement by the Collector.[26] If the original document is inadmissible in evidence owing to its being unstamped or unregistered, secondary evidence is inadmissible. Secondary evidence cannot be given to establish a fact, proof whereof by primary evidence is forbidden. Under no circumstances can secondary evidence be admitted as a substitute for inadmissible primary evidence. Where a party comes into court resting his claim on a written title deed which the law requires to be registered, he cannot, when he has failed to register, and is, in consequence unable to use his title deed, turn round and say that he could prove his title by secondary evidence. Therefore, oral evidence of the terms of an unregistered deed of mortgage, required by law to be registered, is inadmissible.[27] When a plea was taken that an award was neither stamped nor registered, it was held that, as the award itself was inadmissible for want of stamp and registration, secondary evidence is not admissible; but as the defendant had not denied the terms of the award which were set out in detail in the plaint, it must be taken that they were under Order VIII, Rule 5, C.P.C., that in such case, award need not be produced in evidence and the question of the admissibility would not arise.[28] If a document which is required to be registered under the Registration Act, is not registered, secondary evidence cannot be given as to its existence.[29]

Where the plaintiff paid penalty and necessary stamp on a document which was impounded, and its execution was also proved, but it was lost while it was in the custody of the court, it was held that the opposite party cannot question it at any subsequent stage on the ground that it was not duly stamped.[30]

An unstamped counterpart of a partnership deed is not inadmissible for want of proof of loss of the original deed which was on a stamp paper, because there is nothing to prevent a person to enter into partnership evidenced by a deed written on a plain sheet of paper.[31]

Where in a suit for redemption, the defendant refused to produce the unregistered mortgage deed, it was held that the plaintiff could adduce secondary evidence thereof for purpose of proving the nature and character of the defendant's possession.[32]

Secondary evidence was allowed where the defendant did not deny the registered deed.[33]

4. ORIGINAL SHOWN IN POSSESSION BUT NOT PRODUCED [CLAUSE (a)]

This clause deals with three situations under which secondary evidence can be given. Firstly, when the original is shown or appears to be in the possession and power of the person against whom the document is sought to be proved. Secondly, when it is in the possession or power of any person who is out of reach, or not subject to the process of the court. Thirdly, when it is in the possession of any person legally bound to produce it, but he fails to produce it after the notice mentioned in Section 66 is given to him.

In this clause, the expression "shown or appears to be in possession or power" is used. This presupposes the satisfaction of the court to that effect, before the party is allowed to adduce the secondary evidence. That can be done only by adducing some evidence, or by showing certain circumstances appearing from the record itself.

---

25. Raja of Bobbili v. Inuganti China Sitaramaswamy, ILR 23 Mad 39 (P.C.); Hiralal v. Shankar, ILR 45 Bom 170; Jupidi Kesava Rao v. Pulavarthi Venkata Subbarao, AIR 1971 SC 1070; Chmpalal v. Panna Lal, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 190.
26. Raja of Bobbili v. Inuganti China Sitaramaswamy, ILR 23 Mad 49 (P.C.).
27. Sawa v. Kuka, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 69 : AIR 1951 Raj 66; Campalal v. Pannalal, ILR (1951) 1 Raj 190; Phoolchand v. L. Puran Chand, ILR (1962) 1 All 671; Moolchand v. Laxman, AIR 1958 Raj 72; P.T. Subba Rao v. T. Kesava Rao (1967) 2 An. W.R. 444; Lachmareddy v. Sham Rao, (1966) 2 An W.R 251; Ladharam v. Harichand AIR 1938 Lah 90; Swaminath v. Sundara, (1911) 2 M.W.N. 166; Harshvardhan Singh v. Ranveer Singh, AIR 1997 Raj 211. The Court referred to Kale v. Deputy Director of Consolidation, AIR 1976 SC 807.
28. Pandya Shankerlal Sunderji v. Pandya Ramniklal, AIR 1951 Kutch 23.
29. Varada Ayyangar v. Krishnaswami Ayyangar, ILR 6 Mad 117; Sambayya v. Gangayya, ILR 1890 13 Mad 308; Janardhan v. J. AIR 1927 Nag 214; Pandya Shankerlal Sunderji v. Pandya Ramniklal, AIR 1951 Kutch 23; Sawa v. Kuka, AIR 1951 Raj 66; Yasin Baig v. Harnarayan Aggarwalla, ILR 1970 Cut 711.
30. Radha Kishan v. Laxminarian, 1957 Raj LW 603.
31. Hiralal v. Gian Singh, AIR 1951 Punj 441.
32. Rahim Bux v. Illahi Bux, AIR 1973 Raj 294; relying on Lachhmi Narain v. Kalyan, AIR 1960 Raj 1 (S.B.)
33. Ranjit Kumar v. Kamal Kumar, AIR 1982 Cal 493; see also Shiolal Sing v. Shankar, AIR 1984 Bom 19; (where execution could not be proved).

The document need not be in the actual possession of the party, it is enough if it is in his power.

According to the first part of Cl. (a), secondary evidence of the contents of a document may be given when the original is in the possession or power of the adversary.[34]

The Supreme Court held where it was not shown that the successful candidate in an election was in possession of the original leaflet, that leading secondary evidence by a photostat copy was not permissible.[35] Secondary evidence of the contents of a document cannot be given by a party who has custody of the original.[36] Where a driver and a conductor were prosecuted for contravention of the conditions of registration certificate and the permit, and when they did not produce those documents in the court, it was held that the prosecution could produce secondary evidence.[37] Where the execution of the document was admitted, but the document was not produced by the person holding it, it was held that the contents of the document could, with the permission of the court, be proved by secondary evidence in view of the non-production of the document by the opposite party.[38] Where a notice under Section 80, C.P.C., was given to the Union of India, it was held the production of a copy of a notice by the plaintiff is permissible as secondary evidence, as the original would be with the Union of India.[39] Where a document ought to have been in the possession of the plaintiff, and a notice was also given to him to produce it, but it was not produced, stating that it was not in the plaintiff's possession, it was held that a case was made out to lead secondary evidence by the defendant.[40] Where the best evidence was in the possession of the defendant which he did not produce, grant of permission to the plaintiff to lead secondary evidence could not be interfered with.[41] Where the tenant alleged that the original rent note was in the possession of the landlord, rejection of his application seeking to produce the copy of the rent note on the ground that the same was of doubtful veracity without affording him opportunity to adduce secondary evidence was unjustified.[42]

The Supreme Court, in Bibi Aisha v. Bihar Subai Sunni Majlis Avagaf[43] held that clause (a) is not controlled by Cl. (f),; when a case falls under cl. (a), any secondary evidence (a plain copy of the document), and not necessarily a certified copy of the document, is admissible though the case may also fall under cl. (f) of this section. In the said case, it was observed: "In cases (a), (c) and (d) the words 'any secondary evidence is admissible' are too clear and too strong to be controlled by anything that follows".

Where the plaintiff produced the photostat copy of the alleged assessment order but gave no notice to the witness, in whose possession the original was, to produce the same and there was no material to show that the said photostat copy was made from its original, the order permitting the plaintiff to produce the said copy was held to be not proper.[44]

5. PERSON OUT OF REACH OR NOT SUBJECT TO PROCESS OF THE COURT

Where a person who is in French territory and who is not subject to the process of courts in the Indian Union, is having possession of a document, an authenticated copy could be received under Section 65.[45] Where the original mortgage deed was filed in Pakistan courts before partition of India, the mortgagee migrated to India on partition and filed a suit to enforce the claim against the property in

---

34. Maneklal v. Ginwala, AIR 1950 SC 1; Muthu Venkatarama Reddiar v. Vardaraja Kounder, AIR 1971 Mad 471; Chandranath v. Tusharika, AIR 1958 SC 521; British Transport Co. Ltd. v. Suraj Bhan, AIR 1963 All 313; Jagroop v. Rex, AIR 1952 All 276; Vishwanath Vithoba v. Genu Kisan, AIR 1956 Bom 555; Baboolal v. Nathmal, AIR 1956 Raj 126; Patel Manilal Chhaganlal v. Municipal Corp., AIR 1978 Guj 193; Gopal Das v. Thakurji, AIR 1936 All 422; Karthikeya v. Singaram, AIR 1956 Mad 693; Risal v. Dy. Director of Consolidation, 1970 All L.J. 1161; Bibo Devi (Smt.) v. Rattan Lal, ILR (1972) 2 Delhi 699.
35. Ashok Dulichand v. Madhavlal Dube, AIR 1975 SC 1748.
36. Hiralal v. Ganesh Prasad, (1882) 4 All 406 P.C.
37. Jagroop v. R, AIR 1952 All 276.
38. Pravin S. Shah v. Govind K. Sharma, 1974 Raj LR 128 (Del).
39. Lokchand Prithi Singh v. Union of India, AIR 1959 Raj 231.
40. Dalbir Kaur v. Amar Kaur, (1979) 81 Punj LR 44. See also Gopal Krishna Jiwan Kumar v. Puran Singh, AIR 1998 P&H 144 (para 10); D. Sarasu v. Jayalakshmi, 2001 AIHC 2484 (para 11) (Mad).
41. Maithu Lal v. Kundan Lal, AIR 1998 P&H 144 (para 10).
42. Nawab Singh v. Inderjit Kaur, AIR 1999 SC 1668 (para 3), reversing CR No. 600 of 1998, Dt. 16-9-1998 (P&H).
43. AIR 1969 SC 253.
44. Rajasthan Golden Transport Co. v. LRs. of Amritlal, AIR 1998 Raj 153 (para 5).
45. Muni Ammal v. Govindarajan, AIR 1958 Mad 393.

India, it was held that the mortgagee was entitled to produce secondary evidence of the mortgage deed, because the original was in custody of the person beyond the jurisdiction of the court.[46] Where an original document was filed in a court in a different State, it was held that the certified copy of the document was admissible.[47]

6. LEGALLY BOUND

In this clause it is stated that when the document is in possession of any person legally bound to produce it, and when, after notice, he does not produce it, secondary evidence can be given.

PHIPSON states (15th Edn. (2000), para 41-32, pages 1121-1122) : "When the stranger is compellable by law to produce, by witness summons, an original document in his possession, but fails to do, so, secondary evidence of its contents cannot be given, although the witness will be punishable for disobedience.....Mere refusal to produce the document will not, therefore, let in secondary evidence thereof; the witness must be justified in his refusal, for otherwise the party has no remedy except as against him, and even a justified refusal will not let in secondary evidence of certain documents protected by public policy. The witness may be justified in such refusal where the document is, e.g., one on which he has a lien for money lent, or is a title deed, or an incriminating document, or one which he holds as trustee, solicitor, or mortgagee for another, and which that other would himself be justified in withholding".

The wording of this clause has given rise to considerable doubt. Secondary evidence of a document is admissible when the original appears to be in the possession of any person legally bound to produce it. This clearly covers a document which is unjustifiably withheld by any person, thus differing from the English law on the point. But if a person summoned to produce a document objects to do so, and his objection is upheld by the Court, it seems equally clear that such a document does not fall within the ambit of this section. It may be, however, that the courts will admit secondary evidence in such a case upon the general principles of the English law and the decisions, of the English courts upon the subject.

Where a witness was summoned by registered post to produce the original sale deed, the witness refused to receive the summons, it was held that the certified copy of the sale deed was admissible.[48]

This expression 'not subject to' seems intended to include the case of a person not legally bound to produce the document, who refuses to produce it.[49]

Where the original of a document cannot be admitted in evidence on the ground of privilege under Section 124 of the Evidence Act, no secondary evidence of its contents can be given.[50]

7. NOTICE UNDER SECTION 66

This clause seems to mean: when any person in whose possession or power the original may be, after receiving the notice (if any) required by Section 66, does not produce such original.[51]

The purpose of issuing notice to the person in possession of a document is to give the party an opportunity of producing the original and to secure the best evidence of its contents.[52] The sole object of a notice to produce is to enable the adversary to produce the document if he likes, and, if he does not, to enable his opponent to give secondary evidence thereof, so as to exclude the argument that the latter has not taken all reasonable means to procure the original which he must do before he can be permitted to make use of secondary evidence.[53]

If a person who is legally bound to produce the document refuses to produce it, notwithstanding the notice to do so, the existence and contents of the original document can be proved under this clause by proof of the authenticated copy.[54] Before secondary evidence is allowed, notice to produce the document

---

46. Jai Singh v. Harnam Das, AIR 1964 All 381.
47. Biharilal Agarawalla v. Tamizul Haque, AIR 1988 Gau 1.
48. Chunilal Ojha v. Mulsankar Ojha, ILR (1961) 1 Cut. 635.
49. Stokes Anglo-Indian codes, Vol. II, p. 892, f.n. 30.
50. Sivasankaram v. Narayana Rao, AIR 1937 Mad 807.
51. Strokes' Anglo-Indian codes, Vol. II, p. 892, f.n. 4.
52. Surendra Krishna Roy v. Mirza Md. Syed Ali, AIR 1936 PC 15.
53. Dwyer v. Collins, (1852) 7 Ex 639, 647.
54. Muni Ammal v. Govindarajan, AIR 1958 Mad 393.

must be given to the person in possession of it. Where the correspondence of the government officials contained certain terms of the lease, and a notice was issued under Section 66, for production of the original document and they were not produced, it was held by the Supreme Court that secondary evidence could be adduced.[55] Where a thirty year old gift deed was called for by issue of notice and it was not produced, it was held that secondary evidence by production of certified copy was admissible.[56] Where a notice to produce the documents is given under Order XII, Rule 8, C.P.C., and there is non-compliance, striking off of the defence cannot be ordered under Rule 21 of Order XI, C.P.C., as secondary evidence of documents can be given in such a case.[57] Where notice is given, and the document is not produced by the party, secondary evidence under Section 65 is admissible. Further, in such circumstances, a presumption arises under Section 89 of the Evidence Act about the execution of the document in respect of which secondary evidence has been led; such presumption arises in respect of attestation, execution and stamping being done in the manner required by law.[58] Where the plaintiff produced the certified copy of a trust deed, stating that the defendant was in possession of the original, it was held that the defendant must have known that he would be required to produce it, that there was an implied notice under proviso to Section 66(2) to the defendant and hence the certified copy was sufficient proof of the deed.[59]

This rule applies equally both in civil and criminal cases. Before notice is ordered to produce the document, it must be shown that the document is in the hands of the opposite party who is required to produce it.[60]

Where no notice, as required by Section 66, is given, the secondary evidence is not admissible.[61]

A certified copy of a registered document cannot be admitted on the ground of its being a public document under Section 74 of the Act without taking steps for the production of the original or laying the foundation for admitting secondary evidence.[62]

Where the defendant denies having possession of a document there is no necessity to issue a notice for its production.[63]

Where the defendant deposed that the original deed of the family settlement was not with the plaintiff but was with a third party who was dead, and the defendant produced a certified copy and proved it, it was held that no notice to the plaintiff was required to admit the certified copy as secondary evidence.[64]

8. EXISTENCE OF ORIGINAL ADMITTED IN WRITING [CLAUSE (b)]

When the existence, condition or contents of the original have been proved to be admitted in writing by the person against whom it is proved, or by his representative in interest, secondary evidence can be given. This clause has to be read with Section 22 of the Act which says that oral admissions as to the contents of a document are not relevant unless and until the party supposing to prove them shows that he is entitled to give secondary evidence of the contents of such document. The secondary evidence admissible under cl. (b) is the written admission of the person against whom it is sought to be proved or by his representatives in interest, though the original is in existence and not produced.[65]

---

55. Maneklal v. Ginwala, AIR 1950 SC 1; Surendra Krishna Raj v. Mirza Md. Syed Ali, AIR 1936 PC 15; Muni Ammal v. Govindarajan, AIR 1958 Mad 393; Purna Chandra Patnaik v. Kalidas Sen, AIR 1973 Ori 65; Narsidas v. Ravi Shankar, AIR 1931 Bom 33; Manidevi (Smt.) v. Anpurna Dai, AIR 1943 Pat 218; Nityananda Roy v. Rashbehari Roy, AIR 1953 Cal 456.
56. Rajendra Jha v. Tarkeshwar Prasad Agarwal, ILR (1978) 57 Pat 426.
57. Krishnarao v. State of Andhra, AIR 1962 A.P. 249.
58. Dilipsingh v. Dhaniram, AIR 1976 Bom 38; Kashibai Martand v. Vinayak, AIR 1956 Bom 65 relied on.
59. Laxshmi Kanto Roy v. Nishi Kanto Roy, (1967) 71 Cal. W.N. 362.
60. Venkatarama Reddiar v. Vardaraja, AIR 1971 Mad 471; Biswanath v. Dhapu Debi, AIR 1960 Cal 494; British Transport Co. v. Suraj Bhan, AIR 1963 All 313.
61. Nityananda Roy v. Rashbehari Roy, AIR 1953 Cal 456; Kanhiyalal v. Jamnalal, AIR 1950 Raj 47; Sulochana Devi (Smt.) v. Govina Chandra Nag, AIR 1986 Cal 430.
62. Paramananda Sahu v. Babu Sahu & Ors., (1970) 36 Cut LT 1211.
63. Chandra Sekhar Pati v. Ahalya Devi, AIR 1974 Ori 199.
64. Abdul Rahman v. Rameshwar Prasad, AIR 1977 All 470.
65. Hira Lal v. Ram Prasad, AIR 1949 All 677; Jaigopal v. Divisional Forest Officer, AIR 1953 Pat 310; Bishwambhar Singh v. State of Orissa, AIR 1954 SC 139; Rammanlal v. Babu Ram, AIR 1941 All 50; Purushottama Chettiar v. Ramanuja Padayachi, (1969) 1 MLJ 237.

Secondary evidence was held admissible when the opposite party admitted in a letter about the existence and contents of the document.[66]

Where a high school certificate and a birth extract were admitted by the first appellate court, though not produced before the trial court, on an explanation given by the party that such documents were not in his possession, it was held that such admission of the documents was wrong and was vitiated for want of proof, as there was no admission in writing about the contents of those documents.[67] A denial of the execution of a bond, though accompanied by a statement of discharge of the debt, cannot be regarded as an admission within the meaning of Section 65(b) so as to dispense with the production of the document. A plea of ignorance of the execution of a document, accompanied by even an alternative plea of payment cannot amount to an admission of the execution of the document.[68]

A certified copy of the document containing admission of a party was held admissible against that party, for proving the admission, without confronting the party with his admission contained in a particular document.[69]

Where a suit was filed against a firm for recovery of an amount based on a pronote, a copy of the Balance Sheet enclosed with the Income Tax Return sent by the manager of the firm, which was given to the plaintiff by a partner of the firm, was filed by the plaintiff to show the subsisting liability of the firm and marked with consent, it was held that such statement acknowledging the liability of debt can be relied upon and is admissible.[70]

Where the confession of an accused is not admissible, secondary evidence of it is not admissible, and Section 65(b) cannot be invoked because the accused put the thumb mark to that statement.[71]

A debtor's application to the Debt Conciliation Board cannot be regarded as an admission under this clause.[72]

Secondary evidence, by means of a written admission under this clause, cannot be given of the contents of a document, which is inadmissible for want of registration or of stamps.[73] Section 65(b) is not applicable to an admission of the contents of a document made by a defendant in his written statement, where the original itself was inadmissible for want of stamp.[74]

9. ORIGINAL DESTROYED OR LOST [CLAUSE (c)]

Clause (c) consists of two parts: the first part is an independent one, stating that when the original document had been destroyed or lost, he can produce secondary evidence; the second part comes when a party offering evidence of its contents cannot, for any other reason, not arising from his own default or neglect, produce it in reasonable time. The words in the second part "arising from his own fault or neglect" do not qualify the first part, but apply only to the second part.

When a party admitted that he had not preserved the original, the opposite party can give oral evidence of it.[75]

Secondary evidence of a document which is lost or difficult to trace can be adduced in two ways:

(1) by oral evidence of persons who were present when the document was executed;

(2) by a certified copy of the original document.[76]

---

66. Biswanbhar v. State, AIR 1954 SC 139.
67. 1966 All WR (HC) 634.
68. Ananta Raghuram Arya v. Rajah B. Nagachaya Devamma, AIR 1958 A.P. 418.
69. Bhag Singh v. Bhaika Bhag Co-operative Society Ltd., (1979) 81 Punj. LR 255.
70. V.K.M. Electrical Stores v. Lakshmi Kanthamma, (1968) 2 An. W.R. 567.
71. R. v. Viran, ILR 9 Mad 224, 240.
72. Udhao v. Nanaji Gadewar v. Narayan Vithoba Rangliwar, (1941) Nag 95.
73. Varada v. Krishnasami, ILR (1882) 6 Mad 117; Damodar Jagannath v. Atmaram Babaji, ILR (1888) 12 Bom 443
74. Krishnaswami v. Ranga Swami, ILR 7 Mad 112; Pramathanath v. Drawaka, ILR 23 Cal 851; Damodar v. Atmaram, ILR (1888) 12 Bom 433.
75. Pearey v. Nanak, AIR 1948 PC 108.
76. Veerappa v. Md. Attaullah, 1951 Hyd 74.

Where certified copy of a sale deed could not be obtained as the record of the Registrar's Office was destroyed, but, the plaintiff produced a copy prepared from a certified copy which the defendant had produced in a former suit, but which was not available as the court record also had been destroyed, it was held that the copy produced by the plaintiff was admissible.[77] Where the original certified copy of the certificate of registration of a premises was lost but the certificate number and the year of registration was given by the tenant, he would be permitted to adduce the secondary evidence to prove the attested copy of the certificate.[78]

Where a person in whose custody the document was alleged to be, deposed to its loss, or that he was not in possession of the document, unless there is some motive suggested for his being untruthful, such evidence should be accepted as sufficient to allow secondary evidence.[79]

It is enough for the plaintiff to prove that the original is not in his possession as so far as he is concerned, it is lost.[80] Copies of registered documents are admissible as secondary evidence where the person in whose custody the original should be, swears that they are not with him, though there is no evidence as to the loss or otherwise of the original.[81] Where there was evidence on record to show that the original will had been eaten away by rats, the secondary evidence was admissible under the law.[82] Where an original order authorising an officer to do certain acts was not traceable, it was held that secondary evidence of such authorisation is admissible under cl. (c). If it is a public document, cl. (e) would only apply where there was loss of the original.[83] Where the original records have been lost, it is open to a party to offer evidence of the contents, and such secondary evidence includes copies made from or compared with the original, and also oral evidence as to the contents, given by some person who has seen the original document.[84] Where to prove the loss of the original arbitration award one of the arbitrators was examined, the photocopy of the said lost award bearing the signature of the said arbitrator and the signatures of both the parties was admissible in evidence.[85] Where a solicitor stated on oath that he was entrusted by the plaintiff with two original hundies, and that the copy of each of the two hundies was prepared under his supervision and compared with the originals which was later found missing, it was held that the copies of the hundies and their contents can be received as secondary evidence under Section 63(3) and 65(c).[86] Original documents not traceable can be said to be lost and certified copies thereof may be received as secondary evidence.[87] When the original document was filed already in a court in a different State, its certified copy is admissible under Section 65(c).[88] Where a certified copy of the document thirty years old, was produced and there was evidence showing the loss of the original, and its non-production thereof was not due to fault or neglect, the certified copies could be received as secondary evidence of the original.[89] Where the plaintiff filed the suit for title and possession, relying on a kabuliyat, the original was not in his possession and the production of the original was found not reasonably possible for the plaintiff, it was held that the certified copy of the kabuliyat can be accepted in view of Section 65(c).[90] Where a promissory note filed with a plaint disappeared from the court file, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled, without showing how the disappearance of loss arose or who abstracted it from the file, to give secondary evidence of it.[91] Where the original suit agreement was filed

---

77. Bibi Aisha (Mst.) v. Bihar Subai Sunni Majlis Avaqaf, AIR 1969 SC 253; Shehal Kumar v. Economic Transport Corporation Organisation, AIR 1975 Guj 73; Surjit Kaur v. Nachhattar Singh, 2001 AIHC 556 (paras 1 and 12) (P&H) : AIR 2001 NOC 15 (P&H).
78. Tulsi Devi v. Som Nath, 1997 AIHC 253 (paras 6 and 10) (HP).
79. M. Ihtishan Ali v. Jamna Prasad, AIR 1922 PC 56; Basant v. Brijraj, AIR 1935 P.C. 132; S. Rathnammal v. Mottadu, 1998 AIHC 3094 (para 12) (Mad).
80. Biswanath Agarwalla v. Dhapu Debi Jejodia, AIR 1960 Cal 494, 500.
81. Hutchegowda v. Chennigegowda, AIR 1953 Mys 49.
82. Chandan v. Longa Bai, AIR 1998 MP 1.
83. Babu Jagiwan Dass v. Chotey Lal, 1964 All LJ 788; relying on Chikka Veerasetty v. Nanjundachari, AIR 1955 Mys 139; Lakunandan v. Kunhunm, ILR 6 Mad 80; Ananda Kumar v. Secretary of State, AIR 1916 Cal 446; Chandreshwar Prasad v. Bisheshwar Pratap, AIR 1927 Pat 61.
84. Pran Jivan Jaitha v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1974 Cal 210.
85. Om Prakash v. Dev Raj, AIR 1995 P&H 349 (para 14).
86. Balaram Das v. Kesardeo Khemka, (1967) 71 Cal. WN 51.
87. Sanatan Mahonty v. Baidhar Rout, AIR 1986 Ori 66; Hariharpal v. Sudhir Kumar Pal, AIR 1988 Cal 68.
88. Biharilal Agarwalla v. Tamizul Haque, AIR 1988 Gau 1.
89. Hariharpal v. Sudhir Kumar Pal, AIR 1988 Cal 68.
90. (1977) 1 Cal. LJ 578.
91. Tulsi Ram v. Ram Saran, (1924) 27 Bom LR 777 (P.C.) : AIR 1925 P.C. 80.

but was lost from the court's custody, its true copy was held admissible in the absence of any rebuttable evidence.[1] Where the record in a case has been destroyed and is therefore not available for the purpose of proving previous convictions, secondary evidence under this clause is admissible.[2] An original document was filed before the sub-registrar but the registration was refused. A suit was filed under Section 77 of the Registration Act, wherein the original document was filed, but, part of the document was subsequently missing from the record of the court. It was held that the court could admit secondary evidence of the document and, after reconstructing the document, and could order the registration of the document.[3] Secondary evidence was allowed where the plaintiff stated on oath in an affidavit that the original was lost, and also where the sale deed was handed over to a patwari and the same was not returned by him.[4] Where the original document has either been lost, or is being deliberately withheld, by the person in whose custody it was kept, secondary evidence in the nature of oral evidence as to the contents of the original can be admitted in evidence.[5] Copies of telegrams are admissible in evidence as secondary evidence, after the lapse of three months, as a presumption arises under the Telegraph Rules that originals are destroyed after three months.[6]

Where there is no evidence showing that the document is lost, this section is not applicable.[7] A copy of the document cannot be admitted as secondary evidence unless the loss of the original is proved and the copy tendered is proved to be a correct copy of the original.[8] Where there was no proper and sufficient explanation offered as to why a power of attorney under which a deed had been executed, was not produced, the Privy Council held that the evidence of the managing clerk who had read it was useless for proving its contents.[9] Non-production of the original on the ground of the record being very old and the primary evident not being available despite best efforts, was held to be not sufficient and the attested copy was held to be inadmissible.[10]

Under Section 65, secondary evidence is admissible only of the existence or the contents of a document which is lost, but the execution of the document must be proved be primary evidence as required by Section 67 read with Section 47.[11] Before invoking the aid of this section, foundation must be first laid for its reception, by proving that the original document was lost or that the party was not in a position to produce it, and that, to the satisfaction of the court.[12] Secondary evidence can only be admitted when the court is satisfied that the original was lost or destroyed, or when the party is unable to produce it within a reasonable time for any other reason.[13] In order to claim the benefit of Section 65(c)

---

1. Harijiwan Sahu v. Jairam Sahu, AIR 1989 Pat 96.
2. Pokar v. Crown, (1941) Kar 308.
3. Saraswati Bai (Smt.) v. Md. Idarkuddin, AIR 1963 MP 234.
4. Sanatan Mohanty v. Baidhar Rout, AIR 1986 Ori 66; Krishna Devi v. Gian Kaur, AIR 1981 P&H 224.
5. Ramchand Gupta v. Wazir Chand, AIR 1962 Punj 293.
6. State v. Ganpat Lal, 1969 Raj LW 537; Manchalal v. Shah Manickchand, AIR 1988 Kant 221.
7. Bhubaneshwari Debi v. Harisaran, ILR (1881) 6 Cal 720 (PC); Krishna Kishori v. Kishorilal, 14 Cal 486 (PC), Bhagwan Sarup v. Jagdish Kumar Jain, 2000 AIHC 1373 (para 6) (P&H).
8. Anand v. Dinshaw & Co., AIR 1946 PC 24; Mohanlal v. Samal, AIR 1961 Pat 300; Sardaran v. Sunderlal, AIR 1968 All 363.
9. Bonnerjee v. Sithanath, 49 IA 46 : 49 Cal 325.
10. Akshara Nand v. State of H.P., 1996 AIHC 1894 (paras 4 and 5) (HP).
11. Akshay Narayan v. Maheshwar Bag, AIR 1958 Ori 207; relying on Haria v. Manakchand, AIR 1914 Nag 87; Laham v. Bala, AIR 1922 Nag 227; Ponnuswami Goundan v. Kalyana Sundara Ayyar, AIR 1930 Mad 770; Manilal Raghvaji v. Union of India, AIR 1956 Pat 434.
12. Sital Das v. Santa Ram, AIR 1954 SC 606; Jagadish Prasad v. Girija Shankar, AIR 1968 All 425; (case of a will), Filmistan Pvt. Ltd v. Municipal Corporation Bombay, AIR 1973 Bom 66; Parekh Brothers v. Kartick Chandra Saha AIR 1968 Cal 532; Katihar Jute Mills Ltd v. Calcutta Match Works (India) Ltd., AIR 1958 Pat 133.
13. Venkata Ramanujacharyulu v. Appalacharyulu, AIR 1926 Mad 1003; Rajendra Narayana v. Biharilal, AIR 1932 Pat 157; Veerasetty v. Nanjundachari, AIR 1955 Mys 139; Katihar Jute Mills Ltd v. Match Works Ltd AIR 1958 Pat 133; Manilal Raghavji v. Union of India, AIR 1956 Pat 434; Ramchand Gupta v. Wazirchand, AIR 1962 Punj 293; Akshya Narayan v. Maheshwar Bag AIR 1958 Ori 207; Pearey Lal v. Nanak Chand, AIR 1948 PC 108; Om Prakash v. State, AIR 1957 All 388; R.M. Pandye v. Automobile Products of India Ltd., AIR 1956 Bom 115; Satyacharan v. Hrishikesh Kedar, AIR 1959 Cal 795; Babu Jagjiwan Das v. Chhoteylal, 1964 All LJ 788; Kangabam Ongbi v. Guru Mayum Ningol, AIR 1958 Manipur 16.

there should be credible evidence of the loss of the original. Thus, it must be established that the party has exhausted the sources and means in the search of the document, which were available to him.[14]

The evidence about the search and the enquiries made about the original, and the evidence about its loss are necessary before secondary evidence is admitted in proof of the original.[15]

Original registered will is not a public document, and a certified copy of it is not admissible without proof of the loss of the original.[16]

Evidence of a person deposing to the loss of the document in his custody is sufficient to allow secondary evidence.[17] There must be evidence on record to show that the document has been lost.[18] To prove the loss of a document, evidence of diligent search is necessary. See illus. (b) to Section 104. Copies are inadmissible without proof of the search of the originals.[19] The loss of a document can never be proved absolutely. Where a document has not been seen for many years, the statement by a person who was alleged to have been in possession of it, that it was never with him nor was it with him then, is sufficient evidence of its loss.[20]

If a registered sale deed is lost, a certified copy can be put as secondary evidence, but the reception of other evidence must always be of a very weak character in place of registered document evidencing the transaction.[21]

In an election petition, the photo copy of the manuscript of a leaflet was not allowed because it was not shown where the original was. There must be some explanation about the original.[22]

Where there is a finding that the loss of the original document is fully explained and established, it is a finding of fact; and it is not open in second appeal to set aside that finding on the basis of the insufficiency of evidence.[23]

When a document is lost or destroyed, the provisions of clause (e) & (f) are not attracted, it is only clause (c) applies and it is not controlled by cl.(e) & (f).

Section 65(c), which is independent of cl. (e) & (f), applies to all cases, whereas clause (e) & (f) apply only to those documents which are in existence in public records but are to be protected from the risk to which they would be exposed any constant production in courts. So certified copies are necessary only in respect of such documents.[24]

10. CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS

In the case of a criminal trial, where the original police papers and documents were missing, it was held that, by itself, that was not a ground to quash the proceedings, and that the question whether secondary evidence could be admitted was for the trial court to decide, with reference to each document.[25]

---

14. Bobba Suramma (Smt.) v. Peddi Reddi Chandramma (Smt.), AIR 1959 A.P. 568; Ananta Raghuram Arya v. Rajah B. Nagachaya Devamma, AIR 1958 A.P. 418; Bishwanath Agarwalla v. Dhapudebi Jajodia (Smt.), AIR 1966 Cal 13; Atra Devi v. Ramswaroop Prasad, AIR 1972 Pat 186; Mohanlal Sah v. Samal Ram Potdar, AIR 1961 Pat 300; Suraj Bhan v. Harchandgir, AIR 1954 Pepsu 65; Kangabam Ongbi Tongbram v. Gurumayum Ningol, AIR 1958 Manipur 16; Parekh Brothers v. Kartick, AIR 1968 Cal 532; Maung Bau v. Dan Kha, AIR 1935 Ran 502; Pandu v. Bapudas, AIR 1929 Nag 288; Gaya v. Jaswant, AIR 1930 All 550; Vishvanath v. Rahibai, AIR 1931 Bom 105.
15. Rabindra v. Santosh Kumar, AIR 1975 Cal 381.
16. Parsa Singh v. Parkash Kaur (Smt.), AIR 1976 Punj 235.
17. Laiqan Begum v. Abdul Hamid, AIR 1979 Rajadhani L.R. 545 (Del).
18. Mond Khan v. Sheo Bhikh Singh, (1930) 5 Luck 377.
19. Krishna Kishori v. Kishori Lal Roy, ILR (1887) 14 Cal 486 : 14 I.A. 71; Haripria Debi v. Rukmini Debi, ILR (1892) 19 Cal 438, 19 I.A. 79.
20. Basant Singh v. Brij Raj Saran Singh, (1937) Bom L.R. 805, 62 I.C. 180 : ILR 57 All 494 : AIR 1935 PC 132.
21. Entisham Ali v. Janna Prasad, (1922) 24 Bom. IR 675 : 48 I.A. 385; Nani Bai v. Gita Bai, AIR 1958 SC 706.
22. Ashok v. Madhav Lal, AIR 1975 SC 1748. See also Joginder Pal v. Parduman Singh, 1999 AIHC 1093 (para 4) (P&H), distinguishing Mohinder Pal Singh v. Surjit Singh, 1995 (2) PLR 204 and Raj Kumar v. Lal Chand, 1994 (1) Civil CC 477.
23. Bansraj Kahar v. Kaushal Kishore Saran, AIR 1973 All 99.
24. Chikka Veerasetty v. Nanjundachari, AIR 1955 Mys 139; Tara Ram Chand v. State, 1971 Cr LJ 1201 (Ori); Babu Jagjiwan Das v. Choteylal, 1964 All LJ 788.
25. Sudhakar Dinkar Malekar v. Hemu Prabhudas Thakur, (1981) 83 Bom LR 496.

It was held that, even if the originals have not been produced, as provided by Section 173 (5) (b) of the Cr. P.C., Section 65 is wide enough to enable the accused to use the copies delivered to him as secondary evidence for purpose of contradicing the witnesses.[26]

On proof of loss of the original dying declaration, secondary evidence can be given by the prosecution.[27]

When an accused preferred a cross-complaint, and an uncertified copy of the complaint was produced through a defence witness, and not by the accused himself, it was held that, if the complaint is treated as a public document, then under Section 65(f), an uncertified copy would not be admissible, and secondary evidence would not be admissible under Section 62 when the original is available.[28]

Where the original first information report, which was written by a constable, was missing and the constable proved its carbon copy and also the loss of the original, it was held that the carbon copy was admissible and the investigation was not vitiated by the loss of the original F.I.R.[29]

Where no steps were taken to recover the original or to produce it before the court, and when the trial court also entertained doubt about its execution, it was held that it would be clear miscarriage of justice to admit secondary evidence.[30]

11. CONTEMPT PROCEEDINGS

In contempt proceedings relating to a newspaper article, when the question of authorship is to be decided, it may be determined by statement on affidavit of persons from relevant departments of the newspaper, or by examining them in Court. The article, accompanied by covering letter on the letter head of a certain advocate, was not produced, nor was the loss proved; evidence of witness from the newspaper was held admissible only regarding the name of the person on the letter head and not about the contents.[31]

12. LOST WILL

The original will in Bengali was executed before 1921, and it was not traceable. In about 1936, the widow of the testator had filed in the Court of Wards Office, the original or a copy of it. There was a translation of the will by that office but not of the entire will. The name of the translator was not mentioned in the translation. A certified copy of the translation was signed by an officer who did not know the language in which the will was written but who stated it was a true and correct translation. On those facts it was held that, even though the certified copy could be treated as secondary evidence of the original, it could not be believed as a reliable translation of the original; that the document attached to the application of the widow to the Court of Wards might not have been the original, but a copy, and the translation would be the translation of the copy and so would not be admissible as secondary evidence of the original will.[32]

Grant of probate is conclusive evidence against all. Secondary evidence is admissible to prove it when there is loss of the original will.[33] Secondary evidence can be accepted in case of the registered will if loss of original is pleaded and proved satisfactorily, provided there is compliance with the provisions of Section 65 (a), (b) and latter part of (c).[34]

In regard to wills, proof of a lost will can be given by secondary evidence as in the case of any other lost document, because, in principle, there is no distinction between the proof of a document and proof of

---

26. State of Kerala v. Raju, 1982 Cr LJ 304 (Ker).
27. Aher Rama Gova v. State of Gujarat, AIR 1979 SC 1567.
28. Lalpratap Singh v. State, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 355 (Guj).
29. State of U.P. v. Kubhi Ram, 1969 All LJ 982.
30. Ramanna v. Sambamoorthy, AIR 1961 AP 361.
31. In the matter of Basanta Chandra Ghosh Adv., Patna, AIR 1960 Pat 430 (FB).
32. Thakur Krishna v. Kanhayalal, AIR 1961 All 206; relying on Raja Mahadeva Royal v. Raja Virabasava Chikka Royal, AIR 1948 PC 114. In re. Tarit Kanti, AIR 1918 Cal 988 (S.B.).
33. Satyacharan Dass v. Hrishikesh, AIR 1959 Cal 795.
34. Gutari v. Shivcharan, AIR 1980 Hindu LR 273 (FB) (P&H).

a will. Where the testatrix destroyed the earlier will, after executing a fresh will which was found to be invalid, it was held that the earlier valid will could be proved by oral evidence.[35]

Loss of a will does not operate as revocation of it, and a certified copy of it is admissible.[36] Where the court comes to a conclusion that a will has been lost it has to allow the party to lead secondary evidence, by giving a finding to that effect.[37]

13. CLAUSE (d)—ORIGINAL NOT EASILY MOVEABLE

This clause covers things not easily moveable, as in the case of things fixed in the ground, or a building for example: notices painted on walls, tablets in buildings, tombstones, monuments, or marks on boundary stones or trees. Secondary evidence is admissible in such cases, on account of great inconvenience and impracticability of producing the original.

PHIPSON (15th Edn. (2000), para 41-35 pages 1123-24) states: "When production of the original is physically impossible or highly inconvenient, e.g., inscriptions on walls, tombstones, etc., unless there are circumstances of suspicion, the object itself will not have to be produced.....Where a notice was merely suspended from a wall by a nail, it was held necessary to produce it at the trial; but where the notice, though movable, was one required by statute and under a penalty to be kept constantly affixed, it was held, on grounds of convenience, that secondary evidence thereof might be given without notice to produce the original"[38].

14. CLAUSES (e) & (f)—WHEN ORIGINAL IS A PUBLIC DOCUMENT OR WHOSE CERTIFIED COPY IS LEGALLY PERMITTED

Clause (e) is intended to protect the originals of public records from the risk to which they would be exposed by constant production in evidence. Secondary evidence is admissible in the case of public documents mentioned in Section 74. Section 74 provides that public records kept in any State of private documents are also public documents.

Certified copies are admissible as secondary evidence under clause (f). Sections 76, 78 and 86 may be read along with it. Where an original document cannot be given in evidence owing to a statutory ban, its certified copy cannot be admitted in evidence, e.g., certified copy of the income tax return[39] or that of a sale deed for determining the amount of compensation for the land acquired.[40]

Section 78 of this Act mentions certain documents for which certified copies have to be given. The other statutes which provide for issue of certified copies are Section 4 of the Banker's Book Evidence Act, Section 45 of the Banking Companies Act, Section 4(d) of Powers of Attorney Act, and Section 69 of the Registration Act.

The last but one paragraph of this section provides: "In case (e) or (f), a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence, is admissible". This applies to the case in which the public document is still in existence on the public records.[41]

Where a case falls under clause (a) or clause (c) and also under clause (f) any secondary evidence may be received.[42]

A copy of the Municipal record not issued in accordance with the requirements of the Muncipal Act is not relevant.[43]

---

35. Russell v. Delaney, (1951) 1 All ER 920.
36. Babulal v. Baijnath, AIR 1946 Pat 24.
37. Balbir Singh v. Darshan Kaur, ILR (1977) 1 Punj 239 : (1976) 78 DLR 239.
38. See also HALSBURY 4th Edn. Vol. 17 (para 141) page 104.
39. Devidatt v. Shriram, (1931) 34 Bom LR 236 : ILR 56 Bom 324 : AIR 1932 Bom 291.
40. State of Kerala v. Chalil Saidali, 1999 AIHC 3262 (para 6) (Ker).
41. Bibi Aisha v. Bihar S.S.M. Avaqaf, AIR 1969 SC 253; Hurish v. Prosunno, AIR 22 WR 303; Anadha v. Secretary of State, ILR 43 Cal 973; Pran Jivan v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1974 Cal 210; Janu Khan v. State, AIR 1960 Pat 213; Chacko Pyli v. State of Kerala, ILR (1966) 1 Ker 320; Somanna v. Subba Rao, AIR 1958 AP 200; Mathuradas v. State, AIR 1954 Nag 296; Pannalal v. State, AIR 1953 MB 84.
42. In the matter of a collision between the "Ava" and the "Brenhilda", ILR (1879) 5 Cal 568, 573; approved by the Supreme Court in Bibi Aisha v. Bihar, SSM Aaqaf, AIR 1969 SC 253.
43. Ganesh Prasad. v. Badri Prasad Bhola Nath, AIR 1980 All 361.

The object of these two clauses was clarified in an old Madras case by stating that the rule in Cl. (e) or (f), that a certified copy of the document, but no other kind of secondary evidence is admissible, applies to a case in which the public document is still in existence on the public records, and is a provision intended rather to protect the originals of public record from the danger to which they would be exposed by constant production in evidence, than to interfere with the general rule of evidence given in Cl. (c) of the same section, that secondary evidence may be given when the original has been destroyed or lost.[44]

The Calcutta High Court excluded certified copies of records of a foreign court on the ground that they were not proved according to the mode mentioned in Section 56. The Privy Council observed that under Sections 65 & 66, evidence may be given of public documents without notice to the adverse party when the person in possession of the document is out of the reach of or not subject to the process of court. By relying in Section 65 & 66 it would appear that the Privy Council impliedly held that 65(e) & (f) are not the only provisions applicable to public documents.[45]

Public documents can only be proved by the production of certified copies; they cannot be proved by oral evidence.[46]

A reading of cl. (e) and (f) would show that certified copy is admissible in evidence though the original is in existence.[47]

Secondary evidence of documents held as public documents within the meaning of Section 74 can be given by tendering certified copies thereof.[48]

A registered document does not fall under either clause (e) or (f). The entry in the register book is a public document; but, the original is a private document.

When a true copy of a gazette notification is received in evidence without any objection, the other party cannot object subsequently that such secondary evidence is not admissible.[49]

Where public official documents of other States were tendered in evidence, it was held that the authorities before which the documents were tendered must give credit to them, and that they should not ignore them on suspicion.[50]

If the sale deeds were the primary evidence of the interest sold and were said to be registered documents, which were not available for any reason, certified copy thereof could be adduced as secondary evidence, but the reception of other evidence must always be of a very weak character in place of the registered document evidencing those transactions.[51]

Under Section 57(5) of the Indian Registration Act, the certified copy obtained from the Registrar's Office shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the contents of the document; and no further proof is required.[52] Where a registered will is in possession of the person interested in denying the execution, the certified copy of the will is admissible as evidence of the execution of the will.[53] Where the certified copy of a will obtained from the Court where its original was produced, was filed and admitted, non-production of the original could not be urged as a ground later on to invalidate the will.[54] Secondary

---

44. Kunneth v. Vayoth, ILR (1882) 6 Mad 80; Veera Shetty v. Nanjundachari, AIR 1955 Mys 139.
45. Haranand v. Ramgopal, ILR 27 IA 1 : 27 Cal 639.
46. Gangaram v. Emperor, (902) PR No. 5 of 1903 (Cri).
47. Krishnakishori v. Kishorilal ILR 14 Cal 486 (PC); Ram Prasady R, AIR 1945 Pat 210; Venkata Gopala Ramarao v. Venkataramayya, AIR 1940 Mad 768; Chandreswar v. Bisheswar, AIR 1927 Pat 61; Annada Charan v. Emperor, AIR 1943 Cal 251; Veera Shetty v. Nanjundachari, AIR 1955 Mys 139.
48. See commentary on Section 74 as to what are public documents.
49. State of Kerala v. V.P. Enadeen, AIR 1971 Ker 193 (FB).
50. Vijay Wine Stores v. State of Karnataka, (1975) 1 Kant LJ 170.
51. Nanibai v. Gitabai, AIR 1958 SC 706.
52. Karuppanna v. Kolandaswami, AIR 1954 Mad 486; Chudasama Khoduba v. Chudasama Takhatsand, AIR 1922 Bom 177(2); Salimun v. Hakim, AIR 1928 All 394; Ma Yin v. Ma Bok, AIR 1929 Rang 277; Patel Maulal v. Municipal Corp., Surat AIR 1978 Guj 193; Pattu Kumari v. Nirmal Kumar Singh, 43 CWN 907 : AIR 1939 Cal 569 (certified copy of an entry in the register of power of attorney); Romti v. Ratno, (1969) 71 Punj LR 17 (Del); S. Madasamy Thevar v. A.M. Arjuna Raja, AIR 2000 Mad 465 (para 39).
53. Arya Prathinidhi Sabha v. Devraj, AIR 1963 Punj 208.
54. S.A. Quddus v. S. Veerappa, AIR 1994 Kant 20 (para 13).

evidence in the form of an ordinary copy is admissible, when both the original and the certified copy is lost.[55]

A sale deed was missing from the record of an earlier revenue suit, and procurement of a certified copy was impossible due to destruction of the relevant register for registration of documents. It was held that the vendee should prove its existence and contents by offering secondary evidence; the prohibition contained in the proviso requiring the production of only certified copy of the document as secondary evidence cannot be regarded as exhaustive.[56] Where the plaintiff produced a certified copy of a registered deed in support of his claim and withheld the original which should have been in his possession, it was held that the deed, not being a public document, he was rightly denied the benefit of this section.[57]

15. DOCUMENTS OF WHICH A CERTIFIED COPY IS PERMITTED UNDER LAW

Where a document is registered, but the entry is made in a wrong book in the Registrar's Office, the deed is validly registered.[58] Hence, upon proof of the loss of the original, a certified copy though entered in the wrong book bearing the certificate of the registering authority as being a true copy, is admissible as secondary evidence.[59] A certified copy of a statement of account of entries in the Banker's Book is admissible.[60] Hindu Marriage Register, being a public document, contents of its certified copies are admissible in evidence.[61]

16. ORIGINALS CONSISTING OF SEVERAL ACCOUNTS OR CAN'T CONVENIENTLY BE EXAMINED [CLAUSE (g)]

This provision is meant for saving public time. Where the fact to be proved is the general result of the examination of numerous documents and not the contents of each particular document, and the documents as such cannot be conveniently examined in court, evidence may be given, under this section, as to the general result of the documents by a person who has examined them and who is skilled in the examination of those documents, although they may be public within the meaning of Section 65 and Section 74[62].

STEPHEN in his Digest (7th Edn. p. 81, art. 71) has observed: "In the case of voluminous documents, accounts, records, etc., it is obvious that it would often be practically out of question to apply the present principle by requiring the production of the entire mass of documents and entries to be perused by the jury or read aloud to them. The convenience of trials demands that other evidence be allowed to be offered, in the shape of the testimony of a competent witness who has perused the entire mass and will state summarily the net result. Upon the same principle, summaries of official or corporate records might be presented; and testimony, by one who has examined records, that no record of a specific tenor is there contained, is receivable instead of producing the entire mass for perusal in the court-room."

Secondary evidence may be given as to the general result of documents by any person who has examined them and who is skilled in the examination of such documents. The Allahabad High Court held that the competence of the witness must therefore be proved to the satisfaction of the court before such evidence is tendered. A summary of the result of an examination of account books by a person who knew the character in which they were written was held admissible under Cl. (g).[63]

Where the originals consist of numerous accounts and the original books of account were eaten away and were in a tattered condition, no secondary evidence is admissible.[64]

Cl. (g) of Section 65 has nothing to do with documents which are not available to the court; the very fact that Cl. (g) provides for secondary evidence because the documents cannot conveniently be

---

55. Marwari Kumhar v. Bhagwanpuri Guru Ganeshpuri, AIR 2000 SC 2629 (para 11).
56. 1970 All WR (HC) 637.
57. Gurmukh Ram Madan (Dr.) v. Bhagwan Das Madan, AIR 1998 SC 2776.
58. Satindranath v. Jatindranath, 1935 PC 165 : 62 IA 265.
59. Bishwanath Agarwalla v. Dhapu Debi Jajodia, AIR 1960 Cal 494.
60. Calcutta National Bank Ltd. v. Sonapur Tea Co. Ltd., AIR 1957 Cal 9.
61. Manjula v. Mani, 1998 Cr LJ 1476 (paras 16 and 20) (Mad).
62. Sundar Kar v. Chandreshwar Prasad Narain, ILR (1907) 34 Cal 293.
63. Phulwanti v. Janeshar Dass, AIR 1924 All 625.
64. Amrita Devi v. Sripat Rai, AIR 1962 All 111.

examined in court, shows that the documents are there for the court to examine if it so likes to do; but where no attempt is made to produce the original documents from which the result was prepared, Section 65(g) cannot be used for the admission of the summary.

When original account books are available, copies thereof being secondary evidence are not admissible.[65]

For attracting Cl. (g) it is necessary that the originals must consist of numerous documents. Where they were not numerous, evidence of a person who prepared the sales statement was held inadmissible as secondary evidence.[66]

Secondary evidence cannot be given by a person who has not examined the documents. The expression "who is skilled in the examination of the documents" is intended to afford an opportunity to find out the truth by his cross-examination.[67]

17. OBJECTION TO SECONDARY EVIDENCE

If a copy of a document is admitted in evidence in the first court without any objection, no objection can be allowed to be taken in the appellate court as to its admissibility.[68]

The question of proof of a document is a question of procedure and can be waived.[69]

But, a question of relevancy of document is a question of law, and can be raised at the appellate stage as well.[70]

The object of the rule is obvious, if objection is taken in the first court, the party producing the copy can ask for an adjournment in order to get the original or else to give evidence justifying the admission of the secondary evidence.

It is well settled that on objection to the admissibility of the document, which was received without objection at the court of first instance cannot be entertained in a court of appeal. If an objection had been taken in the trial court, it would have been possible for the opposite party to meet such objection, and the proceedings would have been regularised.[71]

The objection that has to be taken in the court of first instance is to the mode of proof of the document, and it should be taken before a document is marked as an exhibit and admitted to the record. The objection regarding inherent admissibility can be taken at any time, even at the appellate stage, as it would be question of law. If the objection as to the proof is taken in the court of first instance, a strict formal proof might or might not have been possible.[72]

Objection regarding the admissibility of secondary evidence of a document, being purely legal in nature, could be allowed to be raised for the first time in revision.[73]

---

65. Jainarayan Das v. Jubeda Khatoon, AIR 1972 All 494.

66. Raigarh v. Chaturbhuj, AIR 1964 MP 196.

67. Krishna v. R., AIR 1946 All 277.

68. Kishori Lal Goswami v. Rakhal Das Banerjee, ILR (1903) 31 Cal 155; Akbar Ali v. Bhvea Lal Jha, ILR (1880) 6 Cal 666; Bacharam Mundul v. Peary Mohun Banerjee, ILR (1883) 9 Cal 813; Narendra Narain Rai v. Bishen Chundra Das, ILR (1885) 12 Cal 182; Chimnaji Govind Godbole v. Dinkar Dhondev Godbole, (1886) 11 Bom 320; Thet She v. Moung Ba, (1903) 3 LBR 49; Amar Singh v. Tej Ram, AIR 1982 P&H 282; Lakshman v. Amrit, ILR (1900) 24 Bom 591; Ram Lochan v. Pandit Harinath, (1922) 1 Pat 606 : AIR 1922 Pat 565.

69. Subbarao v. Venkata Rama Rao, AIR 1964 Andhra 53; Kanchanganga v. State of West Bengal, AIR 1973 Cal 325; Budhi Mahal v. Gangadhan Das (1978) 46 Cut. LT 287; Annapoorna Subnari v. Narendra, AIR 1967 Ori 129.

70. M.S. Ramsingh v. Bijoy Singh, AIR 1972 Cal 190.

71. Padman v. Hanwantha, AIR 1915 PC 111; Lachuman Lal Pathak v. Kamakshya Narayan Singh, AIR 1931 Pat 224; Shahzadi Begam v. Secy. of State, ILR 34 Cal 1059 (PC); Mahadeo Prasad v. Ghulam Mohammad, AIR 1947 All 161; Kundan Bai v. Venu Bai, AIR 1952 Nag 47; Saveruddin v. Samiruddin, AIR 1923 Cal 378; Gulabchand v. Sheo Karan Seth, 1964 Pat 45; Basanti v. Pholo, AIR 1955 HP 37; Basanta Kumar Das v. Binayak Das & ors., (1974) 40 Cut LT 1214; Kakoti Veeraiah Gupta v. Sonde Mall, ILR 1963 AP 754; Pramatha Nath v. Tarini Charan Das, AIR 1953 Assam 80; Bhudheram v. Hira, AIR 1953 HP 52; Hutchegowda v. Chennije Gowda, AIR 1953 Mys 49, relying on Vishvanath v. Rahibai, AIR 1931 Bom 105; Md. Ilushan Ali v. Jamna Prasad, AIR 1922 PC 56; State of Rajasthan v. Jeo Raj, AIR 1990 Raj 90.

72. Gopal Das v. Shri Takurji, AIR 1943 PC 83; Bacharbhai v. Mohanlal Ranchhod Das, AIR 1956 Bom 196; Biswambhar Singh v. State of Orissa, AIR 1954 SC 139; Shahzadi Begum v. Secy. of State, ILR 34 Cal 1059 (PC).

73. Gurcharan Singh v. Harbhagwan, (1979) 81 Punj LR 409.

When a party has waived proof of the circumstances justifying the giving of secondary evidence and the secondary evidence is allowed, he cannot raise the objection to its admissibility, in appeal.[74]

The rule, however, does not apply where the document admitted was not even secondary evidence.[75]

18. EXECUTION MUST BE PROVED

It was held that mere production of a mortgage deed is not enough to fasten any liability on parties who are not executants of the document. The plaintiff would not be relieved of the burden of proving the document as required by law, to entitle him to a decree on the basis of the document. The proof can be dispensed with only where the execution is admitted, or has not been denied. Where the document is lost and secondary evidence is allowed to be led, the formality of an attesting witness being called has to be observed, as required by Section 68 of the Evidence Act, which is stringent and mandatory. Failure to call the attesting witness, where it is not established that all of the attesting witnesses are dead or were incapable of giving evidence, is a fatal defect and the document cannot be held to have been proved.[76]

In case of proof of adoption by one B, a certified copy of a will executed by B's widow was put in evidence as it recited the factum of adoption. It was held that the copy of the will was not sufficient evidence of the fact of adoption recited in it; that the certified copy was secondary evidence under Section 65, of the existence, conditions or the contents of the deed, but not of its execution which has to be proved under Section 68 of the Evidence Act.[77]

Special provisions as to evidence relating to electronic record.

[78][S. 65-A. The contents of electronic records may be proved in accordance with the provisions of Section 65-B.

Admissibility of electronic records.

S. 65-B. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act, any information contained in an electronic record which is printed on a paper, stored, recorded or copied in optical or magnetic media produced by a computer (hereinafter referred to as the computer output) shall be deemed to be also a document, if the conditions mentioned in this section are satisfied in relation to the information and computer in question and shall be admissible in any proceedings, without further proof or production of the original, as evidence of any contents of the original or of any fact stated therein of which direct evidence would be admissible.

(2) The conditions referred to in sub-section (1) in respect of a computer output shall be the following, namely—

(a) the computer output containing the information was produced by the computer during the period over which the computer was used regularly to store or process information for the purposes of any activities regularly carried on over that period by the person having lawful control over the use of the computer;

(b) during the said period, information of the kind contained in the electronic record or of the kind from which the information so contained is derived was regularly fed into the computer in the ordinary course of the said activities;

---

74. Bishwambar Singh v. State of Orissa, AIR 1954 SC 139; Subbarao v. Venkata Ramarao, AIR 1964 AP 53; Bachar Bhai Nara Bhai v. Mohanlal Ranchhoddas, AIR 1956 Bom 196; Collector of Cuttack v. Rajib Bhol, AIR 1972 Ori 200; Dula Dei v. Jadi Bewa, AIR 1965 Ori 113; Sangila Bapuji v. Ambabhai, AIR 1953 Nag 266.
75. Kalyan Singh v. Chhoti (Smt.), AIR 1973 Raj 263.
76. Ananta Raghuram Arya v. Rajah B. Nagachaya Devamma, AIR 1958 AP 418. See also Gurdial Kaur v. Registrar, Co-operative Society, Chandigarh, AIR 2000 P&H 82 (para 9).
77. Brajraj Singh v. Yogendra Pal Singh, AIR 1952 MB 146.
78. Ss. 65A & 65B inserted by the Information Technology Act, 2000, S. 92, Sch. II (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

(c) throughout the material part of the said period, the computer was operating properly or, if not, then in respect of any period in which it was not operating properly or was out of operation during that part of the period, was not such as to affect the electronic record or the accuracy of its contents; and

(d) the information contained in the electronic record reproduces or is derived from such information fed into the computer in the ordinary course of the said activities.

(3) Where over any period, the function of storing or processing information for the purposes of any activities regularly carried on over that period as mentioned in Clause (a) of sub-section (2) was regularly performed by computers, whether—

(a) by a combination of computers operating over that period; or

(b) by different computers operating in succession over that period; or

(c) by different combinations of computers operating in succession over that period; or

(d) in any other manner involving the successive operation over that period, in whatever order, of one or more computers and one or more combinations of computers, all the computers used for that purpose during that period shall be treated for the purposes of this section as constituting a single computer; and references in this section to a computer shall be construed accordingly.

(4) In any proceedings where it is desired to give a statement in evidence by virtue of this section, a certificate doing any of the following things, that is to say,—

(a) identifying the electronic record containing the statement and describing the manner in which it was produced;

(b) giving such particulars of any device involved in the production of that electronic record as may be appropriate for the purpose of showing that the electronic record was produced by a computer;

(c) dealing with any of the maters to which the conditions mentioned in sub-section (2) relate, and purporting to be signed by a person occupying a responsible official position in relation to the operation of the relevant device or the management of the relevant activities (whichever is appropriate) shall be evidence of any matter stated in the certificate; and for the purposes of this sub-section it shall be sufficient for a matter to be stated to the best of the knowledge and belief of the person stating it.

(5) For the purposes of this section,—

(a) information shall be taken to be supplied to a computer if it is supplied thereto in any appropriate form and whether it is so supplied directly or

(with or without human intervention) by means of any appropriate equipment;

(b) whether in the course of activities carried on by any official, information is supplied with a view to its being stored or processed for the purposes of those activities by a computer operated otherwise than in the course of those activities, that information, if duly supplied to that computer, shall be taken to be supplied to it in the course of those activities;

(c) a computer output shall be taken to have been produced by a computer whether it was produced by it directly or (with or without human intervention) by means of any appropriate equipment.

Explanation.*—For the purposes of this section any reference to information being derived from other information shall be a reference to its being derived therefrom by calculation, comparison or any other process.]

COMMENTS

1. THE INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ACT, 2000 PROOF OF CONTENTS OF ELECTRONIC RECORDS

The new Section 65-A provides that the contents of electronic records may be proved in accordance with the provision of the new Section 65-B which provides for the mode of its proof. The facility of proof by secondary evidence would apply to any computer output as the same has been deemed to be a document for the purposes of proof.

"In cases prior to the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984, certain material produced by computers was held to be real evidence. In R. v. Wood,[79] the Court of Appeal considered computer printouts in circumstances in which they were not admissible under the Criminal Justice Act 1965.[80] It was necessary for the prosecution to present evidence of a comparison of the analysis of certain processed metals stolen with that of metals found in the defendant's possession. The Court held that since the computer had been used as a calculator, the print-outs were a piece of real evidence. In Castle v. Cross,[81] the prosecution sought to rely on a print-out of an automatic breath-testing device, which was a computer. The Divisional Court held that the print-out was admissible and that the operator of the device should have been permitted to give evidence of what he observed and to interpret the print-out."[82]

"The law of evidence must be adapted to the realities of contemporary business practice. Mainframe computers, minicomputers and microcomputers play a pervasive role in our society. Often the only record of a transaction, which nobody can be expected to remember, will be in the memory of a computer. The versatility, power and frequency of use of computers will increase. If computer output cannot relatively readily be used as evidence in criminal cases, much crime (and notably offences involving dishonesty) will in practice be immune from prosecution. On the other hand, computers are not infallible. They do occasionally malfunction. Software systems often have "bugs". Unauthorised alteration of information stored on a computer is possible. The phenomenon of a "virus" attacking computers is also well established. Realistically, therefore, computers must be regarded as imperfect devices."[83]

However, a document produced by a computer does not become the statement of a person initialling it if the purpose of doing so is merely to authorise the transaction rather than to confirm or authenticate its contents.[84] The Court has power to require oral evidence of anything of which evidence could be

---

79. (1982) 76 Cr App R 23.

80. Later repealed.

81. (1984) 1 WLR 1372 DC. Cf. Garner v. DPP, (1989) Crim LR 583 DC, in which the Court does not appear to have considered the effect of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, 1984, S. 69.

82. PHIPSON ON EVIDENCE, 15th Edn. (2000), page 697 (para 27-28).

83. R. v. Minors and Harper, (1989) 90 Cr App R 102, 103-104.

84. R. v. Boulkhrif, (1999) Crim LR 73 CA.

